people from Yaloké but stated that 90% of the elements came from different places in the CAR, such as Bangui and Bossangoa.⁵⁰¹⁸

1956. Adama Djigaou, a Mbororo woman, recalled having been informed by chief Laido, the head of her Mbororo group, that the name of the Anti-Balaka commander in Gaga was Colonel ‘something similar to R[ichal]’.⁵⁰¹⁹ The witness also learnt from this person that the Anti-Balaka leader in Yaloké was ‘Colonel Maboulé’.⁵⁰²⁰

1957. Brice Emotion Namsio stated that ‘Bozando’ was a ComZone in Yaloké.⁵⁰²¹

1958. P-2232 testified, when asked whether he heard of attacks in villages such as Berbérati, Yaloké, Boda, Bossembélé, Bossemtélé, after the attack of 5 December 2013, that when the attacks in the provinces occurred, the leaders, including Maxime Mokom, called the coordination bureau to give a report, sometimes they phoned the ComZones or those responsible in the coordination.⁵⁰²² P-2232 testified that he had heard of Muslims in Boda and Yaloké gathering in ‘Muslim sectors’, in the same way as all Muslims in Bangui found themselves in Kilomètre 5.⁵⁰²³ P-2232 testified that in the provincial towns, Bossangoa axis, Yaloké, Bouar axis, there were no Muslims any more.⁵⁰²⁴

Situation in Yaloké and dislocation of Muslims

1959. The evidence as outlined below shows that the situation in Yaloké did not calm down following these two attacks. Rather, various groups of Muslims remained confined to specific properties in Yaloké and outside of Yaloké for weeks, under threat of violence by the Anti-Balaka. This was followed by hundreds of Muslims being removed from Yaloké.

1960. P-2416 stated that over the next three weeks, the Anti-Balaka would continue stealing from his shop, and that he could not challenge them or report to Sangaris because they would have sought revenge on him or the other Muslims remaining in Yaloké.⁵⁰²⁵ P-2416 stated that during these three weeks before they were ‘evacuated’, he stayed on the veranda of his business along with the remaining Muslims, and even though the Sangaris were patrolling and maintaining a presence, they could not leave throughout this time for their own safety.⁵⁰²⁶

1961. Zenaba Oumar stated that in the context of the first major attack, she left Yaloké with her family for another place where they stayed for about a month, with her husband having to hide in the grass for the first two weeks as he would have been killed as a Muslim man.⁵⁰²⁷ The witness said that the Anti-Balaka would gather around the property.⁵⁰²⁸ The witness stated that the Anti-Balaka wore civilians clothes, had amulets, talked about the attacks they were involved in, half of them had guns and the other half machetes, some had their faces covered in charcoal.⁵⁰²⁹ Zenaba Oumar stated that one came there several times and the other Anti-Balaka extended him a lot of respect; they also talked about Le Bleu, ComZone Richard, Simplicie and Lampety, all of whom she knew from Yaloké.⁵⁰³⁰

1962. Zenaba Oumar stated that her sister and sister’s family, at whose house the Seleka had often eaten when they were in Yaloké, were killed during an Anti-Balaka attack in Yaloké.⁵⁰³¹ The witness said she heard that some Mbororo were killed on the same day as her sister.⁵⁰³² Zenaba Oumar stated that one day the Anti-Balaka celebrated killing a Muslim Mbororo man, and she felt unsafe.⁵⁰³³ Zenaba Oumar stated that a group of four Anti-Balaka, two of whom the witness recognised as Emmanuel and JC, raped her daughter, aged between 10 and 11 years at the time, within the first two weeks after their arrival to Faadi’s property; one of them said ‘I wara mbeni molengé ti arabo ni awé, zââ i gwé I sâra kwâ nâ lô’ (‘we have found one of the Arab child, let’s go work on her’).⁵⁰³⁴ Zenaba Oumar stated that the

Anti-Balaka later found her husband hiding and he and others convinced them that he was not a Muslim, he had been born Christian and was able to speak to the Anti-Balaka in the Banda language of the Christian community.⁵⁰³⁵

1963. Zenaba Oumar stated that she and her family left the place where they were hiding about one week after her daughter was raped because she had heard that the Anti-Balaka had threatened to either kill her and her family or those that were helping them.⁵⁰³⁶ The witness and her family managed to walk to Bangui over three months with the help of some Christians and others along the way.⁵⁰³⁷

1964. P-2546, a priest, stated that when he returned to Yaloké in February 2014, the situation was very tense and the Anti-Balaka were in control.⁵⁰³⁸ P-2546 stated that the mayor was worried about the security situation and told him that the non-Muslim community did not want the Muslims to stay in Yaloké and that the Anti-Balaka had announced that if the last group of Muslims did not leave, they would launch an assault to exterminate them.⁵⁰³⁹ P-2546 went with the mayor to the Anti-Balaka to minimise tension, but Raymond Mangala, who introduced himself as spokesperson of the Anti-Balaka Yaloké group, said that all non-CAR Muslims had to leave Yaloké as soon as possible because the Anti-Balaka were ready to kill them and only Muslim CAR natives could remain.⁵⁰⁴⁰

1965. P-2546 stated further that he learned from the mayor that many Muslims had already been ‘evacuated’ to Cameroon and that those that remained were gathered with their belongings in the area of the central mosque and central market, with safety parameters established by the Sangaris.⁵⁰⁴¹ P-2546 said the last group of Muslims was transported to Cameroon by the Sangaris before a meeting with the Anti-Balaka, and the Muslims who remained were from the Gbanu tribe, native to Yaloké.⁵⁰⁴²

1966.P-2546 stated that in a subsequent meeting, Le Bleu, whom he understood to be the ComZone of the Anti-Balaka, stated that many Muslims had left as the general population did not want them there and that he would organise a meeting with the young people to decide what to do with the mosques – destroy them or transform them into halls, churches, or something else.⁵⁰⁴³

1967.Indeed, the evidence as outlined below shows that the situation in Yaloké was such that the majority of Muslims were forced to leave.

1968.P-2416 stated that there were three ‘evacuations’ of Muslims from Yaloké: the first to Cameroon; the second, one or two days later, in the first week of February 2014, to Bangui involving the Chadian army; the third taking the remaining Muslims to Cameroon, involving the Burundian army and Sangaris on 22 February 2014.⁵⁰⁴⁴ P-2416 stated that the Chadian convoy also collected Muslims from Gbaoui, some of whom had been dislocated from Zawa, and Muslims fleeing Bossembélé.⁵⁰⁴⁵ P-2416 stated that as they were packing for their ‘evacuation’, the Anti-Balaka joined by some Christian civilians gathered and insulted them, shouting at them to leave and trying to steal their property.⁵⁰⁴⁶ P-2416 stated that on the way, they also collected fleeing Muslims in Bossemptélé, Baoro, Bouar and Baboua.⁵⁰⁴⁷ P-2416 explained that he refused to get on the previous Chadian convoy because he did not want to leave Yaloké, a town he was born and raised in and worked in all his life, as everything he had ever worked for was in that town.⁵⁰⁴⁸ P-2416 said that some Anti-Balaka told him, ‘we know papa that you will eventually also leave’ and threatened him.⁵⁰⁴⁹

1969.Zenaba Oumar stated that about two days after the attack on Gaga, a number of trucks passed through Yaloké bound for Cameroon and were stopped in Zawa by fleeing Muslims who wanted transport out of the area.⁵⁰⁵⁰ The witness stated that the Anti-Balaka discussed the

‘evacuations’ of Muslims from Yaloké and were very happy that they had left.⁵⁰⁵¹ She recalled hearing them discussing that the Muslims had all gone, after the ‘final evacuation’ of the remaining Muslims from Yaloké and discussing an ambush attempt on a convoy of Muslims from Gbawi bound for Bangui.⁵⁰⁵²

1970.P-1577 stated that he heard from Muslims at the Yaloké mosque that the Anti-Balaka had issued an ultimatum calling for the Muslims to leave and was told that ‘a significant number of Muslims subsequently fled en masse as a result of this threat’.⁵⁰⁵³

1971.The evidence as outlined below shows that in addition to the attacks within Yaloké, the Anti-Balaka also attacked a large group of Mbororo/Peuhl near Gaga and Yaloké, keeping them first in Gaga and then in Yaloké, where the group stayed for more than two years.

1972.Specifically, Adama Djigaou, a Mbororo woman,⁵⁰⁵⁴ described in detail how her large group of Mbororo was attacked by the Anti-Balaka in the bush when talking towards Yaloké, leading to people being injured and killed, including 12 members of their family.⁵⁰⁵⁵ The witness stated that when the group then walked further towards Gaga, they again encountered the Anti-Balaka, whom she later learned were ‘Colonel Richal’s’ men, who looted their remaining cattle and walked them to Gaga, where ‘Colonel Richal’ said that he would protect the Mbororo from being killed by the Anti-Balaka as he had trained them, that he was sorry for what he had done in the towns, and therefore had instructed his Anti-Balaka not to hurt the Mbororo.⁵⁰⁵⁶ Adama Djigaou stated that the Mbororo group remained in Gaga for approximately one month and was then transferred to a big compound in Yaloké centre, where it was overcrowded and they spent approximately one month.⁵⁰⁵⁷ The witness stated that the Anti-Balaka guarding the compound was unarmed and they could pray in the open, but that the Anti-Balaka groups from other towns present in Yaloké would have harmed them because they wanted to kill the Muslims.⁵⁰⁵⁸ Adama Djigaou stated that the Mbororo were later moved by MISCA to the Yaloké town hall where they remained for two years, still receiving unsuitable food, which led to some deaths; she eventually decided to go to a refugee camp in Cameroon.⁵⁰⁵⁹ The witness heard that all the Muslims had fled from Yaloké and that none of the Muslims' shops were open and saw that some of the shops had been destroyed.⁵⁰⁶⁰

1973.P-2325 stated that many Peuhls with their cattle were present around Yaloké and he heard the Anti-Balaka killed a lot of them in the bush to steal their cattle, while those who survived gathered in the sub-prefecture compound and were guarded by MISCA.⁵⁰⁶¹ P-2325 stated that he travelled there during the conflict, where he noticed over a thousand displaced people living in terrible conditions who could not leave for fear of the Anti-Balaka who were still active in the town and bragged about killing the Peuhls.⁵⁰⁶²

1974.P-2416 stated that he heard about Peuhls being captured by the Anti-Balaka and placed in an enclave in Yaloké.⁵⁰⁶³ P-2416 said he met about eight of the Peuhls at a conference who asked him to help them escape the Anti-Balaka and told him that they were hostages and had buried 51 of their people, who had been killed or had since died of illness, over 100 of them were still at the enclave.⁵⁰⁶⁴

1975.P-2546 stated that he went to the Yaloké hospital in March or April 2014, where 15 to 20 Peuhls fleeing the Anti-Balaka in Lobaye had been admitted for serious injuries seemingly caused by machetes, and they had been attacked by the Anti-Balaka as they approached the outskirts of Yaloké.⁵⁰⁶⁵ P-2546 said he had seen a lot of meat being sold at the Yaloké market and realised that these were the animals from the Peuhls.⁵⁰⁶⁶ P-2546 stated that when the Peuhls were moved to the administrative buildings, they were no longer of interest to the Anti-Balaka because they did not have their animals anymore.⁵⁰⁶⁷

1976. P-2546 stated that 20 Peuhls from the hospital were accommodated by Le Bleu at the compound opposite his compound, approximately 100 Peuhl men were in the bush in Djobeu surrounded by Anti-Balaka, and Peuhl women and children were in Gbawi.⁵⁰⁶⁸ P-2546 said that the Peuhl men told him they had lost everything and were in terrible living conditions and lacked food.⁵⁰⁶⁹ P-2546 stated that 'General Richard' took all Peuhls from the bush to the compound opposite Le Bleu's compound and asked the archbishop to take care of them, with surveys giving numbers of 800 and then 918 Peuhl men, women and children there.⁵⁰⁷⁰ P-2546 stated that the compound was not large enough and the sanitary situation was appalling, and the Peuhls were moved to the administrative buildings, where their living conditions improved and MINUSCA were responsible for protecting them.⁵⁰⁷¹ P-2546 stated that initially there was tension between the Peuhls and local population, with the latter feeling victimised because they had not received any humanitarian aid, as opposed to the Peuhls.⁵⁰⁷² P-2546 stated the Peuhls were eventually moved to a camp in 2015 and most of them went to Cameroon.⁵⁰⁷³

1977. P-1577 visited Yaloké again in January 2015⁵⁰⁷⁴ where he encountered a group of Peuhl that had been trapped in a makeshift camp in an old school due to the town administration and the Peuhls telling him that they had initially fled there for their own protection.⁵⁰⁷⁵

ii. Bossemptélé – 18 January 2014

1978. The evidence as outlined below shows that in January 2014, an Anti-Balaka group attacked Bossemptélé, leading to Muslim civilians being killed while others dislocated and sought refuge at the local church.

1979. P-2041, a deputy imam in the Lobaye prefecture at the relevant time, stated that he heard through the Muslim community which kept in contact with their families in other towns and villages and were aware of what was happening in Bouca, Yaloké, Bossembélé, Bossemptélé, Bogangolo and Bangui that these towns were all attacked by the Anti-Balaka, people were killed and houses destroyed.⁵⁰⁷⁶ P-2041 stated that this was also being reported on the news and television.⁵⁰⁷⁷

1980. P-1576, a journalist, stated that on 30 January 2014, he took pictures of the houses and shops of Muslims in Bossemptélé which had been looted.⁵⁰⁷⁸ P-1576 stated that on 30 January 2014, while he was on his way from Bozoum to Bossemptélé, he met Anti-Balaka elements between Zawa and Bossemptélé who told him that they had just attacked a Peuhl village.⁵⁰⁷⁹

1981. P-1577, another journalist, stated that he heard from individuals he met in a refugee camp in Cameroon in October 2014 that they had been attacked in Bossemptélé by the Anti-Balaka.⁵⁰⁸⁰ P-1577 stated that when he visited Bossemptélé in January 2015, he found about 20 Muslims who had fled violence in the surrounding region, but no other Muslims living in Bossemptélé by this time.⁵⁰⁸¹

1982. A priest from Bossemptélé, Bernard Kinvi, stated in an interview later in 2014 that when the Seleka had left the town, the Anti-Balaka set up there, leading to tension with certain Muslims who wanted to resist, and that this led to violence claiming several victims.⁵⁰⁸² The priest continued that when he walked through the town after the fighting had ended, he found numerous Muslims dead or injured, including women and children.⁵⁰⁸³

1983. In another interview, the priest described how, when the Anti-Balaka arrived to town, they wanted to negotiate to see if the Anti-Balaka would stop any armed confrontation, but they would not listen and there was confrontation, with some Muslims managing to flee, while many went into the bush, were not able to flee, and were killed, and him managing to save some, including a 13-year old boy whom the Anti-Balaka wanted to kill because they said he would grow up to be a man and should be killed.⁵⁰⁸⁴ He further stated that several months after the attack, the situation was precariously calm, in that the Anti-Balaka were still there, and still armed.⁵⁰⁸⁵

1984. In a video showing various individuals with weapons and in civilian clothing, seemingly bearing gris-gris,⁵⁰⁸⁶ an individual identified as ‘Président’ is shown stating that after walking through the bushes and having fought in Bouar up to Bozoum, they were now walking onto Bossemptélé.⁵⁰⁸⁷ He stated that he would go to Bossemptélé ‘today’ and that he wanted the Seleka to be disarmed.⁵⁰⁸⁸ A person identified as the first’s ‘deputy’ stated further that every Muslim was in connivance with the Seleka, they were in fact all Seleka, military, rebels that Djotodia brought in.⁵⁰⁸⁹ Another individual identified as ‘secretary’ stated that they no longer wanted to see any Mbororo or Muslims in Boyaram, they had to

1985. The Chamber refers in this context to the evidence of Barthélémy Namsenmo, further discussed below, who explained that Anti-Balaka groups that had started out in Bossangoa, Gobere, split up for each village, with those en route to Bangui going to Bozoum and then Baoro and others taking the route to Bossemptélé and Bouar.⁵⁰⁹¹

1986. The UN Commission of Inquiry concluded that the day following the Seleka’s departure from Bossemptélé on 17 January 2014, a meeting was held between Anti-Balaka and representatives of the Muslim community which resulted in clashes and the Anti-Balaka killing Muslims, allegedly dozens of civilians, with the local leader of the Anti-Balaka being identified by different witnesses.⁵⁰⁹²

1987. The Chamber notes that the events in Bossemptélé were also reported in the news⁵⁰⁹³ and by Amnesty International.⁵⁰⁹⁴

1988. P-0889 stated that after the Seleka had left, the Anti-Balaka were in control of Bossemptélé.⁵⁰⁹⁵ Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana confirmed that Gervais Yapende was at some point

b. Nana-Mambéré/Mambéré-Kadéï

1989. The evidence before the Chamber indicates that Anti-Balaka groups initially gathered towards the border area next to Cameroon also participated in attacks in localities in the west of the CAR. The Chamber has in this context considered the evidence of P-1719 specifically, which suggests that a first attack against Seleka elements was carried out in Beloko, on the CAR side of the border with Garam-Boulai on the Cameroon side, in the second half of January 2014, following which other locations in the western provinces were attacked that also affected the Muslim civilian population.

1990. The Ngaïssona Defence argues in this context that D30-4914 was unequivocal in stating that no instructions were given by Mr Ngaïssona, Bernard Mokom, Bozizé or anyone from Yaoundé concerning the attack in Beloko, and that Mr Ngaïssona never sent reinforcement from Cameroon or took action to fortify D30-4914’s group in Beloko.⁵⁰⁹⁸ It also submits that P-1719’s testimony regarding Beloko is largely based on assumptions and speculation.⁵⁰⁹⁹

1991. P-1719 testified that he personally never received any instructions from Mr Ngaïssona when the witness was in Beloko, the person receiving instructions was Elisée Sabé, and he shared those instructions; sometimes he received instructions directly from ‘the authority’, Mr Ngaïssona, in Yaoundé.⁵¹⁰⁰ P-1719 stated that Fylai, Sabé, Rocca Mokom, Ouillibona Aron were there and these were the various people who were close to ‘the authority’, Mr Ngaïssona, and received instructions directly and handed them to be able to take action.⁵¹⁰¹ P-1719 never decided on his own initiative to attack a village, the instructions and decisions came from Yaoundé and they circulated those decisions amongst the groups for implementation.⁵¹⁰²

1992. P-1719 testified that Rocca Mokom was in constant touch with Yaoundé, Bangui and Zongo, because at that time he was one of the key elements of ‘the restricted team’.⁵¹⁰³ P-1719 testified that Rocca Mokom himself told them, after they had set up the staff and held meetings, that he was in touch with the authorities in Yaoundé and had exchanges with his father in Yaoundé.⁵¹⁰⁴

1993. P-1719 testified that after Michel Djotodia resigned, they were asked to concentrate on ‘recuperating’ Beloko.⁵¹⁰⁵ P-1719 said that he did not recall when this attack took place, but the discussions to reinforce Bohong or attack Bouar were between 1 and 10 January 2014, and when they abandoned those discussions they focused on taking Beloko.⁵¹⁰⁶ P-1719 testified that Elysé Sabé informed them, in the presence of Aaron Ouilibona, ‘Roc Moka Mokom’ and others that ‘the authority’ from Yaoundé, meaning the leadership in Yaoundé, Mr Ngaïssona and Bernard Mokom, gave the instruction to take over Beloko that day.⁵¹⁰⁷ P-1719 testified that according to Sabé, the instructions came from ‘le sommet’, Mr Ngaïssona.⁵¹⁰⁸ P-1719 testified that Elysé Sabé was the person who died in Beloko.⁵¹⁰⁹ P-1719 recalled that the first attack took place on 10 January and they eventually took Beloko on 20 January 2017, the day after which he wrote to Yakété.⁵¹¹⁰

1994. P-1719 testified that during the first attack on 10 January 2014, they were already at the border, and three days later, they set up their general staff with Steve Yambété, Hervé Fylai,

The Chamber considers, in regard to the suggestion that Mr Ngaïssona would not have been in Yaoundé when such instructions may have been given (see P-1719: T-143, p. 45, line 16 – p. 46, line 5, p. 53, line 11 – p. 55, line 13), that it is clear from the evidence of the witness that to P-1719, the reference to ‘Yaoundé’ was not so much a question of the location where instructions were coming from, but rather his association with who ‘the authority’ was.

Elysé Sabé, Aron Ouilibona, Steve Seregaza and Rocca Mokom.⁵¹¹¹ P-1719 did not know if Rocca was called or someone else, but the inner circle received the instruction from Yaoundé before gathering them for the general staff to be set up.⁵¹¹²

1995. P-1719 testified that during the attack on 20 January 2014 Fylai, Elysé Sabé, Ouilibona, Rocca Mokom, and Steve Seregaza were present.⁵¹¹³ P-1719 testified that following this attack, the Seleka left Beloko once and for all.⁵¹¹⁴ P-1719 testified that from 21 January 2014, the general staff decided they had to advance towards Baboua and Gallo and later elements deployed to Aba, with Beloko, Baboua, Gallo, Aba being under control of the general staff based in Beloko.⁵¹¹⁵ P-1719 testified that during this advance, he ‘did not see a single element or person killed’, he only heard one shop owner was killed; when advancing, they asked the other Muslims to come out and retreat to Cameroon and wait for the normalisation of the situation before coming back.⁵¹¹⁶ P-1719 testified that when they took control of the area since Beloko, some of the elements occupied the houses of Muslim civilians after their departure and used them as their places of residence, for example Rocca Mokom and Fylai took houses of Muslims and settled in them; there was no one in these houses and all their property had been pillaged.⁵¹¹⁷

1996. Further, the Chamber recalls the circumstances under which P-1847’s prior recorded testimony was introduced.⁵¹¹⁸ Bearing this background in mind, the Chamber considers of note that the information provided by P-1847 in his prior recorded testimony in fact echoes that of P-1719. Specifically, P-1847 stated that he was sure that Mr Ngaïssona was informed of the attacks in Beloko since he lived with ‘Mokom father’ in Yaoundé and the two communicated with Godonam at the border and a lot with those in Beloko.⁵¹¹⁹ P-1847 stated further that following the meetings in Douala and Yaoundé, several young civilian Anti-

Balaka combatants under lead of Kombo Juvenal and his deputy Ouilibona Aaron considered themselves Anti-Balaka, to be recognised by their gris-gris, and Juvenal proclaiming himself ‘general’ of the Anti-Balaka in Garam-Boulaï.⁵¹²⁰ P-1847 stated that Aaron Ouilibona, Kombo Juvenal, Zokoue alias ‘Grand Machin’ and Rocca Mokom participated in the attack on Beloko, they were financially supported by ‘Mokom father’.⁵¹²¹ P-1847 stated that following this attack, the Anti-Balaka set up a base in Beloko and patrolled the zone up to Baboua and Aba, organising the youth to resist and fight the Seleka.⁵¹²² P-1847 also stated that he was in Yaoundé at the time of these attacks and ‘we’ were always informed of the attack activities of the Anti-Balaka, this was known among the Central African refugees in Cameroon.⁵¹²³

1997. The CAR Panel concluded in its interim report 2014 that a ‘Haut Conseil de Résistance et du Redressement National’, commanded by Rochael Mokom alias ‘Colonel Rocco’ and Mike Steve Yambété, based out of the Garam-Boulaï region, led its first military offensive in Cantonnier and Beloko.⁵¹²⁴ According to the report, Anti-Balaka elements with FACA background in Beloko told the panel in April 2014 that ‘Colonel’ Aron Wilibona was ‘still in command of the [Anti-Balaka] from Cantonnier/Béloko to Bouar, capital of the province of Nana Mambéré’.⁵¹²⁵

1998. In light of this evidence, and bearing in mind its assessment of D30-4914’s credibility, the Chamber does not consider credible the generalised claims of this witness that he would never have received any instructions from Mr Ngaïssona with a view to attacking villages in the CAR or specifically Beloko,⁵¹²⁶ that he was not aware of any movement of ‘soldiers’ at the border in late 2013,⁵¹²⁷ or that Elysé Sabé, Juvénal Ngouakossi, or Mahamat Zokoua aka

‘Machin Machin’ would not have been part of the Beloko operation.⁵¹²⁸ This is the case especially since at the same time, D30-4914 did state that they started operations in Beloko, and also mentioned Rocca Mokom and Aaron Ouilibona being around at that time.⁵¹²⁹ D30-4914 also stated that Rocca Mokom came to see him from time to time and tell him that his elder brother Maxime had called for news.⁵¹³⁰

1999. The Chamber therefore concludes that an Anti-Balaka group, following instructions of ‘the authority’ from Yaoundé, including Mr Ngaïssona and Bernard Mokom, attacked the Seleka in Beloko on 20 January 2014.

i. Baoro – 22 January 2014

2000. Following the initial attack on the CAR side of the border in Beloko, the evidence provided by Barthélémy Namsenmo shows that an Anti-Balaka group also attacked Baoro, located in the Nana-Mambéré prefecture, on 22 January 2014.

2001. Specifically, Barthélémy Namsenmo heard of the Anti-Balaka while he was imprisoned by the Seleka, at which time the Anti-Balaka were not far from Baoro.⁵¹³¹ The witness heard about them through the chief of this group who came to recruit youth in Baoro and also brought ‘medication’ to the prison where the witness was held.⁵¹³² The witness heard that they had started in Bossangoa, with base in Gobere, then left for Baoro, splitting up for each village, with those taking the route to Bangui those going to Bozoum, which were the ones that then came to Baoro, and yet others taking the route to Bossemptélé and Bouar.⁵¹³³ Barthélémy Namsenmo stated that after Baoro, they continued to Carnot.⁵¹³⁴ The witness stated that the different Anti-Balaka groups communicated via telephone⁵¹³⁵ and the plan of the Anti-Balaka grouped in the bush was to occupy Carnot and then move on down to attack Berbérati.⁵¹³⁶

2002. Barthélémy Namsenmo stated that he heard from Muslims in Baoro chased by the Anti-Balaka and Christians about an attack in Baoro which happened on 22 January 2014.⁵¹³⁷ The witness stated that in Baoro, the Anti-Balaka killed Muslims, and the Muslims killed also, houses were burned, bodies were burned by the Muslims and others thrown into wells, while most of the houses of Christians were burned by Muslims, and in revenge, the Anti-Balaka looted and destroyed the houses of Muslims once they had left.⁵¹³⁸ Barthélémy Namsenmo testified that the attack was not just against Muslim civilians, the Muslim civilians had been armed by the Seleka.⁵¹³⁹

ii. Guen – 1 February 2014

2003. The evidence as outlined below shows that on or about 1 February 2014, an Anti-Balaka group attacked Guen, and within it unarmed Muslim civilians, killing at least 22 people on the first day of attack, and looting and destroying houses, business and mosques. On 5 February 2014, at least another 43 Muslim men were killed by the Anti-Balaka group. Following the attack, Muslims were confined to locations in Carnot before many were removed from the town.

2004. P-1598, a priest in Guen at the time, stated that the Seleka left Guen when they heard that the Anti-Balaka were approaching, except for certain fighters associated with the Peuhls.⁵¹⁴⁰ P-1598 stated that the Muslims who remained in Guen were not Seleka and had no weapons.⁵¹⁴¹

2005.P-1964, a nurse with a pharmacy in Guen, stated that before the Anti-Balaka arrived in Guen, there were rumours that they were coming.⁵¹⁴²

2006.P-1964 stated that on ‘1 February 2012’, at around 05:30, he heard sounds of shooting from hunting weapons and ‘war weapons’, people shouting, and he thought it might be the Anti-Balaka arriving in Guen.⁵¹⁴³

2007.P-1964 stated that he and his younger brother left the house and saw the Anti-Balaka coming from the bush, some with charcoal-painted faces, turbans like masks, gris-gris.⁵¹⁴⁴ P-1964 stated he could see what was happening from the compound as it did not have a gate and wall.⁵¹⁴⁵ P-1964 stated that the Anti-Balaka, armed with weapons and machetes, asked if there were any Muslims or Mbororos among them, to which P-1964 replied they were not Muslims or Mbororo, but Central Africans.⁵¹⁴⁶ P-1964 stated that the Anti-Balaka told them to put branches of palm trees in front of the house so the Anti-Balaka would know they were not Muslims or Mbororos.⁵¹⁴⁷

2008.P-1964 stated that he saw some people going to hide in the farms pass by his house, some of them crying.⁵¹⁴⁸ P-1964 stated that he saw two male Christian teenagers with head injuries come out of the bush, having been attacked with machetes by the Anti-Balaka on their way from a farm in the bush as they were unable to speak Gbaya and the Anti-Balaka thought that they were Mbororos.⁵¹⁴⁹

2009.P-0595, imam of the central mosque in Guen, stated that on 1 February 2014, as he was going to the mosque, he heard gunshots coming from the direction of Djomo and saw people wearing all black civilian clothing.⁵¹⁵⁰ P-0595 stated that he went home, got his wife and fled, encountering their neighbour Mamadou on the way, and he and Mamadou ran in one direction, his wife in another.⁵¹⁵¹ P-0595 stated that the Anti-Balaka were screaming 'sortez-vous en joue' ('take aim') in Sango, and they had hunting weapons, automatic weapons, pistols, machetes and arrows.⁵¹⁵² P-0595 stated that from the field in which he and Mamadou were hidden, they could hear gunshots, and he saw Anti-Balaka elements leave with bags, merchandise, even beds having looted houses.⁵¹⁵³ P-0595 stated they stayed hidden from 06:30 to around 09:30-10:00.⁵¹⁵⁴

2010. P-0595 stated that when he was called by the mayor and went to see him, the mayor asking him to remove his 'boubou' and wear a shirt, so as not to resemble a Muslim.⁵¹⁵⁵ P-0595 stated that when returning home, he met the group chief of the Anti-Balaka from Zaoro-Yangoa, who told him there was no problem with the Haussa, Borno and Malians, but with the Chadians and Mbororos because they were linked to the Seleka.⁵¹⁵⁶

2011. P-1598 stated that whilst in Baya Bozou, he received a phone call on 1 February 2014 from the deputy gendarmerie brigade commander, who informed him that the Anti-Balaka had arrived in Guen on the evening of 31 January 2014 and committed violence.⁵¹⁵⁷ P-1598 stated that he saw groups of Muslims, who he could identify by their clothes like the 'grand boubou' and their accent when speaking Sango, and non-Muslims pass through Baya Bozoum fleeing from the Anti-Balaka in Guen.⁵¹⁵⁸ The witness stated that the fleeing people were mostly Mbororo, passing by with their oxen and sheep.⁵¹⁵⁹ P-1598 stated that he went to Guen on 2 February 2014 and saw perhaps 200 or 300 Anti-Balaka, some in combat trousers, others in civilians clothes, as well as gris-gris and rosaries.⁵¹⁶⁰ P-1598 stated some had 'Kalas',⁵¹⁶¹

machetes, knives, small axes, and the majority traditional weapons, handmade rifles, and he saw grenades.⁵¹⁶²

2012. P-0732, a Muslim woman from Guen, stated that the Anti-Balaka arrived in Guen very early in the morning after they returned home from morning prayers at the mosque.⁵¹⁶³ P-0732 stated that there was a lot of shooting.⁵¹⁶⁴ P-0732 stated that she saw some of the Anti-Balaka had red straps tied around their heads and guns, and others had a piece of cloth wrapped around their heads, called ‘kadamoul’.⁵¹⁶⁵ P-0732 said that she ran away with two children of her family, but fainted, and then went to the compound of a neighbour who told her to flee, or the Anti-Balaka might find her and kill her too.⁵¹⁶⁶

2013. The evidence before the Chamber shows that 22 people were killed during this first part of the attack.⁵¹⁶⁷

2014. The evidence further shows that the Anti-Balaka looted and destroyed houses and mosques during the attack.⁵¹⁶⁸

2015. The evidence as outlined below shows that the violence against Muslims did not end with this attack.

2016. Specifically, P-0595 stated that following this attack, around 300 people including women, children, elderly, but no armed Seleka or armed men, sought refuge at his compound.⁵¹⁶⁹ P-0595 stated that on 2 or 3 February 2014, Beina came to his house with his deputy ‘Maturin’ and the chief of the Zaoro-Yanga Anti-Balaka, searching the houses in P-0595’s courtyard for weapons but finding nothing.⁵¹⁷⁰ P-0595 stated that Anti-Balaka groups would come to his house to search and sometimes loot and ask for money every day, or say that they wanted to kill them because they were Muslims.⁵¹⁷¹ P-0595 stated he would sometimes see Beina or his deputy Maturin so that they would manage these Anti-Balaka groups.⁵¹⁷² P-0595 stated that there were four Anti-Balaka groups in Guen, and according to him Beina was the leader of all of them.⁵¹⁷³

2017. P-0595 stated that on 5 February 2014 at around 08:00-09:00, Dieudonné Gomitoi, the Guen mayor, Emmanuel Boybanda, Beina, Maturin and all other Christians of Guen surrounded his courtyard with armed Anti-Balaka elements.⁵¹⁷⁴ P-0595 stated that they demanded that everyone leave the house and in response all men, around 70, came out while the women, children and injured stayed inside.⁵¹⁷⁵ P-0595 stated that the Anti-Balaka elements searched and pillaged everything, including the merchandise of his shops.⁵¹⁷⁶ P-0595 said that at the same time, Beina divided the group of Muslim men into two, a group of 50 men was taken 500 metres away and the Anti-Balaka made them lie down on the ground.⁵¹⁷⁷ P-0595 stated that some of the remaining group of 20 men, including himself and Mamadou went back into the house.⁵¹⁷⁸ P-0595 stated that one or two minutes afterwards, they heard a lot of gunshots, cries and the Anti-Balaka crying out in joy.⁵¹⁷⁹ P-0595 stated that an Anti-Balaka element called Bangara whom P-0595 knew entered the house, telling P-0595 that there were calls for the same to happen to P-0595 and that he should escape to the mayor's house, P-0595 and Bangara left together.⁵¹⁸⁰ P-0595 stated that Beina returned him to his house sometime after 17:00-18:00, and he saw more than 30 bodies where the group of 50 had been taken earlier that day; men had dug a hole to bury the bodies.⁵¹⁸¹ P-0595 that the group of 50 included: his older brother Cacamoudou, his nephews Oumarou Aboubacar and Ali

2019.P-1598 stated that he was informed on 4 February 2014 by the mayor and CB that people had been killed.⁵¹⁹⁴ P-1598 stated that he arrived in Guen at around 15:30 and saw bodies piled on the side of the road and that some had been dismembered.⁵¹⁹⁵ P-1598 stated that the CB, mayor, councillor Bandjoukou and a few others counted 43 dead bodies.⁵¹⁹⁶ P-1598 said that the CB and the mayor told him that the Anti-Balaka had visited the Ali Garba and Bandjoukou sites of displaced persons, chosen some men, shot them dead and prohibited their burial.⁵¹⁹⁷ P-1598 deduced from the fact that Beina and his group were present and prohibited the burial that they were responsible.⁵¹⁹⁸ P-1598 thought that the victims were all Muslims since the Anti-Balaka had sought them out at sites where there were only Muslims.⁵¹⁹⁹ P-1598 said that Bandjoukou told him that there were also people killed in the bush.⁵²⁰⁰ P-1598 sought and gained permission from ComZone Beina to bury the bodies, warning of a risk of an epidemic like cholera.⁵²⁰¹

2020.P-1964 stated that when one time he was preparing to leave the laboratory for Makoundji Ali's house to treat patients, some Anti-Balaka elements told him he need not go; he then heard gunshots, women crying and later learned that the Anti-Balaka chief, Beina, went to Makoundji Ali's house, took all the men who had sought refuge at the house and killed them.⁵²⁰² P-1964 stated that he heard that Beina had ordered them to remove their shirts and lie down before himself shooting them with 'a Kalashnikov', and that those who survived were finished off with machetes by Beina's elements.⁵²⁰³ P-1964 heard that the Anti-Balaka did not want to kill Makoundji Ali because he had money which they wanted.⁵²⁰⁴ P-1964 stated that he heard about the incident from some of the Anti-Balaka who were there and took part in the killing; they used to talk about it; they also told him that Beina divided the Muslim men into two groups and shot one after the other.⁵²⁰⁵

2021. P-2325 stated that he heard from his cousin who lived in Guen that at the end of January or beginning of February 2014, the Anti-Balaka in Guen gathered over 50 Muslims inside the compound of a diamond collector and killed them all, including women and children.⁵²⁰⁶

2022. A video with an AP logo shows an individual speaking on the phone, reiterating to his interlocutor that the 44 people he killed were indeed Seleka: 'Si ce n'était pas des Séléka, est ce que j'allais les tuer?' ('if they were not Seleka, would I have killed them?').⁵²⁰⁷

2023. The evidence further shows that the Anti-Balaka also gathered Muslims at specific sites in Guen and Djomo. Following the killings, Muslims left to other sites, with many Muslims eventually leaving Guen.

2024. Specifically, P-1598 stated that he saw about 300 displaced Muslim people spread over two sites, gathered there by the Anti-Balaka, at the home of the chief of the Muslim neighbourhood, Ali Garba, and at the home of the municipal councillor Bandjoukou, also a Muslim.⁵²⁰⁸ P-1598 stated that both sites were 'guarded' by the Anti-Balaka.⁵²⁰⁹ P-1598 stated that on 8 February 2014 at 16:00, Bandjoukou was killed by the Anti-Balaka.⁵²¹⁰ He further stated that he learned that Beina, Armand, and Mathurin had helped Ali Garba, his wife and his youngest to leave for Cameroon for money.⁵²¹¹

2025. P-0595 stated that the morning after the attack, around 05:30-06:00, the women, children and injured, close to 200 people, left his house and walked to Djomo, around nine kilometres away, accompanied by the chief from Zarao-Yanga and some Anti-Balaka elements.⁵²¹² P-0595 said he gave 50,000 CFA to Beina for protection and remained hidden at his house for two to three weeks with his wife and Mamadou.⁵²¹³ P-0595 said that Beina informed him that the mayor, Dieudonné and the neighbourhood chiefs wanted P-0595 killed because he knew what had happened.⁵²¹⁴ P-0595 stated he was scared for his life and organised a transfer of 500,000 CFA so Beina would help him flee with his wife and Mamadou, and they left Guen on 19 February 2014 on a moto given to P-0595 by Beina, eventually leaving the CAR with the MISCA escort for Cameroon around 28 or 29 February 2014.⁵²¹⁵ P-0595 stated that he lost everything when he left Guen.⁵²¹⁶

2026. P-1964 stated that all the women left Makoundji Ali's house after the incident and went to a Catholic church five kilometres towards Djomo.⁵²¹⁷

2027. P-1598 stated that on 6 February 2014 at 10:25, 163 displaced Muslims from Guen arrived at the Catholic mission in Djomo without any belongings, and escorted by a large number of Anti-Balaka, including Beina, Armand, and Mathurin.⁵²¹⁸ P-1598 stated that Beina told him that the displaced would be better off with P-1598 in his parish and gave him 30.000 CFA to provide them with food; some of the displaced people also had money on them to buy food.⁵²¹⁹ P-1598 stated that hygiene conditions were very precarious in the parish, the displaced were crammed into a small space, they had no water in the parish, but P-1598 insisted they have access to the pump in Djomo town without paying.⁵²²⁰ In the evening of 6 February 2014 at approximately 20:00, P-1598 was threatened by two Anti-Balaka elements from Ngaboua for protecting 'ferocious beasts', i.e. the Muslims in the parish.⁵²²¹ P-1598 stated that on 28 February 2014, the Anti-Balaka came to the parish to kill a Peuhl.⁵²²² P-1598 stated that the Anti-Balaka tolerated Muslims but they strictly refused to welcome Peuhls because of their close collaboration with the Seleka.⁵²²³ He heard a gunshot and the Anti-Balaka asked the displaced to bury the Peuhl man.⁵²²⁴ P-1598 stated that on 6 March 2014 at 8:30, the Anti-Balaka, including Jean, nicknamed Gbaara, killed the imam of Djomo.⁵²²⁵

2028. P-1598 stated that on 12 February 2014 at 17:00, MSF arrived in Djomo and, reassured by their presence, a wave of displaced Muslims and non-Muslims also arrived in Djomo from the surrounding villages.⁵²²⁶ P-1598 stated that on 13 February 2014, there were 519 displaced Muslims in the parish, and 309 non-Muslims in Djomo,⁵²²⁷ with others arriving later.⁵²²⁸ The number of Muslims later fell to 300 displaced persons after some fled the parish following threats from the Anti-Balaka after the departure of MSF on 17 February 2014.⁵²²⁹ P-1598 stated that on 3 March 2014, they counted 322 displaced Muslims in the parish and 725 non-Muslims displaced in Djomo fleeing villages that had been attacked or burned by ex-Seleka and Peuhls.⁵²³⁰ P-1598 stated that MISCA took about 20 of the displaced to Carnot on 23 March 2014, and on 1 April 2014, approximately 300 displaced Muslims were transported by MISCA away from Djomo, in overloaded trucks with people having some belongings.⁵²³¹ P-1598 stated that the Muslims did not want to return to their homes and preferred to go to Carnot or Cameroon because they were afraid and scarred by the killings.⁵²³² P-1598 stated he knew from former Djomo parishioners that the Muslims of Djomo and Guen have not yet returned.⁵²³³

2029. P-0732 stated that many Muslims who were staying at Ali's house moved to the church in Djomo village after the pastor from the church asked them to do so.⁵²³⁴ She went with her children to the house of Gbandjoukou for a week before the Anti-Balaka took him away and killed him.⁵²³⁵ P-0732 stated that the Anti-Balaka took her, her children and other people to always said that they needed to talk to Beina if there was an issue.⁵²⁵⁰ P-1964 stated that Mathurin was one of the Anti-Balaka leaders alongside Gbahara and Beina.⁵²⁵¹

2031. P-1598 stated that Beina and Armand were, in his opinion, the Anti-Balaka leaders in Guen, because they addressed the mayor and the deputy gendarmerie brigade commander and gave orders to the other Anti-Balaka members.⁵²⁵² P-1598 believed that Mathurin was their bodyguard.⁵²⁵³ Beina, Armand, and Mathurin all carried 'Kala', while the other Anti-Balaka carried traditional weapons.⁵²⁵⁴ He stated that the Anti-Balaka who had arrived in Guen came mostly from Yaloké (like Mathurin, Armand, and Beina) or from Bangui, Bozoum and Baoro.⁵²⁵⁵

2032. P-0732 stated that Beina was the chief of the Anti-Balaka in Guen at the time when the 43 men were killed.⁵²⁵⁶ P-0732 stated that some Muslim men told her that he was an important Anti-Balaka chief.⁵²⁵⁷

2034. Jacob Mokpem-Bionli stated that the Anti-Balaka elements in Guen depended on the national coordination and were represented by Aubin Mboya, also receiving financial support from Mr Ngaïssona through Mboya like all other ComZones.⁵²⁵⁹ The witness stated that, at some point, he heard from the Guen ComZone Aubin Mboya that there were provocations of Muslims to which Anti-Balaka reacted violently, following which Mr Ngaïssona sent a delegation to calm the situation, including Ndomaté, Olivier Feissona,

iii. Carnot – early February 2014

2035. The evidence before the Chamber as outlined below shows that in early February 2014, Anti-Balaka elements entered Carnot, and killed Muslim civilians, looted properties, and created conditions which led to the majority of the Muslim population leaving.

2036. P-0289, a priest in Carnot at the relevant time, stated that rumours that the Anti-Balaka would attack had multiplied before the attack, and the Seleka left at the end of January 2014 when the Anti-Balaka were at 30 kilometres from Carnot.⁵²⁶² P-0289 stated that the majority of Muslims from Carnot left at the same time as the Seleka, while Muslims from surrounding villages, especially from Yaloké, Bossembélé, Bozoum, Baoro, Bossemtélé, sought refuge in the parish.⁵²⁶³

2038. Barthélémy Namsenmo agreed that the attack on Carnot took place in the first week of February 2024.⁵²⁶⁷ He also stated that more than a thousand Anti-Balaka elements entered Carnot.⁵²⁶⁸ The witness testified that the Bossangoa group, along with that of Baoro, went to attack Carnot.⁵²⁶⁹

2040.P-2393 stated that two days after the Anti-Balaka's arrival, a meeting was held between local authorities and the Anti-Balaka, with the latter represented by Babé aka 'B13', Kongomani, Sylvestre Sinacolo, Barthélémy 'Namssenmo', Nicodeme Sekolo and another.⁵²⁷¹ P-0289 stated that the leader of the Anti-Balaka was called 'Stève', a former FACA.⁵²⁷²

2041.P-2393 stated that during the meeting the Anti-Balaka said that they did not come to cause trouble or commit crimes and did not have anything against any ethnic group except the 'Arabs', who they considered had aligned with the Seleka and they wanted to take revenge against them.⁵²⁷³ P-0289 stated that the Anti-Balaka said that they had come to free the town and the country, that they no longer wanted to see the Seleka or those that had worked with the Seleka and if they found them, they would kill them, adding that they would search the houses to find any remaining weapons.⁵²⁷⁴ P-0289 stated that the leader of the Anti-Balaka terrorised Carnot.⁵²⁷⁵

2042.Barthélémy Namsenmo stated that the objective of the Anti-Balaka entering Carnot was to kill and chase the Muslims from the CAR, they said they no longer wanted Muslims on their territory because the Seleka are Muslims.⁵²⁷⁶

2043.P-2393 stated that, following the meeting, the Anti-Balaka, including those who were at the meeting, went to the Donoum neighbourhood to search the houses of 'Arabs', and started searching and looting the houses of wealthy Muslims.⁵²⁷⁷ P-2393 described that the Anti-Balaka created disorder in Carnot.⁵²⁷⁸

2044. P-0289 stated that between their arrival and the arrival of MISCA ten days later, the Anti-Balaka immediately started killing Muslims they suspected of being Seleka, with all Muslims leaving town or fleeing to the parish.⁵²⁷⁹

2045. P-2556 stated that the Anti-Balaka controlled the area and Muslims could not move freely as they were in danger of being attacked by the Anti-Balaka.⁵²⁸⁰

2046. More specifically, several witnesses spoke of the killing of Muslims at Abou Panga's house. P-2393 stated that he heard that the Anti-Balaka went to Abou Panga's house on 7 or 8 February 2014 to loot, and killed at least seven persons inside the house and one in front of it.⁵²⁸¹ Similarly, P-0289 stated he heard that the Anti-Balaka killed eight persons as they went to loot at the house.⁵²⁸² P-2132 stated that he heard three or four bodies were discovered in the house of Abou Panga someday after 3 February 2014.⁵²⁸³ P-2556 stated that he had heard that four Muslims were killed in the incident and six others injured.⁵²⁸⁴ Barthélémy Namsenmo stated that the only remaining Muslims in Carnot who were at 'Abu Panga's' compound were killed by the Anti-Balaka.⁵²⁸⁵

2049. Several witnesses described the looting of houses and mosques in Carnot starting in early February 2014.

2050. P-2556 stated that the looting in Carnot started ‘only after the arrival of the Anti-Balaka’,⁵²⁸⁹ and that this created ‘a lot of trouble in town’.⁵²⁹⁰ P-2393 stated that the Anti-Balaka searched the houses of ‘Arabs’ in the Donoum neighbourhood.⁵²⁹¹ P-2393 stated that once François Bozizé said in a speech that the fences of houses had to be stripped because weapons might be hidden in them and the Anti-Balaka seemed to have adopted that idea and that was why they started destroying the fences surrounding Muslim houses and searching them.⁵²⁹² The witness heard about this from a young Christian who was associated with the Anti-Balaka.⁵²⁹³ P-0289 and P-2393 described that Muslim houses in Carnot were looted and destroyed at the relevant time.⁵²⁹⁴

2051. As regards mosques, P-2393 stated that soon after the arrival of the Anti-Balaka in Carnot, several mosques were looted and some even destroyed, amongst them the mosques in the Malam Pacco, Donoum, Nagaito and Zawa I neighbourhoods.⁵²⁹⁵ P-2556 stated that the Anti-Balaka who came from Baoro used to steal the roofs and wood from the mosques so as to sell them.⁵²⁹⁶ P-2132 stated he observed three or four Anti-Balaka elements breaking into the house of a Muslim merchant from Niger.⁵²⁹⁷

2052. The Chamber heard several witnesses describing how Muslims left their homes and sought refuge elsewhere, some in Carnot, especially at the Catholic church, and some in villages in the CAR, in Cameroon or Chad.

2053. P-2393 stated that following the attack by the Anti-Balaka, some of the Muslim residents in Carnot fled and took refuge in Abou Panga's house in the Mbonet I neighbourhood.⁵²⁹⁸ P-2132 stated that the census established that there were 1177 houses and 36 pieces of land belonging to Muslims mostly in Carnot and that after the attack all Muslims had fled their homes.⁵²⁹⁹ P-2556 more generally described that many Muslims went to Cameroon.⁵³⁰⁰

2054. P-2132 and P-2556 stated that many Muslims were dislocated to the Catholic church parish following the arrival of the Anti-Balaka in Carnot.⁵³⁰¹ P-0289, who kept a register of the persons who stayed in the parish,⁵³⁰² stated that at some point in February 2014 there were around 2,000 Muslims present.⁵³⁰³ He clarified that more than half of the refugees, in majority women and children, were not from Carnot but from the Gadzi sub-prefecture, from Yaloké, Bossembélé, Bozoum, Baoro and Bossemptélé.⁵³⁰⁴ P-1576 stated that when he visited Carnot in October 2015, he found around 500 displaced Muslims that had stayed at the church grounds for almost two years.⁵³⁰⁵

iv. Berbérati – early February 2014

2058. P-2325 stated that after Michel Djotodia resigned, they heard that the Anti-Balaka was in areas close to Berbérati.⁵³⁰⁸ P-2324 stated that members of the Muslim community of Berbérati were scared because of rumours that the Anti-Balaka were coming and seeing Muslims from Boda, Baoro and Carnot fleeing the violence in large groups, so a large part of the Muslim population decided to leave Berbérati to Cameroon.⁵³⁰⁹

2059. The evidence further shows that on 7 February 2014, after the Seleka's departure, a first Anti-Balaka group arrived from the road of Gamboula.⁵³¹⁰ This group was led by Rodrigue or 'Rocca' Mokom, son of Bernard Mokom and brother of Maxime Mokom.⁵³¹¹ P-2325 stated that this group arrived on motorbikes and two pick-up vehicles, was armed with machetes and traditional weapons and had gris-gris.⁵³¹²

2060. P-2324 stated that the Anti-Balaka group was welcomed by a religious delegation in Wapo, eight kilometres from Berbérati, and the bishop advised Rocca not to harm the population, to which Rocca replied he was not planning to do so.⁵³¹³

2061. P-2324 stated that the next morning, 8 February 2014, Rocca Mokom and many elements came to the market.⁵³¹⁴ P-2324 stated that the FACA in this group had 'Kalashnikovs' and military uniforms, one had an automatic weapon, others had artisanal weapons and machetes; others were dressed as regular civilians, all had gris-gris and some wore wigs.⁵³¹⁵ P-2324 stated that Rocca wore a military uniform although he was not military.⁵³¹⁶ P-2324 stated that the first group of Anti-Balaka began conducting searches of Muslim houses to look for weapons.⁵³¹⁷

2063. P-2325 stated that around noon, some Anti-Balaka elements tried to enter the central mosque, one stating that it was to seek revenge and another that they had to kill all the Muslims.⁵³²¹ P-2325 stated that in another incident when Anti-Balaka armed with traditional weapons were about to shoot four young Muslims, he believed the reason was that the Anti-Balaka in general assimilated the Muslims with Seleka.⁵³²²

2064. P-2324 stated that the following day, 9 February 2014, a second group of Anti-Balaka arrived, led by Chrysostome Yapélé alias 'Chiki-Chiki'.⁵³²³ P-2324 stated that he also recognised 'Mopao', not from Berbérati, who had a weapon and wore a wig, and others; he was told there were many FACA in the second group.⁵³²⁴

was large and came from surrounding towns like Carnot, Gadzi, Guen, Sassele and Bekadili, he recognised some as former scouts and heard some speak dialects from those places.⁵³²⁶ P-2325 stated that the group, wearing gris-gris, wigs, horns on necklaces, started operating at around 13:30 on 8 February 2014, going directly to Poto-Poto and starting to chase the Muslims, looting from houses and shops of Muslims, and he believed them to be familiar with the area because they knew where to find the Muslims.⁵³²⁷ P-2325 stated that the next group was led by a local street seller called ‘Chiki-Chiki’, who explained to P-2325 that he had lost everything because of the Seleka and had gone north to get his ‘vaccination’ and returned to seek revenge against the Muslims since all Muslims were accomplices of the Seleka, so he wanted to chase them out/kill them.⁵³²⁸ P-2325 stated that ‘Chiki-Chiki’ had about a hundred elements under his control.⁵³²⁹ P-2325 stated that an Anti-Balaka group based in Poto-Poto seemed to have some autonomy, but was under orders of ‘Chiki-Chiki’.⁵³³⁰

2067. Chrysosteme Yapélé, also known as ‘Chiki-Chiki’, confirmed that he was an Anti-Balaka leader in Berbérati in 2014, a ComZone among that group, and then the prefectural coordinator for the prefect of Mambéré-Kadéï.⁵³³⁷ The witness testified that when he arrived in Berbérati, Rocca Mokom was already there and left about three days after he arrived.⁵³³⁸

2068. P-2556 testified that the national coordination asked the mission chiefs in Carnot to go to Berbérati to attack the Poto-Poto neighbourhood; it seemed that there were Muslims, and Aimé Blaise phoned the Anti-Balaka and mission chiefs and took them to Berbérati in order to attack the town, and they took advantage of the situation to sell fetishes to the population of Berbérati.⁵³³⁹

2069. P-2324 stated that on 10 February 2014, the two Anti-Balaka groups argued and fought when the group of ‘Chiki-Chiki’ told Rocca and his group that the task they were given was to kill and chase Muslims, but the latter disagreed and Rocca’s group retreated after they clashed.⁵³⁴⁰

2070. P-2324 stated that at around 18:00, he went to the mosque for evening prayer when he was told by a Red Cross person that it was not safe because the Anti-Balaka were killing people in the Muslim neighbourhoods.⁵³⁴¹ P-2324 stated that he returned home to collect his brother and departed, seeing hundreds of young Anti-Balaka elements attacking the houses of Muslims, destroying walls, and leaving with mattresses and furniture.⁵³⁴² P-2324 stated that his house was looted and the fence around the property was destroyed, and he learned that some of his neighbours participated in the looting.⁵³⁴³ P-2324 stated that in Poto-Poto, all houses were completely emptied, some destroyed, some had roofs or windows removed.⁵³⁴⁴ P-2324 stated that the Anti-Balaka said publicly that their goal was to destroy everything so the Muslims would leave and never come back.⁵³⁴⁵ P-2324 stated that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslims' shops and spared the Christians', his shop was looted and damaged, but his Christian neighbours' were not.⁵³⁴⁶ P-2324 stated that he heard the Anti-Balaka destroying the mosque in Sambanda.⁵³⁴⁷

2071. Chrysostome Yapélé testified that the attack on Berbérati occurred and houses of Muslims were destroyed in Poto-Poto, the Muslim neighbourhood of Berbérati.⁵³⁴⁸ The witness testified that sometimes the attacks were carried out by the Anti-Balaka, sometimes other people, sometimes the civilian population.⁵³⁴⁹ The witness confirmed that, as opposed to the Malians or Senegalese, it was the Chadian and Fulbe that were especially targeted because mostly ('majoritairement') it was them that joined the Seleka movement to attack the Central Africans.⁵³⁵⁰ The witness testified that he heard that there were killings during the attack, but did not see them personally.⁵³⁵¹ He further testified that the attack involved more than a thousand Anti-Balaka elements.⁵³⁵²

2074. Further, the evidence shows that the situation in Berbérati worsened following the attack.

2075. Roger de Martial Yagao stated that when the Anti-Balaka were in command of Berbérati coordinated by Chiki-Chiki, they looted and destroyed the properties of Muslims, stealing goats and chickens, and attacking those who resisted.⁵³⁵⁷ The witness stated that when he arrived in Berbérati in July 2014, there had been extensive looting and destruction of property mostly in Poto-Poto, the Muslim neighbourhood of Berbérati, with mosques, houses, shops, diamond and gold collector offices of Muslims looted and destroyed.⁵³⁵⁸

2077. P-2324 stated that he heard later at the IDP site that a crowd destroyed the main mosque in the Arab neighbourhood, while the one in Djambala was turned into a church.⁵³⁶² P-2324 stated that, at first, the central mosque was not completely attacked, although doors and windows were removed, it was then destroyed on orders of Louis Balendji aka ‘Awilo’, an Anti-Balaka element, after a reconciliation meeting organised by the bishop between the Anti-Balaka, the Muslim community and the rest of the population.⁵³⁶³

later told him that the Anti-Balaka had to erase ‘all the trace’ of Muslims in Berbérati.⁵³⁶⁴ P-2325 stated that ‘Chiki-Chiki’ would sell the goods he had looted with his group, using the money to buy machetes and weapons for his elements.⁵³⁶⁵

2079. Roger de Martial Yagao stated that all mosques had already been destroyed when he arrived in Berbérati, he heard that they were destroyed by the Anti-Balaka and some ill-intentioned Christians.⁵³⁶⁶ The witness stated that there were mosques in all neighbourhoods, the central mosque was in Poto-Poto and has since been rebuilt.⁵³⁶⁷

2080. The evidence as outlined below shows that Muslims sought refuge at the bishopric, before eventually being transported away.

2081. P-2324 stated that he managed to get to the bishopric where there were already many displaced Muslims from Boda, Mboula, Balego, Bania, Yamamdo and Carnot who had fled in the previous weeks, about 400 displaced people were there in total, only Muslim men, women, children, elderly.⁵³⁶⁸ P-2324 stated that the next day, MISCA started evacuating Muslims from another church and other hiding places to the bishopric, increasing the number of displaced Muslims there to thousands.⁵³⁶⁹

2083. P-2325 stated that following the attack, there were over 400 Muslims at the parish.⁵³⁷¹ P-2325 stated that the next morning, a Cameroonian MISCA contingent started bringing people to the bishopric, which was bigger and safer since it was further away from the city centre on the road to Gamboula.⁵³⁷² P-2325 stated that in the first five days following the attack, he brought about 100 Muslims from their homes to his parish, and MISCA would evacuate them to the bishopric or he brought them in small groups, with the Anti-Balaka at times threatening or booing him, but not attacking him.⁵³⁷³ P-2325 said that after an incident when the Anti-Balaka called on him to bring the Muslims out of the parish, he decided that all Muslims there should be evacuated to the bishopric.⁵³⁷⁴

2084. P-2325 stated that at the bishopric, latrines were dug in the compound and the displaced had access to water.⁵³⁷⁵ P-2325 said a dispensary was run by the nuns where the displaced people who needed treatment could seek free medical care, later taken over by MSF.⁵³⁷⁶ P-2325 stated food was collected from Christians in various parishes.⁵³⁷⁷ P-2325 stated that people were confined within the fenced off compound of the bishopric with MISCA forces providing protection.⁵³⁷⁸

2085. Roger de Martial Yagao stated that most of the Muslims from Berbérati had fled to Cameroon and those remaining had sought shelter in the St Anne Church of Berbérati, often transferred there from other churches to which they had initially fled.⁵³⁷⁹ The witness stated that there were more than 1,000 Muslims in this church; some were with their families while others were alone; some were sleeping in rooms and others in tents provided by the UNHCR.⁵³⁸⁰ The witness stated that NGOs were providing water, food and toilets, and MISCA was present outside of the church, providing security and protection.⁵³⁸¹ Roger de Martial Yagao recalled that an abbot was almost killed by the Anti-Balaka for assisting the Muslims.⁵³⁸²

were the ones who were born and raised in CAR.⁵³⁸³ The witness stated that all the Muslims who were displaced to the Catholic church returned to their quarters about two to three years before his statement in 2018; some of the Muslims who had fled to Kenzo also returned, but not all of them.⁵³⁸⁴ He stated that the bishop created a committee for peace and social cohesion that brought together representatives of the Muslim and Christian population.⁵³⁸⁵

2089.P-2325 stated that when ‘Chiki-Chiki’ was in charge of the Anti-Balaka, they received reports of seven incidents in which Muslims who had left the bishopric, were injured with machetes; he saw some of the victims himself.⁵³⁹⁰ P-2325 stated that Issa Waziri was killed by the Anti-Balaka and his house looted; at that time the only Anti-Balaka group operating in town was that of ‘Chiki-Chiki’.⁵³⁹¹ He stated that a 22 year old Muslim was also killed after the Anti-Balaka asked him for money and he refused to give them; they cut his throat.⁵³⁹²

to Berbérati to get involved in the mining business of gold and diamond.⁵³⁹⁴ P-2325 stated that they noticed that ‘Chiki-Chiki’ started changing his position, being only against the Muslims of Chadian origin.⁵³⁹⁵ P-2325 stated that in May 2014, Seregaza represented the Anti-Balaka and explained they were not against all the Muslims but only against those who had been involved with the Seleka, in P-2325’s opinion he meant the Chadian Muslims, who had mostly collaborated with the Seleka, and that it was now time for reconciliation.⁵³⁹⁶

c. Lobaye (Boda) – 5 February 2014

2093. The evidence further shows that almost immediately thereafter, on or about 29 January 2014, violent clashes erupted between the non-Muslim and Muslim population,⁵³⁹⁸ leading to deaths⁵³⁹⁹ and houses being burnt.⁵⁴⁰⁰ The evidence indicates that the Muslim and non-Muslim population blamed each other for starting the fighting.⁵⁴⁰¹ P-1962 testified that this bred ‘anger and animosity’ amongst the non-Muslim community of Boda towards the

Muslim population and the government, people were angered by the loss of their relatives and property, and the population sought the departure of the Muslim civilians as a result.⁵⁴⁰² Joachim Kokaté agreed similarly that the non-Muslim population had lost everything and consequently wanted all the Muslims to leave.⁵⁴⁰³

2096. P-1962 testified that the stated goal of the journey to Boda, to drive out all the Muslims in Boda, was discussed by the elements.⁵⁴⁰⁸ P-1962 said he heard Cœur de Lion state that he wanted to chase the Muslims out of the CAR and to their country of origin, whoever was praying as Muslim had to go, whether born in the CAR or not; even though the Seleka were gone, the Muslims had taken weapons against the Christians in place of the Seleka.⁵⁴⁰⁹

P-1962 stated it was decided that Cœur de Lion would lead the attack and Habib Soussou would be his deputy, they divided into three groups.⁵⁴¹¹

2098. The Chamber notes in this context also the evidence of P-1577, who stated that on his travel between Boda and Mbaïki in the days before the attack, he came across two groups that identified themselves as Anti-Balaka, one closer to Boda, one at the entrance to Mbaïki travelling in from Boda, and that both indicated that they were getting ready to attack Boda.⁵⁴¹²

2099. Zakaria Saidou, a Muslim from Boda, stated that when the Anti-Balaka saw that the Seleka had left, they were intent on the Muslims leaving Boda as they started attacking the Muslim population prompting them to flee.⁵⁴¹³ The witness also stated that in anticipation of an Anti-Balaka attack, people fled Boda, including his family.⁵⁴¹⁴ The witness stated that many Muslims remained grouped together in the mosques.⁵⁴¹⁵ He stated that people were killed in Boda.⁵⁴¹⁶ Zakaria Saidou stated that the young Muslims of Boda formed a self-defence group and would carry knives, machetes, sticks and arrows.⁵⁴¹⁷

2100. Several news outlets reported on an interview with Firmin Dopani, an Anti-Balaka from Boda,⁵⁴¹⁸ about the situation in the CAR during which he stated that he could not accept living with Muslims long term, that the Muslims must leave the CAR and that he reserved the right to kill Muslims.⁵⁴¹⁹

2101. The Chamber notes in this context that P-1962 stated that the youth of Boda were fighting the Muslims and only some of the youth had been vaccinated or had gris-gris, with the remainder only officially becoming Anti-Balaka when ‘Huit’ (‘8’, ‘Witte’), a ‘féticheur’, arrived to Boda after the attack.⁵⁴²⁰ The Chamber considers that this does not detract from its conclusion that the attack on Boda was carried out by Anti-Balaka groups. Even if these groups were, on the spot, joined by youth from the locality, their activities in the context of the attack on Boda fell thus, by their coordinated actions, within the framework of one and the same attack. Similarly, in relation to P-1962’s testimony that the threats by Dopani and others in Boda were not necessarily implemented,⁵⁴²¹ the Chamber notes that P-1962 also stated that the aggressive language of Dopani was used ‘from the very beginning’.⁵⁴²²

2102. P-1962 stated that the Anti-Balaka attack took place between 05:00 and 10:00 on 4 February 2014.⁵⁴²³ P-1871 confirmed the attack as commencing early in the morning between 04:00 and 05:00, as she was awoken in her home in Boda by her husband who heard gunshots and discovered that the Anti-Balaka was attacking after venturing outside to see what was happening.⁵⁴²⁴

2103. The evidence shows that the clashes ceased after the arrival of the Sangaris who coordinated with the Red Cross to collect the bodies; 11 Muslims and three FACA and two Anti-Balaka were killed in that attack.⁵⁴²⁵ The evidence further shows that the market in Boda was burnt,⁵⁴²⁶ as were houses and businesses.⁵⁴²⁷

2104. The report of satellite imagery expert Lars Bromley concluded from images of Boda taken on 8 January and 28 February 2014, respectively, that ‘analysis found at least 747 damaged or destroyed structures in the town’, that further review ‘would certainly locate more destroyed structures, especially in the denser downtown area’ located ‘especially in the denser downtown area’, that ‘[a]n obvious market area and many large commercial or community structures are also destroyed’, and that the cause of the damage was ‘probably fire, based on blackened remains and often collapsed structures’.⁵⁴²⁸

2105. P-1871 stated that the Anti-Balaka arrived in Boda in January 2014, sometime after the resignation of Michel Djotodia, and she took refuge in the central mosque with her family and other Muslims when the fighting started; more than 400 people had gathered at this mosque.⁵⁴²⁹ She saw people who had been killed on the way.⁵⁴³⁰ P-1871 stated that as they were scared the Anti-Balaka would even attack the central mosque, she and her family decided to leave and were the only Muslims in a vehicle leaving Boda which was stopped by persons wearing gris-gris and armed with hunting rifles and machetes who she recognised as the Anti-Balaka both from what the other passengers were saying and from what the men themselves said to the driver.⁵⁴³¹ P-1871 stated that after her husband, who was of Arab descent, was identified as a Muslim by the Anti-Balaka, they told the driver to continue on his journey and to leave P-1871 and her family behind.⁵⁴³² P-1871 and her husband were then led into the bush by the Anti-Balaka, where they raped P-1871 and killed her husband.⁵⁴³³

2106. The evidence as further outlined below shows that thereafter, the town of Boda became an enclave in which Muslims were effectively trapped.

2107.P-1962 stated that the city was divided into non-Muslim and Muslim areas by the Sangaris.⁵⁴³⁴ Both P-1962⁵⁴³⁵ and P-1577⁵⁴³⁶ said that the Muslims were enclaved in Boda,⁵⁴³⁷ essentially encircled, and remained like this for approximately a year.⁵⁴³⁸ The evidence suggests that an estimated 11,000 people were in the small enclave in the centre of town.⁵⁴³⁹ P-1576, who travelled to Boda in early April 2014, described the dire situation in the Muslim enclave, which lacked access to medical care as well as food, since the Anti-Balaka made it hard for provision trucks to pass and logistics were difficult.⁵⁴⁴⁰

2113. The evidence further shows that later in 2014, Mr Ngaïssona appointed Habib Soussou as ComZone in Boda.⁵⁴⁴⁹

B. The attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin, on 5 December 2013

1. Coordination of the attack

2115. In what follows, the Chamber finds that the Anti-Balaka elements, including Mr Yekatom's group,⁵⁴⁵¹ carried out a coordinated attack on Bangui, including in Boeing and Cattin,⁵⁴⁵² on 5 December 2013 (the 'Bangui Attack').

‘inconclusive’; it also submits that ‘the Gobere group’ did not coordinate with individuals in Cameroon, including Mr Ngaïssona.⁵⁴⁵⁶

2119. While the Yekatom Defence does not dispute Mr Yekatom’s group’s participation in clashes in the Cattin neighbourhood in Bangui on 5 December 2013, it argues that Mr Yekatom was not aware of the ‘broader 5th December Operation i.e. that “anti-balaka”, ex-FACA and/other resistance groups were also combatting the Seleka in Bangui on that day, nor that he was aware of the respective or collective nature(s), objective(s) or conduct of these groups or their leaders’.⁵⁴⁵⁷ It submits that Mr Yekatom’s awareness cannot be inferred from the mere fact that Mr Yekatom’s group attack on Seleka positions in Cattin ‘coincided’ with other attacks on Seleka positions ‘elsewhere in Bangui that day’.⁵⁴⁵⁸ In support of this argument, it points to evidence ‘that would indicate the lack of prior coordination’ between Mr Yekatom’s group and those that participated in the ‘broader 5th December Operation’.⁵⁴⁵⁹ Further, the Yekatom Defence argues that, even assuming that Mr Yekatom was aware of a ‘broader Operation’, it does not follow that he was aware of any criminal objectives that other groups, leaders, or participants may have harboured.⁵⁴⁶⁰

2121. Accordingly, in assessing the evidence in light of the Defence’s challenges, the Chamber has first addressed the coordinated nature of the Bangui Attack and then turned to the actions attributed to Mr Yekatom and his group. As set out below, the coordinated nature of the Bangui Attack is indeed demonstrated with and without having regard to Mr Yekatom's purported awareness.

In the early morning hours of 5 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka mounted a coordinated attack on Bangui, including in Boeing and Cattin. The plan to mount an attack on Bangui existed at least as of 30 November 2013. Anti-Balaka elements and groups travelled from the provinces to arrive close to Bangui before 5 December 2013.

During their move from the provinces to Bangui, Anti-Balaka chiefs communicated across their groups, kept and maintained records or lists of elements, armed themselves, and waited at common locations and prepared for an attack on Bangui. Mr Ngaïssona provided funds to Anti-Balaka elements that participated in the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013. By the beginning of December 2013, several thousand Anti-Balaka elements had arrived at the outskirts of Bangui to participate in an attack. News about an impending attack on Bangui circulated in various circles within the Anti-Balaka leadership. Mr Ngaïssona knew that an attack would take place on Bangui.

The Anti-Balaka participating in the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013 shared the same goal, which was to target Seleka positions in Bangui with a view to 'getting rid of Djotodia' and 'chasing out the Seleka', which included systematic targeting of Muslim civilians. Various Anti-Balaka groups that participated in the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013 had common leaders, who coordinated their actions and instructed them. Anti-Balaka groups that reassembled close to Bangui prior to the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013 were each assigned a specific target within Bangui and instructed to begin the attack on the respective targets at 05:00 on 5 December 2013. The attack was carried out as planned, resulting in clashes between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka in several locations in Bangui, including Boeing, with the Anti-Balaka beginning to retreat around 10:00 the same day. Later that day, FROCCA issued a radio statement in relation to the attack on Bangui, referring to it as '[l]e rétablissement de l'ordre fonctionnel' and stating that the Anti-Balaka 'sont des Centrafricains pour aller libérer leur pays des jougs des djihadistes venus du D[arfour], du T[chad], du S[oudan]'

The attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 were coordinated with each other.

2122. The Chamber heard evidence from witnesses who participated in the Bangui Attack themselves, for example, P-0306,⁵⁴⁶¹ Brice Emotion Namsio,⁵⁴⁶² P-2251,⁵⁴⁶³ P-1521,⁵⁴⁶⁴ P-

2123. In assessing the level of coordination and planning of the Bangui Attack, the Chamber looked at several indicators, which have been discussed separately below, namely (i) the existence of a plan to attack prior to December 2013; (ii) movement of Anti-Balaka elements and groups from the provinces to arrive close to Bangui before 5 December 2013; (iii) the level of communication between the Anti-Balaka chiefs across the various groups during their advance to Bangui; (iv) keeping and maintaining of records or lists of elements prior to the Bangui Attack; (v) waiting at common locations and preparing; (vi) number of elements estimated to be involved; (vii) financing, arming and efforts to obtain weapons and ammunition along the way to Bangui; (viii) circulation of information, prior to 5 December 2013, about an impending attack; (ix) the order to attack Bangui; (x) goal of the Bangui Attack; (xi) common leaders; (xii) the assignment of specific locations and time to attack in advance; (xiii) unfolding of the attack and retreat; and (xiv) its aftermath and retaliation by the Seleka.

2124. The Chamber then turns to Mr Yekatom's actions and how they feature within the 'broader' Bangui Attack.⁵⁴⁷³ The Chamber examines whether and to what extent Mr Yekatom's group appeared to be (i) setting up a base in Gbangba composed of civilians and FACA members;⁵⁴⁷⁴ (ii) advancing from Gbangba to Projet prior to the Bangui Attack;⁵⁴⁷⁵ (iii) joining with elements from Bossangoa;⁵⁴⁷⁶ (iv) communicating with Ngremangou and others in advance of the Bangui Attack;⁵⁴⁷⁷ (v) preparing for and attacking pre-decided locations; and (vi) instructing his group about the attack on the market in Boeing (the ‘Boeing Market’) and Cattin.⁵⁴⁷⁸

i. Existence of a plan, prior to December 2013

2125. Turning to the first indicator of coordination, the Chamber finds that a plan to attack Bangui existed, at least, as of 30 November 2013, of which Mr Ngaïssona was aware.

2126. The Chamber finds that, in November 2013, Mr Ngaïssona and Bernard Mokom met certain individuals in Yaoundé, Cameroon, in relation to a future attack on Bangui.⁵⁴⁷⁹

2128. P-0884 testified that he would talk to Mr Ngaïssona ‘during this period’; P-0884 told Mr Ngaïssona that the situation was difficult and that the Seleka were continuing to attack the population, to which the latter answered, ‘when I come back [...], one day God will allow the country to be freed’.⁵⁴⁸² P-0884 described phoning Mr Ngaïssona ‘regularly’ during this time to talk about the situation in the country, and while he did not remember the exact content of their phone call just before 5 December 2013, P-0884 said that they talked about the Bangui Attack (‘avant le 5 décembre, il avait l’habitude de m’appeler et de me parler... d’avoir les nouvelles du pays et de me parler de l’attaque du 5 décembre’).⁵⁴⁸³

government.⁵⁴⁸⁴ Adrien Poussou said that, in his conversation with Mr Ngaïssona, the word ‘attack’ was not used, but everything Mr Ngaïssona was saying, the references he was using, insinuated that there would be an attack – Mr Ngaïssona said the regime was going to topple in a short time, and asked what the witness was going to Bangui to do.⁵⁴⁸⁵ Adrien Poussou based his conclusion on his experience within FROCCA and what they imagined that François Bozizé and his entourage were up to, as well as information of public knowledge that François Bozizé was organising his supporters with a view to attacking Bangui.⁵⁴⁸⁶ In the witness’s view, it was impossible to imagine Michel Djotodia falling in a peaceful way, or at least falling and being replaced by François Bozizé in a peaceful manner.⁵⁴⁸⁷ Adrien Poussou did not discuss with Mr Ngaïssona the latter’s sources or how he came to know about this.⁵⁴⁸⁸

2130. The Prosecution points to Facebook exchanges showing Mr Ngaïssona’s arrival in Yaoundé in the latter half of November 2013 joining Bernard Mokom and others, and then designating individuals to lead people in Bangui, with the instructions coming from François Bozizé to Mr Ngaïssona and Bernard Mokom.⁵⁴⁸⁹ Solely on the basis of these Facebook exchanges, the Chamber is unable to enter the conclusion suggested by the Prosecution. Having reviewed these exchanges in light of the information discussed herein, and recalling its general conclusions on Facebook material, the Chamber draws no conclusions on that basis alone as to whether Mr Ngaïssona instructed individuals to lead elements in Bangui.

communications in September-November 2013;⁵⁴⁹¹ and (iii) FROCCA meetings,⁵⁴⁹² the Chamber finds that a plan to attack Bangui existed, at least as of 30 November 2013.

ii. Movement of Anti-Balaka elements and groups from the provinces to arrive close to Bangui before 5 December 2013

2135. At the outset, having regard to the agreed maps,⁵⁴⁹⁵ the Chamber notes that there are two primary roadways from the northern Bossangoa region to Bangui (through Bouca – Damara and Bossembélé – Boali), and one from Bouar through Yaloké – Bossembélé – Boali. From the southern end of Bangui, the river Oubangui runs between the CAR and the Democratic Republic of Congo with Zongo on the immediate other side of the river. On the western side of Bangui lies the M'Poko airport and the M'Poko river. Bimbo lies on the southwest end of Bangui.

2137. Describing generally the movement of Anti-Balaka elements, P-0884, a Gbaya from Bossangoa who received information directly from actors in the field,⁵⁴⁹⁶ testified that, for the attack, people came from ‘everywhere’, including from Bossembélé, Bossangoa, Bambari, Sibut, Bogangolo and Damara.⁵⁴⁹⁷ P-0884 said that these people, some of whom went on foot, arrived from the north-east, north and south of the country, and that ‘their convergence point was Bangui’.⁵⁴⁹⁸ P-0876 also said that, before the Bangui Attack, ‘people continued to come in from the hinterlands, on foot, on dirt tracks, through the forest as they converged on Bangui’.⁵⁴⁹⁹ P-1847 said generally that the young Anti-Balaka of the Bossangoa area, supported by members of the PG, walked towards Bangui for the Bangui Attack.⁵⁵⁰⁰ Alfred Legrand Ngaya said that he did not know how the young people from the villages all knew to come to Bangui on 5 December 2013, and did not know in advance that they were coming.⁵⁵⁰¹

2138. The evidence shows that some of these individuals had organised themselves in distinct groups within their respective provinces with varying compositions, and then began making their way to Bangui in advance of the Bangui Attack, merging with other groups along the way.⁵⁵⁰² The Chamber has considered the movement of some of these Anti-Balaka groups, as discussed further below, from the provinces to Bangui to assess the level of organisation and coordination prior to the Bangui Attack.

In particular, P-1847 said that Dedane was his first cousin, that he was very close to him and that this was why he gave him a lot of information about the upcoming attacks (see para. 165). P-1847 also stated that the Anti-Balaka groups around the town of Bangui, who were very well organised, encouraged the Anti-Balaka of the provinces to join them for the assault on Bangui (P-1847 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2061-1534, at 1559, para. 160). Roger de Martial Yagao, a gendarme from Berbérati, heard ‘rumours’ that some of the Anti-Balaka from Bossangoa decided to take their weapons and gris-gris and to go to Bangui walking through the bush to participate in the attack of 5 December 2013 (see P-2133 Statement, CAR-OTP-2093-0267-R02, at 0280, para. 95).

2140. From the north, groups that were based around Gobere and Bossangoa travelled through villages along two main axes, discussed separately below.⁵⁵⁰⁴ P-2269 said that individuals that were in Gobere had divided themselves into groups,⁵⁵⁰⁵ each with their own chief, and took different routes to go to Bangui; some groups went to other towns to attack areas controlled by the Seleka, like Bouca and Bossangoa; however, not every group went to Bangui, some people stayed behind at the Gobere base and in Bossangoa.⁵⁵⁰⁶ P-2602, one of the group leaders at Gobere commanded by Danboy Dedane,⁵⁵⁰⁷ stated that military and civilians at Gobere were joined by other people from the villages on the way to Bangui.⁵⁵⁰⁸ P-0889, who was himself not in Gobere, put it more simplistically insofar as he claimed that ‘all Anti-Balaka leaders’ met in Gobere to get gris-gris and then went into different directions, to reach Bangui on 5 December 2013.⁵⁵⁰⁹

2141. At the same time, from the south, individuals who had sought refuge in Zongo after the Seleka arrival in Bangui, travelled back from Zongo to Bangui, crossing the river Oubangui, in advance of the Bangui Attack.⁵⁵¹⁰ Mr Yekatom, who was in Zongo, crossed back over and set up a base at Gbangba from where his group travelled to arrive in Bangui close to the M'Poko airport.⁵⁵¹¹ 2142. The witnesses described the difficulties they met in their advance, for example walking long distances without shoes,⁵⁵¹² without any means of transportation, with the food collected 'whenever', 'without clothing' and 'without materials [sic]'.⁵⁵¹³ P-0876 said that, at that time, people could not travel through the main roads, they could only take the paths they knew through the forest to reach Bangui; having seen some of the elements himself, P-0876 agreed that many of them were 'badly dressed, badly taken care of, and it could be seen that they were unable to feed well also'.⁵⁵¹⁴ In the Chamber's view, this speaks to a level of drive sustained over a long period of time by the Anti-Balaka elements, that also demonstrates coordination between the groups and their leaders.

⁵⁵⁰⁵ The Chamber notes P-2658’s evidence that the elements at Gobere were divided into six groups with many people each (see P-2658 Statement, CAR-OTP-2126-0012-R02, at 0027, para. 97). The Chamber further notes that P-2658 noticed ‘Dedane’ meeting with other chiefs of groups there ‘every morning’ but said that he himself was not present during those meetings and could only see them speaking from a distance (see P-2658: T-135, p. 42, lines 6 – 25, p. 44, line 6 – p. 45, line 15). The Chamber considers that this difference in the number of groups at Gobere is inconsequential for the purposes of the present discussion.

a. Bouca – Bogangolo – Damara axis

2144. The evidence shows that individuals present in Gobere, including Andjilo,⁵⁵¹⁵ Thierry Lebene, P-2269, Dedane Danboy,⁵⁵¹⁶ along with their elements, moved along the Bouca – Bogangolo – Damara axis to reach Bangui in advance of the Bangui Attack.

⁵⁵¹² P-0306: T-068, p. 65, lines 6-12.

⁵⁵¹³ P-2251 agreed that the situation in which they lived until they arrived in Bangui for the 'events of 5 December' was precisely the way that the counsel had described it, in that they 'were living without any means of transportation, with the food that [they] could collect whenever, without clothing and without materials' ('vivez sans moyen de transport, avec de la nourriture que vous trouvez au jour le jour, sans vêtements, sans équipement') (see P-2251: T-044, p. 9, lines 6-12).

⁵⁵¹⁶ See also paragraphs 1126-1143 above.

2145. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana, who was in Gobere himself,⁵⁵¹⁷ described that his group with Florent Kema, Thierry Lebene, Ndangba, Alexis Mandago and others split into two: (i) one that remained in the Bossangoa area, headed by Florent Kema and Ndangba for the Bossangoa Attack,⁵⁵¹⁸ and (ii) another that advanced towards Bangui led by Thierry Lebene that went to Bogangolo to meet Andjilo.⁵⁵¹⁹ As per Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana, Dedane stayed with the group that advanced towards Bangui.⁵⁵²⁰

2146. P-2269's group went from Gobere, taking the road from Bogangolo to Damara and then Bangui, and he said that all the groups taking different routes was part of their strategy, with the aim of arriving in Bangui for the attack on 5 December 2013.⁵⁵²¹

2148. P-1521, a FACA of Gbaya origins from Batangafo,⁵⁵²³ was one of those who fled from Boy-Rabe in Bangui and joined Andjilo's group in a place called Morouba, close to Damara.⁵⁵²⁴ P-1521 said that when he joined them, 'they all came from different villages to gather at that

The Chambers notes that P-0966 stayed in Bossangoa and travelled to Bangui only after the Bangui Attack and therefore did not have first-hand information about the movement along the axis towards Bangui (see P-0966: T-117, p. 32, lines 14-22; T-117, p. 66, line 5 – p. 67, line 3; T-118, p. 10, line 1 – p. 12, line 6; T-116, p. 63, line 17 – p. 64, line 17). Nonetheless, his description of the splitting up of groups in Gobere is reflected in the evidence from the witnesses that formed part of those groups.

2150.The Ngaïssona Defence argues that ‘other witnesses’ refute P-0306’s account of events concerning the progression towards Bangui, in particular, as regards Konaté joining Andjilo’s⁵⁵³⁰ group and asking Andjilo to go to Bangui.⁵⁵³¹

2151.The Chamber notes that, when asked about who directed Andjilo to travel to Bangui, P-0306 testified that, after the Bouca attack, Andjilo received ‘intermediaries’ sent by ‘Mr Ngaïssona’, ‘the authority’ – first Richard Bejouane in August, and then Konaté two months afterwards⁵⁵³² – who instructed them to travel to Bangui to ‘assist in chasing out the Seleka’ because ‘they were destroying the country’.⁵⁵³³ The Chamber has considered that P-

⁵⁵³⁰ As regards the discussion below concerning P-0306’s evidence concerning the meeting between Andjilo and Konaté, see also footnote 196 above.

⁵⁵³² P-0306: T-064, p. 40, lines 7-14. P-1847 also indicated that during the Bangui Attack, Andjilo was under Konaté’s directives (see P-1847 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2061-1534, at 1564, para. 189). See paragraphs 365-373 above. Regarding Konaté’s role in seeking out Andjilo’s group to come to Bangui, the Chamber has also considered Fredo Giscard Baboue, who stated that when Konaté, a high-ranking FACA at the time, knew that the Anti-Balaka advanced towards Bangui, he went into the bush with his elements and joined them at Damara, returning with the Anti-Balaka and setting up in Thierry Lebene’s base (see P-1530 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-0249-R02, at 0260, para. 51). The Chamber notes the witness’s source of information. Fredo Giscard Baboue said that he knew of this because his father, as chief of the neighbourhood, was informed of what was happening, including by elements of Konaté who were from the area, but the witness did not know who exactly. The witness also heard that Konaté was tasked with provisioning the Anti-Balaka with weapons because given his position in the army, he knew where the weapon stocks were.

0306 said that later, at a meeting with Mr Ngaïssona in Bangui, Mr Ngaïssona introduced himself as the chief/leader of the group and said ‘I am the one who asked you to come’ and that Mr Ngaïssona said this to the entire group.⁵⁵³⁴

2152. P-0306 said that Konaté arrived with a delegation of ‘numerous’ military and civilians who joined Andjilo’s group and that it was on Konaté’s instruction that Andjilo decided to reach Bangui.⁵⁵³⁵ P-0306 also indicated that, before they started walking to Bangui, Konaté promised this group assistance in terms of food and money at the end of the operation, but that it was never received.⁵⁵³⁶

2153. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that P-0306’s account concerning Mr Ngaïssona sending the two delegations to Bouca to convince Andjilo to go to Bangui for the attack ‘lacks credibility and should be set aside entirely’, arguing that his account was ‘repetitive, giving the impression of a pre-rehearsed narrative’, and ‘lacked the details and nuances expected of a witness who actually lived through the events he described’.⁵⁵³⁷ It further argues that P-0306 was unable to explain why he ultimately decided to abide by Mr Ngaïssona’s request to leave Bouca and merely asserted unconvincingly that Mr Ngaïssona was an ‘authority’.⁵⁵³⁸

2155. As regards when and where Konaté met Andjilo, the evidence suggests that this happened approximately 100 kilometres from Bangui 1-2 months before the Bangui Attack. P-0306 himself was not clear about where Konaté met Andjilo but placed his visits two months after August 2013.⁵⁵³⁹ P-2602 said that Konaté was never in Gobere, they met him ‘120 kilometres from Bangui’ and he ‘joined those who did not know the capital [...] in order to lead them to the capital.⁵⁵⁴⁰ P-1521, asked about Andjilo having been ‘recruited’ by Konaté, said that this was ‘absolutely false’ and spoke about Andjilo’s personal motivations to join ‘the movement’ and Konaté meeting Andjilo at the same time that the witness himself joined Andjilo in Morouba, 100 kilometres from Bangui.⁵⁵⁴¹

2156. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana seemed to think that the order to Andjilo to advance to Bangui for the Bangui Attack was given as early as in Gobre, following which he was sent to Bouca; in the witness’s opinion, after the Bouca attack, Andjilo became ‘uncontrollable’ and his objective was ‘to go to Bangui’; the witness testified that Andjilo did not respect any instructions from others – Andjilo retrieved weapons from the Seleka, people joined his group, and he assumed command and then he commanded all the people who followed him.⁵⁵⁴² Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana said that Andjilo controlled the Bouca and Bogangolo axis and ‘no one could give [him] any orders’; all the persons who followed Andjilo to participate in the Bangui Attack, it was he who gave the orders.⁵⁵⁴³

2157. As regards who sent Konaté to Andjilo, the Chamber considered P-0889’s and Thierry Tribunal Ndokobanda’s evidence concerning Maxime Mokom sending Konaté to Andjilo. P-0889 said that Maxime Mokom contacted people in the villages, such as Andjilo, to ask them to help out in other villages, and that this is how groups went from village to village, until Maxime Mokom ultimately asked them to go to Bangui and free the people there.⁵⁵⁴⁴ Further, the Chamber recalls that Thierry Tribunal Ndokobanda told Konaté that military men were going to the provinces to ‘help the children’ and Thierry Tribunal Ndokobanda

P-1521 said that the distance between Damara and Morouba was 25 kilometres and Bangui was 100 kilometres away from Morouba (see T-083, p. 3, lines 10-20). The Chamber further notes that P-1521’s testimony about Andjilo joining the Anti-Balaka movement comports with P-0306’s testimony about the circumstances in which Andjilo joined the Anti-Balaka prior to the Bouca attack. For example, both witnesses gave a similar account of how Andjilo’s family members were killed by the Seleka and how Andjilo recuperated a firearm left behind by the Seleka during a fight. See P-0306, T-064, p. 13 – p. 18, line 6, p. 23, line 13 – p. 24, line 10. In the view of the Chamber, Andjilo’s movement to Bangui after the Bouca attack at Konaté’s insistence is not contradictory to him having joined the Anti-Balaka earlier for personal reasons. In that respect, the Chamber does not consider that P-1521’s testimony contradicts that of P-0306.

put him in contact with Maxime Mokom; Maxime Mokom confirmed later he had contacted Konaté, sent him to Andjilo's group 'before Damara' and he had safely reached them.⁵⁵⁴⁵

2165. Witnesses described how other groups at different locations in the provinces joined or followed Andjilo's group towards Bangui through Damara.

2166. P-2251, who was an element for some time in Thierry Lebene's group,⁵⁵⁵⁵ said that after the clashes at Bogangolo and Boban, they met both young civilians and FACA soldiers who had come from Bangui to Boban and Bogangolo, and who told them that the situation in Bangui was such that many soldiers left Bangui to come to the villages and that the Seleka were targeting FACA and killing them.⁵⁵⁵⁶ According to P-2251, who heard about the plan to descend to Bangui from people who came to buy salt, sugar and coffee,⁵⁵⁵⁷ this was why Thierry Lebene's group decided to leave and travel on foot through the bush to Bangui.⁵⁵⁵⁸ P-2251 said that at first Thierry Lebene did not want to leave Bogangolo, but when people told him that many people were being attacked in Bangui, Lebene agreed to 'help to drive the Seleka out'.⁵⁵⁵⁹

2167. P-2251 said that Andjilo also came to Bogangolo and wanted to descend to Bangui and fight there.⁵⁵⁶⁰ P-2251 said that Andjilo then spoke to P-2251's chiefs Kolongo and Gaba in Boban, and continued towards Damara with the people who had fled Bangui and who were now returning to Bangui to attack; P-2251 said that, for a while he himself stayed in Boban but was then told by his chief Kolongo that they too had to go to Bangui to 'help their brothers'.⁵⁵⁶¹ P-2251's group walked down to Bogoin and on to Benima.⁵⁵⁶²

2168. When P-2251 arrived in Benima, he saw that Andjilo, Kems, Benjamin, and Tex, all of whom had their own groups,⁵⁵⁶³ were already there and Thierry Lebene joined them there later.⁵⁵⁶⁴ According to P-2251, some groups from Benima stayed in the Bossembélé area,⁵⁵⁶⁵ while others left Benima at different times to go to Bangui, the first and biggest group being led by Andjilo.⁵⁵⁶⁶ P-2251's group, led by Kolongo at the time, stayed in Benima for two more weeks before moving through the bush, skirting around Damara, and then establishing a base at Kpata, near Nguito,⁵⁵⁶⁷ close to Bangui.⁵⁵⁶⁸

b. Bouar – Bossembélé – Boali axis

2169. The Chamber now turns to the Anti-Balaka elements advancing to Bangui along the Bouar – Bossembélé – Boali axis. The Prosecution submits that, on 24 November 2013, Mr Ngaïssona ‘ordered’ elements in Bouar, Emtenou and Danboy being among them, to reach Bossembélé in three days.⁵⁵⁶⁹ The Ngaïssona Defence argues that there is insufficient evidence to prove that Mr Ngaïssona instructed elements from Bouar to reach Bossembélé and the related Facebook allegations are ‘nothing more than anonymous hearsay’.⁵⁵⁷⁰

2170. The Chamber recalls P-2673’s evidence concerning the movement of elements and resources from Garam-Boulai to Bouar.⁵⁵⁷¹ In particular, P-2673 stated that Mr Ngaïssona sent ‘some military men’ from Yaoundé to Garam-Boulai and on to Bouar.⁵⁵⁷² P-2673 was in touch with one of them, who told him that they had all received money to go there from Mr Ngaïssona through ‘Mokom père’; P-2673 stated that he did not know how many men were supposed to go to Bouar – ‘whoever wanted to go, could go’.⁵⁵⁷³ P-2673, asked where those from Bouar went after the attack there,⁵⁵⁷⁴ stated that, according to the information that he had, they were not able to chase the Seleka from Bouar so they stayed ‘somewhere in the bush’.⁵⁵⁷⁵ P-2673 also stated that Steve Yambété, when talking about the Bangui Attack, told him that ‘Bozizé’ had called Yambété to tell Konaté to wait for ‘those from Bouar and Bossangoa to join those in Bangui before the attack’.⁵⁵⁷⁶

P-2673 named Didier Danboy and ‘Emtenou’ as persons that left to go to Bouar. He also explained that there were three ‘Emtenou’, one of whom continued fighting ‘until Boali’ and did not return ‘like the others’; Hector Emtenou was in Yaoundé and Kambassio Emtenou went towards Bouar (see P-1719: T-041, p. 34, line 23 – p. 35, line 10). P-1719 said that a person called ‘Armel Emtenou and Pessere Jules’ were in charge of the Anti-Balaka in Bouar (see P-1719: T-142, p. 29, lines 4-8).

⁵⁵⁷³ P-2673 Statement, CAR-OTP-2127-6435-R01, at 6444, para. 56, at 6460-61, para. 168. P-2673 was himself one of those that received money to go to Garam-Boulai; and while he did not personally receive the money from Mr Ngaïssona, he said that it was ‘Mokom father’ who said that it was Mr Ngaïssona who gave that money. P-2673 also clarified that he received the money but did not intend to fight in Bouar but rather went home (see P-2673: T-042, p. 25, line 22 – p. 26, line 13, p. 71, line 24 – p. 73, line 10).

2172. The Chamber now turns to elements from Boali and Bossembélé travelling to participate in the Bangui Attack.⁵⁵⁷⁷ The Prosecution submits that the Anti-Balaka group led by Dedane attacked a Muslim camp near Boali on 3 December 2013 on their way from Bossangoa to Bangui.⁵⁵⁷⁸

2176. The Chamber notes that there is also evidence generally suggesting that elements from Boali or Bossembélé were present among those that participated in the Bangui Attack. P-0884 said when Maxime Mokom called him, he told him that men were on their way, ‘some at Boali’, others at PK26 and that ‘the Anti-Balaka were on their way to liberate’ them.⁵⁵⁸⁴ P-0884 also generally stated that Anti-Balaka movement was made up of different individuals coming from different areas, including ‘Bouar’,⁵⁵⁸⁵ but did not provide any further detail on the movement of people from Bouar – Boali axis for the Bangui Attack. P-0884 said that Richard Bejouane was from Boali,⁵⁵⁸⁶ but it is not known whether he necessarily travelled through the Boali axis. The Chamber notes that P-1339 said that generally ‘people of Bossangoa and Bossembele, the elements of Yaloke’ joined his group in Projet.⁵⁵⁸⁷ He also seemed to think that ‘Gobere 2 are the elements coming from Bossembele’.⁵⁵⁸⁸

2177. Apart from this, Thierry Lebene has been shown to be present in Bossembélé, on the Bouar-Boali axis. P-2602’s evidence pointed to Thierry Lebene and others obtaining weapons from Bossembélé, after which they continued towards Bangui.⁵⁵⁸⁹

P-1847 evidence also pointed to the existence of weapons in Bossembélé that were then collected when the groups were moving towards Bangui. P-1847 said that some soldiers of the PG had remained in Bozizé’s village in Boguissi and Bossangoa centre; there was a strong base with weapons which had been abandoned there and in Bossembélé, so they collected that materiel, and under coordination of ‘Mokom’ and ‘Sgt Dedane’, they organised themselves to join the Anti-Balaka civilians with their hunting guns to launch attacks on the Seleka after attacks on the city of Bossangoa and other places, as they moved towards Bangui; they got to PK26 and stopped for a bit, and then attacked on 5 December in the morning (see P-1847: T-023, p. 91, line 16 – p. 92, line 3).

mortars which they retrieved from Seleka after combat.⁵⁵⁹² Thierry Lebene later participated in the Bangui Attack.⁵⁵⁹³

2180. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution points to Facebook exchanges to assert that elements were deployed from Yaoundé to Bouar, from Bouar to Bossembélé to join the elements on the Bossangoa-Ndjo axis to participate in the Bangui Attack.⁵⁵⁹⁴ Having reviewed these exchanges in light of the information discussed herein, and recalling its general conclusions on Facebook material, the Chamber draws no conclusions on that basis alone as to whether this movement of elements did take place.

2181. In light of this, the Chamber cannot conclude that Mr Ngaïssona instructed elements from Bouar to reach Bossembélé in advance of the Bangui Attack. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber found inconclusive the Facebook material referred by the Prosecution.⁵⁵⁹⁵

c. From Gbangba, M’Poko and Bimbo

The Chamber notes the Ngaïssona Defence argument that P-2602’s evidence in this respect is inconsistent with his own evidence and that of P-0966 (see Ngaïssona Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2736-Conf-AnxA-Corr, para. 219). The Chamber does not find P-2602’s evidence concerning these two trips inconsistent. P-2602 agreed that his second trip was his first time going to Bossembélé ‘to look for ammunition’. This is not inconsistent with picking up AK-47 guns on his first trip to Bossembélé.

the group of Mr Yekatom from Gbangba,⁵⁵⁹⁶ and that of P-0954 from Bimbo. At the same time, within Bangui, a group gathered close to the M’Poko airport.⁵⁵⁹⁷

⁵⁵⁹⁸ The Chamber has considered the discrepancies between P-1858’s and P-0954’s account concerning events around the Bangui Attack. For example, P-0954 denied parts of the information provided by P-1858, namely that Basile Mbomon went to Kpata to mobilise people there because ‘FRAPPE was planning to attack Bangui on 6th December 2013’ (see P-1858 Statement CAR-OTP-2063-0050-R04, at 0057, para. 40). P-0954 said that the trip to Kpata happened after the attack, in order to transmit Léopold Bara’s message they ‘must be united and carry out attacks together’ and not have ‘dispersed attacks’ and should ‘wait and encircle Bangui so that [they] could exert pressure so that Djotodia leaves power’ (see P-0954: T-167, p. 45, line 23 – p. 46, line 16). P-0954 also denied that his group intended to attack Bangui on ‘6 December’ 2013 (see P-0954: T-167, p. 46, lines 17-23). Further, the Chamber has considered P-0876’s evidence in which he described a meeting with Thierry Lebene’s group on the hill in November 2013, including the fact of ‘Sergeant Mbomon’ assisting in securing this meeting (see P-0876, p. 25, line 12-24, p. 31, line 22 – p. 32, line 7, p. 39, line 17 – p. 40, line 11). See also footnote 5765 below. P-0954 also acknowledged, when asked, that there were several phone calls between him and Léopold Bara on 4 and 5 December 2013 because the latter wanted to speak to certain groups in Kpata (see P-0954: T-167, p. 46, line 24 – p. 47, line 4). Having assessed the above in its totality, the Chamber has no doubt that there was at least one group present in Bimbo that was expecting to participate in the Bangui Attack from the direction of Bimbo. In the view of the Chamber, whether Basile Mbomon visited Kpata before or after the Bangui Attack is not material with respect to finding that his group was present in Bimbo prior to the Bangui Attack.

d. Crossing over from Zongo

2186. The Chamber notes that witnesses Brice Emotion Namsio and P-2232 were among those in Zongo at the time and who crossed over to Bangui to participate in the Bangui Attack, facilitated by Maxime Mokom.⁵⁶⁰⁹

2187. P-2232 said that Maxime Mokom asked people in Zongo to cross over to Bangui, towards Saint Paul, after which they went up to Ndress to get to ‘their various bases’.⁵⁶¹⁰ P-2232 explained how they crossed the river from Zongo to Bangui and how many persons crossed to participate in the attack.⁵⁶¹¹ P-2232 named, among others, Lieutenant Bruno Semdiro and Brice Emotion Namsio, as soldiers that crossed from Zongo to Bangui to participate in the Bangui Attack.⁵⁶¹² He indicated that civilians also joined them and crossed to Bangui to participate in the fights.⁵⁶¹³ P-2232 said that Maxime Mokom paid 500 CFA per person to a canoeist, brought provisions and other material, and the canoeist helped them cross over; they arrived near the French Embassy, from where, they walked towards Ndress, and then Boy-Rabe.⁵⁶¹⁴ P-2232 said that Maxime Mokom made soldiers in Zongo cross to the other side to go to Bangui and ‘all the soldiers’ came to Zongo in order to ultimately go to

⁵⁶⁰⁸ Ngaïssona Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2736-AnxA-Corr-Red, para. 456.

⁵⁶⁰⁹ Witnesses have also named other individuals that went from Zongo to Bangui at this time (see P-2027 Statement, CAR-OTP-2078-0059-R03, at 0076, para. 97; P-1172 Second Statement, CAR-OTP-2082-1058-R03, at 1070-71, para. 78; see also P-1521: T-080, p. 52, line 17 – p. 55, line 17).

Bangui.⁵⁶¹⁵ P-2232 said that there were quite a lot of civilians in the Anti-Balaka, so the intention was to coordinate the Bangui Attack (‘sur le mouvement anti-balaka, il y avait beaucoup plus que des... des civils, donc, l’intention, c’était de coordonner l’attaque du 5 décembre’).⁵⁶¹⁶

2189. Jacob Mokpem-Bionli recalled having ‘a lot of contact’ with Brice Emotion Namsio after the latter crossed from Zongo to Bangui and being connected with them when they were behind the hill in Boy-Rabe,⁵⁶¹⁸ where the group from Zongo had camped to organise themselves to attack the Seleka.⁵⁶¹⁹ Jacob Mokpem-Bionli stated that the people from the provinces arrived first and information was given to the people from across river Oubangui to join; the witness recalled the names ‘Ndangba from Bossangoa’ and ‘Yvon Konaté, a FACA soldier who was close to Bozizé’; and also recalled that there were also people from Ombella-M’Poko going towards Lobaye who were from the forest area.⁵⁶²⁰

iii. Level of communication between the Anti-Balaka chiefs across the various groups during their advance to Bangui 2192. Turning to the third indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber finds that members of these Anti-Balaka groups were in communication with each other about their location, size, and operational needs during their movement from the provinces to Bangui prior to 5 December 2013.

a. Communications between ‘chiefs’ on the ground

2193. Chiefs in the provinces and those in Zongo were in regular contact with each other before their groups began their descent to Bangui.⁵⁶²² For example, P-2269, who was in Zongo before coming to Bossangoa, said that he would call Andjilo from Zongo and they ‘spoke many times’, agreeing to meet in Bouca.⁵⁶²³ P-2269 also called ‘other chiefs’ like Thierry Lebene, Konaté, Richard Bejouane, Dedane, Benjamin Ouapoutou, and others, asking them to meet near Bouca.⁵⁶²⁴ P-2269 also describes meeting and discussing with other chiefs in Gobere on what to do, receiving information from informants, listening to the radio, deciding to go to Bangui, and discussing tactics.⁵⁶²⁵

2194. Similarly, P-2602 was in communication with ‘Kema, Houronti, Bama, Feikouma’, asking if they met with the mercenaries on the way, if anything happened to them, and then told them they would meet in Gobere.⁵⁶²⁶ P-2602 said that, while in Gobere, they sent messages to the small villages around, to the chiefs of villages and through the self-defence groups, to tell them that they were children of the country, ‘we would like to defend’, ‘we are not mercenaries’, and asking to supply them with food and ‘those children who think that they are strong and they can defend their country’, and to let them join him in Gobere.⁵⁶²⁷

2195. P-2232 explained that whenever ‘Dedane’ heard that a self-defence group had been formed in a village, he would try to contact the leader of that group ‘to organise the members and

link them up with Mokom’.⁵⁶²⁸ He indicated that ‘that is how a chain or a network developed’.⁵⁶²⁹

2197. In assessing the frequency and the quality of communication that was possible amongst the various groups and their chiefs before and during their descent to Bangui, the Chamber also considered the circumstances in which such communication was taking place. For example, some witnesses have described the difficulty in accessing telephone networks in the bush. P-2251 said that there was no possibility of telephone communication in the bush because there were no networks; it was only until they reached Bangui on 5 December that people started having telephones to be able to communicate.⁵⁶³³ P-1521, a combatant in Andjilo’s group, agreed that before the Bangui Attack, he did not have any communication tools, including a Thuraya.⁵⁶³⁴ P-2027, a senior FACA member who had trained both Dedane and Ndangba before the conflict, stated that, when he was in Yaoundé, he spoke to both of them over the phone,⁵⁶³⁵ and they were calling him from Bossangoa because that is where they could pick up a phone signal, but they had no more phone contact until after they reached Bangui.⁵⁶³⁶

The Chamber notes the witness’s source of information. According to P-2658, Dedane told their group that he was speaking with Andjilo on the phone and the witness could hear him speak to Andjilo (see P-2658 Statement, CAR-OTP-2126-0012-R02, at 0030, para. 117). P-2658 also described standing next to Dedane when he was on the telephone receiving information about the Bouca attack (see P-2658: T-135, p. 61, lines 2-9).

was network and he was always communicating; if one in their area was victorious, one called him to inform him that one was in control of the area, but if in difficulty, one would let him know and he would call another group to come support.⁵⁶³⁷ Dedane was with them in the bush but always where there was network coverage; they had a number of regular cell phones to communicate, P-2602 himself had a cell phone.⁵⁶³⁸

2199. During their descent to Bangui, chiefs of the various Anti-Balaka groups communicated with each other, sometimes in person, along the way to exchange information.⁵⁶³⁹ For example, when P-2602 was coming from Bossangoa to go to Bossembélé, he stopped at Bogangolo to give instructions to those ‘coming from Bouca before they could continue to Bangui’, including that they were ‘not to attack Damara’ but ‘leave straight for Bangui’, as the group that was in Sibut would attack Damara; P-2602 stated that those who had come from Bouca had walked for a long distance and were tired, and had among them ‘those who knew their thing very well’ and they ‘had to maintain the energy in order to attack the capital’.⁵⁶⁴⁰ P-2602 stated that they were all heading to Bangui.⁵⁶⁴¹

2200. The Chamber notes that some information about the attacks and movements was being relayed to those in Bangui.⁵⁶⁴² For example, P-1847 said that ‘Dedane’, who was his cousin, would call him and give him information about Dedane’s movements and attacks that he was involved in.⁵⁶⁴³ P-1847 also received information from Maxime Mokom and others.⁵⁶⁴⁴

b. Communications with Maxime Mokom

2201. Evidence shows that Maxime Mokom, who was in Zongo at the time, was keeping abreast of the situation in the CAR as it was evolving prior to December 2013.⁵⁶⁴⁵

2202. Maxime Mokom was communicating with the Anti-Balaka chiefs of the groups before they began descending from the Bossangoa area and Zongo.⁵⁶⁴⁶ The chiefs, including Dedane and P-2269, on the other hand were relaying information to Maxime Mokom about their actions and movements before they began descending to Bangui.⁵⁶⁴⁷ Maxime Mokom put in touch FACA members from Zongo with elements in the Bossangoa region before the groups began descending to Bangui.⁵⁶⁴⁸ Maxime Mokom was also in communication with FACA members in Zongo before they crossed over to Bangui in advance of the Bangui Attack.⁵⁶⁴⁹ Maxime Mokom was in regular contact with the elements in the provinces, including Anti-Balaka chiefs, to guide the movement of various groups to Bangui up until 5 December 2013.⁵⁶⁵⁰

⁵⁶⁵⁰ See section IV.A.2.ii.b above. See also paragraphs 2157-2160. The Anti-Balaka leaders in contact with Maxime Mokom while they were in Zongo included Mokpem Guy-Gervais, Mazimbele, Ngaïbona Rodrigue 'Andjilo', Ngaïbona Dieudonné (young brother of Andjilo), Dedan Danboy, Yagouzou Sylvestre, Dangba Théophile, Lebene Thierry 'Douze Puissances', Ouapoutou Benjamin, Mandago Alexis, Ouabiro Dan Jobrice, Zonie Alain, Konate Yvon, Beorofei Sylvain, Mahamat Hissen, Yapele Chrysostone 'Chikichiki', Godonam Achille, Dede Alexandre, Hyppolite Azounou Come. P-0889 knew that Maxime Mokom was in touch with them because he was next to him during their communications (see P-0889: T-109, p. 16, line 13 – p. 17, line 24; see also T-111, p. 21, line 9 – p. 22, line 5; P-0889 Statement, CAR-OTP-2027-2290-R02, at 2295-96, paras 31-32, 34; 2304-05, para. 89; P-0889 Interview Transcript, CAR-OTP-2122-7626, at 7628, lines 42-58, at 7630, lines 132-136; P-2232: T-078, p. 23, line 19 – p. 24, line 12; P-1521: T-082, p. 76, line 16 – p. 77, line 2, p. 77, lines 4-15). In particular, P-0889 heard Maxime Mokom talk to 'Douze Puissances' aka Thierry Lebene, who was the first to arrive to Bangui, followed by Andjilo and then Tex Teyembe; whereas Ngoyasse Beorofei was towards Boeing and Mr Yekatom was on the south exist of the country (see P-0889 Interview Transcript, CAR-OTP-2122-7626, at 7630, lines 137-147; P-0889: T-109, p. 24, line 20 – p. 25, line 10). The Chamber notes that P-2251 who was himself at the hill said that Thierry Lebene's group had not arrived when P-2251 got there and that Andjilo's group was already there. See paragraphs 2166-2168 above. The Chamber finds that this inconsistency between P-0889's and P-2251's versions is not material.

⁵⁶⁵¹ P-0884: T-055, p. 47, lines 2-22, p. 48, lines 7-13, p. 69, lines 5-14.

2013 about the purpose and the scope of the attack.⁵⁶⁵² Maxime Mokom was also in communication with Ngremangou prior to the Bangui Attack.⁵⁶⁵³

2204. P-2232's testimony suggests that there was 'constant telephone contact' between Maxime Mokom and his father and 'people in Cameroon' were informed and could 'supervise the coordination'.⁵⁶⁵⁴

2205. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Maxime Mokom was closely involved in deploying Anti-Balaka elements in preparation for the Bangui Attack and he was in close communication with the Anti-Balaka chiefs during their progression towards Bangui, and coordinated their actions for the Bangui Attack.⁵⁶⁵⁵

c. Communications with Mr Ngaïssona

2206. The Prosecution argues that Mr Ngaïssona continued 'liaising' with members of 'Bozizé's inner circle and key Anti-Balaka leaders in preparing' the Bangui Attack and the Bossangoa Attack.⁵⁶⁵⁶ As regards communications attributed to Mr Ngaïssona in November-December 2013, the Prosecution points, inter alia, to P-1719, D30-4848, P-2673, Adrien Poussou and Facebook material. In what follows, the Chamber has assessed witness testimony concerning the contacts between Mr Ngaïssona and others involved in the preparation of the Bangui Attack.⁵⁶⁵⁷

2207. P-2232 provided detailed evidence about the connection between Maxime Mokom, on one side, and Bernard Mokom and Mr Ngaïssona, on the other side, in preparation of the Bangui Attack. In particular, during his testimony, P-2232 was asked about his previous statement according to which Bernard Mokom, Mr Ngaïssona and others such as Levy Yakété reunited in Cameroon and set up ‘a [c]risis [o]ffice’ to plan how to return to power.⁵⁶⁵⁸ P-2232 explained that he heard from Maxime Mokom that ‘they [had] set up a coordination office in Cameroon’ at the border area of ‘Garam-Boulāï’, with a view to attack but that the attack did not take place because of ‘misunderstandings between the various teams’, after which ‘they’ handed over the responsibility to Maxime Mokom in Zongo.⁵⁶⁵⁹

⁵⁶⁵⁴ P-2232: T-076, p. 19, line 10 – p. 20, line 11.

2208. P-2232 further explained that after Mr Ngaïssona joined Bernard Mokom in Cameroon, they set up a ‘crisis office’ together with Colonel Mboya, the presidential secretary and ‘other officers’, and a first bureau which was called FROCCA.⁵⁶⁶⁰ P-2232 also indicated that Maxime Mokom was in constant phone contact with those in Cameroon, who ‘also managed the coordination’ and supervised it with the reports they received.⁵⁶⁶¹ P-2232 specified that Maxime Mokom was in contact with his father, Bernard Mokom, and his brother, and always gave reports to his father.⁵⁶⁶² According to P-2232, Maxime Mokom was ‘the coordinator of operations’ but ‘they’ actually led the coordination from Cameroon.⁵⁶⁶³ Even when Mr Ngaïssona became general coordinator, ‘the father’, Bernard Mokom, was ‘adviser’ and was always next to Mr Ngaïssona.⁵⁶⁶⁴ P-2232 also indicated that ‘the people of Cameroon’ sent Maxime Mokom money to Zongo so that he could procure ammunition for those on the ground, and gave him authorisation to take certain decisions.⁵⁶⁶⁵ P-2232 also indicated that the Bangui Attack was prepared with the money received from Cameroon.⁵⁶⁶⁶

⁵⁶⁶¹ P-2232: T-076, p. 19, lines 10-19. P-0889 said that Maxime Mokom never mentioned a ‘crisis unit’ set up in Cameroon with which he was collaborating to plan the Bangui Attack. P-0889 indicated that, to his knowledge, Maxime Mokom was the only one fighting, managing the movement, giving money from his own pockets (see P-0889: T-109, p. 22, lines 5-16).

⁵⁶⁶⁶ P-2232: T-075, p. 64, lines 3-9, p. 66, line 1 – p. 68, line 8, p. 69, lines 3-25. P-0889 said that he had not heard of money being sent from Cameroon to Richard Bejouane, and that this would have been a difficult transaction in any event (see P-0889: T-109, p. 22, line 17 – p. 23, line 5).

2209.P-0306 seemed to be under the impression that Maxime Mokom and Ngremangou, whom he met at Mr Ngaïssona's residence after the Bangui Attack, were 'members of Mr Ngaïssona's entourage' and 'under his authority'.⁵⁶⁶⁷ P-0306 also said that during a meeting at Mr Ngaïssona's residence after the Bangui Attack, Mr Ngaïssona designated 'Mokom' as his 'assistant' and Ngremangou as his 'director of cabinet'.⁵⁶⁶⁸ He described the order of command as being first Mr Ngaïssona, followed by 'Mokom' and then by Ngremangou.⁵⁶⁶⁹

2210.P-0306 said that it was Konaté who told Andjilo 'everything' and seemed to think that Mr Ngaïssona was in contact with 'Richard' and 'Konaté' by telephone.⁵⁶⁷⁰ When Konaté received calls or was communicating with Mr Ngaïssona, P-0306 was present; and when their communication ended, Konaté would tell them that it was Mr Ngaïssona who was on the line; and when they arrived to Bangui, they met him and understood that the person who was issuing the orders was indeed Mr Ngaïssona; they did not meet anyone else when they arrived in Bangui.⁵⁶⁷¹

2211.The Chamber notes that 'Levy Yakété' wrote in November 2013 in a Facebook message that 'on a demandé aux éléments d'aller à la frontière afin de descendre sur le terrain'.⁵⁶⁷² Further, Didier Ouebio and Levy Yakété exchanged on 7 November 2013 with the latter suggesting that 'les vrais hommes' had not yet found the means 'pour descendre sur le terrain', to which Didier Ouebio responded that those mentioned in Levy Yakété's message ('Mokom' and Mr Ngaïssona) intended to 'manage the military actions' despite not being specialists in that field.⁵⁶⁷³ During his testimony, Didier Ouebio, one of the interlocutors of these messages, indicated that he had not heard about or seen Mr Ngaïssona being involved

Item CAR-OTP-2100-2994 was put to Didier Ouebio, who confirmed that it showed messages exchanged between him and 'Levy Yakete' at 3027 (see D30-4679: T-299, p. 81, lines 13-22; T-301, p. 55, line 16 – p. 58, line 12).

⁵⁶⁷³ Facebook messages, CAR-OTP-2100-2994, at 3027 (7 November 2013, at 11:06:17 and 12:31:02). The item was shown to Didier Ouebio, who confirmed that it showed messages exchanged between him and 'Levy Yakete' at 3027 (see D30-4679: T-299, p. 81, lines 13-22; T-301, p. 55, line 16 – p. 58, line 12).

in the deployment of FACA or Anti-Balaka on the ground; Didier Ouebio testified and ‘there were rumours going around, whether it was Ngaïssona or Mokom, that they can’t manage what’s happening in the country because they’re not soldiers’; Didier Ouebio said that it was his opinion at the time that only ‘military tacticians’ could ‘manage that’.⁵⁶⁷⁴

2213. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona was communicating with Maxime Mokom in respect of the Bangui Attack.

d. Communication with Bozizé

2214. The Chamber notes that some witnesses speak of being in communication with Bozizé concerning the Bangui Attack but on the basis of their evidence, it cannot reach a conclusion on direct contacts between Bozizé and individuals on the ground.⁵⁶⁷⁵

iv. Keeping and maintaining of records or lists of elements prior to the Bangui Attack

2215. Turning to the fourth indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber finds that the Anti-Balaka groups progressing to Bangui were keeping records or lists of elements during their advance from the provinces to Bangui.

2216. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana’s evidence shows that certain groups registered names of their members and maintained lists of the members in their respective groups along their descent to Bangui, which were then communicated to their chiefs.

2218. According to Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana, each group had a secretary, but for the document to be properly drafted and presentable, he re-transcribed all the lists and prepared a clean copy before forwarding.⁵⁶⁷⁸ It appears from the witness's testimony that lists were more or less regularly updated as the various groups moved around.⁵⁶⁷⁹ ComZone Kema kept the list of all elements in Bossangoa and forwarded these lists to the leader, and although the witness was not present, Kema told them that once he found some coverage, he would give the names of the people.⁵⁶⁸⁰ The person responsible for communicating the lists was Dedane, but at one point the group split up and Kema would send the information to Dedane, who would send it on.⁵⁶⁸¹

2219. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana explained that the list of people they were recruiting as they moved ahead was given to ComZone Kema who had a network to provide that list, and the lists were forwarded to Maxime Mokom, who was still in Zongo; it was a matter of recruiting them into the army later; people who were not on one of the lists were not considered to be part of the movement.⁵⁶⁸² The witness's testimony shows that integration into the army was considered to be the reward for protecting the country,⁵⁶⁸³ while the soldiers in the movement, in case of victory, might get one rank higher.⁵⁶⁸⁴ According to the witness, the lists were drawn up on the instruction of the ComZones, and it also depended on the progression of the Anti-Balaka; those were the instructions given by the officials from

Bangui and perhaps other places.⁵⁶⁸⁵ These names were to be recorded so that the true number of the Anti-Balaka moving towards Bangui could be determined; Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana held the list of his company and would make ‘clean’ copies after receiving lists from other people before giving it to ‘the ComZone, who found the network and made the calls’.⁵⁶⁸⁶

2220. Brice Emotion Namsio recalled a ‘list from the hinterland [...] which had been prepared by the former chief of staff Bejouane’ in which there were all the commanders and their elements but did not have any more information about this list.⁵⁶⁸⁷

v. Waiting at common locations and preparing

2221. Turning to the fifth indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber finds that the Anti-Balaka groups that were moving to Bangui reassembled and waited at common locations close to Bangui and prepared for an attack. The fact that these Anti-Balaka elements and groups assembled in common locations prior to the attack was, in itself, a strong indicator of the planned nature of the Bangui Attack.

2222. The Prosecution submits that the Anti-Balaka elements that were marching south for the Bangui Attack assembled mostly behind the Boy-Rabe hill, also known as the Bas-Oubangui hill or Gbazabangui hill, but also elsewhere, including in Boeing.⁵⁶⁸⁸ It submits that civilians joining along the way were put under the command of Anti-Balaka leaders.⁵⁶⁸⁹

2223. As set out in further detail below, groups and individuals discussed above reassembled at common locations encircling Bangui before the Bangui Attack: (i) behind the hill in the north of Boy-Rabe,⁵⁶⁹⁰ (ii) on the hill close to Camp Kassai in east Bangui next to ⁵⁶⁹⁰ The Chamber notes that Boy-Rabe is a neighbourhood in the 4th arrondissement in Bangui. Some of the other neighbourhoods in this arrondissement that P-0446 named are Fouh, Gobongo, Dedengue, Bafio (see Map, CAR-OTP-2057-0965; P-0446: T-096, p. 8, lines 15-21).

7th arrondissement;⁵⁶⁹¹ and (iii) behind M'Poko airport and in Boeing in the west Bangui;⁵⁶⁹² and (iv) Bimbo in south of Bangui.⁵⁶⁹³

2224. Having regard to the agreed maps altogether,⁵⁶⁹⁴ the Chamber notes that the gatherings in these locations suggest that Bangui was effectively surrounded by elements along its perimeter in advance of the Bangui Attack.

a. Hill behind Boy-Rabe

2225. Some groups arriving from the Bossangoa area reassembled in a place called Kpata, close to Nguito, at the outskirts of north-west Bangui.⁵⁶⁹⁵ P-2251 said that when his group arrived there, Andjilo's group was already there and Thierry Lebene had not yet arrived.⁵⁶⁹⁶ P-2251 said that they waited for Thierry Lebene and the chiefs would go to the top of the hill and try to phone Lebene.⁵⁶⁹⁷ P-2251 said that, from Nguito, some went towards Camp Kassai, some went to Boy-Rabe and others went towards PK12.⁵⁶⁹⁸

P-2251 said that he did not remember when exactly they arrived in Nguito but it must have been a few days before 5 December 2013 (see P-2251: T-043, p. 30, lines 4-9). made up of Muslims, so that is why the elements in this video are talking about ‘Muslims and Mbororo’, and that their goal was to drive out ‘the Peuhls and the Seleka Muslims’.⁵⁷⁰⁴

2227. The video also shows an element in the same group as Andjilo holding an RPG,⁵⁷⁰⁵ and saying:

Je ne porte pas cette arme sans raison. C’est à cause des choses que Djotodia est venu faire dans notre pays, cela nous a énervés. C’est pourquoi avec notre colonel, nous sommes tous en colère et nous avons décidé de venir mourir à Bangui, pour chasser les Arabes de notre pays. Nous n’avons pas besoin d’eux. C’est pour cela que nous sommes en colère, que nous avons décidé de prendre des armes et que vous nous voyez là, les journalistes.⁵⁷⁰⁶

2230.P-1521 agreed that once his group was behind the hill, they waited for other elements to join the group.⁵⁷¹³ P-1521 said that they had heard that the Anti-Balaka were moving towards Bangui on foot, but they did not have contact with them.⁵⁷¹⁴ P-1521 said that they decided to be patient and wait as they had no materiel at the time;⁵⁷¹⁵ during this time, the youth heard that the Anti-Balaka were behind the hill and they started to come up to the hill to join.⁵⁷¹⁶ P-1521 said that after waiting, on 2 December 2013, they said that if the others did not come, ‘they should then decide to attack’ Bangui.⁵⁷¹⁷ Asked about the role of the FACA elements behind the hill, P-1521 said that the soldiers were like ‘advisers’ to the elements on how to advance and while there were no military instructions as such, the civilians were provided with information as to how to move about and avoid being struck by a bullet.⁵⁷¹⁸

2231.P-2251 said that, at this stage, some chiefs were able to get Kalashnikovs while other members of the groups had mostly machetes and hunting guns.⁵⁷¹⁹

2232.P-0306, when asked, agreed that members of his group threatened to return to the villages when they were behind the hill because there was a shortage of food, and they did not have anything to eat.⁵⁷²⁰

2233.Brice Emotion Namsio was among those who joined the elements behind the hill by crossing over from Zongo at the end of November 2013.⁵⁷²¹ The witness said that there were elements

in ‘great numbers’, even if he himself did not have a chance to see the whole base.⁵⁷²² There, Brice Emotion Namsio met Andjilo, Gustave Yadjoungou, Konaté, Feissona, among others.⁵⁷²³ Brice Emotion Namsio said that he told them that he had come to join the group and they took his telephone away; he said that there were ‘certain guidelines’ to be followed, in that one could not communicate in the way they wanted and they did not talk about the attack immediately.⁵⁷²⁴ The witness said that after getting acquainted with them and spending a few days together, they organised the attack; in his view, this was all being done ‘behind the curtains in a very secret way’.⁵⁷²⁵

2234. Brice Emotion Namsio recalled being photographed on this hill along with other elements,⁵⁷²⁶ including Richard Bejouane.⁵⁷²⁷ Describing the circumstances in which the photographs were taken, Brice Emotion Namsio said that it was Konaté who had told them about the arrival of a team of journalists that took these photographs; he said that Andjilo had refused that this team come to the base where the combatants were to be found so an order was given for some elements to move forward and this is where the pictures were taken.⁵⁷²⁸ The witness recalled Jacob Mokpem-Bionli accompanying the journalist on the hill.⁵⁷²⁹ Jacob Mokpem-Bionli recalled meeting Brice Emotion Namsio at the hill behind Boy-Rabe on 4 December 2013,⁵⁷³⁰ bringing two journalists to meet the elements there.⁵⁷³¹

b. Hill close to Camp Kassai

2235. Southeast from Boy-Rabe, behind Camp Kassai towards PK12, were Konaté's⁵⁷³² and Thierry Lebene's group. P-0876 described meeting Thierry Lebene twice at the latter's base behind the hill at Camp Kassai.⁵⁷³³

2236. P-0876 testified that two or three kilometres before arriving at Thierry Lebene's base, he saw an advance post of armed elements.⁵⁷³⁴ When he arrived at the base, those who did not have firearms were armed with machetes,⁵⁷³⁵ a majority of the elements he saw had machetes and sticks and the rest had artisanal weapons.⁵⁷³⁶ P-0876 said that, since the first meeting in second half of November 2013,⁵⁷³⁷ the group 'took on enormous proportions' and there had been a 'significant increase' in the number of elements stationed there; he surmised that people continued to come in from the hinterlands, on foot, on dirt tracks, through the forest as they converged on Bangui.⁵⁷³⁸

c. Gathering around the M'Poko airport and Boeing

2237. On the south and west side of Bangui, elements led by Ngremangou were present. Jean-Jacques Demafouth said that, according to the information that he had prior to the Bangui Attack, he knew that the Anti-Balaka had established a base behind the M'Poko airport which was 'managed' by Ngremangou and that, on this base, they would also train.⁵⁷³⁹ The witness said that this base was divided into two, one part reserved exclusively for FACA members and another reserved for civilians who had been 'recruited'.⁵⁷⁴⁰

2239. On the east side of the M’Poko airport, Sylvestre Yagouzou’s group was present. P-0884 said that Sylvestre Yagouzou was responsible for the other Anti-Balaka before 5 December 2013; he was more involved in the 5th arrondissement and gave P-0884 information that those elements would enter the capital and that he had already prepared all the surrounding villages about that.⁵⁷⁴⁴ According to P-0884, Yagouzou told him that his elements were already in PK26, close to the capital, explaining that PK26 is near the entrance of the capital and that there were some elements already in the 5th arrondissement who would be in a position to enter the capital by 5 December 2013.⁵⁷⁴⁵

2240. Around the same time, Dedane and his elements were at PK26, in preparation for the Bangui Attack. P-1847 stated that ‘Dedane’ had told him over the phone that Anti-Balaka elements had installed their base at PK26 at some point at the end of November 2013 before launching the Bangui Attack.⁵⁷⁴⁶ P-0884 said that Modibo⁵⁷⁴⁷ and his group arrived in Bangui on foot from Bossangoa before 5 December 2013 and were in PK26.⁵⁷⁴⁸

2241. P-0954’s group was located in Bimbo 1, the south end of Bangui, ‘around the 5th December 2013’ and had come out from their Ngulanga base during the night to get there.⁵⁷⁴⁹

d. Purpose of prior reassembly

2242. The evidence shows that the purpose of this prior assembly was to rest and prepare for an upcoming attack. Some of these preparations involved pairing up of the elements from the provinces with elements from Bangui who knew the city.

2243. P-0306 said that, by this time just prior to 5 December 2013, they had already been in the bush in the suburbs of Bangui for about three weeks.⁵⁷⁵⁰ P-0306 explained that the ‘preparations’ started on 1 December and lasted until 4 December 2013 when they received instructions to enter Bangui.⁵⁷⁵¹ According to P-0975, the Anti-Balaka spent two weeks behind the Boy-Rabe hill planning the revolt, and some of the Anti-Balaka from the provinces had never been to Bangui before so they were paired up with the Anti-Balaka who knew the city.⁵⁷⁵² P-1521, who was in Andjilo’s group, said that Andjilo came from ‘up country’ but that during the Bangui Attack, he was with other people who knew the area and who knew where the Seleka were; other elements and leaders who were from Boy-Rabe also knew the situation there.⁵⁷⁵³

that ‘Mokom’ and ‘Bozizé’ had called upon them to stop and rest and wait for some equipment and for the sun before launching the attack.⁵⁷⁵⁶

2245. Many young people from Bangui joined the Anti-Balaka while they were waiting outside Bangui.⁵⁷⁵⁷ P-0889 testified that when the elements arrived to Bangui, and despite the lack of weapons, many youngsters from Bangui joined them.⁵⁷⁵⁸ P-0889 stated that, according to his recollection, Maxime Mokom made the elements who arrived close to Bangui wait to have ‘a mass of elements’ to attack Bangui.⁵⁷⁵⁹ Alfred Legrand Ngaya stated that the youths of Boy-Rabe, including his younger brother, joined the Anti-Balaka elements who gathered behind the Boy-Rabe hill and prepared to attack the Seleka.⁵⁷⁶⁰ Initially, the youth only had machetes and when they attacked the Seleka they took their firearms.⁵⁷⁶¹ The Chamber recalls P-2682, a civilian living close to the Boeing Market at the time,⁵⁷⁶² noticing that young people were no longer in the neighbourhood and that, during daytime, these people would go to the bushes and return at night.⁵⁷⁶³

vi. Number of elements estimated to be involved

2247. As for the number of elements who moved from the provinces to Bangui to participate in the Bangui Attack, the Chamber notes that few witnesses were able to provide estimates, and that these greatly differed from one witness to the other, ranging from ‘around a thousand’⁵⁷⁶⁴ to several thousands.⁵⁷⁶⁵

vii. Financing, arming and efforts to obtain weapons and ammunition along the way to Bangui

2250. The Prosecution argues that Mr Ngaïssona was involved in financing and arming Anti-Balaka elements in October 2013,⁵⁷⁶⁶ and, from November 2013 onwards, financing the Anti-Balaka elements from Cameroon and Zongo to arrive in Bangui for the Bangui ⁵⁷⁶⁴ Annex 5 to CAR Panel Interim Report 2014, CAR-OTP-2001-0835, at 0875, para. 3.

⁵⁷⁶⁵ P-0965 said that according to ‘Lieutenant Konate’, the Anti-Balaka who started in Gobre and joined forces together there amounted to 2,045 elements. P-0965 also indicated that as these elements passed from village to village, they recruited people on their way to Bangui, and that all together they amounted to 25,000 when they reached Bangui (see P-0965: T-061, p. 51, line 25 – p. 52, line 18). P-0889 stated that Andjilo could have had at least 800 elements in his group and confirmed that this could be the standard number of elements for each group coming from the provinces to Bangui; he said he knew this because the leaders themselves said so when they asked them, however, P-0889 also thought that the leaders did not have time to count their elements because as they progressed towards Bangui more people joined their groups (see P-0889 Interview Transcript, CAR-OTP-2122-7626, at 7632, lines 229-251, at 7633-34, lines 252-302). P-0876 stated that the first time he met Thierry Lebene behind the hill at Camp Kassai there were 500 to 600 elements, and that the second time he met him at the same location the elements amounted to 4,000 or 5,000. P-0876 testified that he did not know whether all the elements were present during that first meeting or whether the intention was ‘to create an impression’ in the second meeting, but that nonetheless there had been a significant increase in the number of elements (see P-0876: T-085, p. 34, line 21 – p. 36, line 1; P-0876 Interview Transcript, CAR-OTP-2046-0324, at 0336, lines 412-414). P-1521 spoke of about 2,000 people on the Bouca-Damara axis when he joined Andjilo’s group close to Damara but was ‘unsure’ about the numbers and thought 2,000 seemed ‘a high number’ (see P-1521: T-081, p. 14, line 13 – p. 15, line 2, p. 30, lines 2-20, p. 33, lines 1-11).

Attack.⁵⁷⁶⁷ The Prosecution submits that Mr Ngaïssona ‘promised financial support’ for the Bangui Attack.⁵⁷⁶⁸

a. Weapons obtained from the ‘Ndress cemetery’

2254. The Chamber has considered P-0965’s claims that suggest that the day just before the Bangui Attack, certain elements obtained weapons and ammunition hidden at the Ndress cemetery and used them during the Bangui Attack.⁵⁷⁷³ The Chamber finds that the evidence does not support these claims. In particular, P-0306 did not confirm P-0965’s account.⁵⁷⁷⁴

b. Support by Maxime Mokom

The Chamber notes that P-0889 had mentioned in his statement that Maxime Mokom had sent ammunition 'two times', including one time through a person called Bienvenu Namguende to bring them to the field so that the chiefs could share them before the attack on 5 December 2013 (see P-0889 Statement, CAR-OTP-2027-2290-R02, at 2296, para. 35). The Prosecution pointed to CDR to show contacts between Maxime Mokom and Bienvenu Namguende between 2 and 5 December 2013 (see Prosecution Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2738-Conf, para. 235, n. 474 referring to CAR-OTP-2054-1480). The Chamber notes that P-0889 explained in his interview that while he had said that Maxime Mokom sent ammunition 'two times', it was only one time that he had actually himself seen Maxime Mokom send a packet of ammunition.

⁵⁷⁸⁰ P-0889 Statement, CAR-OTP-2027-2290-R02, at 2296, para. 35. P-0889 also said that Maxime Mokom never mentioned to him that there was any help coming from Cameroon and considered himself to be 'alone' in managing the 'movement' (see P-0889: T-109, p. 22, lines 5-16).

from Zongo, giving them to the women to take them to the field.⁵⁷⁸⁴ P-0884 did not recall when Maxime Mokom called him.⁵⁷⁸⁵

2258. P-1847, who was receiving information from ‘Dedane’ at the time, said that Maxime Mokom bought artisanal cartridges for the Anti-Balaka coming from Bossangoa and heading towards the periphery of Bangui.⁵⁷⁸⁶ P-1847 also stated that Dedane frequently called Bernard Mokom and Marcelin to ask them for money to buy ammunition and small gas canisters before ‘the attack’.⁵⁷⁸⁷ P-1847 also indicated that ‘Marcelin’ sent the Anti-Balaka money from Douala through Bozizé’s former minister of foreign affairs using Express Union or via a person to whom the former minister gave the money to.⁵⁷⁸⁸ P-1847 indicated that ‘Marcelin’ confirmed this to him every time the Anti-Balaka received money from the former minister, but that he did not know who transported the money to Bangui.⁵⁷⁸⁹

2259. P-2232 said that, during the time before the Bangui Attack, Mr Ngaïssona and ‘Mokom father’ were in Cameroon at that time, and Maxime Mokom received money from Cameroon and the money came in the name of ‘Mr Cameroonian, Cameroonais’, but that P-2232 did not know who was sending him the money.⁵⁷⁹⁰ P-2232 said that this money was used to buy hunting ammunition and medication as supplies for those on the ground.⁵⁷⁹¹ P-2232 said that Maxime Mokom even told him that he had mortgaged his house and the ‘individual who was in charge of the armoury was the one who provided the supplies’.⁵⁷⁹² P-2232 said that it was with the money received from Cameroon that the ‘attack of 5 December was prepared’.⁵⁷⁹³ P-2232 said, in the same vein, that he had ‘never heard mention of Mr Ngaïssona’s name’ as regards ‘anything that happened before 5 December’.⁵⁷⁹⁴

⁵⁷⁸⁴ P-0884: T-055, p. 70, lines 1-10. P-1847 said that Maxime Mokom would buy hunting ammunition which he would send to a woman who would then take them to Bossangoa in preparation (see P-1847: T-023, p. 33, lines 15-22).

2260. P-2232 said that Maxime Mokom was in communication with those in Cameroon because ‘the money was still coming from their side there to make it possible for him to procure ammunition and send it to the ground’ and ‘there were decisions that he took after authorisations from Cameroon’.⁵⁷⁹⁵ P-2232 said that reports of how the money was being used were given by Maxime Mokom over the telephone.⁵⁷⁹⁶ P-2232, when asked who was authorising these activities, said that the name of the sender was a ‘Cameroonian name’ and Maxime Mokom did not tell him the name of the person to whom he was reporting.⁵⁷⁹⁷

c. Support by Mr Ngaïssona regarding materiel

2261. The Prosecution submits that Mr Ngaïssona promised financial support for the Bangui Attack.⁵⁷⁹⁸

2263. P-0306 said that Andjilo⁵⁷⁹⁹ was promised that once they arrived in Bangui a plane would provide them with ammunition, but no plane with equipment came to Bangui.⁵⁸⁰⁰ P-0306 said that they waited for the war materiel ‘behind the hill’ for about a month.⁵⁸⁰¹ It was supposed to be brought from Douala.⁵⁸⁰² They were then asked to ‘go down to Bangui in order to receive the material [sic] that was going to be brought in by air’.⁵⁸⁰³ The Chamber further notes that Brice Emotion Namsio had not heard of Mr Ngaïssona sending hunting ammunition to Andjilo behind the hill.⁵⁸⁰⁴

clarified that what he had heard was that Mr Ngaïssona ‘would’ provide them with weapons but had not done it yet.⁵⁸⁰⁶ P-2658, asked how he knew that Dedane got news from Mr Ngaïssona, said that he got information through Dedane’s elements because those elements said they were waiting for the materiel.⁵⁸⁰⁷

2265. P-2658 said that personally, when he was with these elements however, he never saw any provisions; they talked about it, but he never saw any weapons being provided; he also did not know how they were going to receive these weapons.⁵⁸⁰⁸ P-2658 said that he heard them communicate about ammunition and that there were promises made that Mr Ngaïssona would provide ammunition but did not know how.⁵⁸⁰⁹ P-2658 said that he himself did not see distribution or the providing of ammunition or weapons.⁵⁸¹⁰

2266. P-2658, when asked, clarified that these elements did not say that it was Mr Ngaïssona who had made these promises but only that these elements said that Mr Ngaïssona would provide them with materiel.⁵⁸¹¹ Relatedly, P-2658 said that he did not know if Dedane or other Anti-Balaka elements were communicating with Mr Ngaïssona because he did not stay close to Dedane when they were in Bossangoa and stayed at the back of the group.⁵⁸¹²

d. Financial support by Mr Ngaïssona

coordinator.⁵⁸¹⁴ According to P-2841, it was Prince Lakouetene and Doguela who told him that Mr Ngaïssona was sending food and money to Zongo.⁵⁸¹⁵

2270. Jacob Mokpem-Bionli made similar claims of Mr Ngaïssona providing money to elements through Alfred Legrand Ngaya.⁵⁸¹⁸ Jacob Mokpem-Bionli said that Mr Ngaïssona sent money through Alfred Legrand Ngaya to provide food for elements that did not have anything to eat but not to buy arms or weapons.⁵⁸¹⁹ The witness also said that, before Mr Ngaïssona returned to Bangui in early 2014, Brice Emotion Namsio and Dieudonne Ndomate asked Mr Ngaïssona to assist them before the offensive of 5 December 2013.⁵⁸²⁰ Jacob Mokpem-Bionli seemed to first suggest that the money was received before 5 December 2013.⁵⁸²¹ When later asked about the timing of such provisions, the witness said that there was a difference between asking for money and receiving it and that it was 'after 5 December' that money started to 'fall into the hands' of Alfred Legrand Ngaya.⁵⁸²²

2272. Based on the above and having regard to its conclusions on Mr Ngaïssona's financial contributions prior to this period,⁵⁸²⁴ the Chamber concludes that Mr Ngaïssona provided financial support to certain elements of the Anti-Balaka movement that later on participated in the Bangui Attack.

e. Ammunition in Maggi Cube boxes

2273. The Chamber has further considered P-2673's evidence suggesting that Mr Ngaïssona must have sent money and ammunition to Bangui before the attack.

2274. P-2673 said that money and hunting ammunition in 'Cube Maggi boxes' was sent to Bangui and it reached before the Bangui Attack.⁵⁸²⁵ P-2673, when talking about why the Bangui Attack did not take place on 1 December as initially planned, said that they were waiting for munition and the resources in order to launch the attack.⁵⁸²⁶ When asked who was going to give the munition before the Bangui Attack, P-2673 said that he did not know and could not confirm whether the munition 'must come from [Mr] Ngaïssona' but he received this information from Steve Yambété who was in contact 'with these people'.⁵⁸²⁷

2275. However, Brice Emotion Namsio said that he had not heard anyone say that Mr Ngaïssona gave orders or money to Anti-Balaka elements behind the hill;⁵⁸²⁸ or that Mr Ngaïssona was involved in the organisation of the attack on 5 December.⁵⁸²⁹ The witness said that he did not know how the elements gathered behind the hill received ammunitions and weapons because he was not with them when they had come to Bangui and was not part of that group.⁵⁸³⁰ Brice Emotion Namsio, asked about P-2673's evidence concerning 'Maggi boxes' said that he had not heard of the Anti-Balaka elements behind the hill receiving ammunition from Cameroon in such boxes.⁵⁸³¹ The Chamber further notes that Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana also had not heard about seeing hunting ammunition received in small Maggi cube boxes.⁵⁸³²

2276. The Chamber considers that Brice Emotion Namsio not having heard of ammunition in such boxes does not negate their existence. Indeed, there were many groups and individuals on the hill at the time. However, despite the specificity of P-2673's claims, the Chamber notes that they are solely based on the information that he received from Steve Yambété. The Chamber finds that such claims are insufficient for it to infer that Mr Ngaïssona 'must' have provided money and hunting ammunition in Maggi Cube boxes prior to the Bangui Attack.

2277. Lastly, in this respect, the Chamber has considered the evidence by Alfred Legrand Ngaya, who was not one of the elements or chiefs participating in the Bangui Attack. Alfred Legrand Ngaya said that the elements had been told to 'go to certain areas where they would be given arms', which is 'how they got them to move until they reached behind the Bazoubangui hill, by continuing to promise them weapons', which they never received.⁵⁸³³ The witness indicated that on 5 December, when they went down from the Bazoubangui hill to attack the Seleka, they only carried machetes and sticks.⁵⁸³⁴ Alfred Legrand Ngaya also said that 'they' were told that they were invulnerable because of their gris-gris and fetishes but 'many were killed before the seat of the National Assembly'.⁵⁸³⁵

2278. Having regard to the above, the Chamber is unable to conclude that Mr Ngaïssona provided ammunition in Maggi cube boxes to the Anti-Balaka elements during their movement to Bangui for the Bangui Attack.⁵⁸³⁶

viii. Circulation of information, prior to 5 December 2013, about an impending attack

2279. Turning to the eighth indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber finds that individuals in certain circles knew that an attack on Bangui was to take place in the beginning of December 2013.⁵⁸³⁷

2280. Specifically, P-0884, a spokesperson of the Anti-Balaka national coordination appointed at the meeting shortly after 5 December 2013 and later deputy coordinator to Mr Ngaïssona within the Anti-Balaka,⁵⁸³⁸ testified that about two days before 1 December 2013, Maxime Mokom called him on the phone and told him that he was going to Bangui, that ‘the men were on their way’ and that an attack was supposed to occur on 1 December 2013.⁵⁸³⁹ P-0884 detailed that when ‘Mokom’ called him, he told him that some of the men who were on their way were at Boali, others at PK26, that they (‘we’) should remain calm, and that ‘the Anti-Balaka were on their way to liberate us’.⁵⁸⁴⁰ P-0884 was also in contact with Mr Ngaïssona around this time.⁵⁸⁴¹

2281. P-0884 explained that, according to Maxime Mokom, the attack was supposed to take place on 1 December 2013 but that he postponed the attack because of the national celebrations of 1 December 2013 – information which he received only from Maxime Mokom and from no one else.⁵⁸⁴² P-0884 indicated that this is why they had to wait until 5 December to launch their ‘definitive operation’ on the capital.⁵⁸⁴³

2282. The evidence also shows that the initial plan was to attack on 1 December 2013, and that this was later changed to 5 December 2013. P-1847 spoke about his discussions with a certain ‘Serefio’, who talked about ‘Rambhot’, whom he did not know, who was also coordinating ⁵⁸³⁷ The Chamber notes that D30-4720 was questioned about the alleged public knowledge that Bozizé organised supporters to attack Bangui, stated that she knew nothing about such public knowledge (see D30-4720: T-281, p. 38, lines 13-19). Having regard to what other witnesses have said about the information circulating in various circles, as discussed herein, the Chamber does not consider material the difference between the respective opinions of D30-4720 and other witnesses on what was public knowledge at the time.

the activities from PK9 to M’Poko as they prepared the attack on Bangui.⁵⁸⁴⁴ P-1847 said that their objective was to attack on 1 December.⁵⁸⁴⁵

2283. P-2841, a senior civil servant within the CAR government at the time,⁵⁸⁴⁶ said that he was involved in organising the national holiday celebrations for 1 December 2013, but they heard about possible attacks on Bangui as early as 29 to 30 November 2013, so it was decided that the celebrations would be cancelled that year.⁵⁸⁴⁷ P-2841 said that there was a ‘sort of a pre-attack fever in the air’, noting that the Seleka were everywhere, waiting for something to happen.⁵⁸⁴⁸ P-2841 recalled being warned on the evening of 4 December 2013 by a gendarme friend who was following the movements of the Anti-Balaka to be careful and ‘that it could be bad’.⁵⁸⁴⁹ P-2841 lived in Bangui at the time in the northern quartier of Galabajda in the 4th arrondissement, between town centre and Gobongo.⁵⁸⁵⁰

2284. Jean-Jacques Demafouth testified that he knew about the attack on Bangui before it happened.⁵⁸⁵¹ At the time, he was advisor for security, had his old intelligence network, and had also infiltrated the Anti-Balaka network because they were beginning to encircle Bangui, PK12, on the hills surrounding Bangui, and Mbaïki, in Bimbo, at Cattin, Boeing, 7th arrondissement.⁵⁸⁵² He personally started getting worried and wondered what was happening in the country.⁵⁸⁵³ Jean-Jacques Demafouth said that there were people who were said to be ‘Anti-Balaka leaders’ and whom he knew, and they talked to him, in particular Léopold Bara whom the witness thought to be one of the leaders in Bangui at the time.⁵⁸⁵⁴ The witness had seen them give a press conference at the Ledger hotel talking on behalf of a ‘revolutionary organisation that was about to arrive’.⁵⁸⁵⁵ Léopold Bara later told the witness that these were the ‘Anti-Balaka’, told him about sites in PK12, and gave him names of some leaders, of FACA who were in the movement.⁵⁸⁵⁶

2285. Jean-Jacques Demafouth said that, while the Sangaris had not yet arrived in Bangui at the time, there was an intelligence service in the French embassy and the witness knew people working for it, all of whom confirmed it, saying something was in the making, they were waiting for orders from the people in Cameroon to take action, but that it should not go beyond 10 December 2013, they had already ‘fixed the date’.⁵⁸⁵⁷ According to Jean-Jacques Demafouth, Michel Djotodia’s intelligence service also knew because some clashes and skirmishes had already taken place between Anti-Balaka and Seleka, so Seleka was preparing as well to face this attack.⁵⁸⁵⁸

2286. Adrien Poussou also said that the festivities for the Independence Day on 1 December 2013 were cancelled because they knew there was going to be an attack, from information given by people close to François Bozizé, among them the phone call that the witness had with Mr Ngaïssona.⁵⁸⁵⁹ Adrien Poussou, during a phone call with the ‘minister for équipements’ Crepin Mboli-Goumba, was told that the intelligence service also had this type of information and this phone call just ‘comforted’ the minister ‘in his belief that this could be true’.⁵⁸⁶⁰

2287. P-0889, who was with ‘Mokom’ in Zongo during the Bangui Attack, said that the latter wanted the attack to take place on 1 December 2013, but because Djotodia sensed that something was going to happen and cancelled the national celebrations for that day, the security measures were at their maximum and ‘Mokom’ changed the date to 5 December 2013.⁵⁸⁶¹

2288.P-0884 said that ‘[e]veryone was aware of what was going to happen’ and the preparation was not something ‘secret’; he recalled that even Djotodia was aware and had an intelligence service and this is why Djotodia decreed the postponing of the celebration of 1 December.⁵⁸⁶² P-0884 recalled Djotodia making a statement about that celebration because of the preparation of the attack.⁵⁸⁶³ P-2673, a FACA member and a former intelligence officer with the presidential security of François Bozizé,⁵⁸⁶⁴ who was not in Bangui on 5 December 2013, said that he was aware of ‘what was going to happen’; P-2673 learnt it from Steve Yambété that ‘they prepared this so that it could take place on 5 December 2013’.⁵⁸⁶⁵ P-2673 stated that ‘everybody’ knew about this ‘planned attack on Bangui’ and they knew about it through Steve Yambété.⁵⁸⁶⁶ P-2673 stated that the plan was to attack Bangui on 1 December 2013, but in the end, they waited until 5 December.⁵⁸⁶⁷

2289.P-1847 stated that someone from the team of ‘Lieutenant Konate’ confirmed to him the imminence of the Bangui Attack over the telephone.⁵⁸⁶⁸

2290.The Chamber notes the Facebook exchanges from end-November 2013 to early December 2013 showing messages relating to an impending attack, referring to a ‘final strategy’ and ‘final assault’.⁵⁸⁶⁹

2292. The Chamber has also considered that the various ‘chiefs’ of the different Anti-Balaka groups that were advancing towards Bangui at the time were also generally aware of the expected timing of the Bangui Attack,⁵⁸⁷¹ despite the postponement. Jacob Mokpem-Bionli, who had met Brice Emotion Namsio on 4 December 2013 behind Boy-Rabe at the hill,⁵⁸⁷² said that he was not informed then that there was going to be an attack but received a call from Alfred Legrand Ngaya on 5 December 2013 at about 04:30 telling him that the Anti-Balaka were ‘coming down’.⁵⁸⁷³

2293. In light of this, while the Chamber cannot reach a conclusion on the exact reason the Bangui Attack appears to have been postponed from 1 to 5 December 2013, there is no doubt that information about an imminent attack on Bangui was circulating at various organisational levels within the Anti-Balaka.

2294. This was also true of certain circles outside the Anti-Balaka. In this regard, the Chamber has considered evidence from witnesses, who were not part of the Anti-Balaka circles, that showed that ‘rumours’ about an impending attack by the Anti-Balaka were circulating in Bangui. To the Chamber, this depicted the prevailing sentiment, particularly amongst the Muslim population.

2295. Alfred Legrand Ngaya stated that, in November-December 2013, they started hearing that people were mobilising all over the country and moving towards Bangui using the cattle routes.⁵⁸⁷⁴

2296. P-2682, Hassan Babakar’s widow,⁵⁸⁷⁵ described how rumours about an attack, and concerns for their safety, grew in the days immediately prior to the Bangui Attack. P-2682 testified that when they were in Boeing, ‘they’ kept hearing about the ‘Anti-Balaka’ who were going to ‘chase away the Muslims’, but they did not pay much attention to it.⁵⁸⁷⁶ She said that, after hearing that the ‘Anti-Balaka’ had ‘gone into the bushes’ and were preparing to attack the Muslims, she asked her husband whether he had heard what was being said, to which he said that they should not believe such type of information; but those rumours kept circulating, and at one point ‘they’ realised that the young people were no longer in the neighbourhood and that, during the daytime, these people would go to the bushes and return at night.⁵⁸⁷⁷

⁵⁸⁷¹ See paragraphs 2225-2245 below. The Chamber notes P-0954’s evidence about being misinformed about the date of the Bangui Attack and therefore, being unable to participate. In this respect, the Chamber considers that P-0954’s group stands out in relation to the other groups. It does not change the Chamber’s appreciation that there was a common understanding within the various Anti-Balaka groups on when the Bangui Attack would be carried out.

2297.P-2682 also said that, at some point, when the Muslim women went to the market, the Christian women would tell them, ‘You, you are going to leave us very soon. You are going to leave the country very soon and we are no longer going to see you’, so she started becoming concerned and talked to her husband, who told her that nothing was going to happen and that they should not believe that information.⁵⁸⁷⁸

2298.P-2682 said that a lady told her, ‘Look, you have to be careful. I have heard this information circulating. You have to inform your husband so that he can flee’, and that her mother said, ‘You have to be careful. If it is possible you should go to PK5 and come and sell in the market before going back every day’.⁵⁸⁷⁹ P-2682 indicated that her husband did not take this information seriously and she told him that she could no longer stay ‘there’ in Boeig, that she would go to PK5 with the children and come back if nothing happened.⁵⁸⁸⁰ P-2682 confirmed that she left for PK5 as she was concerned because of what the Christian women said and because her mother heard threatening utterances and insisted she sought refuge.⁵⁸⁸¹

P-2472 believed they had been informed about the attack in advance and that the attack had been carefully prepared in many churches ahead of time.⁵⁸⁸⁵

2300. Salehou Ndiaye, the imam of the Boeing Mosque at the time, stated that about three or four days before the Bangui Attack, he saw palm tree branches in front of Christian houses.⁵⁸⁸⁶ He stated that, at the time, he did not take much notice of it because palm tree branches were often seen during Christian festivities or when someone had died.⁵⁸⁸⁷ After the Bangui Attack, however, he learnt from Muslims at PK5 that Christians had been warned of the impending attack by the Anti-Balaka and were told to place these branches in front of their houses to indicate that they were Christian houses.⁵⁸⁸⁸

2301. P-2472 noticed the palm leaves for ‘about a week after’ the Bangui Attack in front of the houses of non-Muslims located around PK5; he stated having heard from the self-defence groups in PK5 who obtained information from the Anti-Balaka they captured that the palm leaves were put there as a sign to the Anti-Balaka so that they would not attack these houses.⁵⁸⁸⁹

2302. Fredo Giscard Baboue said that at the time of the Anti-Balaka arrival in Bangui, the Muslims and Islamised Central Africans had already fled Cité Jean XXIII 2 because they had heard they would arrive and were afraid of reprisals – the witness did not know what they were thinking, but thought this was the reason they left.⁵⁸⁹⁰

2303. The placing of palm leaves in front of Christian houses for the ‘Anti-Balaka’ to be able to identify non-Muslim and Christian houses has also been mentioned by other witnesses in the context of other locations.⁵⁸⁹¹

2304. In conclusion, the Chamber finds that news of an impending Bangui Attack was accessible to Mr Ngaïssona and Mr Yekatom at least a few days prior to it.⁵⁸⁹²

ix. The order to attack Bangui on 5 December 2013

2305. Turning to the ninth indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber notes that, depending on their relative position, different witnesses had different versions of who gave the order that launched the Bangui Attack.

2306. P-1521, who was a member of Andjilo’s group during the Bangui Attack,⁵⁸⁹³ said that it was the ‘ComZones’, ‘leaders’ behind the hill that decided to attack because there were ‘a lot of people in the movement’ and the Seleka would suspect them if they stayed behind the hill; he suggested that there were more Anti-Balaka coming but they did not come and they had waited in vain.⁵⁸⁹⁴ P-1521 also thought that the decision to go down from the hill on 5 December was taken by ‘unanimity’.⁵⁸⁹⁵

2308.P-0876, who did not himself participate in the Bangui Attack, stated that he could not confirm that the attack was launched under Konaté's command upon Bozizé's instructions; P-0876 nonetheless believed that the attack had been ordered by Bozizé and referred to an intercepted phone conversation that he believed actually took place between Bozizé calling from Nairobi and Konaté, in which Bozizé blamed Konaté for the failure of their mission; P-0876 stated that a week earlier, Bozizé had publicly stated on RFI that he had nothing to do with the Anti-Balaka movement.⁵⁸⁹⁸

2309.P-0306 assumed that it was Mr Ngaïssona, who issued the orders to attack Bangui. P-0306 said that it was Konaté and Ngremangou who gave them the order to attack on 5 December 2013, and that this order came from 'the supreme authority'.⁵⁸⁹⁹ These orders were 'to go all the way to Quatrième, to Gobongo and to various other neighbourhoods in Bangui and to attack the Seleka'.⁵⁹⁰⁰ P-0306 said that he knew that the orders came from 'the authority', Mr Ngaïssona, because he called when they were all assembled together.⁵⁹⁰¹ Moreover, Konaté, who was 'the chief of operations', told Andjilo when the preparations were taking place that Konaté regularly provided reports on what was happening to Mr Ngaïssona.⁵⁹⁰²

2310.The Ngaïssona Defence argues that P-0306's account lacks credibility on this aspect as he was 'remarkably vague' in his description of events and 'kept going back' to Mr Ngaïssona's subsequent role as national coordinator to validate his claims; inter alia, it points out that P-0306 changed his version concerning Konaté's phone call with Mr Ngaïssona.⁵⁹⁰³ Similarly, it submits that P-0965's claims in this regard should also be dismissed as 'entirely unreliable', arguing that P-0965 could not have been aware of any instructions ahead of 5 December and it is implausible that he would have overheard Konaté 'loudly reporting operational details'.⁵⁹⁰⁴

2311. Brice Emotion Namsio considered ‘Mokom’ to be ‘the coordinator of operations’, whereas Andjilo, Konaté and some other ‘responsables’ dispatched the groups for the attacks.⁵⁹⁰⁵ During his testimony, the witness indicated that he met Maxime Mokom in Zongo, and that Maxime Mokom was the one who said that Andjilo and the others had got to the hill.⁵⁹⁰⁶ Brice Emotion Namsio said that Maxime Mokom was ‘the operations coordinator’, the one who would call and provide information to the people behind the hill, the ‘only’ person who issued orders and coordinated before and after the attack.⁵⁹⁰⁷ The witness also testified that he followed ‘from beginning to end’ Maxime Mokom, ‘who was coordinating’.⁵⁹⁰⁸

2312. When confronted with P-0306’s evidence according to which the Anti-Balaka regrouped behind the hills following Mr Ngaïssona’s orders, Brice Emotion Namsio indicated that when he was in Zongo, the person they called coordinator, and who coordinated, was Maxime Mokom.⁵⁹⁰⁹ He also said that during that time, it was Maxime Mokom who called Andjilo to talk.⁵⁹¹⁰ The witness agreed that when he was behind the hill, no one told him that Mr Ngaïssona gave orders or money to the Anti-Balaka elements there.⁵⁹¹¹

2313. P-0889, who was with Maxime Mokom in Zongo, said that Maxime Mokom gave the order to launch the attack once all the elements were positioned close to Bangui.⁵⁹¹²

2314. P-2841 said generally that he received information that the Anti-Balaka were told to follow instructions and progressively advance towards Bangui and surround the town.⁵⁹¹³ P-2841 did not know who gave the Anti-Balaka these instructions; everyone knew who the Anti-Balaka leaders were, such as ‘Maxime M[okom], D[ouze Puissances] and A[ndjilo]’, but he could not say exactly who was giving the orders; in the run-up to the final attack on Bangui, information was not circulating as much so as not to be picked up by ‘the enemy’.⁵⁹¹⁴ P-2841 confirmed having heard about attacks in villages around Bossangoa, Bogangolo, Bouca, Benzambé – these were serious atrocities committed by both Seleka and Anti-Balaka; according to P-2841, obviously those in Zongo and Cameroon would have known about these attacks and atrocities as they were in contact with the Anti-Balaka, but P-2841 did not know who gave the orders.⁵⁹¹⁵

2315. Having regard to this, the Chamber does not rely on P-0306's claims that it was Mr Ngaïssona who gave the orders to launch the Bangui Attack. Further, the Chamber considers that there may have been communications between Andjilo and someone from the Bozizé family. However, without more, P-0306's and P-0965's evidence do not show that François Bozizé gave the final order to launch the Bangui Attack.

2316. The evidence thus far overwhelmingly suggests that Maxime Mokom was in regular contact with the chiefs on the ground.⁵⁹¹⁶ Relying on Brice Emotion Namsio and P-0889's evidence, as discussed above, the Chamber finds that Maxime Mokom relayed the orders to launch the Bangui Attack.

x. Goal of the Bangui Attack

2317. Turning to the tenth indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber finds that the Anti-Balaka participating in the Bangui Attack shared the same goal, which was to target Seleka positions in Bangui with a view to 'getting rid of Djotodia' and 'chasing out the Seleka', which included systematic targeting of Muslim civilians.⁵⁹¹⁷

2318. The Prosecution submits that the Anti-Balaka's objective for the Bangui Attack was 'to take control of the capital, to remove Djotodia in order to regain power, and to attack the Muslim civilian population, which they perceived as collectively responsible for, complicit with, and/or supportive of the Seleka.'⁵⁹¹⁸ The Yekatom Defence submits that insider witnesses were 'effectively unanimous' that the 'broader 5th December Operation' targeted Seleka positions and many of these witnesses insisted that the objective of the ‘anti-balaka’ was not to target or take revenge on Muslim civilians.⁵⁹¹⁹

2319.P-2251 stated that his group’s goal was to ‘drive out the Seleka from 36 Villas and Camp Obrou’.⁵⁹²⁰ P-0306 indicated that the instructions they received were to attack the Seleka at their different positions or bases, that was their target.⁵⁹²¹ P-0306 said that the aim was to ‘retake the town of Bangui in that day’,⁵⁹²² and that the Seleka were easy to identify because they wore military uniforms and carried arms, while the Anti-Balaka dressed in civilian clothing.⁵⁹²³

2320.P-2232 indicated that the goal of the Bangui Attack was to capture Bangui and drive out Djotodia from power, and that otherwise ‘they would not have displaced all the elements from all villages and converged them on Bangui’.⁵⁹²⁴ The essential thing was to achieve the objective, which was to chase the Seleka from power, all attacks were aimed at chasing Seleka out of power so as to take their place.⁵⁹²⁵

2321.Brice Emotion Namsio stated that as the Anti-Balaka spokespersons, his and Konaté’s role during the attack was to put pressure on Djotodia to resign.⁵⁹²⁶ The witness stated that the goal of the attack on Bangui was not to seize the power but to push Djotodia to resign or at least to change the way he ruled the country instead of killing his own people.⁵⁹²⁷

2322.Nicolas Tiangaye, asked as former prime minister what he understood the goal of the Anti-Balaka attack to be, said that its objective was to overthrow the Seleka regime because they attacked locations where ‘Djotodia was present and the base of the Seleka’; to him, it was ‘obvious’ that it was an attempt to take over the strategic locations and ‘put an end to Djotodia’s regime and of the Seleka’.⁵⁹²⁸

2323. Those who did not participate in the Bangui Attack also understood the objective in similar terms. For example, P-0889 stated that Maxime Mokom wanted to attack Bangui to chase out the Seleka and overthrow Michel Djotodia's regime with the ultimate purpose of reinstating the institutional order and having Bozizé return to power.⁵⁹²⁹ Jacob Mokpem-Bionli stated that the intention or the motive of the attack was to get rid of Djotodia and his people and bring Bozizé back; the witness could not tell whether Bozizé was aware of this, this was a military affair so people like Ngaïkosset were the ones aware of this.⁵⁹³⁰ P-0876 agreed with the Yekatom Defence counsel's proposition that the 5 December attack had 'a military objective' which was 'to dislodge Djotodia and his mercenaries'.⁵⁹³¹ Further, he indicated that the 5 December attack was 'one mean amongst many to bring about an end to the Seleka regime', and that for people who knew how to handle weapons, 'that target was imperative'.⁵⁹³²

2324. P-1847 stated that 'their' (the Anti-Balaka's) main mission was to progress to encircle the town of Bangui in order to attack the Seleka's positions, and that their ultimate goal was the reversal of the Seleka regime.⁵⁹³³ At the same time, however, P-1847 stated that in his view, the actions and exactions of the Anti-Balaka as a whole targeted the Muslim populations of the CAR, whom they considered accomplices of the Seleka.⁵⁹³⁴

2325. In the view of the Chamber, this aspect of targeting the Muslim population of the CAR is also reflected in the views of those that participated in the Bangui Attack and in how the attack unfolded.⁵⁹³⁵

2326. P-1521 said that the goal was to attack the Seleka elements' positions with a view to acquiring some weapons and ammunitions, and not to attack the Muslim community.⁵⁹³⁶ However, when commenting about the 'modus operandi' of the Bangui Attack, P-1521 said that they adopted 'guerrilla warfare' and used 'ambushes' to attack the Seleka, following which, ‘the Seleka would then attack the population because, according to Seleka, the population were complicit with the Anti-Balaka’ and ‘so whenever something happened of that nature, it would be total carnage on the population when the Seleka would arrive’.⁵⁹³⁷

2327. In a video, presumably shot prior to Djotodia’s resignation, Sylvestre Yagouzou is shown demanding Djotodia to resign within 24 hours, saying that if he resigns, he will save the lives of Central African Muslims; if Djotodia does not resign, ‘we will carry out a massacre’; he said that Djotodia has brought in mercenaries to kill Central Africans, and this is why they are revolting (‘il démissionne pour sauver la vie des peuples centrafricaines musulmanes [phon]’, ‘s’il ne démissionne pas, nous on va faire le massacre’, ‘il a amené des ... des mercenaires, des djihadistes, pour tuer les Centrafricains [...] c’est par rapport à ça que nous nous révoltons’).⁵⁹³⁸

xi. Common leaders

2328. Turning to the eleventh indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber finds that various Anti-Balaka groups that participated in the Bangui Attack had common leaders, who coordinated their actions and instructed them.

2329. The Prosecution submits that the Anti-Balaka attacked simultaneously from different directions, with some under the orders of FACA members or non-commissioned officers like ‘[Mr] Yekatom, Konaté, Ngremangou, Bawa’, and others under ‘de facto commanders’ like ‘Olivier Feissona, Andjilo, Lebene, Mazimbele’.⁵⁹³⁹

2330. From the evidence discussed thus far, the names of certain chiefs have appeared consistently in respect of the Anti-Balaka descending from the Bossangoa area into Bangui, namely, Thierry Lebene, Dedane, Andjilo and Konaté to name a few.⁵⁹⁴⁰ Similarly, Ngremangou, Sebastien Wenezoui, and Mr Yekatom appear to have been mentioned from those Anti-Balaka groups close to the M’Poko airport.⁵⁹⁴¹

2331. Hereinbelow, the Chamber has examined the evidence concerning Konaté and Ngremangou who are named by witnesses to have coordinated actions of several groups.

a. Konaté

2332. Those who were part of the groups coming from the north, particularly elements in Andjilo's group, recognised Konaté as one of the 'chief of operations' and place him as one of those executing the Bangui Attack.

2333. P-0306 considered Konaté as 'the chief of operations' and as someone who told Andjilo when the preparations were taking place, and that he regularly provided reports on what was happening to Mr Ngaïssona.⁵⁹⁴² P-0306 said that Konaté took Andjilo and his group to Bangui and remained with them until before the Bangui Attack.⁵⁹⁴³ P-0306 also said that sometimes after speaking to Mr Ngaïssona, Konaté would tell Andjilo what Mr Ngaïssona said.⁵⁹⁴⁴

2334. P-0965 indicated that Konaté, who had worked under Bozizé's regime and was an experienced military man, was 'the one who defined the plans' and who would 'group together all the group leaders and issue instructions'.⁵⁹⁴⁵ P-0965 said that Konaté was in contact with François and Francis Bozizé, Mr Ngaïssona and Steve Yambete because they funded the group and had the means to finance it.⁵⁹⁴⁶ P-0965 said that Konaté and Mr Ngaïssona would call before the latter returned to Bangui regularly through telephone to convey messages and get reports.⁵⁹⁴⁷ P-0965, asked about the content of these messages, said that the instruction conveyed 'before 5 December' was 'for the leaders to ensure that the elements behaved properly, that they would not panic on hearing gunshots, but that they should act as courageous fighters in order to win battles'.⁵⁹⁴⁸

2335. P-1521 said that Konaté was not 'a member of the coordination, but he was part of the coordination' and 'a leader', 'he was the one in command'.⁵⁹⁴⁹ P-1521 said that Konaté's section was made up entirely of soldiers but they came as a group and initially it was not easy for them because the 'Anti-Balaka civilians' did not want to accept them because they thought they were traitors for having fled the Seleka but after a while they explained that they had the same goal, namely to 'kick out Seleka with its band of mercenaries' and this is how the civilians ultimately accepted them and advanced together towards the Gbazabangui hill before 5 December 2013.⁵⁹⁵⁰

2336. Joachim Kokaté indicated that at the end of February 2014, he met Konaté at the prime minister's cabinet and Konaté explained to him that he was one of the leaders of the Anti-Balaka who fought on the ground on 5 December 2013, but he did not give details as regards the planning of the operations.⁵⁹⁵¹

2337. The Chamber notes that P-0876 had not met Konaté until after the Bangui Attack and did not meet him when he visited the Anti-Balaka groups prior to the Bangui Attack,⁵⁹⁵² however, this has not diminished the Chamber's appreciation of Konaté's role.

b. Ngremangou

2339. The evidence suggests that individuals, in particular, P-0876, Mr Yekatom,⁵⁹⁵⁴ and P-0884 were in communication with Ngremangou prior to the Bangui Attack.

2340. P-0884, asked whether he was in contact with Ngremangou in the period leading up to the 5 December attack, said that it was not only by telephone but they also lived close together, in the same district; they were always together, at the time spending their days together; they received the same information and sometimes Ngremangou gave P-0884 information on the ‘attack of 5 December’.⁵⁹⁵⁵

2341. P-2232 indicated that Ngremangou was one of the members of the coordination, he was in regular contact with Maxime Mokom and was responsible of ‘recruiting soldiers’ in Bangui,⁵⁹⁵⁶ and that his role entailed ‘bringing together all the soldiers who were part of the Anti-Balaka movement’.⁵⁹⁵⁷ P-0954 described Ngremangou as ‘the big boss’ because he had the connection with Bozizé and, according to what P-0954 heard from Ngremangou’s ‘men’, received money from Bozizé.⁵⁹⁵⁸ During this testimony, P-0954 further indicated that Ngremangou received orders from Bozizé.⁵⁹⁵⁹

2342. The Chamber notes in particular P-0876’s interview with the Prosecution in which he stated that the ‘Boeing group’ went to talk to Ngremangou to confront him about the attack; they told him that they should have been informed about it.⁵⁹⁶⁰

xii. Assignment of specific locations and time to attack in advance 2343. Turning to the twelfth indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber finds that, on 4 December 2013, Anti-Balaka groups that reassembled close to Bangui prior to the Bangui Attack were each assigned a specific target within Bangui and instructed to begin the attack on the respective targets at 05:00 on 5 December 2013.

2344. The Prosecution submits that the various Anti-Balaka groups were to attack in specific areas in Bangui and aim for predefined objectives.⁵⁹⁶¹ The Prosecution submits that the Anti-Balaka attacked multiple targets ‘including Camp Kassai (a Seleka base), Camp de Roux, the Fire Brigade Camp, the National Assembly, the Protestant Youth Center, and containers located behind the Air France offices, where the Seleka tortured and killed prisoners’.⁵⁹⁶²

2345. The evidence shows that various Anti-Balaka chiefs gathered on 4 December 2013, the evening before the attack to plan the specifics, i.e. time of the attack, locations to attack, and distribution of elements into groups.

2346. Brice Emotion Namsio said that in the evening of 4 December 2013, the elements and the chiefs, himself included, ‘rallied’ behind the hill ‘together in the evening and the teams were shared’.⁵⁹⁶³ The witness said that the teams were divided up because each chief with their team was supposed to go and attack a specific position.⁵⁹⁶⁴ P-0306 said that each group, including his group, had to attack a specific Seleka position in the town.⁵⁹⁶⁵ Brice Emotion Namsio explained they did not reveal at what time the attack would take place as they were afraid of a leak.⁵⁹⁶⁶ P-0965 indicated that a battle plan was drawn up during a meeting between the ComZones which he did not attend.⁵⁹⁶⁷

2347. P-1521, who was in Andjilo’s group at the time,⁵⁹⁶⁸ was present when the decisions of when and where to attack were taken and said that the leaders decided this ‘unanimously’.⁵⁹⁶⁹ P-1521, asked who took the decision in relation to the directions to take for the attack, said that before 5 December, there was no ‘chain of command’ as such and everybody had their own elements and if there were decisions taken, it was by consensus.⁵⁹⁷⁰

2348. Certain chiefs gave a speech in preparation on the night before the Bangui Attack. Brice Emotion Namsio said that during this gathering in the evening before the attack, and ‘Konate’ and Andjilo took the floor and said that they needed to attack.⁵⁹⁷¹ P-0965 mentioned that Andjilo reassembled everyone on 4 December 2013 around 20:00 prior to the Bangui Attack, to say that they would attack from 05:00 in the morning, asking his troops ‘not to be afraid to go ahead and fire’ and to ‘kill the enemy’.⁵⁹⁷² P-2251 stated that on the night of 4 December 2013, there was a ‘night vigil’ in the bush behind the hill, which included a big light, dancing and songs of praise and about how they would defend their country.⁵⁹⁷³ P-2251 stated that their ‘chiefs’ were with them, dancing and singing of victory, shouting that they would ‘push the Seleka out’ and that ‘the Christian God will help’ them.⁵⁹⁷⁴ P-2251 stated that people did not drink alcohol or take drugs but just prayed to God to protect them and, at about 02:00 on 5 December, they stopped dancing and started praying before departing.⁵⁹⁷⁵

2349. P-2251 did not know what the chiefs discussed amongst themselves, but P-2251’s chief came to them and told them which path they would take during the attack; the chief told them that when the attack started, the elements should be ready to bang pots and shout ‘Seleka get out, Seleka get out!’ and were told to fire in the air with their hunting rifles.⁵⁹⁷⁶ P-0567 stated that from what he learned later about this attack, it was clear that it was well-coordinated and the targeted locations were well designated in advance; P-0567 believed that the targets were not individuals but rather specific locations.⁵⁹⁷⁷

2350. The evidence shows that the groups and locations were divided as follows: (i) Konaté and Feissona would lead the attack Camp Kassai;⁵⁹⁷⁸ (ii) ‘Bawa’ would attack the National Assembly because the Seleka were in the Sapeurs Pompiers base;⁵⁹⁷⁹ and (iii) Andjilo would lead the attack in the 4th arrondissement near the Marabena roundabout;⁵⁹⁸⁰ (iii) other teams, including that of Mr Yekatom, would attack around PK9 and towards KM5.⁵⁹⁸¹

2351. These targets corresponded to the Seleka bases in Bangui at the time. Jacob Mokpem-Bionli mentioned the following Seleka bases: (i) ‘the Barthélémy Boganda lycée’,⁵⁹⁸² next to the National Assembly, across from 36 Villas; (ii) the Boy-Rabe base, ‘virtually in front of the concession’; (iii) the base ‘going to the Ndress graveyard’; (iv) a small group of Seleka elements based around Mr Ngaïssona’s warehouse towards Camp Kassai,⁵⁹⁸³ ‘but they were not inside, just in front’.⁵⁹⁸⁴ P-1521, who was present when the decisions of when and where to attack were taken,⁵⁹⁸⁵ said that there were Seleka bases at PK12, so some groups would try to attack them at ‘36 Villas’ and ‘Gobongo’; these locations were chosen because Seleka elements were based in the areas that they targeted.⁵⁹⁸⁶ P-1521, asked how it was decided that the group should attack from three different directions, said that the aim was to see where the Seleka elements were and to find out where the Seleka positions were; they thought they would go where the Seleka were and get some materiel.⁵⁹⁸⁷ P-0876 explains that he later heard that the Anti-Balaka’s plan was to target several Seleka positions at the same time:

Camp Kassai, the Sapeurs-Pompiers base, the camp Béal, the base in Don Bosco near the airport, among others.⁵⁹⁸⁸

2352. The evidence shows that the attack was to begin between 04:00 and 05:00 on 5 December 2013. For those that were on the hills behind Bangui, this meant that the descent had to begin in time to reach Bangui at the designated time. P-0306 said that they stayed on the back side of the hills in Bangui until 5 December 2013 when they received the decision to enter Bangui.⁵⁹⁸⁹ P-0306 indicated that the ‘programme’ or ‘plan’ to attack Bangui on 5 December was set up from 1 to 3 December 2013;⁵⁹⁹⁰ but it was on 4 December that ‘everybody came down’ to attack Bangui.⁵⁹⁹¹ P-0306 said that on 5 December 2013, after receiving instructions to enter Bangui, they took up the ‘light weapons’ they had taken from the Seleka and entered Bangui very early in the morning.⁵⁹⁹² According to P-0975, the Anti-Balaka group posted on Boy-Rabe hill entered Bangui at 04:00 on 5 December 2013.⁵⁹⁹³ P-0965 also said that the attack started at 04:00 in the morning of 5 December.⁵⁹⁹⁴ Brice Emotion Namsio, who was on the hill behind Boy-Rabe on 4 December 2013,⁵⁹⁹⁵ stated that the elements left their base around midnight to come down to Bangui, and that it was a two-hours walk; the attack took place in the early morning, it had been decided that the attack would start at 05:00.⁵⁹⁹⁶

2353. The Chamber has noted the routes adopted for the attack that were in keeping with the pre-decided locations and targets. The Anti-Balaka coming in from the north proceeded in three main directions: towards PK12 (direction northwest), towards 4th arrondissement (direction south), and Camp Kassai (direction southeast).

2354.P-2251 and P-1521 annotated maps showing the routes taken by the Anti-Balaka elements that were attacking from the northern side of Bangui. P-2251 marked a map with (i) the route that his group took from Nguito; (ii) the route that Andjilo's group took through the 4th arrondissement in Bangui, attacking 36 Villas and retreating to Cité Jean XXIII;⁵⁹⁹⁷ (iii) the route that the group who went to Camp Kassai took over the hill; (iv) the route of the group that attacked PK10 and PK12 leaving from Kpata.⁵⁹⁹⁸ P-2251 thought that these targets - notably Boy-Rabe, Camp Kassai and PK12 - were picked because they were informed that this were where 'the Seleka were harassing population'.⁵⁹⁹⁹ P-1521 also annotated a map showing the 'plan' of the Bangui Attack,⁶⁰⁰⁰ that mirrors the main directions taken by the different groups that day. P-1521 described one group going directly to 4th arrondissement and another to Camp Kassai toward Camp de Roux, and the third going to PK12,⁶⁰⁰¹ said that 'these three directions' were the ones they needed to attack; he added that everyone was to engage 'where they can fight' and that it was 'all a bit mixed up'.⁶⁰⁰²

2355.P-0889, who was with 'Mokom' in Zongo and could follow the movement of the Anti-Balaka groups from what he heard from the latter's conversations at the time, said that the 'first group' of the 7th arrondissement took Camp Kassai and arrived at Ngaragba central prison, until Camp de Roux;⁶⁰⁰³ the 'second group' left from Boy-Rabe and took the National Assembly through Fidel Obourou military camp (in front of the Seleka camp at Camp Beal) and took Sapeurs Pompiers camp.⁶⁰⁰⁴ P-1847 stated that the Bangui Attack started towards the northern part of Bangui, specifically towards the National Assembly, the 4th arrondissement up to the city centre of Bangui.⁶⁰⁰⁵

2356. The Chamber notes that the attack was carried out as planned. P-1521, who was in Andjilo's group at the time,⁶⁰⁰⁶ said that one group went to Camp Kassai and Camp de Roux because there were Seleka elements; another group in the middle went straight to Lycée Boganda in the 4th arrondissement because some Seleka elements were based opposite to the school; from the northern exist at the gendarmerie at PK12, there were also some Seleka elements based there, as well as in '36 Villas and the neighbourhood opposite the lycée Boganda'.⁶⁰⁰⁷

2357. The Anti-Balaka attacked in PK12. P-2269 stated that Dedane was at the Lycée Gobongo after PK12, went to Marabena and to Miskine.⁶⁰⁰⁸ P-1521 said that Kems was in the group that went to PK12 and died in Galabadja.⁶⁰⁰⁹

2358. The Anti-Balaka attacked in the 4th arrondissement, in particular, close to Lycée Boganda and the National Assembly. Jacob Mokpem-Bionli stated one Anti-Balaka team went past Lycée Boganda and another through Boy-Rabe.⁶⁰¹⁰

2359. Andjilo 'had to deal' with the 4th arrondissement.⁶⁰¹¹ P-0965, as 'an ordinary element' on 5 December 2013 did not have a weapon,⁶⁰¹² but he was part of the attack on Bangui at the start of the day when they attacked Boy-Rabe.⁶⁰¹³ P-1521 was also part of Andjilo's group that went to '36 Villas' and opposite the Hotel Ledger.⁶⁰¹⁴ P-2269 also went to Boy-Rabe, to Bafio, because it was near the 'colline', in case they needed to retreat.⁶⁰¹⁵ According to Alfred Legrand Ngaya, on 5 December 2013, they came down from the Bazoubangui hill in one column and went through the Boy-Rabe neighbourhood to attack the Seleka, carrying machetes and sticks.⁶⁰¹⁶ Fredo Giscard Baboue described the Anti-Balaka entering neighbourhood Cité Jean XXIII 2 on 5 December 2013.⁶⁰¹⁷ The witness called them ‘bandits’ and not soldiers because had they been soldiers, they would have liberated the population, yet they also looted.⁶⁰¹⁸

2360.P-2251 said that Kolongo and Benjamin were with his group for the attack, as they made their way to the National Assembly next to Camp Obrou.⁶⁰¹⁹ P-1521 explained that there was a Seleka base opposite Lycée Barthelemy Boganda and a military post opposite Hotel Ledger, and that the aim was to attack those two points at 36 Villas.⁶⁰²⁰ Brice Emotion Namsio’s group, with more than 50 elements, went by the Barthelemy Boganda high school, near the National Assembly in the 4th arrondissement,⁶⁰²¹ and did not go further than the National Assembly.⁶⁰²² According to Brice Emotion Namsio, the person responsible for the group was Bawa,⁶⁰²³ there was another group that attacked the Sapeurs Pompiers base.⁶⁰²⁴

2361.P-2251 did not know what was happening with any of the other groups who had taken different routes that night, as he was not in communication with them and did not have a phone.⁶⁰²⁵ P-0884, who was in Boeing, outlined that there were clashes at the National Assembly at Mamika, they were attacking all Seleka positions, Seleka military bases; the National Assembly, the palace is in the middle of the town, Mamika is closer to PK5 and is a military base; there was a camp of firefighters in front of the palace of the National Assembly.⁶⁰²⁶

Denamganai.⁶⁰²⁸ P-0567 stated that later on while working as a human rights investigator in the UN COI, he found out that on 5 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka attacked the Camp Kassai where the Seleka were training new recruits; the UN COI received information indicating that there could have been as many as 180 recruits in Camp Kassai at the time; they also attacked other areas of Bangui such as the national assembly and the Boy-Rabe and Foh districts.⁶⁰²⁹

2363. Other witnesses who did not participate in the attack spoke of an attack on Camp de Roux but the Chamber has received very little evidence on what happened there.⁶⁰³⁰ Jacob Mokpem-Bionli said that the target also included Camp de Roux because Djotodia used to go there regularly with his elements; this limb of the attack was led by Ngaïkosset and ‘Lt Herve’.⁶⁰³¹ Alfred Legrand Ngaya stated that on 5 December 2013, Konaté, a FACA member, and his men attacked Bangui from the Kasai area and attempted to take control of Camp de Roux and the radio station, but failed; the youth armed with sticks and machetes clashed with the Seleka in front of the parliament and the Anti-Balaka were ‘slaughtered’.⁶⁰³²

xiii. Unfolding of the attack and retreat

2364. Turning to the thirteenth indicator of coordination, as set out below, the Chamber finds that the Bangui Attack was carried out as planned, with the instructions to start at 05:00 on 5 December 2013, resulting in clashes between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka in several locations in Bangui, with the Anti-Balaka beginning to retreat around 10:00 the same day.

2365. The Prosecution submits that at around 10:00, the Anti-Balaka withdrew in face of the Seleka, notably behind the Bas-Oubangui hill, located behind the Boy-Rabe neighbourhood.⁶⁰³³ participate in the Bangui Attack, deduced that Thierry Lebene’s group attacked Camp Kassai because they were based on the hills behind Camp Kassai and could not imagine any other group attacking Camp Kassai where Seleka had ‘heavily armed individuals’ (see P-0876: P-085, p. 39, lines 5-16).

2366. Below, the Chamber has assessed how the attack was carried out in northern Bangui by the Anti-Balaka, as well as in Boeing and Cattin where Mr Yekatom's group was involved that day.⁶⁰³⁴

2367. As regards how the attack unfolded in northern Bangui, the Chamber notes that P-0889 was receiving information through Maxim Mokom with whom he was at the time and who was being informed of the position of the elements on the ground.⁶⁰³⁵ P-0889 recalled that during the Bangui Attack, the Anti-Balaka managed to take over the National Assembly and a military field where the Seleka were, close to the National Assembly, known as Sapeurs Pompiers.⁶⁰³⁶ P-0889 recalled Maxime Mokom being happy, mentioning that they were advancing well and had taken over Bangui, and that they would then take over the palace, to where he was directing them.⁶⁰³⁷

2368. P-0975 stated that the group of Anti-Balaka posted on Boy-Rabe hill entered Bangui at 04:00 on 5 December 2013.⁶⁰³⁸ P-0975 stated that they used the same tactics in Bangui as they used in the provinces; they searched for the Seleka and would be informed by informants on the phone of where the Seleka were; it was a 'revolution' and they ('we') needed to be informed; and it was Richard Bejouane that was in charge of such communications.⁶⁰³⁹

2369. P-0889 recalled that around 09:00, 10:00 or 11:00, things changed and the elements could not take over the palace, and started suffering many human losses, following which Maxime Mokom asked them to retreat because they did not have the necessary means to fight the Seleka.⁶⁰⁴⁰ P-0889 recalled that they did not really have automatic weapons, but traditional ones, and agreed that the lack of ammunition and equipment prompted the Anti-Balaka to retreat during the Bangui Attack.⁶⁰⁴¹

2370. This is also reflected in the evidence received by the Chamber from those that were on the ground at the time.

2371. P-0975 stated that at 10:00 on 5 December 2013, Andjilo instructed them to retreat to the Boy-Rabe hill because the Seleka were too strong, he himself was with Andjilo when they retreated to Boy-Rabe.⁶⁰⁴² Brice Emotion Namsio agreed that around 10:00 the attack was considered as ‘ended’ and the attack itself did not last, given the resources that the Anti-Balaka had in their possession and given the arsenal used by the Seleka; in the witness’s opinion, ‘the Balaka could not do anything so the Balaka decided to avoid a bloodbath so that the effects should not fall once again on other people’.⁶⁰⁴³ The witness, commenting on a photograph of what appear to be dead Anti-Balaka in front of the National Assembly, said that many Anti-Balaka used sticks and all of this happened after the reprisals were carried out by the tank battalions of the ‘firefighters’ brigade’.⁶⁰⁴⁴

2372. P-2251 stated that a lot of people from his group were killed or injured during the Bangui Attack and that it was very difficult; his group went through Boy-Rabe to the National Assembly and that is where the Seleka attacked them ‘seriously’, after which he managed to ‘escape’ to Camp Obrou.⁶⁰⁴⁵ P-2251 agreed that on 5 December 2013, his group was so disorganised and ill-equipped and they did not have military equipment for the fighting, except for hunting rifles and pots, while, on the other hand, the Seleka had heavy weaponry and military vehicles so they could not really face up to them; he thought that since the Anti-Balaka had a strategy of making noise with pots and pans, they were able to ‘succeed’ and said that the Anti-Balaka were fighting while retreating and that is why there were many people that were injured and even killed.⁶⁰⁴⁶

2373.P-2251 said that the Seleka had blocked the main road which leads to Ndress, so when they got to Mandaba they fled through the neighbourhood to Cité Jean XXIII. P-2251 continued running to Dedengue, from where somebody led him to the hill, and he eventually ended up on a hill at Nguitou.⁶⁰⁴⁷

2374.The Chamber notes P-2251's account of the retreat of the various groups after the attack. P-2251 stated that Andjilo's group retreated to Cité Jean XXIII, whereas the group that had gone to Camp Kassai and PK12 retreated to Kpata.⁶⁰⁴⁸ P-2251 himself first retreated to the bush in Kpata and 'refused to attack the Seleka again', feeling 'very scared' and stated that it was difficult to fight someone who holds a gun with a simple machete.⁶⁰⁴⁹

2375.P-1521 considered that the Bangui Attack had 'failed' and described it as '[w]e came down on the 5th, we had problems of ammunition, then we went back up the hill' and then decided that 'we would use the guerilla war tactics with the purpose of getting supplies on the ground'.⁶⁰⁵⁰ P-1521 said that, after the 'failed attack of 5 December', all the Anti-Balaka returned to the hill; thereafter, those who were in Bangui began to progressively go down to their various localities; once an individual got back to their neighbourhood, they would become the zone commander or area commander for their neighbourhood; those from the provinces who did not know the city were bound to obey or follow those who were in Bangui in order to live along with them; he said that they lost a lot of people and many people were killed, so the combatants were a 'bit frustrated' and tried to hide while others disarmed and went to displaced persons' locations.⁶⁰⁵¹

2376.The Chamber notes that those that did not participate in the attack themselves,⁶⁰⁵² also recounted similar occurrences with the attack starting at 04:00 with the Anti-Balaka retreating, followed by attacks on civilians.

2377.P-0889 stated that when the Bangui Attack started on 5 December 2013, it was still dark.⁶⁰⁵³

He was in Zongo, sleeping, and he woke up when he heard ‘heavy weapons’ around 05:00 or 06:00 in the morning.⁶⁰⁵⁴ P-0876 spoke of ‘explosions everywhere in the 7th arrondissement’ at the time and hearing gunshots at around 04:00-05:00 on that day, as did P-0954 who was in Bimbo.⁶⁰⁵⁵ P-0954 stated that on 5 December 2013, they heard gunshots around Boy-Rabe, Camp Kassai and ‘other places’.⁶⁰⁵⁶ P-0954 described it as ‘heavy fighting’.⁶⁰⁵⁷

2378.Jacob Mokpem-Bionli, who was in Boy-Rabe during Bangui Attack, stated that they lost a lot of young people, but the Seleka also lost a lot of people because they had been taken by surprise.⁶⁰⁵⁸

2379.Michel Ningando, a priest who worked in Bossangoa and was in Bangui that day, stated that the Anti-Balaka attacked Bangui on 5 December 2013 at 04:00.⁶⁰⁵⁹ The witness had fled from Castors to Gobongo before 5 December 2013 because of the threat of Muslims attacking neighbourhoods near PK5 and was there when he started hearing noise; he went to ‘St Jean Church’ in Kalabadja when the gunshots got worse; there were many people with injuries, some big, most of them men.⁶⁰⁶⁰ Later that morning, Michel Ningando heard some Anti-Balaka walking next to the church saying ‘I mou kodro awe’, meaning ‘this is it we took over the country’, after which they heard the Seleka vehicles and realised the Anti-Balaka had been defeated.⁶⁰⁶¹

2380.P-0974 stated that during the 5 December 2013 attack by the Anti-Balaka in Bangui, he was at his home in Damala; at 04:00, he heard detonations and did not know what was going on; later he went to find out at the main road and learned Anti-Balaka had entered Bangui and later he saw the Anti-Balaka retreating from the town; people started fleeing in all directions and to refugee sites – that is when P-0974 decided to join the Anti-Balaka.⁶⁰⁶²

2381.P-2841 left his compound at 05:00 or 06:00, when it was light, and ‘could see the Anti-Balaka withdrawing towards the northern neighbourhoods’;⁶⁰⁶³ the Seleka were able to ‘take back the town’.⁶⁰⁶⁴

2382.P-1962 stated that on 5 December 2013, he opened his book shop in PK5 in the morning and heard detonations and saw people fleeing – Muslims wearing uniforms (Seleka) started shooting at the population, and later he heard that the Seleka were also shooting in Kpetene, Bea-Rex, Cattin, and Mamadou Mbaïki.⁶⁰⁶⁵ He fled to his house in Fatima, but his wife and children had already fled to St Antoine de Padoue in Bimbo; when P-1962 later went back to his shop, it had been burned down.⁶⁰⁶⁶ P-1962 himself did not see any Anti-Balaka on 5 December 2013, he heard that they were around Boy-Rabe.⁶⁰⁶⁷

2383.P-2353 stated that he heard on the radio about the fighting between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka in Bangui on 5 December 2013, and that there were deaths on both sides, civilians killed as well as fighters.⁶⁰⁶⁸ A friend of P-2353 who lived in PK5-Bangui gave P-2353 general information about what was happening in Bangui.⁶⁰⁶⁹ There was combat in KM5, but it was not serious; P-2353 called his friend who said that the situation was volatile; in the city there was a lot of fighting and many dead bodies were transferred to the ‘Ali Babourou’; people in PK10 were also killed and the bodies were moved to PK5 mosque; this is what his friend told P-2353.⁶⁰⁷⁰

xiv. Aftermath and retaliation by the Seleka

2385. Lastly, in this respect, the Chamber has considered the aftermath of the Bangui Attack, following the Anti-Balaka retreat.

2386. P-2251 stayed near Nguito until 6 December 2013 fearing Seleka shots,⁶⁰⁷⁴ following which he hid in Cité Jean XXIII in Bangui.⁶⁰⁷⁵ P-2251 stated that the Seleka counter-attacked by 'targeting people' in Cité Jean XXIII.⁶⁰⁷⁶ P-2251 stayed in hiding in the days following the Bangui Attack but remained in Bangui and was able to find work.⁶⁰⁷⁷

2387. P-2251 said that he saw that the Seleka were shooting and killing without making any distinctions.⁶⁰⁷⁸ P-2251 said that in Boy-Rabe, he saw the Seleka committing a lot of crimes and PK12 also suffered a lot from these crimes.⁶⁰⁷⁹ P-2251 indicated that he had 'heard it said' that on 5, 6 and 7 December the Seleka attacked and shot in Boeing and Cattin 'without any distinctions', including at people who sought refuge at the airport site, despite the fact that the Sangaris forces were protecting these people.⁶⁰⁸⁰

2388. Adrien Poussou explained that after the 5 December 2013 attack, 'the different Anti-Balaka factions were systematically attacking [...] our fellow Muslim citizens' and everything

‘seemed to show that there was a plan to liquidate the Muslims’, in response to the violence ‘committed by the Seleka’; there were also calls for partition in certain Seleka factions.⁶⁰⁸¹

2389. P-2353 heard through telephone contact with friends and relatives in Bangui that in the days after 5 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka started killing Muslims trapped in areas such as Boeing, PK12, PK5; it seemed to be getting worse each day, Muslims were unable to move, and no longer able to trade, it seemed as though Christians were still able to move; P-2353 heard this from people who travelled on the local buses moving between Mbaïki and outer villages.⁶⁰⁸² When P-2353 was in Bangui on 9 December 2013, there was chaos everywhere, the ‘temperature’ was not right, it felt very tense; he saw many Christians at the Fatima church near PK5, afraid of Seleka reprisals.⁶⁰⁸³

2390. Brice Emotion Namsio agreed that when the Bangui Attack happened, the Seleka elements in the ‘firefighters barracks’ came to the 4th arrondissement Bangui ‘for reprisals’.⁶⁰⁸⁴

2391. According to Fredo Giscard Baboue, a Bangui inhabitant, when the Anti-Balaka arrived they first fought the Seleka, but later spread into the neighbourhood with their gris-gris and systematically looted all houses of ‘Arabs’ (referring to Muslims and Islamised Central Africans); there were only maybe three or four houses of Muslims in Cité Jean XXIII 2 which were all looted; they belonged not to Seleka, but to civilians.⁶⁰⁸⁵

2392. Jacob Mokpem-Bionli, who was in Boy-Rabe, stated that civilians were also killed in Bangui and that the Anti-Balaka targeted anyone they saw wearing ‘a long boubou’ because they identified the person as a Muslim.⁶⁰⁸⁶ The witness said that, in Miskine, the Anti-Balaka razed the mosque to the ground and then started destroying all the Muslim buildings, not only were the houses destroyed but people were also killed.⁶⁰⁸⁷

2393. Catherine Samba-Panza, the mayor of Bangui at the time, said that she was not in Bangui when the Anti-Balaka entered the city on 5 December 2013; she returned a few days later when she learned that the Anti-Balaka had begun attacking the Seleka and Muslim population; that is when she discovered ‘the horrors’ that had occurred ever since 5 December 2013 until the day she arrived; leaving the airport to get to her home, it was ‘unimaginable’ what she saw and experienced; the Seleka had ‘attacked civilians’, the ‘Anti-Balaka forces had attacked the Seleka’; it was ‘revenge, retaliation, murders everywhere’; the witness was ‘utterly shocked’ by what she saw.⁶⁰⁸⁸

xv. Conclusion

2394. Having regard to the conclusions for each of these indicators, the Chamber finds that the Bangui Attack was highly coordinated. Furthermore, having regard to its conclusions on the Bossangoa Attack,⁶⁰⁸⁹ the Chamber finds that the Bangui Attack and the Bossangoa Attack assessed together also reflect a similarly high level of coordination with each other.

2395. Before turning to the arguments by the Defence challenging the coordinated nature of the attack, the Chamber recalls some of its conclusions based on the evidence thusfar. The Chamber found that a plan encompassing the Bangui Attack existed as of 30 November 2013. The Anti-Balaka elements from the provinces that had been moving towards Bangui were mobilised by their chiefs to arrive in Bangui prior to 5 December 2013. These comprised of both FACA members and civilians and more joined as the groups moved towards Bangui. During this time, the various Anti-Balaka chiefs of these groups remained in regular contact amongst each other to share information, materiel, and elements. A significant number of these chiefs were in contact with Maxime Mokom directly over the phone. Some Anti-Balaka groups started keeping track of the elements within their groups by maintaining lists that were shared with their chiefs. By the end of November 2013, the Anti-Balaka groups started gathering around the perimeter of Bangui in preparation for the Bangui Attack.

2396. The gathering occurred in a manner permitting the Anti-Balaka elements to be able to enter Bangui from the north, north-east, south-west and south. While the exact number of elements at this stage of the events is not known, it ranged in the thousands. Information about an impending attack began to circulate as early as end-November 2013 and initially, the Bangui Attack was planned for 1 December 2013, but this was postponed to 5 December 2013. Meanwhile, an attack took place in Boali on 3 December 2013, which was reported in the news. Between 1-5 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka elements, along with their chiefs, prepared, planned, and decided on specific locations to target in Bangui. These locations corresponded to known Seleka bases. Elements from the provinces were paired with those that were familiar with the neighbourhoods in Bangui to be able to find their way. The purpose of the attack shared among the elements was to ‘get rid’ of the Seleka.

2398. The Chamber further recalls that later that day, on 5 December 2013, FROCCA issued a radio statement in relation to the attack on Bangui, referring to it as ‘[l]e rétablissement de l’ordre fonctionnel’ and stating that the Anti-Balaka ‘sont des Centrafricains pour aller libérer leur pays des jougs des djihadistes venus du D[arfour], du T[chad], du S[oudan]’.⁶⁰⁹⁰

2399. The Chamber finds that these attacks were highly coordinated despite claims of certain witnesses that the various Anti-Balaka groups were independent, and came from ‘everywhere’, not knowing each other, and did not have a political aim or agenda.⁶⁰⁹¹

2400. First, the Chamber draws a distinction between (i) the coordinated nature of the Bangui Attack; (ii) the coordination of the Anti-Balaka as a movement; and (iii) the ‘national coordination’ setup formally in the months after the Bangui Attack.

2401. The Chamber grants that the existence of an underlying cohesive (or coordinated) movement of political ideology could have positively demonstrated a coordinated attack. The reverse is not true. A political movement lacking in coordination does not demonstrate that individuals and groups cannot actualise coordinated action. Nonetheless, the Chamber has considered the rhetoric of how uncoordinated the Anti-Balaka were as a movement prior to the Bangui Attack, but it did not change the Chamber’s conclusions that the attack itself was coordinated.

2402. Second, in the Chamber’s view, some level of self-organisation within groups of civilians, or with the involvement of FACA members, is not mutually exclusive to there being an overarching coordination at a ‘higher’ level, political or otherwise. While the evidence does point to civilians self-organising in the provinces, there is a wealth of evidence showing that, at least as of November 2013, these civilians, together with FACA members, had been actively mobilised in preparation for an attack on Bangui. Indeed, a combined reading of the evidence in light of the Defence’s arguments demonstrates that the purported self-led movement by civilians in the provinces was in fact channelled into common action by placing on it a common task.

2403. Third, the Chamber notes that even P-0876, who claimed to there being ‘no coordination’ for the Bangui Attack in absolute terms also admitted to there being some organisation. P-0876 said that the Bangui Attack was ‘organised only by one group’, led by Konaté, and ‘not by all the Anti-Balaka groups’.⁶⁰⁹²

2404. In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-0876 also appeared to be drawing a distinction between the coordination of the Anti-Balaka as a group and the coordinated nature of the

Bangui Attack. In his interview with the Prosecution, P-0876 said that he supposed that the Bangui Attack was planned because spontaneity was excluded from the moment there were five targets attacked at the same hour in the morning.⁶⁰⁹³ P-0876 explained in terms that the Chamber finds fitting in this context:

Il y a trop de coïncidences. C'est pourquoi je suppose que ça a été planifié quelque part. [...] Bon, si on disait: « Bon, un groupe a attaqué le matin vers 8 heures et d'autres ont été attaqués vers 11 heures [phon.] », là, on peut dire que : « Bon, peut... peut-être ça a suivi celui-là [phon.], ils ont vu que ça attaquait là-bas, on peut attaquer ici. » Mais c'était le même jour, à la même heure, ils ont commencé tout...⁶⁰⁹⁴

2405. Fourth, in the view of the Chamber, coordination is not a function of singular command, as suggested by P-0876, neither is it prefaced on strict military hierarchy or political leadership. By its very definition, 'coordination' implies different elements that are organised to work together by one or more entities. In this respect, the Chamber has considered several indicia based on mutual assistance, cooperation, communication, and implementation within an overarching goal – all of which are shown to exist on the facts and prior to the Bangui Attack. Therefore, in the view of the Chamber, the setting up of the Anti-Balaka national coordination formally only after 5 December 2013 did not mean that the Bangui Attack was not coordinated.

2406. Lastly in this respect, the Chamber considers that the coordinated nature of the Bangui Attack was not premised on its success. The Chamber finds that, on the basis of the totality of the evidence discussed above, the manner in which the Bangui Attack was organised and carried out was highly coordinated. In this instance, even a failure to overpower the Seleka spoke to the unachieved yet common goals and targets.

2. Involvement of Mr Yekatom

Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with other Anti-Balaka groups to participate in the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013. In the months leading up to this attack, Mr Yekatom and

That's why I assume it had been planned somehow. [...] Well, if you said: "Well, one group attacked at around 8:00 in the morning and others were attacked at around 11:00", then you could say that: "Well, per... perhaps this one followed that one, they saw there was an attack over there, we can attack here". But it was at the same time, on the same day, they started all...'

his group armed and trained in the bush. The movement of Mr Yekatom's group in the bush, when superimposed onto those from other groups who proceeded towards Bangui along the same time frame, shows that this coordination had begun well before November 2013.

In the afternoon of 4 December 2013, Mr Yekatom chose some of his elements and instructed them to move towards Bangui. The same day, the group arrived in Projet, situated near the M'Poko airport in Bangui. Mr Yekatom's instructions to his elements concerning the attack on 5 December 2013 were to fight the Seleka and included targeting sectors where 'Muslims' were to be found. Mr Yekatom's instructions were understood by the elements to accept that Muslim civilians would be killed as a result of the fighting based on his elements not having been trained or instructed to apply the principle of distinction during combat and bearing strong anti-Muslim sentiment and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka.

2407. The Prosecution submits that, for the Bangui Attack, Mr Yekatom and his group moved from Kalangoi to Gbangba, and then to Projet, located near the Bangui Airport, on 4 December 2013.⁶⁰⁹⁵ It submits that many Anti-Balaka, including those from Bossangoa, Bossembélé, Yaloké, and Boy-Rabe, had gathered at Projet.⁶⁰⁹⁶ The Prosecution alleges that Mr Yekatom agreed with the leaders of other Anti-Balaka groups, including 'Konate' and Andjilo, on how they would carry out the attack; and that this was in conjunction with Maxime Mokom.⁶⁰⁹⁷ The Prosecution alleges that Mr Yekatom was in contact with 'M[okom], K[onaté] and N[gremangou]' in the days leading up to the attack and also in communication with Ngremangou during its execution.⁶⁰⁹⁸

2408. The Yekatom Defence submits that, at the end of November 2013, Mr Yekatom was contacted by Ngremangou, 'who requested that he assist the latter and a handful of Bangui-based FACA who planned to attack the Seleka in PK5 from their position in Boeing'.⁶⁰⁹⁹ It argues that, Mr Yekatom, 'duty-bound to accede' to this request, left the bush with 'approximately 20' elements from his group 'for the sole purpose of combatting the Seleka in Bangui'.⁶¹⁰⁰

⁶¹⁰⁰ Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 355.

2409. In light of the above, the Chamber has first assessed the advance of Mr Yekatom's group before the Bangui Attack, to later assess whether it may have been in coordination with other groups that were circling Bangui at the time.

2410. In its findings below, the Chamber has relied on P-1339's firsthand account as a 'reserve element' in Mr Yekatom's group at the time,⁶¹⁰¹ as well as the evidence provided by Brice Emotion Namsio, P-0884, P-0889 and audio-visual evidence.

i. Mr Yekatom's presence in Zongo and contacts with Maxime Mokom 2411. The evidence shows that, at some point during the Seleka regime, Mr Yekatom crossed over to Zongo where he remained until the latter half of 2013.⁶¹⁰² The Chamber has regard to a video showing Mr Yekatom in a military uniform talking to the camera explaining how he came to start 'their movement':⁶¹⁰³

[...] j'étais parti en banque pour aller prendre mon salaire, et il m'avait arrêté, et j'avais pris fuite pour traverser à Z[ongo]. [...] Et c'est de là-bas qu'on avait des idées de démarrer notre mouvement, par rapport à l'exaction des militaires.⁶¹⁰⁴

2412. Mr Yekatom, asked if the 'movement' began in Zaire, said that it began 'here', in the CAR.⁶¹⁰⁵ Mr Yekatom explained that, in his group, there were majority military and some young recruits that had been chased away by Michel Djotodia.⁶¹⁰⁶

⁶¹⁰¹ The Chamber notes that while the Yekatom Defence does not contest that P-1339 was a member of Mr Yekatom's group, it contests P-1339's credibility and the reliability of his evidence (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Conf-Corr, paras 106-135). In this regard, the Chamber recalls its assessment of P-1339's overall credibility and notes that it generally found P-1339 reliable on the Bangui Attack (see paragraphs 330330-337). To the extent that there were specific contradictions or inconsistencies in his account, the Chamber has addressed them herein. The Chamber further notes that P-2475 also claimed to have been part of Mr Yekatom's group and participating in the Bangui Attack with them. The Chamber found P-2475 unreliable and has not considered his evidence on the Bangui Attack (see paragraphs 506-520 above).

2413.P-0884 knew that Mr Yekatom was in Zongo and had been detained and subsequently released, after which he crossed over to the CAR and met up with his comrades in arms, following which they began to organise themselves.⁶¹⁰⁷ Vivien Beina recalled his brother, Habib Beina, was also in Zongo at the same time and joined Mr Yekatom's group because he wanted to fight the Seleka,⁶¹⁰⁸ as was Cœur de Lion.⁶¹⁰⁹ The witness said that members of Mr Yekatom's group crossed and became 'committed together with their brothers in arms' and some civilians, and 'reorganised themselves' to fight the Seleka.⁶¹¹⁰

2414.The Prosecution submits that Maxime Mokom liaised with Mr Yekatom regarding the deployment of the latter's elements from Gbangba to Projet in preparation for the Bangui Attack, pointing, inter alia, to CDR showing 'at least 25 contacts between 25 November 2013 and 4 December 2013'.⁶¹¹¹

2415.The testimonial evidence suggests that while witnesses that were in Zongo recall having heard Mr Yekatom's name there, they did not know if there was direct contact between him and Maxime Mokom when they were both in Zongo.

2416.P-1339 recalled meeting Mr Yekatom and Bodios in Zongo.⁶¹¹² P-1339 also met Maxime Mokom in Zongo and knew that Maxime Mokom had a meeting with 'the soldiers' creating a plan to go back to the CAR and to 'meet up behind the mountain and take their vengeance'.⁶¹¹³ P-1339 said that it was only after he got back to CAR and 'met up in the bush' that they 'started to prepare the plan'.⁶¹¹⁴ P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom crossed over to the CAR and set up operations in the bush.⁶¹¹⁵ P-1339 said that it was Bodios that told him about Mr Yekatom setting up in the bush.⁶¹¹⁶

2417. P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom and Maxime Mokom had been in touch before the former crossed over to the CAR but did not know what they had talked about.⁶¹¹⁷

2418. The Chamber accepts P-1339's evidence that Mr Yekatom's group was arming in November 2013 prior to the Bangui Attack, referring to two occasions at which members of Mr Yekatom's group received weapons prior to the Bangui Attack.⁶¹¹⁸

2419. P-2232, who was in Zongo himself, recalled Mr Yekatom and Habib Beina being there.⁶¹¹⁹ The Chamber has considered P-2232's source of knowledge when assessing his evidence concerning the link between Maxime Mokom and Mr Yekatom. P-2232 was not aware of a link or a relationship between Maxime Mokom and Mr Yekatom prior to their time in Zongo but acknowledged that they were both 'liberators', supporting François Bozizé when he took power in 2003.⁶¹²⁰ At the time, P-2232 did not know Mr Yekatom, who was constantly with Cœur de Lion and 'Satan', and so it was not possible for P-2232 to know with whom Mr Yekatom discussed.⁶¹²¹ P-2232 heard afterwards from Maxime Mokom that Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion, and Satan had left Zongo through Libenge to Mongoumba, and

The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's arguments that P-1339's testimony on the 'procurement of weapons was fraught with contradictions that he was unable to reconcile', 'strongly' indicating that P-1339 'fabricated this portion of his account to such an extent that the Chamber cannot rely on it to support any material findings' (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 129). Having assessed P-1339's testimony holistically in light of the purported inconsistencies raised by the Yekatom Defence in court, the Chamber considers that P-1339 appeared to be contradicting himself on the number of trips, persons who accompanied him, how the weapons were paid for, and when they were obtained. These inconsistencies were minor and, in any event, not such that rendered his account on this aspect wholly unreliable. The Chamber found P-1339's account that these trips to procure weapons indeed took place before 5 December 2013, involved members of Mr Yekatom's group, and resulted in weapons being obtained for the group, which he unequivocally maintained in court, credible.

he later heard that they were in Mongoumba and from there went to Boeing behind the airport.⁶¹²²

2420. Thierry Tribunal Ndokobanda said that Mr Yekatom came to Zongo for ‘three or four days’, after which he heard that the latter had appeared at Mbaïki and Mongoumba forming a group.⁶¹²³ The witness did not know more of Mr Yekatom’s activities or who he was in contact with in Zongo; and stated that Maxime Mokom never mentioned that they were in contact.⁶¹²⁴

2421. P-0884 denied discussing what Mr Yekatom was doing with Maxime Mokom and said that Maxime Mokom never talked to him about Mr Yekatom; according to P-0884, Maxime Mokom was at the origin of Mr Yekatom’s arrest by the Congolese authorities,⁶¹²⁵ and from what P-0884 got to know later, there was a misunderstanding between Mr Yekatom and Maxime Mokom.⁶¹²⁶ P-0884 said it was clear that Maxime Mokom and Mr Yekatom were both in Zongo and knew each other ‘very well’.⁶¹²⁷

2422. P-0889 stated that he only found out about Mr Yekatom after the Bangui Attack.⁶¹²⁸ P-0889 said that before the Bangui Attack, he ‘never’ saw Mr Yekatom with Maxime Mokom, nor did he hear them talk to each other.⁶¹²⁹ P-0889 said that he himself only met Mr Yekatom when the latter started his political career; P-0889 said that he first heard about Mr Yekatom in the context of overhearing Maxime Mokom talking to ‘Ngoyasse Beorofe’ who was with Mr Yekatom and who would report to Maxime Mokom about Mr Yekatom’s location.⁶¹³⁰ P-0889 recalled hearing Maxime Mokom asking ‘Ngoyasse Beorofe’ about Mr Yekatom’s position before 5 December 2013 and whether Mr Yekatom ‘will attack’.⁶¹³¹

2423. P-0889 stated that Maxime Mokom would call ‘Beorofei Sylvain, Ngoyasse’ who would report about Mr Yekatom’s location and movement of his elements; according to what P-0889 heard, Ngoyasse informed Maxime Mokom that Mr Yekatom had left to go to Yamwara with a majority of his elements because he did not want to follow Mokom’s orders, and then left Yamwara to go the PK9-Mbaïki axis.⁶¹³² P-0889 also stated that a few days before the Bangui Attack, Ngoyasse informed Maxime Mokom that Mr Yekatom was refusing to attack.⁶¹³³ In court, P-0889 testified that Maxime Mokom asked people to help out in other villages and Florent Kema refused, just like Mr Yekatom ‘would refuse’.⁶¹³⁴

2425. Therefore, while Mr Yekatom also crossed over from Zongo, like some of the other elements discussed above,⁶¹³⁶ the Chamber cannot conclude that it was on Maxime Mokom’s instruction or otherwise facilitated by him. The Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom and Maxime Mokom may have been in contact during their time prior to the Bangui Attack. While the Chamber notes the Prosecution argument concerning the CDR between the numbers attributed to Mr Yekatom and Maxime Mokom, it cannot conclude anything about the actual contents of these calls and whether any exchanges indeed took place.

2426. The Chamber also considers that Mr Yekatom’s return to the CAR, grouping in locations close to Bangui, and arming prior to the Bangui Attack is similar to many other FACA members, some of whom have testified.⁶¹³⁷ Based on the evidence discussed above, the Chamber also considers that Maxime Mokom was receiving reports about Mr Yekatom's actions prior to the Bangui Attack.

ii. Mr Yekatom's instructions to the elements in Gbangba

2427. The evidence shows that, after having crossed over from Zongo, Mr Yekatom established a base in Gbangba in the CAR.⁶¹³⁸

2428. Witnesses who were not in Mr Yekatom's group at the time, testified generally knowing about Mr Yekatom's move from Zongo to Bangui through the bush. In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-0884 only saw Mr Yekatom around 5 December 2013,⁶¹³⁹ and said that before that day, word was going around about Mr Yekatom's 'return'; in December 2013, P-0884 got to see and know Mr Yekatom and to understand that he was the one who had created the group around Pissa in a bid to move 'on Bangui'.⁶¹⁴⁰ P-2232 thought that Mr Yekatom crossed over from Zongo and began fighting in smaller villages before reaching Bangui, where he set himself up behind the airport in the Boeing neighbourhood.⁶¹⁴¹ From his interactions with Mr Yekatom, P-0954 seemed to think that Mr Yekatom had four firearms in his house in Cattin, 'started attacking Muslims in small villages' and took weapons from them, which was his way to grow.⁶¹⁴²

2429. In audio-visual evidence before the Chamber, Mr Yekatom said that he had been in the bush for approximately seven months.⁶¹⁴³ In another video, Mr Yekatom explained that he had gathered around '1,500' elements, a majority of them trained military that Michel Djotodia did not want to work with and that could not stay just like this.⁶¹⁴⁴

2430. Further, Mr Yekatom is seen in a video explaining that it was from 'this location' that they 'departed for action', pointing out the bases, training and sleeping locations, referring to military training and also preparing and training the youth.⁶¹⁴⁵ P-1339, who was a civilian that joined Mr Yekatom's group in Kalangoi,⁶¹⁴⁶ stayed in the group when they were in Gbangba,⁶¹⁴⁷ and recognised the location in this video as Gbangba.⁶¹⁴⁸ P-1339 did not know the date on which this video was shot but recognised 'Habib, Ouandjio and Momokama', apart from Mr Yekatom.⁶¹⁴⁹

2431. In this video, Mr Yekatom refers to a first, second and third base, and P-1339 commented on this saying that these were all in Gbangba, and that gradually elements joined them in the group and ultimately, they 'ended up with several bases'.⁶¹⁵⁰

2432. Evidence shows that elements in Mr Yekatom's group were trained during their stay in the bush. P-1339 said that the soldiers among them would show the others how to use weapons and each section head would train the elements under their command.⁶¹⁵¹ P-1339 himself was similarly trained.⁶¹⁵² P-1339 said that they had two weapons that were used for training, a rifle and a 'Kalashnikov with a folding butt'.⁶¹⁵³

The Chamber also considered P-1339's explanation that he was in a place called the 'Kalangoi forest' and that there are villages of the same name on both sides of the border between the DRC and the CAR (see P-1339: T-160, p. 41, line 25 – p. 42, line 9). The Chamber reiterates that there is no indication on the record of when these videos were filmed. However, the Chamber has assessed these videos together, in light of what Mr Yekatom said in a related video that this was the 'location' from which they 'departed for action'. The Chamber further notes that some of these videos show Cœur de Lion pointing out the various parts of the base with thatched huts and shelters in the bush (see Video, CAR-OTP-2065-0951; Transcript, CAR-OTP-2122-2297, at 2299, lines 3-24; see also Transcript, CAR-OTP-2107-1543, at 1544, lines 5-6).

2434. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom's group was specifically ordered and trained to distinguish between combatants and civilians/non-combatants in their operations, including while the group was based in Boeing.⁶¹⁵⁴

2435. On the contrary, the Chamber notes that while P-1339 acknowledged that he did not know what the purpose of the training was, he himself noted, in the same vein, that people that joined the group were motivated by revenge, and even the leaders who commanded the troops had the 'same desire for revenge'.⁶¹⁵⁵

2436. P-1339, when shown his prior statement, recalled and accepted that Cœur de Lion, Habib Beina, Max Maidanda, Bodios Brawe were among those that trained elements in the bush.⁶¹⁵⁶

2437. P-1339 agreed that, as part of the training, they would receive the instruction to 'kill all Muslims because all Muslims were Seleka'.⁶¹⁵⁷ As regards instructions on the treatment of the 'enemy', P-1339 said that the instruction was to kill the enemy, and if 'Muslims' were captured, they could not 'get away', they would be 'executed right there on the spot'; when the elements were able to catch a Muslim or a Seleka, they could not 'just let him go', they would 'neutralise him', meaning 'take him somewhere and kill him'.⁶¹⁵⁸ P-1339 added that 'if there was no witness, they would kill them right there and there would be no accounting for that to anyone'.⁶¹⁵⁹ P-1339 said that these instructions would come from Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion, and Habib Beina.⁶¹⁶⁰

⁶¹⁶⁰ P-1339: T-152, p. 11, line 18 – p. 12, line 6.

2438.P-1339 said that in the afternoon of 4 December 2013, while based in Gbangba, P-1339 gathered all the elements following Mr Yekatom's order.⁶¹⁶¹ At this gathering, Mr Yekatom gave a speech in the presence of Habib Beina and Cœur de Lion,⁶¹⁶² and ordered elements to 'cross over'.⁶¹⁶³ P-1339 went to the toilet when the speech was being given and therefore appeared to have heard only parts of it,⁶¹⁶⁴ and joined the group before they crossed over.⁶¹⁶⁵

2439.P-1339 said that 'they' (referring to the leaders) informed them that on the following day they would leave to head towards Bangui, and they would 'fight the Seleka elements' and 'fight the Muslims'.⁶¹⁶⁶ P-1339 said that they were also told to take away all the mobile phones of the elements so that they could not alert their relatives in the various neighbourhoods.⁶¹⁶⁷

2440.As regards the remaining part of Mr Yekatom's speech, the Chamber notes that P-1339 clarified his evidence insofar as it concerned (i) the destruction of Muslim property; and (ii) treatment of Muslim women and children. As discussed below, P-1339 eventually maintained in court what he had said in his statement.

2441.P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom told the elements to destroy the houses of the Muslims, without providing any reasons for it,⁶¹⁶⁸ and indicated that an example of this was the destruction of the mosques, including in Boeing, Boy-Rabe, Combattant and Kina.⁶¹⁶⁹ When confronted with his previous statement according to which they had not received the order to attack schools or clinics, P-1339 explained that Mr Yekatom told them that these belonged to the

The Chamber notes P-1339's testimony that 'he said to me that I should gather the elements together', 'he asked me to [...] gather the entire section, all the men' and '[h]e asked me to gather all the elements that I did'. The Chamber considers that from the context and overall content of his testimony it is clear that P-1339 was referring to Mr Yekatom (e.g. referring to the same person, P-1339 also indicated that '[h]is deputy came, him and Habib were present' (see T-152, p. 35, line 2)). people of the CAR and that they should not be destroyed.⁶¹⁷⁰ P-1339 also seemed to understand that Yamwara was ‘protected’.⁶¹⁷¹

2442. P-1339 had initially testified that Mr Yekatom said that when they encountered ‘the Seleka, the Muslims, be it a woman, a child’, they had to kill them.⁶¹⁷² After being confronted with his previous statement according to which ‘Rombhot didn’t say anything specifically regarding Muslim women’,⁶¹⁷³ P-1339 indicated that it would be ‘untrue’ to say that Mr Yekatom did not give the order to kill Muslim women because of the instructions he gave about the Seleka and because the bullets they were shooting could have struck Muslim women.⁶¹⁷⁴

2443. P-1339 clarified that Mr Yekatom gave them the following orders: ‘When you are fighting an enemy, if that enemy has a weapon and the enemy has his relatives with him, what’s for sure is that it will cause other damage. Other people might be killed’, and ‘If you meet any Seleka, kill them’.⁶¹⁷⁵

2444. P-1339, asked specifically in relation to his previous statement concerning Muslim women,⁶¹⁷⁶ recited Mr Yekatom’s instruction as he remembered it: ‘Listen, if you attack Muslims, don’t touch the women or the children. It’s the Muslims who are shooting, not the women’.⁶¹⁷⁷ P-1339 said that he did not see elements talking about harming women in front of Mr Yekatom during his time with the group.⁶¹⁷⁸ As per P-1339, no other instructions were given after they left the bush.⁶¹⁷⁹

2445. The Chamber also considered that P-1339 said that the goal of Mr Yekatom’s group was to attack KM5 but also said that ‘in fact, I have always said that the goal of the Anti-Balaka was to target those sectors where Muslims were to be found’.⁶¹⁸⁰ In the Chamber’s view, P-

1339, a civilian element in Mr Yekatom's group, continued to conflate the Seleka with the Muslims in how he understood Mr Yekatom's instructions.

2446. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's instructions to his elements were to fight the Seleka and that it included targeting sectors where 'Muslims' were to be found. The Chamber also finds that Mr Yekatom's instructions were understood by the elements to accept that Muslim civilians would be killed as a result of the fighting. Prominently, Mr Yekatom did not instruct his elements to refrain from attacking civilians or civilian property.

2447. Noting the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom was aware of how his elements would interpret his instructions to 'target those sectors where Muslims were to be found' and not restrict their attack to the Seleka. Mr Yekatom was aware that his instructions would be understood as also targeting Muslim civilians. The Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom was aware of the fact that his elements had not been trained in or instructed to apply the principle of distinction when engaging in combat. Accordingly, Mr Yekatom was aware that his elements would not apply the principle of distinction during combat.

2448. In addition to the above, there is audio-visual evidence showing that elements of Mr Yekatom's group expressed anti-Muslim sentiments and conflated the Seleka and Djotodia with Muslims. The Chamber recalls that there is no evidence on the record indicating the date on which these videos were shot. Nonetheless, the Chamber has assessed this material together with what witnesses have said about them.

2449. In one video, an element in Mr Yekatom's group identified as Habib Beina is in the bush and talking to the camera, saying that the Seleka are Chadian, Sudanese, and Janjaweed and that Idriss Deby cannot 'command' until 'here', and that if Michel Djotodia does not step down, there will be a 'genocide' in the CAR.⁶¹⁸¹

⁶¹⁸¹ Video, CAR-OTP-2065-0436, at 00:00:00-00:00:52; Transcript, CAR-OTP-2107-1539, at 1540, lines 10-15. P-1339 recognised the person talking to the camera as Habib Beina but did not recognise the location (see P-1339: T-155, p. 54, line 16 – p. 56, line 23; see also P-0888: T-120, p. 68, line 6 - p. 70, line 23; P-1193: T-124, p. 43, line 19 – p. 45, line 24).

2450. In a video showing Max Maidanda and other elements claiming to be FACA in a location identified by P-1339 as Projet, Max Maidanda introduces himself and says he wants Michel Djotodia to leave and that he does not want to see Muslims.⁶¹⁸² In another related video in what appears to be the same location as the earlier video, Max Maidanda shows a ‘furogene’ to the camera saying that this was for throwing at Muslims who were in their houses so that they would leave and then ‘we kill them when they leave, even the little children, because we have suffered a lot and we are all soldiers’.⁶¹⁸³

2451. Having regard to this evidence in light of the Yekatom Defence’s arguments,⁶¹⁸⁴ the Chamber considers that the words used by elements in Mr Yekatom’s group clearly show Habib Beina and Max Maidanda openly expressing anti-Muslim sentiment. The Chamber further notes the words and actions of Bodios aka Bojos and Cœur de Lion in the context of an interrogation and treatment of a captured ‘Muslim’ man after the Bangui Attack.⁶¹⁸⁵ The Chamber recalls P-1339’s evidence that all four of these individuals were among those training civilians in the bush,⁶¹⁸⁶ and that certain people who joined the group were

The Chamber further notes that Stephane Chrisostome Dawili agreed that Max Maidanda was one of the chiefs who provided training to other elements in Mr Yekatom’s group; asked if he had ever heard Maidanda say that as a soldier he was willing to kill even small children, Stephane Chrisostome Dawili said that those were Maidanda’s ‘own thoughts’ and that he had never heard him say that (P-1647: T-194, p. 50, lines 12-19). The witness agreed that he had heard other elements say similar things about civilians, and pointed out that, there were elements who did their job well, and others who had been smoking weed and would ‘speak in their own way’; the witness said that if an element spoke this way, they had to be ‘educated’ and ‘criticised’ and if they acted on these words ‘they would have to be sanctioned’ by the leader or the ‘head of the section’; he added that sometimes elements did things that were not okay and Mr Yekatom would have them punished by wetting or thrashing them (P-1647: T-194, p. 50, line 20 – p. 51, line 16).

⁶¹⁸³ Video, CAR-OTP-2065-3188, at 00:00:00-00:01:08; Translation, CAR-OTP-2107-1547, at 1548, lines 6-18. The Chamber notes that P-1193 denied knowing the person, place, or hearing Mr Yekatom’s group members talking about using smoke guns to drive out Muslims (see P-1193: T-124, p. 47, line 16 – p. 48, line 14). The Chamber further notes that P-1839 agreed that she was surprised to hear the words in this video and agreed that she did hear words ‘from the mouths of [Mr Yekatom], Habib Beina, Alkanto, and Cœur de Lion’ about killing Muslims but ‘not children’ (see P-1839: T-174, p. 76, line 21 – p. 78, line 14). See also paragraphs 3092-3100 below; P-1786: T-197, p. 77, line 10 – p. 79, line 15.

motivated by revenge.⁶¹⁸⁷ The Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom was aware of the presence of civilian youth in his group prior to the Bangui Attack.⁶¹⁸⁸

2452. In light of this, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom was aware that his elements, including long-standing and high-ranking FACA members in his group, would not distinguish between the Seleka and Muslim civilians during combat. The Chamber further concludes that Mr Yekatom was aware that FACA members of his group, particularly Cœur de Lion, Habib Beina, Max Maidanda and Bodios, who also trained civilian elements, bore strong anti-Muslim sentiments and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka. This extended to targeting Muslim civilians. The Chamber infers from the evidence elaborated here and elsewhere,⁶¹⁸⁹ that this sentiment permeated the remainder of his group.

2454. Having regard to this, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's instructions were understood by the elements to accept that Muslim civilians would be killed as a result of the fighting based on his elements not having been trained or instructed to apply the principle of distinction during combat and bearing strong anti-Muslim sentiment and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka.

iii. Number and selection of elements

2455. The evidence suggests that, at the base in Gbangba, Mr Yekatom's group could have numbered over a thousand elements, specifically '1,500' in his own words, however, there are no reliable estimates as to the actual number in every stage.

2456. P-1339's testified about the number of elements that were gathered before their move to Gbangba and did not recall the exact number that moved from Gbangba to Projet. P-1339's estimates ranged from about 3,000⁶¹⁹¹ to a hundred.⁶¹⁹² P-1339 maintained that, in any event, there were 'a lot' of them that left the bush,⁶¹⁹³ and that more elements joined them in later.⁶¹⁹⁴

2457. The majority of the elements in the group at the Gbangba base were civilians.⁶¹⁹⁵ Before leaving for Projet, Mr Yekatom selected a number of 'combatants' because, according to P-1339, there were not enough weapons for all of them.⁶¹⁹⁶ P-1339 also indicated that very few of them had firearms.⁶¹⁹⁷

2458. Having regard to the above and noting that P-1339 did not recall how many elements were selected and went to Projet, the Chamber is unable to enter a conclusion on the number of elements in Mr Yekatom's group that participated in the Bangui Attack.

⁶¹⁹¹ P-1339: T-159, p. 35, lines 1-11. The Chamber notes that P-1339's evidence that there were about 3,000 elements in Gbangba at the time is consistent with his testimony according to which he estimated that there were 3,000 elements '[t]owards the end' (see P-1339: T-151, p. 38, lines 16-19).

⁶¹⁹³ P-1339: T-152, p. 76, lines 1-11.

⁶¹⁹⁴ P-1339: T-159, p. 49, line 18 – p. 50, line 3. The Chamber has also considered his testimony concerning the figure of 1,000 that appeared in his notebook, together with the figure in his prior statement that '611' elements having fireweapons. P-1339 said that he did not remember exactly and said that what he noted down in his notebook 'could be correct' and that some elements did have fire weapons, and some did not (see P-1339: T-152, p. 76, lines 20-25; T-154, p. 16, line 12 – p. 18, line 10; T-159, p. 49, line 18 – p. 52, line 17). The Chamber did not consider it necessary for P-1339 to recall all details and finds that his testimony concerning these numbers was forthcoming.

iv. Cross-over from Gbangba and arrival close to Bangui airport

2459.P-1339 said that they frisked all the elements and took away their mobile phones so that they could not alert their relatives in the various neighbourhoods and later Mr Yekatom informed the troops that the following day, they would head ‘towards Bangui’.⁶¹⁹⁸

2460.P-1339 testified that after the elements were selected, they set up a column headed by ‘Rambo’, who was followed by ‘Beina’ and ‘the other one’,⁶¹⁹⁹ with Cœur de Lion closing the group.⁶²⁰⁰ The column, which was very long, left Gbangba for Projet on 4 December 2013 at 16:00.⁶²⁰¹

2461.P-1339 explained that to cross over, there was a canoe that could carry 50 people at a time, as well as a small canoe in which ‘Ouandjio’, Mr Yekatom, ‘Habib’ and other people were.⁶²⁰² P-1339 also indicated that there was a person in Gbangba paddling the canoe and helping others to cross over.⁶²⁰³

2462.P-1339 indicated that on the evening of 4 December 2013, they arrived through the bush at a place called Projet.⁶²⁰⁴ P-1339 identified Projet in a video.⁶²⁰⁵ In relation to the M’Poko airport in Bangui, P-1339 indicated that Projet was less than one kilometre away from the ⁶²⁰³ P-1339: T-159, p. 45, line 19 – p. 46, line 5. The Chamber has considered P-1339’s testimony about the name of the boat that was used and finds the possible inconsistencies immaterial (see P-1339: T-159, p. 46, line 11 – p. 47, line 1; T-160, p. 20, line 16 – p. 21, line 4).

Muslim cemetery next to the airport.⁶²⁰⁶ P-1339 marked Gbangba and Projet on a map in court, and the latter appears in an area called Bossouambo east of the M’Poko airport.⁶²⁰⁷

2463.P-0884 said that at Projet ‘people were coming in from all directions’ and it was ‘one of the biggest neighbourhoods in Boeing’ and those that were arriving had filled up the entire sector.⁶²⁰⁸

2464.P-1339 said that once they reached Projet, ‘certain chiefs’ contacted Mr Yekatom,⁶²⁰⁹ they met with ‘combatants’ from Combattant and from other ‘regions’, he noticed that the soldiers were happy to see each other again and talked to each other.⁶²¹⁰

v. Preparations for the attack

2465.P-1339’s evidence shows that Mr Yekatom’s group was preparing for participating in an upcoming attack by walking to and from the market in Boeing the night before the attack.

2466.P-1339 said that during the night of 4 December 2013, ‘Rombhot’ and ‘Ouandjio’ asked him to show them ‘the precise geographic location of the [Boeing] market so that [they] could prepare or launch the attack’.⁶²¹¹ P-1339 said that they walked in the dark all the way to the Boeing Market, where there were shops belonging to Muslims on the right-hand side, and a small street between the market and these shops.⁶²¹² P-1339 said that they observed the area and subsequently walked back to Projet,⁶²¹³ noting that some shops were open and some already closed and that many shopkeepers were already asleep at that time.⁶²¹⁴

P-0884, who knew the Boeing area very well having grown up there, said that ‘Proget’ is located in Boeing ‘behind the Muslim cemetery’ (see P-0884: T-055, p. 75, line 23 – p. 76, line 4; T-056, p. 22, lines 16-23, p. 23, lines 5-9).

⁶²¹⁴ P-1339: T-154, p. 53, lines 1-9.

2467. The Chamber notes that P-1339 provided evidence concerning arm bands that were purportedly distributed to the elements in Mr Yekatom's group prior to the Bangui Attack.⁶²¹⁵ P-1339 said that these armbands allowed them to recognise one another and they were placed either on the right arm or on the forehead and this was a 'sign' to identify an 'Anti-Balaka element'.⁶²¹⁶ P-1339 added that the elements of Boeing and Cattin wore white armbands whereas elements of 'Combattant' wore red armbands.⁶²¹⁷

2468. P-1339 said that in the morning of 5 December 2013, at dawn, 'other people' who came from the provinces and joined the group in Projet.⁶²¹⁸ P-1339 said that this included two groups of elements coming from Bossangoa, one led by Modibo and another by Sylvestre Yagouzou.⁶²¹⁹

2469. P-1339 said that 'Modibo', whom he got to know on 5 December 2013, introduced himself as marabout when he arrived to Projet with his elements and was responsible for selling the fetishes.⁶²²⁰ P-1339 recognised him in a list of elements from Gobere as Nganafio Honoré, and said that he had brought elements from Bossangoa to Bangui and was the chief of his company.⁶²²¹ P-1339 said that 'Modibo' had many elements with him but could not say the exact number.⁶²²²

2470. As regards Sylvestre Yagouzou, P-1339 said that he came from Bossangoa and that he was 'always' with Mr Yekatom and that they used to talk together.⁶²²³

2471. P-1339 recognised both ‘Modibo’ and Sylvestre Yagouzou in a video.⁶²²⁴

2472. The Chamber notes that the dates on when these set of videos were taken are not on the record; the Chamber has nonetheless considered them to identify individuals and their comportment in relation to one another. In this vein, the Chamber has assessed other audio-visual evidence in which Sylvestre Yagouzou appears together with Mr Yekatom,⁶²²⁵ and which was also shown to P-1339.

2473. P-1339 recognised Sylvestre Yagouzou in this video in which the latter is speaking to Mr Yekatom in Projet.⁶²²⁶ In particular, the Chamber notes that Sylvestre Yagouzou is addressing elements, referring to being connected with the ‘grand chef’ who is in ‘quartier B[oy-Rabe]’ and instructing the elements not to pillage.⁶²²⁷ Mr Yekatom interrupts and says:

Dis, ça suffit comme cela ; il faut chercher à les disperser rapidement ...ça ne sert à rien de faire un long discours. [...] ce que nous devons faire ici est de fouiller les téléphones ; nous verrons le reste des choses plus tard. Au moment du lancement des opérations, il y aura des décisions à prendre ... dis, attends, vous êtes des militaires, si on vous donne des ordres, il ne faut pas laisser les civils vous dominer, je vous dis la ⁶²²⁵ Video, CAR-OTP-2065-3208, at 00:00:00-00:03:37, in which Mr Yekatom is instructing the elements to be searched for mobile phones in a location that P-1339 recognised as Projet. See also Translation, CAR-OTP-2130-1138, at 1140, lines 33-34; Video, CAR-OTP-2065-3212; Translation, CAR-OTP-2127-3662. The Chamber has also considered Video, CAR-OTP-2065-2544, at 00:00:00-00:02:03; Translation, CAR-OTP-2127-3649, at 3651, lines 10-37, in which Mr Yekatom and Sylvestre Yagouzou are shown talking to each other. Mr Yekatom refers to Sylvestre Yagouzou as ‘Coordo’ and is looking for someone in Boeing who would bring him a rocket from Ombia (‘j’ai l’intention de trouver quelqu’un à Boeing qui pourra nous ramener ...eeeeuuuh l’autre-là...la roquette qui se trouve au niveau d’Ombia’). This appears to be followed by Video, CAR-OTP-2065-2548, in which Sylvestre Yagouzou and Mr Yekatom are sharing a phone and having an exchange with someone on speaker. In the exchange, a reference is made to elements present in ‘quartier Gbaya’, ‘elements at Boy-Rabe’, procuring a rocket that Mr Yekatom says they need. Asked about the programme for the day by the journalist, Sylvestre Yagouzou and Mr Yekatom both indicate waiting for instructions before doing anything and do not say whose instruction (see Translation, CAR-OTP-2127-3653, at 3656, lines 35-68). This appears to be followed by Video, CAR-OTP-2065-2841, showing both Mr Yekatom and Sylvestre Yagouzou leaving. See also Video, CAR-OTP-2065-2392. The Chamber has considered the Yekatom Defence’s submissions concerning Videos, CAR-OTP-2065-2544, CAR-OTP-2065-2841, that these videos show that Mr Yekatom and Sylvestre Yagouzou are ‘not close’ and do not belong to the same group (see Annex A to Yekatom Defence Response to the “Prosecution’s Fourteenth Application for Submission of P-1819’s Evidence from the Bar Table”, ICC-01/14/01/18-2057-Conf, ICC-01/14-01/18-2233-Conf-AnxA, pp. 252-256 (CAR-OTP-2065-2544), pp. 248-249 (CAR-OTP-2065-2841)). The Chamber has further considered the Yekatom Defence’s arguments that the conversation in the former video ‘tends to show that the armament at the disposition of the group is quite limited as Mr Yekatom indicates they only have two rockets and are looking for a place that could have only four more’. The Chamber notes that these videos demonstrate coordinating activities, including about procurement of arms, between the two individuals and their respective groups, regardless of their arguable personal closeness or hierarchy.

franche vérité. D'accord ? [...] ...je préfère vous mettre au courant car je ne veux pas que quelqu'un foute la merde dans mon travail. C'est ce que je vous dis ; nous devons donner ces instructions au moment du départ. Moi, je suis comme ça. Il y a certaines choses qu'on ne peut pas dire devant tout le monde car nous ne connaissons pas ce que tout le monde pense. [...]

2474. In this video, P-1339 also recognised 'Beorofei';⁶²²⁹ he said that the 'three persons' that Mr Yekatom relied upon were 'Yakouzou and Beorofei' and those were the people that P-1339 'knew well' and that Beorofei 'until today' is Maxime Mokom's 'deputy'.⁶²³⁰

OK? [...] ... I prefer to keep you updated because I don't want anyone causing trouble in my work. That's what I'm telling you; we have to give these instructions when it starts. That's the way I am, you see. There are some things we can't say in front of everyone because we don't know what everyone is thinking. Above all, we need to keep it short, and confiscate all the mobile phones; those who want to stay, let them stay; those who don't want to stay can go, and that's it [...] (addressing Sylvestre Yagouzou) As soldiers, we have duties to be performed, and let's perform them; if it's your level, you can do it. 2475. The Chamber notes other audio-visual evidence showing ‘Modibo’⁶²³¹ and Sylvestre Yagouzou,⁶²³² and the two together.⁶²³³ In particular, the Chamber notes that in one of the videos, Sylvestre Yagouzou is asked by a ‘sous-off’ over the phone if the former is in contact with ‘commandant, Mokom’, to which Yagouzou replies that he is in contact with the ‘commandants’, including Lieutenant Herve Ganazoui.⁶²³⁴ Sylvestre Yagouzou appears to be exchanging about a ‘strategy’, stating that ‘you will see, he will reassemble you and then tonight, you will leave to come join us, it is not far’ (Donc tu vas le voir, tu vas le voir, il vous rassemblera et puis cette nuit, vous allez partir pour venir nous rejoindre, ce n’est pas loin).⁶²³⁵ 2476. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence’s submissions concerning some of this audio-visual material. It argues that they show that the groups of ‘Nganafio’ and Sylvestre Yagouzou were ‘not part of Mr Yekatom’s group’.⁶²³⁶ Indeed, this was also P-1339’s impression, as discussed above. The Chamber, nonetheless, considers that not being part of the same group does not preclude coordination between these groups, nor does it preclude Mr Yekatom having authority also over these two groups. In the Chamber’s view, these videos, together with P-1339’s evidence, clearly show Mr Yekatom’s interacting and

The Chamber notes Sylvestre Yagouzou indicating in another video that he is in contact with elements in Boy-Rabe through telephone, noting that there are many elements in Bangui already, including military that have reunited and regrouped to fight the ‘savages’. He states that they are not here for killing Muslims, but it is because of their exactions that they are revolting. He adds that they will raise their weapons against those that will raise theirs (see Video, CAR-OTP-2065-2837; Translation, CAR-OTP-2122-7501, at 7502, lines 3-21).

sharing information with Sylvestre Yagouzou, as well as asserting authority over the latter and the latter's elements.

2477. P-1339 seemed to think that there were other groups too, but they did not have a name.⁶²³⁷

He said that in addition, there was also 'a group of soldiers who volunteered' and came with their own weapons.⁶²³⁸

P-1339 could not tell how many elements joined their group but confirmed that they were greater in number than the people in their group.⁶²⁴⁰ P-1339 said that he did not know before that they would meet other elements in Projet.⁶²⁴¹

2479. The Chamber notes that P-0884 was asked about an Anti-Balaka 'base' or 'grouping' in Projet around the time of the Bangui Attack, and said that people had arrived there from 'all directions' by foot, including from Bouca and Bossangoa.⁶²⁴²

vi. Launching the attack

2480. As regards the attack, P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom's group left Projet at 04:00 in the morning of 5 December 2013, when it was still dark.⁶²⁴³ P-1339 said that the elements with weapons were in the front, while those with sticks and machetes followed behind,⁶²⁴⁴ leaving Projet in the direction of Boeing to carry out the attack.⁶²⁴⁵

With regard to the latter list, the Chamber refers to its observations above (see paragraph 1134, footnote 3023 above).

The Chamber notes that P-1339 also agreed to a question stating that, in the notebook, he had indicated that the group left in the direction of Boeing at 06:00 on 5 December 2013 (see P-1339: T-154, p. 17, lines 14-24, p. 38, line 25 – p. 39, line 3).

2481.P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom had announced that, at dawn, he would give a signal to begin the attack by shooting into the air,⁶²⁴⁶ and when they were all lined up, Mr Yekatom moved slightly forward to shoot into the air, then moved back.⁶²⁴⁷ P-1339 recalled that this was at 06:00 and, following the shot, the people ‘on the first line’ ‘launched the attack’.⁶²⁴⁸

2482.P-1339 said that on the morning of the attack, the soldiers were communicating with military codes, using words such as ‘Alpha’ or ‘Tango’ which P-1339, who was not a soldier, did not understand.⁶²⁴⁹

2483.P-1339 recalled that there were ‘several attacks’ on 5 December 2013, including in Combattant, Boeing, and PK5, and said that Mr Yekatom’s elements were placed between the centre of Boeing ‘toward Cattin’; there were ‘Anti-Balaka’ mixed with soldiers in civilian clothes.⁶²⁵⁰

2484.In a video taken after the Bangui Attack, Mr Yekatom said that they had ‘encircled’ the airport and had retreated because of lack of ammunition; an unidentified interlocutor mentions in front of Mr Yekatom and Rodrigue Momokama having recuperated weapons from Camp Kassai.⁶²⁵¹

vii. Coordinating with other groups

2485.The Prosecution submits that Maxime Mokom was liaising with Ngremangou, Konaté and Mr Yekatom in coordinating the Bangui Attack, citing witness testimony, Facebook exchanges, and CDR.⁶²⁵² It submits that, in preparation for the Bangui Attack, ‘K[onaté], A[ndjilo], and [Mr] Y[ekatom]’ agreed on how they would carry out the attack, in conjunction with Maxime Mokom.⁶²⁵³ The Prosecution submits that Mr Yekatom was in contact with Maxime Mokom, Konaté and Ngremangou in the days leading up to the Bangui Attack, and was personally or through members of his group in communication with

Ngremangou during its execution.⁶²⁵⁴ The Prosecution points to CDR showing that Mr Yekatom and Ngremangou were in contact prior to and on the day of the Bangui Attack.⁶²⁵⁵

2486. As a member of Mr Yekatom's group at the time, P-1339 appeared to know of some communication with other groups based elsewhere in Bangui but did not have any further details. P-1339 said that he knew about another group that came from Boy-Rabe and that crossed Boy-Rabe to take up a position behind 'the assembly' and of other groups based in Ouango in Boy-Rabe and at the Cattin road.⁶²⁵⁶ P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom had a simple mobile phone when he communicated with people, but did not know or seek to know with whom he was speaking.⁶²⁵⁷ P-1339 said that it was only after 5 December 2013 that Mr Yekatom and 'Mokom' began to be in touch by phone.⁶²⁵⁸

2487. The Yekatom Defence argues that the lack of prior coordination is indicated by the 'array of misinformed claims' by many insider witnesses about the nature and timing of the operations of Mr Yekatom's group on that day as well the absence of any telephone contact between Mr Yekatom and 'alleged "anti-balaka" leaders' prior to 5 December 2013.⁶²⁵⁹

2488. Witnesses who were in other groups at the time seemed to have varying degrees of information about the existence and movements of Mr Yekatom's group. However, this evidence does not suggest to the Chamber that Mr Yekatom was not part of the coordinated attack on Bangui from the very outset.

2489. For example, P-2232 said that those who came from 'the other side set themselves up and coordinated their actions so that they could organise an attack' and that during that time, 'Dedane was in the bush' and 'came back and coordinated the attacks of 5 December'.⁶²⁶⁰ P-1521 said that he himself was not 'in contact with Boeing' before the Bangui Attack but was informed of them later.⁶²⁶¹ P-2269 said that he was in communication with Mr Yekatom from Gobere and the latter was going to take the route from Mbaïki to Bangui.⁶²⁶²

2490. P-1847, who was receiving information from Dedane, said that behind the airport, in the Boeing neighbourhood, in the surroundings of KM5, there was another point of attack.⁶²⁶³ P-1847 said that ‘W[enezoui]’ managed (pilotait) the operations in that location and that the Anti-Balaka in this zone were under his command.⁶²⁶⁴

2491. Jacob Mokpem-Bionli stated that ‘Rambo’ was the one who led the group from Ombella-M’Poko; and said that Brice Emotion was in contact with him and told the witness this.⁶²⁶⁵

2492. Brice Emotion Namsio suggested that, at the time of the preparations for the Bangui Attack on the evening of 4 December 2013, it had been decided that Mr Yekatom’s group would attack PK9 to KM5.⁶²⁶⁶ The witness said that the information he got from Konaté was that Mr Yekatom had many men under his command and would go to KM5 by going towards PK9, at the southeast exist of Bangui.⁶²⁶⁷ Brice Emotion Namsio explained that Mr Yekatom himself was not behind the hill but that Konaté and Mr Yekatom knew each other and they knew that each chief was in a particular location.⁶²⁶⁸

2493. Brice Emotion Namsio however did not know what happened at PK9 and KM5, while ‘Wenezoui’ could explain ‘everything that happened there’ because, according to the witness, he was the one working in ‘close collaboration’ with Mr Yekatom.⁶²⁶⁹ The witness, said that ‘Wenezoui’ told him that Mr Yekatom had ‘more than 2,000 men under his control’.⁶²⁷⁰

When asked, P-0992 clarified that he was talking about ‘the attack of 5 December’ and that ‘Emotion’ told him that ‘he had been with Rambo on the other side’ (see P-0992: T-092, p. 50, lines 10-24, p. 51, lines 8-24).

2494. Brice Emotion Namsio clarified that while he had heard talk of Mr Yekatom when he was in Zongo, he did not ‘physically’ know him at the time and only met him later during the meetings in Boeing where Sébastien Wenezoui was also present.⁶²⁷¹ The witness said that it was during his meetings in Boeing where ‘Wenezoui’ was present that he ‘noticed indeed that on the other side of Boeing there were Yekatom elements who were present’; Brice Emotion Namsio added that ‘Wenezoui’ also explained to them that indeed Mr Yekatom was ‘amongst them and he had many men with him as well’.⁶²⁷²

2495. Brice Emotion Namsio, asked if Konaté was in contact with Mr Yekatom, said that sometimes Konaté would call Mr Yekatom and that they had each other’s numbers.⁶²⁷³ As regards Maxime Mokom, the witness said that he did not know if Mr Yekatom called Maxime Mokom directly.⁶²⁷⁴

2496. When it was put to him that he would have made a mistake when testifying that Konaté spoke to Mr Yekatom from the hinterland, on the basis of CDR showing contacts well after the Bangui Attack, Brice Emotion Namsio said that on the eve of the attack, Konaté and Mr Yekatom called each other ‘relating to the structure of the attack’.⁶²⁷⁵

2497. The Chamber notes that Brice Emotion Namsio confirmed that he did not know what Mr Yekatom did on 5 December 2013, how many people he had or when they attacked, and that this was the reason he asked Wenezoui.⁶²⁷⁶ The witness was forthcoming in noting that they had been told that Mr Yekatom’s team attacked PK5 but that he was not a direct witness nor cross-checked this information.⁶²⁷⁷ The Chamber finds Brice Emotion Namsio’s testimony on this aspect credible and does not consider that the absence of CDR reflecting contacts between the respectively attributed numbers to show that no call took place.⁶²⁷⁸

⁶²⁷⁸ See also paragraphs 189-190 above. The Chamber further notes that a video taken purportedly after 5 December 2013 shows Mr Yekatom not calling Konaté himself but appears to be requesting one of his elements to do so (see Video, CAR-OTP-2065-2292, at 00:01:33-00:02:11; Translation, CAR-OTP-2127-3635, at 3638, lines 37-43). The 2498. As regards Brice Emotion Namsio's evidence concerning contact between Mr Yekatom and Konaté, the Chamber infers that information was shared between Mr Yekatom and Konaté, either directly or through interlocutors. Having regard to its conclusion concerning Konaté's role,⁶²⁷⁹ the Chamber is further persuaded that Mr Yekatom's group was coordinating actions with those that Konaté was communicating with.

2500. P-0889 stated that there was an attack in Boeing but that the elements there were small in number after Mr Yekatom had left to the Mbaïki axis with the majority of the elements.⁶²⁸¹ Therefore, the remaining elements, led by 'Beorofei Ngoyasse' and 'Honoré Modibo', launched an attack to join those in Boy-Rabe but they were prevented from doing so at KM5.⁶²⁸² During his testimony, P-0889 indicated that his knowledge on the split of the group and Mr Yekatom leaving to Yamwara was based on the information that he had received from Maxime Mokom.⁶²⁸³

2501. The Chamber also finds P-2602's and P-0306's ignorance about Mr Yekatom's group's actions immaterial. P-0306 said that he did not have any information relating to Mr Yekatom and so did not think that he should 'answer questions relating to that gentleman'.⁶²⁸⁴ P-0306 also said that he thought that Cattin was not a military or a Seleka base.⁶²⁸⁵ P-0306 nonetheless knew that Ngremangou was 'responsible' for Boeing.⁶²⁸⁶ P-2602 said that he knew of Mr Yekatom's rank in the FACA in 2007, but did not know anything else about him.⁶²⁸⁷ In any event, the Chamber notes that P-2602 was not present in Bangui that day, but participated in the Bossangoa Attack.⁶²⁸⁸

Chamber's conclusion that a call took place between Mr Yekatom and Konaté remains unaffected by the Yekatom Defence's submissions on this video, stating, inter alia, that Mr Yekatom is talking about 'the Bangui people versus him and his group' which shows 'a dissociation' between his group and the others (see Annex A to Yekatom Defence Response to the "Prosecution's Fourteenth Application for Submission of P-1819's Evidence from the Bar Table", ICC-01/14/01/18-2057-Conf, ICC-01/14-01/18-2233-Conf-AnxA, pp. 256-259). It also remains unaffected by the Yekatom Defence's submission that Brice Emotion Namsio's claims are inconsistent with this video, in which it is apparent that Mr Yekatom does not have Konaté's phone number (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 361).

2504. The Chamber received information from two witnesses who appeared to have called Mr Yekatom just after the Bangui Attack. The Chamber finds it telling that witnesses P-0876 and P-0954 called Mr Yekatom on the day of the attack to know what was happening.

2505. The Chamber recalls that, in court, P-0876 said that there were 'two main groups', the one which he went to meet on the other side, referring to the groups gathered on the hill, and the other which was behind the airport, which therefore, according to him, meant that they 'could not have known' each other.⁶²⁹¹

2506.P-0876, who heard gunshots in the morning of 5 December 2013⁶²⁹² and said he was not aware that the attack would take place,⁶²⁹³ called ‘les R[ombho]’ afterwards to ask if their group was involved in the incident, but they said that it was Konaté who ‘went out with the children’.⁶²⁹⁴ P-0876 seemed to think that the ‘Boeing group’, including Mr Yekatom, did not participate in the Bangui Attack.⁶²⁹⁵ P-0876 also said that ‘current did not pass’ between the group from ‘Boy-Rabe’ and that from ‘Boeing’.⁶²⁹⁶

2507.P-0954 said that on 5 December 2013, he called Mr Yekatom to ask him about the Bangui Attack and the latter told him that he received the order from Ngremangou and they did not ‘want to inform other people’.⁶²⁹⁷ P-0954 also indicated that while he was not in regular contact with Mr Yekatom, he called him that day because it was a ‘major attack’ and he knew that Mr Yekatom was in contact with the Anti-Balaka from the north.⁶²⁹⁸

2508.During his testimony, P-0954 recalled calling Mr Yekatom in the morning of 5 December 2013, when they heard the gunshots, and speaking directly to him.⁶²⁹⁹ Mr Yekatom told him that Ngremangou had sent elements to attack Camp Kassai.⁶³⁰⁰ Mr Yekatom also told him that after Ngremangou had asked him to send elements, he sent elements to join Ngremangou’s elements to bolster the other groups for the ‘Camp Kassai attack’.⁶³⁰¹ As per P-0954, Mr Yekatom also told him that Ngremangou asked that the former send his men to carry out the Bangui Attack.⁶³⁰²

what the evidence shows. Indeed, there are several indications in his testimony that he did not have the correct information about how the attack unfolded, which locations were involved, and what Ngremangou's instructions may have been.⁶³⁰⁴

2510. The Chamber notes that it was put to P-0954 that he never had a phone call with Mr Yekatom on the morning of 5 December 2013, pointing to the CDR reflecting no such call between the phone numbers attributed to Mr Yekatom or P-0954.⁶³⁰⁵ Significantly, the Chamber notes that P-0954 maintained that he spoke to 'Rambo' about the Bangui Attack,⁶³⁰⁶ and never claimed to have received correct information about it. In the view of the Chamber, the absence of CDRs did not create any doubt about the existence of this phone call or show that P-0954 lied about it. It recalls that the absence of CDRs on the case record do not per se exclude the possibility that the phone call in question took place.⁶³⁰⁷

2511. Further, neither P-0954 nor P-0876 claimed to or did indeed have correct information about Mr Yekatom's group. The Chamber recalls that P-0954 and P-0876 themselves did not participate in the attack and has also considered the limited perspective from which they were commenting on Mr Yekatom's actions in the Bangui Attack.

2512. The fact that these exchanges with P-0954 and P-0876 took place suggests to the Chamber that Mr Yekatom was not only aware of the broader operation but was also expected to be aware of it by the two aforementioned witnesses in relation to what had happened in Bangui on 5 December 2013.

2513. The Chamber now turns to the Yekatom Defence's submissions pointing to P-0884's evidence that it was he who informed Mr Yekatom that people had come from 'all over' including Bossangoa,⁶³⁰⁸ and that this lack of awareness was 'mutual' in that P-0884 also only learnt of Mr Yekatom's involvement after the Bangui Attack.⁶³⁰⁹

2515.The Chamber considered P-0884’s evidence credible but found that he distanced himself when it came to his own involvement in the Bangui Attack. The Chamber recalls that P-0884 said that Mr Yekatom was also ‘an Anti-Balaka’ but that he ‘operated differently’ and more in the Zongo area; and, in the beginning, ‘he was not with the other team’.⁶³¹² P-0884 said that after Mr Yekatom left Zongo, he started his ‘own movement’ and he called on his brothers in arms to create his own group.⁶³¹³ P-0884 said that he did not know what Mr Yekatom did before 5 December 2013.⁶³¹⁴

2516.P-0884 said that he met Mr Yekatom only on 5 December 2013, the day of the Bangui Attack, in Boeing, and Mr Yekatom said that ‘I don’t understand what’s going on. There’s total disorder’.⁶³¹⁵ P-0884 recalled meeting Mr Yekatom, Habib Beina, Dolway, and Cœur de Lion around noon on 5 December 2013 as there had ‘been a lull in the fighting’; they greeted each other but did not spend much time together.⁶³¹⁶ P-0884 said that they met near the Bangui M’Poko airport as Mr Yekatom’s elements were ‘stationed at Projet while others were at Yamwara’.⁶³¹⁷ P-0884 said that the fighting on 5 December 2013 was done by several groups and on that day, there were some kind of gathering or rallying around Projet.⁶³¹⁸ According to P-0884, the attacks were quite complex, and each leader was leading his own unit, so it was difficult to properly understand their strategy; all P-0884 knew was that

Mokom was the one who ‘coordinated operations’ and that people came from ‘everywhere in a disorderly fashion’.⁶³¹⁹

2517. P-0884, who knew Mr Yekatom very well before the events in question, said that people used to talk about what Mr Yekatom was doing before the Bangui Attack in terms of organising his elements, but it was only on 5 December 2013, when they met, that P-0884 realised that it was indeed Mr Yekatom that people were talking about.⁶³²⁰ The Chamber recalls that, at the time, P-0884 was living very close together with Ngremangou in the same district and they were ‘always together’, spending their days together before going to sleep.⁶³²¹

2519. The Yekatom Defence also submits that it cannot be assumed that Ngremangou would have shared information about the Bangui Attack with Mr Yekatom, given that Ngremangou was ‘not forthcoming or truthful’ about the details of the operation with Mr Yekatom or his group.⁶³²²

2520. The Chamber has further considered the Yekatom Defence’s argument that Mr Yekatom was operating on Ngremangou’s instructions together with the evidence received by it concerning Ngremangou.⁶³²³ This further reinforces the Chamber’s conclusion. It is clear that Ngremangou instructed Mr Yekatom and his group to advance to participate in the Bangui Attack. Whether and to what extent Ngremangou conveyed complete details about the ‘broader Operation’ to Mr Yekatom is immaterial insofar as it concerns Mr Yekatom’s responsibility for what unfolded during the attack.

2521. Having considered this, the Chamber's conclusions above and below do not rest on whether Mr Yekatom was aware of the movement of other groups or the level of detail he was made privy to before 5 December 2013 about such attacks.

2522. To ascertain whether there was coordination, the Chamber was not guided by a standard requiring perfect lines of communication between all levels, whether they be chiefs or elements, or requiring that information be shared democratically or fully across all groups. It was sufficient that these lines of communication existed and were used. The fact that information was being transmitted faithfully would have added to the Chamber's assessment. However, imperfect communication between chiefs and elements across different groups did not take away from the Chamber's conclusion that these groups were being coordinated in relation to the Bangui Attack.

viii. Conclusion

2523. Having regard to the evidence discussed thus far, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with other Anti-Balaka groups to participate in the Bangui Attack.

2525. The Chamber finds that the movement of Mr Yekatom's group in the bush, when superimposed onto those from other groups who proceeded towards Bangui along the same time frame, shows that this coordination had begun well before November 2013.

3. Attack on Boeing

i. Boeing Market

On the night of 4 December 2013, Mr Yekatom and some of his elements visited the market in Boeing to assess its precise geographical location and conduct reconnaissance. The same night, Mr Yekatom instructed his elements to target Seleka positions along the Boeing-Cattin-PK5 direction. These instructions encompassed attacking the Muslim traders at the market in Boeing before moving along the route to PK5.

In the early morning of 5 December 2013, Mr Yekatom launched the attack on Boeing by firing an automatic pistol in the air when his group reached the market in Boeing. The armed elements in the front continued and advanced together and fired at the Muslim traders who were present there. During this time, Mr Yekatom's elements shot in all directions. Those that were inside the shops fled. Mr Yekatom's group attacked the market in Boeing during their advance towards PK5 following Mr Yekatom's orders.

2526. The Prosecution submits that Mr Yekatom's group attacked Boeing and Cattin and their goal was to advance towards PK5, the predominantly Muslim neighbourhood.⁶³²⁴ The Prosecution submits that during Mr Yekatom's group's attack on the Boeing Market, they killed 'at least seven Muslim traders', who were not fighters and who were not actively taking part in hostilities.⁶³²⁵ This included 'Hassan', who was the delegate of the Muslim traders, his brother 'Abrar Babakar', and traders named 'Ousman, Moussa, and Saleh'.⁶³²⁶ It submits that the bodies of victims were transported on the same day to the Ali Babolo Mosque in PK5.⁶³²⁷ In addition, it submits that some Muslim shopkeepers were injured while others managed to flee.⁶³²⁸

2527. The Yekatom Defence submits that there is no reliable evidence to show that Mr Yekatom's group was present at the Boeing Market on 5 December 2013, let alone involved in the deaths of the traders.⁶³²⁹ It argues that, in any event, P-1339's account does not support the Prosecution's case, as it suggests that the traders 'did not have IHL immunity' and the fighting at the Boeing Market was 'aimed solely at a military objective'.⁶³³⁰

2528. In what follows, the Chamber has first assessed Mr Yekatom's instructions to his elements about the purported goal of the attack, before turning to the allegations of the killings of the traders.

a. Reconnaissance and orders before 5 December 2013

2529. The Chamber recalls that on 4 December 2013, in preparation of the Bangui Attack, Mr Yekatom and some of his elements, including P-1339, went to Boeing Market.⁶³³¹ On the basis of these conclusions above and as set out below, on the night of 4 December 2013, Mr Yekatom and some of his elements visited the Boeing Market to assess its precise geographical location and conduct reconnaissance.

2530. The Chamber further recalls that P-1339 did not appear to have complete knowledge of what was discussed among the 'chiefs' on the eve of the Bangui Attack. P-1339 said that he was not nearby when the chiefs talked among themselves and did not hear these 'new instructions'.⁶³³² P-1339 recalled that the 'attack' started at 06:00 when they arrived in Bangui and 'the chief' gave a signal.⁶³³³

2531. The Chamber further recalls that P-1339 said that when they left the bush, it was 'Rombhot' who gave the instruction to 'attack the Muslims and Seleka' present at Boeing Market.⁶³³⁴ P-1339 mentioned that while there were many Christians and fewer Muslims in the Boeing neighbourhood, the target was 'where there were many Muslims' and where they ('we') 'put in a cross' was 'the Ali church'.⁶³³⁵

2532. P-1339 understood that they would attack 'the market' because 'there were Muslims in that location' and they had to start there in order to advance to PK5, which was the 'goal of the Anti-Balaka'.⁶³³⁶ P-1339 understood that the first target was PK5, 'where the Seleka were',

⁶³³¹ See paragraphs 2465-2479 above. P-1339 made a sketch of the Boeing Market during his interview with the Prosecution and which was discussed with him in court (see Sketch, CAR-OTP-2041-0767; paragraphs 2542-2544 below).

⁶³³⁶ P-1339: T-154, p. 53, line 20 – p. 54, line 10; T-155, p. 16, line 22 – p. 17, line 12. The Chamber notes that P-1339 also indicated: 'But to say that there was a predisposition to go to the market, no. I was executing orders. My

but that they could not leave ‘the Muslims located in Boeing’ behind as they could have attacked them from behind, so ‘instructions were given’ to start with the Boeing Market before moving further.⁶³³⁷ In this regard, the Chamber notes that it is not contested that PK5 was a predominantly Muslim neighbourhood.⁶³³⁸

2533. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom instructed his elements to target Seleka positions along the Boeing-Cattin-PK5 direction, and that these instructions encompassed attacking the Muslims traders at the Boeing Market before moving along the route to PK5.

2534. P-1339 said that the Seleka had the ‘habit’ of coming to the Boeing Market and to park their cars in front of Hassan Mahamat’s shop and sometimes he gave them tea and this was how ‘the population’ regarded those shopkeepers as ‘accomplices’ of the Seleka.⁶³³⁹ P-1339 thought that the population who had been ‘attacked by the Seleka’ considered Muslims as being part of the Seleka; following this, the ‘Anti-Balaka’ also started to consider ‘all Muslims’ as being Seleka.⁶³⁴⁰

b. Progression of the attack

Elements in Mr Yekatom’s group killed Hassan Mahamat in the morning of 5 December 2013 during the attack on the market in Boeing. Hassan personally interacted with certain Seleka officials prior to 5 December 2013 in his role as delegate of the male Muslim traders at the market in Boeing. Hassan had at least one weapon in his shop with which he fired in self-defence during the attack of 5 December 2013 carried out by Mr Yekatom’s elements. Further, Mr Yekatom’s elements killed two unnamed Muslim traders at the market in Boeing during this attack. Traders at the market in Boeing and the Seleka personally interacted with each other at the market and were seen by others as associating with each other. There is no indication that any of the two unnamed Muslim traders were armed during the attack or otherwise engaged in combat at that time.

2535. The Chamber recalls that P-1339 explained that on 5 December 2013, they left Projet at 04:00 and launched the attack at 06:00.⁶³⁴¹

2536. P-1339 was asked to mark the progression of the attack on a map.⁶³⁴² P-1339 said that the ‘Boeing police station’ indicated in the map was not there during the fighting, but that it is located where the Anti-Balaka ‘aligned themselves’ and from where they launched the attack.⁶³⁴³

2537. The Chamber finds that when Mr Yekatom’s group reached the Boeing Market, he launched the attack by firing an automatic pistol in the air with the armed elements to continue and advance together. P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom gave the signal and ‘the fighting started’; Mr Yekatom took out his automatic pistol and shot into the air, returned to all those behind him who were armed and they started to advance together, those that had weapons were shooting, moving forward to cover the elements positioned in the back.⁶³⁴⁴ P-1339 said that there was a first column for those who had weapons, and that he himself was behind amongst those who did not have weapons.⁶³⁴⁵ P-1339 said that there were very few firearms and that some elements had machetes and others had sticks or knives.⁶³⁴⁶

2539. The Chamber notes that Salehou Ndiaye stated that on 5 December 2013 at around 04:30, he woke up and heard gunshots from the area of the Boeing Mosque.⁶³⁵⁰ According to the witness, his house was situated 700 meters from the Boeing Mosque and the Boeing Market.⁶³⁵¹ Significantly, he stated that he could not see what was happening at the mosque but he heard 'the rapid fire of Kalashnikovs[] for several minutes followed by single shots'.⁶³⁵² The Chamber further notes that Salehou Ndiaye indicated that the time at which he heard the gunshots is 'the time when Muslims usually get ready to go to the mosque for prayers'.⁶³⁵³

i. Hassan Mahamat

2540. The Chamber notes that witnesses P-2682,⁶³⁵⁴ P-1339,⁶³⁵⁵ P-0884,⁶³⁵⁶ Gaston Sallo⁶³⁵⁷ and Salehou Ndiaye⁶³⁵⁸ confirmed that Hassan Mahamat, Hassan Babakar, 'Hassan Délégué', 'délégué' or 'delegate' (hereinafter: 'Hassan') was a delegate of the male Muslim traders at the Boeing Market for several years.

Specifically, P-2682 said that, as a delegate, Hassan Babakar's duty was to represent the traders, for example by assisting them in discussions when there was a police control and helping to present or issue documents (see P-2682: T-017, p. 17, lines 5-25; T-018, p. 28, line 24 – p. 29, line 4). See also P-2682: T-017, p. 21, lines 17-19 referring to Photograph, CAR-OTP-2126-0291; T-018, p. 21, lines 5-7 referring to Photograph, CAR-OTP-2082-0434; T-018, p. 30, lines 11-22 referring to Photograph, CAR-OTP-2122-9339; T-018, p. 31, lines 4-10 referring to Photograph, CAR-OTP-2122-9341. The Chamber notes that P-2682 also spoke of another individual called 'Hassan Mahamat', who was not her husband Hassan Babakar or 'Hassan délégué' (see P-2682: T-017, p. 41, lines 3-6; T-018, p. 30, line 11 – p. 32, line 2). The Chamber does not consider this to be an inconsistency concerning her husband's identity.

⁶³⁵⁵ P-1339 said that the shopkeeper of the Boeing Market named Hassan that he mentioned in his previous statement used to go by the name 'Hassan Délégué', recognising him in the same photographs as P-2682 (see P-1339: T-157, p. 12, lines 19-22, p. 14, lines 13-18 referring to Photograph, CAR-OTP-2126-0291).

⁶³⁵⁶ P-0884, who was a Boeing resident and knew the neighbourhood very well, knew that 'Hassan Mahamat' was the traders' delegate at the Boeing Market (see P-0884: T-057, p. 53, lines 3-5).

⁶³⁵⁷ Gaston Sallo recognised 'Délégué' in the same photograph in which P-2682 recognised Hassan Babakar (see D29-4013: T-277, p. 9, lines 3-7 referring to Photograph, CAR-OTP-2126-0291).

⁶³⁵⁸ Salehou Ndiaye confirmed that Hassan, a trader who had a shop at the Boeing Market, was the delegate representing the traders at the Boeing Market, and was of Chadian origin (see P-1528: T-179, p. 44, lines 3-12).

2541. Salehou Ndiaye indicated that there were about a dozen shops at the Boeing Market, one after another, some of which were ‘further subdivided’, and that the shop of Hassan and his brother was also situated in that row.⁶³⁵⁹ P-2682 recognised in a photograph the two shops that belonged to Hassan and indicated that they were roughly the size of a studio.⁶³⁶⁰

2542. The Chamber has considered P-1339’s sketch of the Boeing Market in which he marked Hassan’s shop,⁶³⁶¹ and the relative positions of Mr Yekatom’s group during the attack.⁶³⁶²

2543. In this sketch, P-1339 drew three boxes next to each other, with the indications of ‘boutique’, ‘la buvette’ and ‘boutique des musulmans’, subdivided into smaller units, which the Chamber understands represent each of the shops.⁶³⁶³ P-1339 said that he knew the area because he was born there, grew up there, and his younger brother owned the bar in the market that he used to frequent.⁶³⁶⁴ P-1339 said that all the shops alongside Hassan’s shop belonged to Muslims and the remaining ones belonged to Christians.⁶³⁶⁵

2545. P-2682, Hassan’s wife, indicated that on 3 December 2013, she had left Boeing for PK5 and while her husband joined her at PK5 that evening, he decided to stay at the market on the night of 4 December 2013.⁶³⁶⁸ In particular, P-2682 indicated that she spoke to her husband on the phone and he told her that he would spend the night at the market because ‘there was a lot of tension in the air, [...] the information going around wasn't good and so he would rather stay there in order to protect his shop'.⁶³⁶⁹

2546.P-1339 said that, after Mr Yekatom launched the attack,⁶³⁷⁰ Hassan, who had a weapon in his shop, came out as soon as he heard the shot and started firing as well.⁶³⁷¹

2548.P-2682, who was not an eyewitness to the events, described how she found out that Hassan had been killed during the attack. P-2682 said that on 5 December 2013, very early in the morning, she started hearing gunshots and woke up abruptly, trembling.⁶³⁷⁵ She opened the gate of the house where she was staying at PK5 and went out, she saw people crying and running in all directions, injured people, some with broken arms and covered in blood, telling all sorts of stories; and she thought of her husband who was still in Boeing and tried to call him on the phone.⁶³⁷⁶

2549.P-2682 decided to go to the Boeing Market and, on her way, saw people with injuries all over their bodies, and a person told her that 'the Anti-Balaka were everywhere' and that she could not go there.⁶³⁷⁷ P-2682 also saw her husband's 'brother' fleeing in a vehicle with people, none of whom were injured; they told her that they had tried to go to the shop but that there were 'too many people', so they had come back to the neighbourhood looking for Red Cross workers to fetch the dead bodies.⁶³⁷⁸

2550. P-2682 kept calling her husband's phone and could not reach him, it was only at '8 o'clock' that a man picked up her husband's phone, saying 'don't think about him anymore, we have killed him and you are the one who is left' and that the 'next person to be killed shall be you'.⁶³⁷⁹ P-2682 said that when she heard that, she threw the phone down and started crying; she told her in-laws that a person had told her that her husband had been killed.⁶³⁸⁰

2551. P-2682 said that there was a vehicle that went to Boeing and transported the dead bodies to the Ali Babolo Mosque; later 'one of the brothers' told her that one of the vehicles had brought back bodies to the mosque and her dead husband was amongst them.⁶³⁸¹ P-2682 went to the mosque and saw Hassan's body and noted that his neck was broken, she collapsed and her family took her away.⁶³⁸²

2552. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's arguments that P-2682 did not provide any details about any other wounds, including gunshot wounds.⁶³⁸³ In the view of the Chamber, these details are unnecessary. The Chamber considers that the concise accounts of both P-1339, who witnessed Hassan's killing during the attack on the Boeing Market, and P-2682, who saw his body when it was brought to the Ali Babolo Mosque in the aftermath of the attack, are sufficient to find that Hassan was killed by Mr Yekatom's elements on 5 December 2013 at the Boeing Market.

2553. The Chamber now turns to the circumstances of Hassan's death.

2554. The Prosecution submits that none of the Muslim traders Mr Yekatom and his group killed during the attack on the Boeing Market were fighters or actively took part in hostilities.⁶³⁸⁴ The Yekatom Defence disagrees and submits that there is a 'reasonable inference' to be drawn that Hassan and the other traders at the Boeing Market were directly participating in hostilities on 5 December 2013.⁶³⁸⁵ The Yekatom Defence argues that Hassan, having received information about 'the impending Operation', opted to spend the night at the market instead of at PK5 and would have shared this information with the other traders.⁶³⁸⁶ The Yekatom Defence asserts that Hassan and the traders would have ‘decided to take up a position at the market’, ‘equipped with Seleka firearms’, given their ‘membership (or at the very least, material links) with the Seleka’.⁶³⁸⁷ This, it argues, does not allow for a finding that their use of firearms was ‘merely in the exercise of their right to self-defence’.⁶³⁸⁸

2555. The Prosecution argues that while some of the victims, including Hassan, ‘may have had interactions with Seleka elements at an undetermined frequency’, this did not deprive them of their status of ‘protected civilians’ since it did not show involvement in ‘any combat activity’.⁶³⁸⁹ It also argues that to the extent that any of the victims may have used weapons to defend themselves during the attack, the evidence shows that Mr Yekatom’s group attacked the market, armed, ‘with the intent of killing the Muslim traders that were present’, and that ‘the Muslim traders acted in self-defence to protect their lives’.⁶³⁹⁰ The Prosecution explains that Hassan’s case illustrates this point.⁶³⁹¹

2556. In what follows, the Chamber has first assessed Hassan’s purported links with the Seleka prior to 5 December 2015, before turning to the events immediately before his death.

2557. In the Chamber’s view, the evidence outlined below shows that Hassan personally interacted with certain Seleka officials prior to 5 December 2013 in his role as delegate of the male Muslim traders at the Boeing Market. The Chamber does not conclude on the basis of such interactions by themselves, and in light of the evidence outlined below, that Hassan was a member of, or otherwise affiliated with, the Seleka at the time of his death on 5 December 2013.

2558. P-1339 testified, when confronted with his previous statement according to which Hassan was a member of the Seleka who ‘openly’ sold weapons, that Hassan was a shop owner, clarified that he had not seen him selling weapons,⁶³⁹² and explained that he had previously said that Hassan was a Seleka member because when the Seleka elements arrived to Boeing, they used to stop their cars in front of Hassan's 'house' and go there for coffee.⁶³⁹³ According to P-1339, 'the Seleka' only stopped in front of Hassan's shop, not in front of the shops of 'other Muslims'.⁶³⁹⁴ P-1339 thought that a Seleka chief called Bichara⁶³⁹⁵ and Hassan had a relationship, as Bichara would go to Hassan's shop to talk and they had 'a shared interest'.⁶³⁹⁶

2559.P-1339 also explained that when Hassan was killed, they 'received his card as a former Chadian soldier', but he could not confirm whether Hassan was a former soldier of Hissène Habré's regime in Chad.⁶³⁹⁷ When asked whether Hassan had proclaimed himself to be colonel within the Seleka, P-1339 indicated that he did not know as he was not in the neighbourhood at the time but in Zongo.⁶³⁹⁸ He specified that he found out that Hassan was a 'soldier' when he 'met him' for the first time on 5 December 2013.⁶³⁹⁹

2560.P-0884, who lived in Boeing and was communicating with Ngremangou prior to the Bangui Attack,⁶⁴⁰⁰ said that some of the traders who had come from Chad and belonged to Hissène Habré's party had moved to Boeing, becoming 'brothers' to them; but that when the Seleka arrived, they put on military outfits and sported military ranks.⁶⁴⁰¹ P-0884 said that Hassan had 'the rank of colonel'.⁶⁴⁰²

2561.D29-4011 saw 'the Seleka' drinking tea in front of Hassan's shop.⁶⁴⁰³ She stated that Hassan called the Seleka and 'based' them at the Boeing Market.⁶⁴⁰⁴ She also stated that after Hassan called the Seleka, they searched the people and pillaged their goods.⁶⁴⁰⁵ According to some traders who saw Hassan and told D29-4011, he dressed as a civilian when he was at home and had military clothes in a bag, which he changed into when he sometimes went to PK5 to work with the Seleka.⁶⁴⁰⁶

2562. Gaston Sallo described an incident in which Hassan was said to have mediated between the population and the Seleka.⁶⁴⁰⁷

2563. Salehou Ndiaye, who at the time was the imam of the Boeing Mosque, did not know whether Seleka elements often visited Hassan at the market.⁶⁴⁰⁸ He said that while Seleka elements would talk to a Muslim trader as soon as they saw one, particularly if the trader was from Chad, no one told him about any ‘complicity’ between them and he also did not know the traders’ viewpoints on this.⁶⁴⁰⁹

2564. P-2682 testified that she did not see or hear that Muslim civilians from her community, including those who were killed on 5 December 2013, had joined or were part of the Seleka before 5 December 2013.⁶⁴¹⁰

2565. The evidence outlined above shows that certain Seleka officials frequented Hassan’s shop before 5 December 2013, and that they were known to personally interact with each other at the Boeing Market. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that Hassan was the delegate of the male Muslim traders at the Boeing Market at the time and that his duty, as described by P-2682, was to represent the traders before the authorities.⁶⁴¹¹ The Chamber does not read the evidence of P-1339 and P-0884 to mean that Hassan was a member of the Seleka at the time of the Bangui Attack, or indeed before that attack. Further, the Chamber considers D29-4011's suggestion regarding Hassan being a member of the Seleka to be based on what she generally heard, and in any event unsupported by any other evidence.

⁶⁴¹¹ P-2682 confirmed that as the traders’ representative, Hassan would assist the police and the other traders in their discussions when the police went in to do their checks (P-2682: T-018, p. 27, lines 6-10, p. 28, line 24 – p. 29, line 4). When asked, she indicated that she did not know whether after the Seleka entered Bangui, they replaced the police and the gendarmes, as she only saw them drive by in their vehicles and do their rounds in the city (P-2682: T-018, p. 25, line 22 – p. 26, line 3). She also indicated that the police and the gendarmes have the duty to patrol, and that when the Seleka arrived, they too were doing that job of patrolling (P-2682: T-018, p. 26, line 21 – p. 27, line 1). She confirmed that after the arrival of the Seleka in Bangui, she no longer saw gendarmes or policemen go to the market to deal with the grievances and no longer went to patrol, although she thought they continued going to ask for certain things and make certain grievances (P-2682: T-018, p. 29, lines 16-21). When asked whether Hassan had to start communicating with the Seleka regarding the traders’ grievances, P-2682 responded that she did not know but that when the Seleka arrived, she no longer saw the police and the gendarmes go to the market as they used to do, if they had grievances or questions to ask, or if they came to raise issues, she did not see it (P-2682: T-018, p. 29, line 5 – p. 30, line 4).

2566. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Hassan personally interacted with certain Seleka officials prior to 5 December 2013 in his role as delegate of the male Muslim traders at the Boeing Market. The Chamber does not conclude on the basis of such interactions by themselves, and in light of the above evidence, that Hassan was a member of, or otherwise affiliated with, the Seleka at the time of his death on 5 December 2013.

2567. Turning to the presence of the traders of the Boeing Market at their shops immediately before the events, P-2682 recalled that her husband had told her on the evening of 4 December 2013 that he would not go back to PK5 that night because 'there was a lot of tension in the air, [...] the information going around wasn't good and so he would rather stay there in order to protect his shop'.⁶⁴¹² This accords with P-1339's recollection that during the night visit to the Boeing Market prior to the attack, most shopkeepers were sleeping inside their shops.⁶⁴¹³ The Chamber therefore infers that Muslim traders at the Boeing Market were sleeping in their shops in fear of 'rumours' about an imminent attack on Bangui.⁶⁴¹⁴ At the same time, the Chamber notes that Gaston Sallo mentioned that following an incident of robbery at the Boeing Market which took place before the Seleka arrived to Bangui, traders at the market ensured the security of their shops by watching over them and spending the nights there.⁶⁴¹⁵

2568. The Chamber now turns to the Yekatom Defence's assertion that Hassan had weapons at his shop. In this regard, it recalls P-1339's evidence according to which after Mr Yekatom fired a shot in the air and his elements 'launched the attack', Hassan, who had a weapon in his shop, came out as soon as he heard the shot and started firing as well.⁶⁴¹⁶ In P-1339's words, Hassan 'left his shop with this weapon to defend himself'.⁶⁴¹⁷

2569.D29-4011 recalled that when the Seleka arrived, Hassan made a statement telling the youngsters that ‘they’ would kill them if they joked.⁶⁴¹⁸ She also recalled that upon the arrival of the Seleka, the Muslim traders of the Boeing Market took their weapons out of their shops and shot into the air, which everybody saw, including herself.⁶⁴¹⁹ According to D29-4011, Hassan and the other Muslim traders of the Boeing Market had at least one weapon each in their shops.⁶⁴²⁰ The Chamber recalls, however, its findings concerning D29-4011’s evidence.⁶⁴²¹

2570.Relatedly, the Chamber notes that P-2682 confirmed that Hassan was the victim of an assault following an incident involving the death of two children in Fatima, which occurred before the Seleka’s arrival to Bangui.⁶⁴²² In particular, P-2682 indicated that when she arrived home that day, she saw several people armed with spears and sticks shouting, ‘You Muslims, you are the ones who attack people. We are going to kill you today’.⁶⁴²³ P-2682 called Hassan and the attackers left when Hassan arrived followed by his group of friends.⁶⁴²⁴ P-2682 specified that she did not see Hassan or his three friends with any weapons, however, ‘Muslims always move about with a knife’ and Hassan’s friends pulled out their knives.⁶⁴²⁵

2571.Having regard to this, and in particular to P-1339’s aforementioned evidence, the Chamber finds that Hassan had at least one weapon in his shop with which he fired in self-defence during the attack of 5 December 2013 carried out by Mr Yekatom’s elements. This is irrespective of the Chamber’s conclusion in relation to traders more generally, as discussed below.⁶⁴²⁶

2572.The Chamber notes that P-2682 described to the Chamber the impact that losing her spouse had on her life. P-2682 said that after the death of her husband, ‘everything’ was ‘over’; she said that she could not stop thinking about him, especially when she is alone and reminisces about their life together; she recalled his generosity, especially towards her family, feeling lucky to have him as part of their family; she described becoming ‘practically sick’ when she lacks something and thinks about what he would do if he had been present.⁶⁴²⁷ P-2682 described feeling ‘very poorly’ and told the court in moving detail about the physical ailments she continues to feel even on the day of her testimony and that she attributes to the loss of her husband.⁶⁴²⁸

ii. Death of other Muslims at the Boeing Market

2573. The Chamber first has regard to evidence concerning the death of other named persons at the Boeing Market, Nina Pascal and Hassan’s brother.

2574. The Chamber notes that it has received no evidence concerning Nina Pascal’s death, nor does the Prosecution mention her in its Closing Brief.

2575. As regards Hassan’s ‘younger brother’, the Chamber received evidence from P-1339, P-2682 and Salehou Ndiaye. P-1339 said that Hassan’s brother, ‘Mahamat Amada’, was not killed during the Bangui Attack.⁶⁴²⁹ P-1339 clarified that he remembered that Mahamat had shot at them with a weapon,⁶⁴³⁰ but that after Hassan was killed, Mahamat threw his weapon down and fled, following which ‘Cheveux de la mort’ took Mahamat’s weapon.⁶⁴³¹ P-2682 said that Hassan also had a younger brother named ‘Abrás’ who died ‘during these events’ but did not offer any other information as to the circumstances of this death or the source of her information.⁶⁴³² Salehou Ndiaye recalled hearing that one of the traders named Hassan and his younger brother, whose name he did not know, were amongst those killed during the Bangui Attack.⁶⁴³³

⁶⁴³³ P-1528 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2048-0757-R05, at 0762, para. 29.

2577. The Chamber now turns to unnamed persons that died at the Boeing Market that day. As set out below, the Chamber finds that when Mr Yekatom's elements continued and advanced through the Boeing Market, they shot in all directions and those that were inside the shops fled.

2578. As regards unnamed Muslim traders at the Boeing Market, the Chamber recalls that P-1339 first said that Hassan was the only Muslim he identified as a victim of 'that attack at that place', while the others 'fled to PK5 to join up with their families'.⁶⁴³⁴ P-1339 also said that it was 'possible' that there were other victims at the Boeing Market because they shot in all directions and there was 'a certain lengthy distance' to the Boulata Church, and that Red Cross agents collected bodies.⁶⁴³⁵ P-1339 recalled not being in a position to observe everything that was happening, as he himself was towards the back.⁶⁴³⁶

2579. P-1339 recalled seeing gunfire from 'all sides' and seeing bodies on the ground of individuals that had been shot but were not dead.⁶⁴³⁷ P-1339 then specified that 'four people died', including Hassan and two persons whose names he did not remember, one of which died next to the shop just in front of 'the place where the drinks are sold', and the other was a Muslim who had a shop.⁶⁴³⁸ P-1339 did not remember whether these individuals had weapons.⁶⁴³⁹

2580.P-1339 said that after Hassan was killed and while the shooting continued, they moved ahead, so he did not know what happened further back.⁶⁴⁴⁰ P-1339 recalled some people inside the shops fleeing quickly.⁶⁴⁴¹

2581.P-2682 said that on that day, many people died in Boeing but that it was difficult to name all the people who lost their lives.⁶⁴⁴² She indicated that ‘at least three people died’ in the same row of shops as that of Hassan.⁶⁴⁴³ P-2682 specified that ‘Ousman, Moussa and Saleh’ were killed on 5 December 2013.⁶⁴⁴⁴

2582.P-0884 recalled that when he went to the Boeing Market later on 5 December 2013, he saw that the ‘majority’ of the Muslims at the market had been killed, stating that ‘a lot of people were killed from the boutiques’; perhaps they were nine, it was difficult to identify the bodies, but they were all men.⁶⁴⁴⁵

2583.Salehou Ndiaye stated that on 5 December 2013, after he woke up hearing gunshots from the area of the Boeing Mosque, he called an elder from the area, who told him that the area was attacked by the Anti-Balaka and that seven Muslim traders were killed.⁶⁴⁴⁶ The witness did not know the names of all of these victims.⁶⁴⁴⁷ The witness said that on the same day, another individual told him that the Muslim traders of the market were among the first to be killed that day.⁶⁴⁴⁸ Salehou Ndiaye confirmed that he did not know how the events that led to the traders’ death unfolded, and indicated that he was not present or nearby.⁶⁴⁴⁹

2584.Odette Namsona said that while she did not see what happened at the Boeing Market during the Bangui Attack, afterwards she saw two dead bodies of ‘Muslim civilians’ in the market, in front of their shops.⁶⁴⁵⁰ She seemed to indicate that the spouses of the Muslims, who were crying, told them that they had been killed by ‘the Anti-Balaka’.⁶⁴⁵¹ She also said that she learnt that these Muslims were traders of the Boeing Market who had been sleeping in the market and were killed in front of their shops.⁶⁴⁵²

2585. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence’s argument that the Prosecution failed to ‘elicit the necessary precision’ from these witnesses as to the circumstances of the deaths of these traders.⁶⁴⁵³ The Chamber considers that the purported failure to elicit such details did not mean that the Chamber could not conclude on these deaths.

2586. Having regard to the evidence discussed above, the Chamber finds that, as part of the attack launched by Mr Yekatom’s group at the Boeing Market, two unnamed Muslim traders, as described by P-1339, were also killed. There is no indication that these persons were armed or engaged in combat at the time of their death. Having regard to the overall circumstances of the attack, the Chamber infers that these persons died at the hands of Mr Yekatom’s group.

2587. The Chamber now turns to the Yekatom Defence’s arguments concerning the Muslim traders not having ‘IHL immunity’ and the fighting at the Boeing Market being ‘aimed solely at a military objective’.⁶⁴⁵⁴

2588. The Yekatom Defence argues that the Prosecution has not established that the traders were civilians; on the contrary, the evidence indicates that the traders were members of the Seleka at the time of ‘the 5th December Operation’, directly participating in hostilities prior to and during this operation.⁶⁴⁵⁵ It submits that the ‘voluntary decision’ of Hassan and the other traders ‘to take up a position at the Market in the context [of] an ongoing armed conflict, equipped with Seleka firearms and in the vicinity of additional armed Seleka and/or security elements, in the apparent knowledge of an impending military operation of an armed group(s) opposing the Seleka, does not allow for a finding that the Trader's use of firearms was merely in the exercise of their right to self-defence'.⁶⁴⁵⁶

2589. Considering these arguments, the Chamber has first assessed the evidence of witnesses on links, if any, between Muslim traders at the Boeing Market more generally, and the Seleka. Then it ascertained the assertions concerning the traders at the Boeing Market being armed.

2590. In the Chamber's view, the evidence outlined below shows that Seleka elements went to the Boeing Market and talked to the Muslim traders, including Hassan, with whom they had personal interactions in public. Without more, this does not allow the Chamber to conclude that such interactions were related to anything other than market activity. Therefore, it does not conclude on the basis of such interactions by themselves, and in light of the evidence outlined below, that the traders of the Boeing Market in general were members of, or otherwise affiliated with, the Seleka at the time of the Bangui Attack. The Chamber also considers that the traders were suspected to have weapons in their shops, but no evidence points to these weapons being used on 5 December 2013 by the unnamed Muslim victims.⁶⁴⁵⁷

2592. In addition to what P-1339 said about the links between Hassan and the Seleka,⁶⁴⁵⁸ the witness said that when the Seleka arrived, 'they had the habit of coming to the Boeing market and to park their cars in front of his shop, and that is how sometimes he gave them tea', which is 'how the population regarded those shopkeepers as accomplices of the Seleka'.⁶⁴⁵⁹ P-1339 confirmed that the Boeing population was very angry towards Hassan and the shopkeepers.⁶⁴⁶⁰ When asked whether a number of shop owners supported the Seleka, as indicated in his previous statement, P-1339 responded that the shopkeepers in the Boeing Market were represented by Hassan, and ‘since he committed the act, [...] [he] refer[red] to “some of the shop owners”’.⁶⁴⁶¹

2593. The Chamber recalls that P-0884 mentioned that some of the traders came from Chad, belonged to Hissène Habré’s party, moved to Boeing when they were ‘kicked out’, becoming ‘brothers’ to them; but that when the Seleka arrived, they put on military outfits and some became colonels and other ranks.⁶⁴⁶² P-0884 also explained that the Muslim traders in the Boeing district had ‘betrayed’ the FACA and certain civilians, and sometimes could fire shots into the air, the population recalled all of these events and exactions and promised that they would take revenge one day.⁶⁴⁶³

2594. At the same time, P-2682, Salehou Ndiaye and Brice Emotion Namsio indicated that they were not aware of any links between the Muslim traders at the Boeing Market and the Seleka.

⁶⁴⁶¹ P-1339: T-157, p. 20, line 23 – p. 21, line 3. The Chamber understands P-1339’s answer such that he appeared to have assumed that since Hassan supported the Seleka, other shop owners would equally have supported the Seleka.

⁶⁴⁶⁴ P-2682: T-017, p. 41, line 24 – p. 42, line 2; T-018, p. 39, lines 12-17.

2596. Moreover, Gaston Sallo stated that after the Seleka arrived, the Muslims went to ‘their brothers’ for protection, which he said were other Muslims.⁶⁴⁶⁸ Asked whether these Muslims were Seleka, Gaston Sallo indicated that he did not know and that as a Christian, he could not see what happened because Christians and Muslims could not cooperate at the time.⁶⁴⁶⁹ The witness also mentioned that ‘they’ would park at the place where the ‘méchouis’ was sold; that they could also spend the night with ‘their brothers’;⁶⁴⁷⁰ and that some of them wore the Muslim dress, the boubou, while others dressed ‘like ordinary people’.⁶⁴⁷¹ He further indicated that for him, ‘these were just Muslims who were coming to visit other Muslims’ and reiterated that he did not hear anything about them being Seleka.⁶⁴⁷²

2598. First and significantly, the Chamber notes that while P-1339 saw Hassan firing with a weapon and his younger brother with a weapon, he did not mention seeing any other Muslim trader with weapons during the attack on the Boeing Market.⁶⁴⁷⁴ P-1339, when asked whether the other Muslims who had been killed and whom he had seen had weapons, indicated that he could not remember.⁶⁴⁷⁵

2599.P-0884, who was also a Boeing resident, said that when the Seleka arrived in 2013, the Muslim traders at the Boeing Market joined them and received weapons from them,⁶⁴⁷⁶ but when asked to confirm his prior statement that he saw weapon caches at the Boeing Market on 5 December 2013, he said that he did not see the arms himself.⁶⁴⁷⁷ P-0884 added generally that when the Seleka arrived, ‘they’ took the weapons, kept them in the shops and used them to shoot.⁶⁴⁷⁸

2600.Brice Emotion Namsio said generally that ‘everyone’ knew that there were some Muslims, not all, who held arms and weapons at home,⁶⁴⁷⁹ however, he did not know whether or how Muslim traders obtained weapons.⁶⁴⁸⁰

2601.P-0876 confirmed that it was frequent practice of the Seleka to distribute weapons to Muslim civilians, in the mosques or elsewhere, even at the time of his testimony.⁶⁴⁸¹ He gave the example of the PK13 market where, according to him, the majority of people were Muslims selling cows, some of whom became Seleka colonels when the Seleka entered Bangui, and where machetes were distributed, known to ‘everyone’.⁶⁴⁸² However, P-0876 said that he did not have any information about the distribution of weapons or the presence of the Seleka in the Boeing Market.⁶⁴⁸³

⁶⁴⁸⁰ P-0446: T-098, p. 78, lines 5-9. The Chamber has also considered that Brice Emotion Namsio stated that the Anti-Balaka took up weapons not by chance but because the Muslims attacked them before, and that this is what pushed the Anti-Balaka to take artisanal weapons to defend themselves (see P-0446 Interview Transcript, CAR-OTP-2105-0462-R02, at 0482-83, lines 708-714). He also said that he had never heard about an individual named Abdel Khalil who incited people in the Ali Babolo Mosque to kill Christians and also killed several individuals on 5 December 2013 (see P-0446: T-098, p. 79, lines 16-22). The witness was asked about his previous statement that Moussa joined the Seleka in Boeing, sold in PK5 and lived in Cattin; he did not remember this individual, but he did recall an incident in which a Seleka element was stopped on the site at the airport, beaten and wounded; Brice Emotion Namsio took him home for his wife to look after him and thereafter brought him to the gendarmerie (see P-0446: T-098, p. 78, line 18 – p. 79, line 14).

2602. The Chamber recalls the evidence of D29-4011, who claimed that Hassan and the other Muslim traders of the Boeing Market had at least one weapon each in their shops.⁶⁴⁸⁴

2603. The Chamber further recalls that Gaston Sallo described an event before the arrival of the Seleka to Bangui during which thieves tried to break into the Muslims' shops at the Boeing Market, following which the traders spent the nights at their shops and set up a watch schedule to ensure security of their shops, however, he did not hear of Muslim traders at the market having weapons.⁶⁴⁸⁵

2604. The Chamber likewise recalls that Salehou Ndiaye also did not know whether Muslim traders in the market had weapons in their shops.⁶⁴⁸⁶

2605. Having regard to P-1339's and P-0884's evidence above that they did not observe weapons or weapon caches next to the Muslim traders who were killed at the Boeing Market and the generally unsupported claims about the Seleka distributing weapons to the traders, the Chamber cannot conclude that the Boeing Market traders, other than Hassan and his younger brother, had weapons in their shops at the time of the Bangui Attack.

2607. The Chamber notes that in addition to the witnesses above, it received a considerable amount of information on the death and wounding of people during the Bangui Attack. The Chamber emphasises that this information is indicative of the scale of the attack and its consequences on the population of Bangui, and relevant only for the purposes of the general context as it is not encompassed within the facts and circumstances as confirmed by the Pre-Trial Chamber.

2608. The Chamber notes that additional information about the deaths during the Bangui Attack can be found at a document containing ‘interview notes’ which, according to the Prosecution, originate from the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights and which, according to the metadata of the document, were provided by the UN Office of Legal Affairs.⁶⁴⁸⁷ This item helps assess the scale of the attack also in Boeing and Cattin.

2609. As a preliminary matter, the Chamber notes that the Defence opposed the submission of this document, requested by the Prosecution, arguing that it compiles witness statements that are testimonial in nature and thus inadmissible, and which ‘contain extremely prejudicial allegations on the 5 December’.⁶⁴⁸⁸ The Chamber, noting that the document does not specify the circumstances or context in which the individuals concerned provided their accounts, nor the purpose or mandate of the UN High Commissioner when compiling these accounts, considered the item not testimonial in nature and recognised it as formally submitted.⁶⁴⁸⁹

2610. In its Closing Brief, the Yekatom Defence argues that reliance on ‘anonymous sources’ within reports such as this one ‘introduces significant risks, as the Chamber cannot verify the credibility of the individuals providing information or assess potential biases’ and further ‘raises the possibility that some of these individuals [...] may be directly involved in the case, either as witnesses or interested parties, without the Chamber’s knowledge’.⁶⁴⁹⁰

2611. In this regard, the Chamber notes that it has not relied on the below information for the purposes of entering any factual finding but to illustrate the scale and extent of the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013.

2612. According to one of these accounts, on 6 December 2013, after the Friday prayer, ‘they’, escorted by the Chadian FOMAC, brought 58 bodies of people killed on 5 and 6 December to PK16, on the road to Bouali where a mass grave had been dug.⁶⁴⁹¹ This individual also indicated that after the first day of the Anti-Balaka attack, most of the bodies came from Boy-Rabe, Boeing (where ‘some traders were targeted’) and Bimbo.⁶⁴⁹² He also mentioned the ‘destruction’ of a small mosque located at the ‘Place de la Reconciliation [sic]’, also known as ‘Place Oumar Bongo’.⁶⁴⁹³

2613. A second individual stated that during the night of 5 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka attacked Boeing, Muslims were attacked house by house, and the headquarters of the NGO in Boeing where he worked were destroyed, which he observed the following day.⁶⁴⁹⁴ He also indicated that two people, Abakar Hussein and Hassan Ahmad, were killed and that he saw their bodies at the morgue.⁶⁴⁹⁵

2614. A third individual indicated that on 5 December 2013 in Boeing, two traders were killed by the Anti-Balaka, specifying that he went to Boeing at 16:40 and transported the corpses to the morgue, one had a head and the other a stomach wound, one was inside the shop and the other one outside.⁶⁴⁹⁶ In total, ‘they’ found nine corpses.⁶⁴⁹⁷ He recognised ‘le délégué du marché Moussa’, killed by a shot to the stomach.⁶⁴⁹⁸ He also indicated that all the shops had been looted.⁶⁴⁹⁹

2615. A fourth individual explained that on 5 December 2013 a group of 15 to 20 Anti-Balaka elements entered his son’s house, in Cattin, took him with them and also took some things.⁶⁵⁰⁰ ‘R[ambo]’ was recognised amongst these elements, some of whom wore military clothes, civilian clothes, carried machetes or guns.⁶⁵⁰¹ The corpse of his son was found on 7 December 2013 and brought to the Ali Babolo Mosque by the Seleka.⁶⁵⁰² They stayed at their house for the rest of the month and due to the threats that the Anti-Balaka continued to make, the wife and children left on 2 January 2014.⁶⁵⁰³

2616. Another individual stated that on 5 December 2013, an individual named Hassan Abrass was killed in the market in Boeing with his younger brother.⁶⁵⁰⁴

ii. Boeing Mosque

On 5 December 2013, and following Mr Yekatom’s instructions, Mr Yekatom’s elements attacked the mosque in Boeing, which was the main mosque serving the communities of both Boeing and Cattin, by firing a ‘rocket’ at it. Mr Yekatom’s elements also torched the mosque in Boeing with gasoline. On the same day and in the days that followed, the local population took it apart.

2618. The Chamber has considered the evidence from Salehou Ndiaye, the principal Imam of the Boeing Mosque, as well as of P-1339, who was an eyewitness to the events.

2619. Before turning to the events of 5 December 2013, the Chamber recalls the significance of the Boeing Mosque as the main mosque serving the communities of both Boeing and Cattin,⁶⁵⁰⁶ where at the time around 100 Muslim families lived, and about 20 disciples regularly attended the daily morning prayers at the Boeing Mosque.⁶⁵⁰⁷ Salehou Ndiaye described the Friday prayers at the Boeing Mosque as ‘an opportunity for people to greet one another’ after not seeing each other and being busy during the week.⁶⁵⁰⁸

2620. Salehou Ndiaye stated that on 5 December 2013 at around 04:30, he heard gunshots from the area of the Boeing Mosque, ‘the time when Muslims usually get ready to go to the mosque for prayers’.⁶⁵⁰⁹ The witness fled to PK5 together with his family later that day, and only learnt that ‘the mosque was destroyed’ after 5 December 2013.⁶⁵¹⁰ The witness said that the last time he saw the Boeing Mosque was on the Friday before the Bangui Attack, and that it was ‘in a good condition’, describing it as having a rectangular shape, with a roof, windows, doors, carpets for prayers and a half-moon on the front wall, and not having a minaret.⁶⁵¹¹ On 20 January 2020, Salehou Ndiaye returned with the Prosecution to the location where the Boeing Mosque had been situated but its structure was no longer there.⁶⁵¹²

2621. The Prosecution points to P-1339’s evidence that he saw Alkanto firing a rocket at the building and argues that Alkanto would have only done so following Mr Yekatom’s instructions.⁶⁵¹³ The Prosecution further submits that after Mr Yekatom’s elements tried to set fire to the mosque’s roof, it was partly burnt and subsequently, members of the population continued to destroy it over the next days, looting the materials, until the mosque was razed to ground.⁶⁵¹⁴

corroborative of this account.⁶⁵¹⁶ It submits that, in fact, the Boeing Mosque was progressively dismantled by the civilian population according to the evidence of two Boeing residents who saw how ‘the Mosque was dismantled by youths in civilian attire using nail-pullers, hammers, and other tools’ and three witnesses who ‘gave corroborative evidence that the Mosque was progressively dismantled’.⁶⁵¹⁷

2623. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence’s submissions that P-1339’s account ‘remains inherently unreliable’ since he initially stated that Mr Yekatom’s group was ‘not involved in the destruction of the Mosque’ and subsequently reversed his position, thereby ‘negating the probative value of either version’.⁶⁵¹⁸

2624. At the outset, having considered the Yekatom Defence’s arguments in light of the charges, the Chamber notes the difference between an attack on the Boeing Mosque and its subsequent purported destruction. The Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom is charged with ‘directing an attack against a building dedicated to religion’ pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute. In the view of the Chamber, whether and by whom the Boeing Mosque was later destroyed, dismantled, or otherwise taken apart, is not material to the charges.

2625. Indeed, P-1339 drew a similar distinction during his testimony between the attack to the mosque – which he attributed to Mr Yekatom’s group – and its subsequent destruction or dismantling – which he said was carried out by the civilian population. In the view of the Chamber, this explains why P-1339, when repeatedly asked who destroyed the mosque, said that it was the civilian population, while at the same time maintained that it was Mr Yekatom’s group that attacked the mosque. For example, and as discussed in further detail below, P-1339 confirmed that he had told the Prosecution that ‘Alkanto shot a rocket’ and the walls were ‘destroyed by the population’.⁶⁵¹⁹

2626. Importantly, the Chamber considers that the subsequent destruction or taking apart of the Boeing Mosque by the population does not, in any way, exclude the possibility that Mr Yekatom's group attacked it first.

2627. In light of this, the Chamber considers without merit the Yekatom Defence's submissions that P-1339 initially stated that Mr Yekatom's group were 'not involved in the destruction of the Boeing Mosque' and thereafter reversed his version.⁶⁵²⁰ Likewise, it considers without merit the Yekatom Defence's submissions that 'P-1339's testimony in regard to 'the destruction of the Boeing Mosque' contains two irreconcilable accounts: one that would put the population 'solely responsible for the destruction of the Mosque', and another 'partially blaming' Mr Yekatom's group.⁶⁵²¹

2628. As set out below, both are true.

2629. P-1339 said that following Mr Yekatom's instructions 'to destroy the houses of the Muslims', 'they ['we'/'on'] destroyed the mosque of the Muslims [in Boeing]', as well as in other neighbourhoods, and also said that 'the civilian population was also involved in the destruction of those mosques'.⁶⁵²² According to P-1339, Mr Yekatom gave this instruction in the presence of Habib Beina and Cœur de Lion.⁶⁵²³

2630. P-1339 said that Alkanto, who was an 'Anti-Balaka member' and 'a Christian' who had converted to Islam, 'fired a rocket at the mosque', and that 'gasoline was used to torch the roof of the mosque, but the walls were destroyed by the civilian population'.⁶⁵²⁴ P-1339 added that he was with the group when Alkanto shot the rocket,⁶⁵²⁵ that he was not very far away from Alkanto nor from the mosque, and that Alkanto was the only person who had a rocket launcher and ‘the one who fired the rocket at the mosque’.⁶⁵²⁶ P-1339 saw how Alkanto shot the rocket,⁶⁵²⁷ and said that when the latter shot the rocket, he did not destroy the entire building, but part of the roof was burnt.⁶⁵²⁸ P-1339 said that thereafter, the population destroyed the walls of the mosque,⁶⁵²⁹ as also discussed further below.

2631. As regards instructions to attack the Boeing Mosque, P-1339 said that ‘Alkanto on his own initiative would not have shot a rocket at the mosque’, ‘the leader, the commander, Yekatom’ gave the instruction, and Alkanto ‘only complied with the instructions that Yekatom gave him’.⁶⁵³⁰

2632. As regards the torching by the ‘Anti-Balaka’, P-1339 explained that ‘they’ yelled out and said that they ‘wanted gasoline’, after which an Anti-Balaka element who was a motorcycle taxi driver brought some and ‘they sprayed the building with gas’.⁶⁵³¹ P-1339 specified that at this point, the ‘rocket’ had already been fired and the building had been torched but the walls were still standing, ‘[t]here was wiring in the mosque, and so there was a fire’.⁶⁵³²

2633. The Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom’s group proceeded with their operation from the Boeing Mosque and then retreated. In particular, P-1339 explained that the mosque was ‘torched’ and the ‘attack’ was at 06:00, after which they ‘moved forward’, towards the Ali Church which was ‘very far’ from the mosque; they left the mosque behind as they walked further and so they were not close but rather ‘far away’ from the mosque.⁶⁵³³ P-1339 said that during ‘the first attack’, the Seleka had not yet arrived; but once Mr Yekatom’s group was in Boulata, they ran short of ammunition and withdrew, at which point the Seleka ‘took advantage of that to gain some territory’.⁶⁵³⁴

2634. P-1339 said that the attack began at 06:00, that they withdrew at 07:00 and that this was ‘when the mosque was destroyed’.⁶⁵³⁵ P-1339 agreed that ‘other Anti-Balaka’ participated in the ‘attack’ on or ‘destroying’ of the Boeing Mosque before the civilian population stepped in.⁶⁵³⁶

2636. P-1339 clarified that after attacking the Boeing Market, they moved forward, and that it was only upon their return, after the fighting ended at 10:00, that they noticed that the roof and the mosque had been destroyed.⁶⁵³⁸ P-1339 said that on the way back, during their retreat, all those houses had been destroyed already and it was not ‘the elements’ who had destroyed them, but the civilian population.⁶⁵³⁹ P-1339 seemed to be of the view that the houses and mosques of Muslims in Bangui were not destroyed by the Anti-Balaka but in their majority by the Christians, who regarded Muslims as Seleka and considered that they should no longer live in the country.⁶⁵⁴⁰

2637. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence counsel’s suggestion, during P-1339’s testimony, that the witness provided several different versions of how the mosque was destroyed because he was not present, which is why according to the counsel he ‘forgot to talk about Alkanto’ in his previous statement.⁶⁵⁴¹

2639. In this respect, the Chamber also notes that P-1339 had not mentioned Alkanto in his previous interview with the Prosecution but said categorically during his testimony that 'it was Alkanto who launched the rocket'.⁶⁵⁴² P-1339 explained that the investigator had not asked him to mention any names at the time so he did not mention anyone's name.⁶⁵⁴³ The Chamber found P-1339 forthcoming in acknowledging his omission and his own responsibility as part of the group that 'attacked' the Boeing Mosque.⁶⁵⁴⁴

2640. The Chamber also notes that P-1339 did not provide the intricate details of the actual destruction of the Boeing Mosque, and that certain details of his account were only brought forward after P-1339's memory was refreshed.⁶⁵⁴⁵ This did not change the Chamber's assessment of his reliability concerning the events surrounding the Boeing Mosque.

2641. As set out below, the Chamber has also received evidence showing how the local population and/or youth of the neighbourhood took apart the Boeing Mosque after the attack.

2642. Gaston Sallo said that he did not know and could not remember the precise date of a 'fight' between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka.⁶⁵⁴⁶ Gaston Sallo explained that one morning, on his way home, he saw the Boeing Mosque being 'destroyed'.⁶⁵⁴⁷ In particular, after hearing noises and people 'taking off the roof with nail pullers or with a hammer', he turned back and observed that 'the roofs were being removed'.⁶⁵⁴⁸ The witness saw 'youngsters'

⁶⁵⁴² P-1339: T-160, p. 35, line 23 – p. 36, line 4. The Chamber further notes that some videos before it show a person who appears to be Alkanto carrying an RPG (see Video, CAR-OTP-2065-0915 compared with Photograph, CAR-OTP-2125-0742 and Video, CAR-OTP-2065-4585, at 00:00:03). In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-1839 confirmed that the person appearing on Photograph, CAR-OTP-2125-0742, matched the name appearing in the same photograph ('Mahamat Abdoulaye Alkanto') (see P-1839: T-172, p. 11, lines 8-13).

⁶⁵⁴⁷ D29-4013: T-277, p. 25, line 7 – p. 26, line 20, p. 44, lines 17-25. The Chamber notes that D29-4013 indicated that at the time, he stayed at the Ledger displacement camp and went back home from time to time, going through the neighbourhood rather than taking the 'main path' to avoid stray bullets (D29-4013: T-277, p. 21, line 13 – p. 22, line 16, p. 23, line 24 – p. 26, line 20). He also specified that his home was located less than 400 metres from the Boeing Mosque and less than 500 metres from the Boeing Market (D29-4013: T-277, p. 7, lines 4-10). Further, the witness was shown a video footage and indicated that his house was located where the third mango tree appeared in the video footage shown to him (D29-4013: T-277, p. 37, lines 6-14).

removing the ‘roofing from the mosque’, once they finished taking off the metal roofing, they came back for ‘the wooden eaves and the brickwork’.⁶⁵⁴⁹ Gaston Sallo clarified that he arrived when they were removing ‘the second part of the roofing’ and that he did not know when they had started nor how much time had passed since they started and until he arrived.⁶⁵⁵⁰

2644. D29-4011 recalled similar events. D29-4011 said that she witnessed ‘the destruction’ of the Boeing Mosque on the way back home from the location where she slept during ‘the events’.⁶⁵⁵⁵ D29-4011 said that during ‘calm moments’ she would return back home, and at this time the mosque was ‘intact’, while some time later ‘the destruction’ started.⁶⁵⁵⁶ D29-4011 specified that she did not live too far from the Boeing Mosque, which she could see when she went out of the house and walked to one of its corners.⁶⁵⁵⁷

2645. D29-4011 recalled hearing noise of metal sheets being removed, and saw ‘youngsters’ tearing off the metal sheets of the mosque, as well as the window frames, with hammers and crowbars.⁶⁵⁵⁸ D29-4011 saw how the ‘youngsters’ took with them the metal sheets and the wooden frames before leaving.⁶⁵⁵⁹ D29-4011 stated that these youngsters came from different neighbourhoods, were dressed in civilian clothes, and that she did not see any gris-gris.⁶⁵⁶⁰ D29-4011 said that the mosque was not set on fire and that no bomb was thrown onto it, as she did not smell gasoline, and she did not hear gunshots while the ‘destruction’ took place.⁶⁵⁶¹ As per D29-4011, she witnessed the destruction of the Boeing Mosque from the beginning till the end.⁶⁵⁶²

2646. The Chamber notes that both witnesses indicated not seeing any traces of fire or smoke on the Boeing Mosque and both recalled the metal sheets of the roof being removed.

2647. In light of the above, and contrary to the Yekatom Defence’s submissions,⁶⁵⁶³ the Chamber considers that Gaston Sallo’s account of the Boeing Mosque being ‘progressively dismantled by the civilian population’ confirms the veracity of P-1339’s account. Indeed, P-1339 indicated that he saw how the local population ‘destroyed’ the Boeing Mosque as the group withdrew, but at no point indicated that the mosque was fully destroyed that day. Regarding D29-4011’s claim that the Boeing Mosque was intact when she arrived to her house on the day she witnessed the destruction of the mosque, the Chamber notes that while the witness stated that she passed by the ‘église néo-apostolique’ – located close to the Boeing Mosque –,⁶⁵⁶⁴ she did not specifically state that she walked close to or by the mosque or paid any particular attention to it.⁶⁵⁶⁵ The Chamber further notes that from her house, D29-4011 did not seem to have full visibility of the entirety of the mosque’s building.⁶⁵⁶⁶ It is therefore of the view that D29-4011’s account does not contradict that of P-1339 nor that of Gaston Sallo.

2648. In this respect, the Chamber has also considered the evidence of other witnesses who indicated that ‘the Anti-Balaka’, together with the civilian population, ‘destroyed’ the Boeing Mosque.⁶⁵⁶⁷

The Chamber also notes that the observations of expert witness Lars Bromley are in line with this evidence and are inconclusive as regards the existence of traces 2649. The Chamber now turns to the impact of the attack on the Boeing Mosque. The Chamber notes that Salehou Ndiaye provided the following explanation when asked how the memories of the Boeing Mosque emotionally affected him:

It's difficult to explain what I feel within. It's difficult to describe what I feel, because I don't see why. When there is a problem, why is it that religious buildings are destroyed? For what reason? No matter what the problem might be, these are places where people take refuge when there are problems. And when I see this, it's true, it hurts. It's very [...] sad to see the house of God destroyed. This is my opinion. I might be wrong, but if there are problems and if someone goes to a religious place, a church or a mosque, in principle, the action should stop. But to destroy it, a church or a mosque, to my mind, that makes no sense. That's what I feel. When I see it, it brings back all the memories of everything that was destroyed.⁶⁵⁶⁸

2650. Salehou Ndiaye said that about a year before giving testimony before the Court, his deputy, who stayed 'there', resumed prayers at the location of the Boeing Mosque by setting up a tent.⁶⁵⁶⁹ The witness indicated that the Boeing Mosque has since been reopened.⁶⁵⁷⁰

2651. As for 'those six or seven years' that elapsed between the destruction of the Boeing Mosque and the resumption of prayers at that location, Salehou Ndiaye said that he was no longer in that neighbourhood and no longer in touch with 'the faithful' there but he knew that some Muslims would go to PK5 for the Friday prayer, for Eid and the feast at the end of Ramadan, as this was the closest neighbourhood where there were mosques and Boeing no longer had a mosque.⁶⁵⁷¹ He added that for the daily prayers, he believed that people started doing them at home.⁶⁵⁷²

4. Attack on Cattin

Following the attack on the market and the mosque in Boeing, elements of Mr Yekatom's group moved on to attack Cattin, where they clashed with the Seleka. During the attack on Cattin, elements of Mr Yekatom's group killed at least one Muslim man, who was not armed, nor engaged in combat, at the time of his death. The elements targeted this Muslim man on of fire on the Boeing Mosque (see P-2193: T-019, p. 29, line 15 – p. 30, line 12 referring to Annex 1 to P-2193 Report, CAR-OTP-2127-6626, at 6627; p. 48, line 13 – p. 49, line 20, p. 50, lines 13-18; see also P-2193 Report, CAR-OTP-2127-6617, at 6621).

the basis that he was an ‘Arab’ and the victim eventually succumbed to the injuries inflicted on him.

2652. The Chamber recalls the Prosecution’s allegation that Mr Yekatom and his group attacked Boeing and Cattin, with the goal of advancing towards PK5, the predominantly Muslim neighbourhood in the third district.⁶⁵⁷³

2653. The Prosecution submits that while attacking the Cattin neighbourhood in the morning of 5 December 2013, elements of Mr Yekatom’s group ‘killed at least one Muslim civilian, who was not actively taking part in the hostilities’ in the execution of Mr Yekatom’s ‘orders to attack the Muslim civilian population on the eve of the attack’.⁶⁵⁷⁴ In support of this allegation, it relies on Salehou Ndiaye,⁶⁵⁷⁵ arguing, inter alia, that he saw four Anti-Balaka elements, who were members of Mr Yekatom’s group, as ‘confirmed by the fact that they wore armbands’.⁶⁵⁷⁶ The Prosecution also refers to another individual account concerning the killing of a Muslim civilian, by Anti-Balaka in Cattin during the Bangui Attack.⁶⁵⁷⁷

2654. The Yekatom Defence does not dispute the presence of Mr Yekatom’s group in Cattin in the morning of 5 December 2013, and submits that they were targeting the Seleka who were present on the Cattin and Dameca road.⁶⁵⁷⁸ The Yekatom Defence submits that ‘Cattin was the scene of active combat’ involving Mr Yekatom’s group and heavily armed Seleka elements, during which the Seleka elements fired machine guns and rocket launchers extensively and indiscriminately on the Cattin and Dameca roads, including directly at civilians, as well as into civilian residences and premises.⁶⁵⁷⁹ The Yekatom Defence further argues that no reliable evidence has been led of Mr Yekatom’s group ‘directing attacks against the civilian population, or otherwise targeting civilians, in Boeing or Cattin’.⁶⁵⁸⁰ It submits that the Prosecution has failed to show that these killings even occurred, let alone that Mr Yekatom's group was involved.⁶⁵⁸¹

2655. The Chamber will first examine the evidence about the killing of a person between 08:00 and 09:00 by 'the Anti-Balaka' from Salehou Ndiaye, who lived opposite the Dameca carpentry factory in Cattin at the time,⁶⁵⁸² and then assess whether this can be attributed to the elements in Mr Yekatom's group.

2656. Salehou Ndiaye said that around 07:00, he saw 'many Anti-Balaka' walk past his house going in the direction of KM5 and that, on their way to KM5, they clashed with the Seleka 'at the site of the C[atin] company', approximately 500 metres from his house, in a fight that lasted more than one hour.⁶⁵⁸³ The witness recalled 'quite a sustained gunfire for quite a while and then it stopped', at which point they thought 'things had settled'.⁶⁵⁸⁴ The witness also stated that some of the 'Anti-Balaka elements were posted on the street corners' and they 'occupied the whole neighbourhood' and they ('we') could not leave their house at that time.⁶⁵⁸⁵ Salehou Ndiaye watched them from a hole in the wall of their compound.⁶⁵⁸⁶

2657. Salehou Ndiaye said that the 'Anti-Balaka' then retreated and returned to 'their bases' in the Boeing area, and that, as they walked past his house, they shouted that 'first they would kill D[jotodia] and then they would come back to kill all Muslims'.⁶⁵⁸⁷

2658. Salehou Ndiaye said that between 08:00 and 09:00, 'the Anti-Balaka' chased a Muslim man to the front of the witness's house, shouting that he was 'an Arab'.⁶⁵⁸⁸ The witness was observing this through a hole in the wall of his compound where he was hiding.⁶⁵⁸⁹ Salehou

Ndiaye heard the man ‘pleading for help’, but was not able to see his body on the ground, and ‘later’ saw four ‘Anti-Balaka elements’ armed with a Kalashnikov and three machetes standing next to his body.⁶⁵⁹⁰ The witness later saw the body of the victim, lying on the road, with ‘wounds’ all over,⁶⁵⁹¹ when he went out of the house to run away around 14:00 or 15:00.⁶⁵⁹² The witness did not recognise the victim,⁶⁵⁹³ and did not spend much time looking at it.⁶⁵⁹⁴ Salehou Ndiaye saw blood on his face, underneath the body and on the ground, and could not establish the nature of the wounds.⁶⁵⁹⁵ The witness later learnt that the man was ‘somebody who had come from another neighbourhood into the plateau who fell into these people’s hands and they ultimately killed him’.⁶⁵⁹⁶

2659. Salehou Ndiaye stated that he knew that ‘the attackers were Anti-Balaka’ because they were armed with machetes, knives and iron bars, wore gris-gris and bands around their heads, including of red colour, and upper arms.⁶⁵⁹⁷ The witness stated that they spoke Sango, were on foot and were followed by a crowd of locals who ‘were encouraging’ them.⁶⁵⁹⁸ When asked how he distinguished between the locals and the Anti-Balaka, Salehou Ndiaye explained that he saw through the hole in the compound wall ‘a big crowd behind them that were shouting [and] encouraging them’, shouting things like ‘Djotodia is going to go and [...] there’s going to be an attack on the Muslims’ and ‘[w]e’re going to finish with Djotodia, and now we’re going to finish up the Muslims’.⁶⁵⁹⁹

2660. The Chamber finds Salehou Ndiaye’s account credible, noting that during his testimony, he explained the sources of his information and clearly distinguished between events he directly observed and those he was told or heard about.⁶⁶⁰⁰

2661. The Yekatom Defence argues that the Prosecution failed to establish the circumstances concerning the killing of the man whose body Salehou Ndiaye saw.⁶⁶⁰¹ In particular, it argues that the Prosecution has not established that the man whose body Salehou Ndiaye saw indeed died because of the incident that the latter overheard, nor that the four Anti-Balaka were involved in pursuing the Muslim man or in attacking or killing him.⁶⁶⁰² The Chamber further notes the Yekatom Defence's arguments that the Prosecution failed to elicit basic details from Salehou Ndiaye as regards this death, including the victim's status at the time of his death,⁶⁶⁰³ whether he heard the man being beaten to death, whether the Anti-Balaka elements had blood on their hands, weapons or clothes, whether they appeared to be breathing heavily or even looking down at the body at all.⁶⁶⁰⁴

2662. Having regard to the above, the Chamber, for the reasons set out below, finds that 'the Anti-Balaka' killed a Muslim man in Cattin.

2663. The Chamber considers that Salehou Ndiaye was unequivocal about the identity of the alleged perpetrators as 'the Anti-Balaka', clearly distinguished between 'the Anti-Balaka' and the local population and did not attribute the incident to the latter. While the witness was not able to observe the body of the victim when the Anti-Balaka elements beat him, he heard a man pleading for help and saw wounds on the body lying on the ground when he later saw the body. The Chamber notes that the witness saw the body lying on or close to the place where he had seen the Anti-Balaka elements. As to the wounds the body sustained, while the witness could not describe them in detail nor ascertain whether the man lying wounded on the ground had indeed died, it is clear from his description that these wounds were not sustained because of an exchange of fire. The description was consistent with Salehou Ndiaye's own impression that this man had been beaten by the Anti-Balaka.

2664. Further, given the words used by the assailants and their description, the Chamber finds that the four Anti-Balaka elements that Salehou Ndiaye saw indeed targeted this Muslim man on the basis that he was an 'Arab'. Having regard to what the witness later learnt about this person, the Chamber infers that the victim eventually succumbed to the injuries inflicted on him by the Anti-Balaka.

2665. The Chamber further considers Salehou Ndiaye's description that the man was lying on the ground when the Anti-Balaka approached him. The witness did not mention seeing any weapons or arms on or around the body. On this basis, the Chamber finds that this man was not armed at the time of his death nor otherwise engaged in combat.

2666. The Chamber now turns to whether 'the Anti-Balaka' referred to by Salehou Ndiaye was a reference to elements in Mr Yekatom's group.

2667. The Yekatom Defence disputes that Mr Yekatom's elements could have been present there at the same time that Salehou Ndiaye observed the killing. Referring to audio-visual evidence, the Yekatom Defence submits that members of Mr Yekatom's group were engaged with the Seleka forces on the Cattin road at 08:00 'latest' and that the Seleka pursued Mr Yekatom's group 'around the Cattin crossroad along the Dameca road, past the Dameca factory' by 08:51 and westward from Cattin to M'Poko Bac river by 10:29.⁶⁶⁰⁵ It also argues that since there were 'multiple groups' of Anti-Balaka present in and around Boeing at the time, including Modibo and his group, this killing cannot be 'automatically' attributed to Mr Yekatom's group.⁶⁶⁰⁶

2668. In assessing whether this killing can be attributed to Mr Yekatom's group, the Chamber has considered the itinerary that Mr Yekatom's group took in the morning of 5 December 2013, as described by P-1339, who annotated on a map the locations the group went through that morning.⁶⁶⁰⁷

2669. The Chamber considers that, as per P-1339, at some point, after the events of the Boeing Market and the Boeing Mosque, Mr Yekatom's group split into two.⁶⁶⁰⁸ P-1339's group,

The Chamber notes that P-1339's appeared to have minor inconsistencies regarding the exact location where the group split but maintained that there were two groups after the events at the Boeing Market and the Boeing Mosque (see P-1339: T-155, p. 8, lines 4-20; T-160, p. 4, line 23 – p. 5, line 18).

which was led by Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion,⁶⁶⁰⁹ took the ‘main road’ and reached the Boulata church.⁶⁶¹⁰ The other group, led by ‘Habib’ and ‘Alkanto’,⁶⁶¹¹ took the ‘dusty road’ that leads to Dameca and Cattin.⁶⁶¹² The latter group was intended to ‘provide cover’ for the group on the main road.⁶⁶¹³ P-1339 did not know the exact location of the ‘Cattin group’ and which route it took as he was not part of this group.⁶⁶¹⁴

2670.P-1339 indicated that his group stopped at the Boulata church because they were short of ammunition,⁶⁶¹⁵ at which point the ‘Cattin group’ also ran out of ammunition.⁶⁶¹⁶ Both groups exchanged this information and decided to retreat as ‘progressing was no longer possible’.⁶⁶¹⁷

2671.P-0884, asked about ‘the Anti-Balaka or FACA’ controlling the sector surrounding Cattin on 5 December 2013, said that ‘they controlled the situation in the morning’ but the Seleka pushed them back around 09:00 and ‘the Anti-Balaka had to withdraw’.⁶⁶¹⁸

2672.P-1339 said that they withdrew to the Boeing Market and the Seleka began a counterattack,⁶⁶¹⁹ and when the Seleka arrived, the latter started to engage in reprisals against the population and to shoot randomly.⁶⁶²⁰ P-1339 recalled hearing ‘stray bullets whistling through the air’.⁶⁶²¹ The Chamber notes that some elements within Mr Yekatom’s group withdrew to Yamwara and others to Projet.⁶⁶²²

The Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom himself, together with some of his elements, appear to have retreated in the bush and can be seen in videos in locations like Projet and Gbangba before appearing in Yamwara (see paragraph 2430-2431, 2473 above; see also section IV.D.1 below).

2673. The Chamber further notes that the timing of the alleged killing, between 08:00 and 09:00, appears to coincide with the time around which Mr Yekatom's group would have been present on the Cattin road, close to the Dameca factory.⁶⁶²³ The Yekatom Defence asserts that Seleka elements proceeded to engage and pursue Mr Yekatom's group around 'Cattin crossroads along the Dameca road, past the Dameca factory (by 08:51), and westward from Cattin, up to the river at M'Poko Bac (by 10:29)'.⁶⁶²⁴ Considering this together with Salehou Ndiaye's evidence and the Chamber's conclusion that Mr Yekatom's group attacked Cattin that morning, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's elements killed a Muslim man in Cattin. The Chamber has received no evidence that other Anti-Balaka groups were present that morning at this very location.

2674. While the Yekatom Defence points to evidence from P-0884, Brice Emotion Namsio and P-1521 regarding the presence of other Anti-Balaka groups 'in an around Boeing, both before 5th December and afterwards',⁶⁶²⁵ the Chamber finds that such evidence does not support its assertion. P-0884 recalled Modibo and his group specifically not being in Boeing on 5 December 2013 but attacking the National Assembly.⁶⁶²⁶ P-0884 further recalled Ngremangou's group composed of 'military men' being in Boeing before 5 December 2013 and remaining there 'until Djotodia left',⁶⁶²⁷ which the Chamber understands to be a reference to Mr Yekatom's group. The same holds true for Brice Emotion Namsio, who stated that some of Mr Yekatom's elements were in Boeing on that day and 'attacked' KM5 and PK9.⁶⁶²⁸ P-1521 did not have direct or accurate information about Mr Yekatom's group or the 'Boeing team' that attacked on the '6th or the 7th' of December 2013.⁶⁶²⁹ Asked 'who led the Boeing group', P-1521 recalled certain names generally, including Ngremangou, Mr Yekatom, Sylvestre Yagouzou, Sebastien Wenezoui, Bertin Nganabeam, Bama Clement and Modibo; and said that on the 5th, 6th, or the 7th, 'we did not have any contact with them'.⁶⁶³⁰ The Chamber also has regard to P-0889's evidence concerning the presence of certain Anti-Balaka in Boeing, including Modibo Honoré, Yvon Donoh, Sylvestre Yagouzou, and Sébastien Wenezoui.⁶⁶³¹ P-0889, asked specifically if these groups were in Boeing ‘before’ 5 December 2013, said that he could not confirm and that he would not have known if they were there, because he was in Zongo at the time; he clarified that his sketch of the Anti-Balaka bases in Boeing was made in relation to when he went to Boeing ‘after’ 5 December 2013.⁶⁶³²

2675. Further noting that there is no date or time on the record concerning the audio-visual evidence pointed to by the Yekatom Defence, the Chamber cannot establish whether the events therein indeed took place at the indicated time. In any event, these videos show the clashes on Cattin road from the perspective of the Seleka, but do not indicate the presence of ‘other’ Anti-Balaka groups.

2676. The Chamber now turns to the Prosecution’s allegation that someone reported the killing of a Muslim civilian by Anti-Balaka in Cattin during the attack on 5 December 2013.⁶⁶³³ The Chamber finds that without further evidence, it is unable to conclude that this alleged killing took place or that it refers to the same event as described by Salehou Ndiaye.

2677. Lastly in respect of the events in Cattin, the Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence challenges ‘P-1339’s uncorroborated account of the killing of a moto-driver in Cattin’.⁶⁶³⁴ In this regard, it notes that P-1339 testified that during the Bangui Attack, seemingly in Cattin, ‘a young Muslim who was on a motorcycle’ fell during a skirmish and ‘they’ killed him and torched his motorbike.⁶⁶³⁵ In the absence of any further information about the alleged victim and perpetrators, as well as on the circumstances of the alleged killing, the Chamber is unable to reach any conclusion in this regard.

5. Dislocation of Muslims from Boeing and Cattin

From 5 December 2013 onwards, the majority of Muslims of Boeing and Cattin, including Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, fled to PK5 in Bangui, while some others fled to other parts of the CAR, in the context of the attack by Mr Yekatom's group on Boeing and Cattin. Muslim persons who fled to PK5 continued to fear for their security because of the presence of the Anti-Balaka around PK5 and Bangui generally. With the influx of Muslims fleeing the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013, PK5 became overcrowded, practically uninhabitable, and unsafe. As a result, some Muslims, including Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, then fled to neighbouring countries fearing for their safety.

2678. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution points to two sets of events attributed to Mr Yekatom's group that led the Muslims to flee from Boeing and Cattin on 5 December 2013 to PK5. First, Mr Yekatom's 'attack against the Muslim civilian population of B[oeing] and C[attin] on 5 December 2013'.⁶⁶³⁶ Second, 'the crimes that his elements continued to commit, under his leadership, against this population' while based at Yamwara.⁶⁶³⁷ The Prosecution submits that Muslims from Boeing and Cattin fled to PK5 as this was 'the only safe place' for them in Bangui, and to other parts of the CAR and neighbouring countries.⁶⁶³⁸ The Prosecution submits that most of the displaced Muslims at PK5 were eventually evacuated to neighbouring countries, including Chad and Cameroon, in convoys secured by heavy military escorts.⁶⁶³⁹ The Prosecution argues that the 'forced departure of the Muslim civilian population from Bangui' was one of the 'objectives' of the Anti-Balaka who took part in the attack, including Mr Yekatom and his group.⁶⁶⁴⁰

2679. The Chamber will first address the evidence concerning Muslims fleeing Boeing and Cattin to PK5 and then turn to Muslims fleeing to other parts of the CAR and neighbouring countries.

2680. Before turning to its assessment, the Chamber recalls that PK5 is in the 3rd arrondissement.⁶⁶⁴¹ It is located next to Boeing neighbourhood with Cattin falling in between Boeing and PK5.⁶⁶⁴²

2681. In its assessment, the Chamber has considered evidence from witnesses, who were familiar with these locations, namely, Salehou Ndiaye, P-2682, P-1339 and P-0884. As set out in detail below, the Chamber finds that Muslims, including Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, fled Boeing and Cattin to PK5, other parts of the CAR, and to neighbouring countries.

2682. Amongst these accounts, the Chamber first notes those of Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, who described in detail how they and their families were forced to leave their homes and belongings behind and seek refuge and protection at PK5 and then in neighbouring countries. As set out below, Salehou Ndiaye fled from Cattin as a direct result of the events at the Boeing Mosque and Cattin.⁶⁶⁴³ P-2682 stayed in PK5 as a direct result of her husband's death during the events at the Boeing Market.⁶⁶⁴⁴

i. Salehou Ndiaye

2683. Salehou Ndiaye, who at the time was a resident of Cattin, explained that on 5 December 2013, he feared for his and his family's safety and was 'desperate to take them to a safe location'.⁶⁶⁴⁵ The Chamber recalls that he witnessed a killing in Cattin between 08:00 and 09:00 that morning,⁶⁶⁴⁶ and had heard gunshots from the direction of the Boeing Mosque.⁶⁶⁴⁷

2684. At around 11:00 or 12:00, Salehou Ndiaye heard from a Christian neighbour, whom he saw leaving with her two children, that her husband had called and told them to leave immediately because he had heard that 'the attack of the Anti-Balaka had failed and [...] they were now planning to return and kill all Muslims in the area'.⁶⁶⁴⁸ The witness then approached another Christian neighbour, who agreed to help him and gave him a ladder so that he and his family members – 11 in total – could climb over a three-meter wall and seek shelter at his compound.⁶⁶⁴⁹ Thereafter, a friend who lived in KM5, drove to Cattin to fetch them; Salehou Ndiaye and his family climbed over the wall back to their property; some of his family members left with his friend while others left with him in his car.⁶⁶⁵⁰

2685. Salehou Ndiaye said that they all went to KM5, which he considered ‘the only safe place to go as the majority of the population [was] Muslim’.⁶⁶⁵¹ He believed that they had no other option but to flee Cattin and that if they had stayed in the house they would have all been killed.⁶⁶⁵²

2686. Other members of Salehou Ndiaye’s family who were living at his older brother’s compound in Cattin managed to flee the area approximately three to four days after the Bangui Attack when the French Sangaris were present in the area.⁶⁶⁵³ They fled to KM5 and ‘SICA 3’ in Bangui.⁶⁶⁵⁴ He explained that the Anti-Balaka retreated and this gave his family members and other local Muslims ‘an opportunity to leave the area safely’.⁶⁶⁵⁵

2687. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Salehou Ndiaye, like many others, fled Cattin prompted by fear, having directly observed some of the events concerning the Boeing Mosque,⁶⁶⁵⁶ and Cattin. These fears were subsequently reinforced by the information received from and assistance provided by his Christian neighbours.

2688. In the case of Salehou Ndiaye’s family members and ‘other local Muslims’, who fled Cattin, the Chamber finds that these persons also fled because of the attacks on the Boeing Mosque and Cattin, which took place during the Bangui Attack. The Chamber notes that while this move only occurred three or four days after the events in Cattin, it finds that it was nonetheless because of the events in Cattin during the Bangui Attack. Salehou Ndiaye noted specifically that these persons left only when the French Sangaris were present in the area and the Anti-Balaka had retreated. In the same vein, the Chamber has also considered that ⁶⁶⁵⁵ P-1528 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2048-0757-R05, at 0764, para. 40. The Chamber notes that Salehou Ndiaye provided further details during his second interview, including that when he was in PK5, he received information that the Anti-Balaka were going to attack this compound as well as other Muslims who had stayed in the neighbourhood, so he called people living in that compound and told them to leave as soon as possible; after his phone call, all the people living in the compound fled to ‘SICA III’; thereafter, some stayed in Bangui while others fled to Cameroon and Chad (see P-1528 Second Statement, CAR-OTP-2121-2831-R01, at 2835, para. 26). When asked about his source of information, Salehou Ndiaye explained that when they were in the hangar, people talked and said that ‘the Anti-Balaka’ could be doing a ‘cleansing operation’ and ‘sort out the Muslims’ that night, and while these were rumours and it was impossible to check the information, it was best to take precautions (see P-1528: T-178, p. 31, line 24 – p. 32, line 23).

the witness stated that after news on the killing of Muslim traders at the Boeing Market spread, people started to leave, some on the same day, others within a few days after the attack.⁶⁶⁵⁷

2689. Salehou Ndiaye said that when they left their home in Cattin, they did not have time to take any possessions with them because they were ‘fleeing for [their] lives’.⁶⁶⁵⁸

2691. Salehou Ndiaye said that in June 2014, he returned to Bangui where he found ‘things still tense’ and noticed that all Muslims from the Boeing neighbourhood had fled.⁶⁶⁶¹ They had to disguise themselves to avoid being recognised as Muslims, which meant that they could not wear their traditional clothing or symbols, and they needed UN escorts to move around certain areas of Bangui.⁶⁶⁶² He went back to his family compound in Cattin on 26 January 2016 and found it ‘totally looted and mostly destroyed’.⁶⁶⁶³ His family was not compensated following the destruction of their compound.⁶⁶⁶⁴

unemployed at the time of his testimony but had to support and cover for his family's expenses.⁶⁶⁶⁶ He further described his family situation as follows:

Other than the financial problems, when you also have the family problems – you know, if you're poor that's one thing, but at least you can be together, but when you are not even together [...] it's difficult. It's really difficult. Even, you know, if you are together, you can at least share the burden. But the fact that I'm far away from my family and my family is far away from me, this is very difficult, and also it is very harmful for the schooling of my children.⁶⁶⁶⁷

2693. Salehou Ndiaye indicated that since he had returned to Bangui, he lived in a flat of a friend with one bedroom, a living room and a shower, and did not have the financial resources to bring his family back to Bangui to live with him.⁶⁶⁶⁸

2694. Salehou Ndiaye indicated that approximately two weeks after 5 December 2013, a neighbour called him and told him that all their homes had been looted.⁶⁶⁶⁹ Earlier, the deputy imam of the Boeing Mosque and the muezzin had told him that the mosque had been 'pillaged and subsequently destroyed'.⁶⁶⁷⁰ He also explained that except for his clothes and his car, he had to leave all his property behind when he fled his house, but at least he and most of his family were still alive:

Unfortunately, those were the consequences of these unfortunate events. And you can't really even measure the consequences. The consequences have been terrible for the people who have experienced this situation and I'm not the only one. Many people, both Muslims and Christians. Not only Muslims were victims, Christians too. I left my house on 5 December. On the way out, [...] there were other events. I left with my family, and just with the clothes on my back, some clothing and [...] my car. That's it. Everything else we left behind in the house. And a few days later, my neighbour called me and said, 'Neighbour, people are going into your house and they are emptying it.' And I said to her, 'Let them empty the house.' Because the son of the neighbour was in the house [...] I had asked him to stay in the house, to keep an eye on things. And when I heard that people had come to the house to vandalise the house, I said to my neighbour, 'Tell your son to get out of there. Possessions are nothing. Life is more important.' So the boy left and they looted my house. They left me nothing. Even documents, my diplomas, my children's birth certificates. They took everything. I thank God that I'm still alive. And most of my family is alive, with the exception of my brother-in-law who was murdered. Because, you know, a soul does not come back. Possessions, if I work hard, I can [...] buy some more. But when a soul is torn away from you, you cannot call that soul back. That bothers me the most. I have lost everything. I left the house with nothing except for my car and the clothes on my back.⁶⁶⁷¹

2695. Salehou Ndiaye also explained how the events emotionally affected him:

But anyway, you take life as it come[s]. And you had to save your skin. And that's what we did. But, you know, all these events, I think it's very difficult. It's very, very difficult to forget all that happened. It's very, very difficult, very difficult. And even to this day, when my mind rakes over it, it's a source of pain. And this is why I even avoid going to where I used to live. I avoid going there, because as soon as I go in the area, all this comes flooding back to me, and so I would spend a sleepless night then. So, [...] I'm basically, you know, almost on the floor here.⁶⁶⁷²

2696. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Salehou Ndiaye had to flee out of the CAR in the context of the attack on the Boeing Mosque and Cattin, which took place during the Bangui Attack.

ii. P-2682

2697. P-2682, who was a resident of Boeing at the time, described how rumours about an impending attack, and concerns for their safety, grew in the days immediately prior to the Bangui Attack.⁶⁶⁷³ On 3 December 2013, after telling her husband that she could no longer stay in Boeing, P-2682 told him that she would leave for PK5 with the children; once she arrived to PK5, she told her in-laws that her area in Boeing was in danger.⁶⁶⁷⁴ There was no indication, at that time, that she would be separated from her husband or that she would need to dislocate from Boeing. P-2682's husband stayed at the Boeing Market, was killed during the Bangui Attack and it is from PK5 that she learnt of his death.⁶⁶⁷⁵ P-2682 said that during the time she stayed at PK5 after the Bangui Attack, she did not leave the house to see what was happening outside because she was mourning her husband.⁶⁶⁷⁶

2699. P-2682 further said that after 5 December 2013 and fleeing to PK5, she went with her in-laws to the embassy so that they could be 'evacuated' to Chad.⁶⁶⁷⁸ In particular, she indicated that they waited at the embassy for a car to take them to the airport, from where they would take a plane; however, they learnt that the plane could not land because 'the Anti-Balaka had invaded the airport', so they waited at the embassy until the vehicle arrived.⁶⁶⁷⁹ She specified that there were many 'trucks to transport troops', that they had an escort from Chad who helped them get out of the CAR, and that eventually they were taken to N'Djamena.⁶⁶⁸⁰

2700. P-2682 described an encounter with the 'Anti-Balaka' along the way. In particular, she indicated that when they took the main route, Avenue des Martyrs, they met 'young people' who had machetes and sticks, or makeshift guns, gris-gris, and they threatened them and made gestures with their hands, saying, 'We're going to kill you. We're going to slit your throats'.⁶⁶⁸¹ She explained that she immediately identified them as Anti-Balaka ('you can't make a mistake') because of the way they were behaving: they were carrying gris-gris, had bush clothes, hunting arms and machetes, brooms to sweep the soil, and they were making throat-slitting gestures.⁶⁶⁸² She indicated that they were numerous, they could be seen all along the road 'even if you passed PK12', and those travelling were forced to lie down in the vehicle.⁶⁶⁸³ She indicated that there were also children throwing stones at them, at PK12 there were women with brooms making gestures and shouting, 'Leave, leave, we no longer want to see you here'.⁶⁶⁸⁴ She seemed to indicate that she knew that the women were civilians, while she identified 'the men with frizzy hair' and gris-gris as 'people who had come from the provinces to attack the town'.⁶⁶⁸⁵

2701.P-2682 explained that she lived in a displaced camp in Chad for 40 days, where they were given food; and since she had lost her husband, she could not really move, so the only thing they could do was to go out to go to the toilet.⁶⁶⁸⁶ Thereafter, she went to stay at the town of her in-laws in N'Djamena, her in-laws gave her a bit of money so that she could go to the market and prepare food.⁶⁶⁸⁷ When her in-laws told her that she should maybe go back to Bangui, she sold the plot where her house had been (and which had been destroyed) to obtain some money to return to Bangui.⁶⁶⁸⁸ She then returned to Bangui together with her in-laws, with whom she still lived at the time of her testimony, in a small house.⁶⁶⁸⁹ She estimated having spent about one year and two months in Chad.⁶⁶⁹⁰

2702.P-2682 explained that all these events really made her scared, she knew that if she had stayed in the CAR she would have also been killed and her in-laws told her that they could not leave her alone and they did not want to leave her behind so they told her to go with them until the situation went back to normal, and given the situation at the time, she did not really want to stay in the country anyway.⁶⁶⁹¹ P-2682 confirmed being particularly sad the day she left Bangui.⁶⁶⁹² She indicated that when she arrived in Chad, she did not miss anything because she had more or less the things that she wanted, somebody was looking after her, but she was really suffering because of the death of her husband.⁶⁶⁹³

2703. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that P-2682 had to flee to Chad in the context of the attack on the Boeing Market, which took place during the Bangui Attack.

iii. Fleeing to other locations in the CAR

2704. The Chamber received evidence on the fleeing of Muslim inhabitants of Cattin and Boeing to other parts of the CAR in the context of the attack in Boeing and Cattin, which took place during the Bangui Attack.

2705. The Chamber recalls that some of Salehou Ndiaye's family members fled to 'SICA 3' in Bangui approximately three to four days after the Bangui Attack.⁶⁶⁹⁴ The Chamber also notes the experience of Odette Namsona who fled to the refugee site at the M'Poko airport in Bangui, as described below.⁶⁶⁹⁵

2706. Odette Namsona, a non-Muslim resident of Bossangoa who was staying with her younger sister in Boeing at the relevant time when 'the children', referring to the Anti-Balaka, entered Bangui, testified that two days after the attack 'the inhabitants of the district' fled, including herself, who went to the airport.⁶⁶⁹⁶ The Chamber notes that while Odette Namsona indicated that Muslims in and around Bangui fled to PK5 running away from both the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka,⁶⁶⁹⁷ she seemed to link her own fleeing from Boeing to the Anti-Balaka's arrival thereto: 'I left Boeing when the Anti-Balaka arrived. [...] When they got there, there was fighting going on and people were firing everywhere. We fled and took refuge at the airport’,⁶⁶⁹⁸ ‘[w]hen the Anti-Balaka got to Bangui, two days after their arrival, it was no longer possible to stay at our home. We fled and took refuge at the airport’.⁶⁶⁹⁹

2707. Odette Namsona explained that she spent four weeks at the airport together with her children and daughters-in-law; thereafter, she stayed for one week at the ‘foyer’ looking for some work to have a bit of money; and then she went back to her husband in Boeing.⁶⁷⁰⁰

2708. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Muslims from Boeing and Cattin also fled to other locations in Bangui in the context of the attack in Boeing and Cattin on 5 December 2013.

iv. Fleeing to neighbouring countries

2709. In addition to the personal experiences of Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682 fleeing to neighbouring countries, the Chamber heard generally from P-2472, who stated that due to the continued insecurity, many Muslims wanted to leave Bangui and go to neighbouring countries.⁶⁷⁰¹ P-2472 stated that the Chadian army started evacuating people of Chadian origin and collected them with ‘heavily armed armoured vehicles’ from various locations around the CAR.⁶⁷⁰² He also stated that the Anti-Balaka attacked those who were evacuated by road.⁶⁷⁰³ D30-5014 said that the IOM evacuated some people, ‘[t]he president sent some trucks as well to evacuate’, and many countries sent planes ‘to repatriate their nationals’.⁶⁷⁰⁴

2710. The Chamber also heard from Anti-Balaka witnesses who recalled how Muslims were sent to Chad, Cameroon and ‘Congo’ with the assistance of the international and MISCA forces deployed in the CAR at the time. Considering their evidence in its totality below, the Chamber appreciates the scale of the movement of Muslims outside the CAR.

2711.P-0889 recalled that after 5 December 2013, Sangaris and MISCA began to ‘repatriate Muslims out of the territory’.⁶⁷⁰⁵

2712.Jean-Jacques Demafouth considered that ‘people themselves made that request’ and they ensured and assisted those who had resources to take flights while others took the road.⁶⁷⁰⁶ The witness recalled that there were many convoys in the border with Chad, Cameroon and ‘sometimes with Congo’.⁶⁷⁰⁷

2713.P-0876 stated that from 5 December 2013 and until Michel Djotodia’s resignation, convoys and flights were arranged by countries such as Chad and Senegal to get the Muslim citizens out of the country, which is why not many Muslim civilians were left except at Kilometre 5, where they were protected by the Seleka.⁶⁷⁰⁸ He explained that there was a ‘displacement’ of the Muslim population of Bangui towards the hinterland or to other countries.⁶⁷⁰⁹ Specifically regarding Chad, he indicated that there were 400 or 500 large trucks that could transport up to 80 people to Chad or elsewhere and detailed that they used trucks for cattle to transport Muslim ‘Chadian citizens’ who were in Bangui to the hinterland or to Chad.⁶⁷¹⁰

2715.P-0884 explained that the evacuation of the Chadian nationals started in January, February, and lasted ‘until Samba-Panza put an end because she believed that not everyone could leave like that’, ‘[t]hey were also Central Africans and, therefore, they should not necessarily leave the country’.⁶⁷¹¹ He said that the Chadian contingent of FOMAC escorted the Muslim population and shot ‘to make sure the local population wouldn’t attack the convoys’, which would otherwise ‘throw stones and others’.⁶⁷¹² P-0884 clarified that it was mainly the Chadian FOMAC, and no other contingents of the FOMAC, which started to shoot along the convoy until PK12 because they were escorting ‘their own fellow men’ and they wanted to ensure that their compatriots could leave.⁶⁷¹³

2716. Alfred Legrand Ngaya confirmed that as a consequence of the ‘uncontrolled anger’ of the civilian population towards Muslims of PK5 and other Muslims, the Muslim population of PK5 requested the support of the transitional government to be evacuated out of PK5.⁶⁷¹⁴ The witness said that ‘[f]ortunately’, there were international forces protecting the convoy going to Chad.⁶⁷¹⁵ He also indicated ‘[i]t was not all the Muslim communities’, ‘Malian and Senegalese Muslims’ remained and ‘were not bothered’.⁶⁷¹⁶

2717. Alfred Legrand Ngaya, who was in the Anti-Balaka leadership at the time, showed an express discriminatory attitude towards Muslims of Chadian or Sudanese descent when testifying in court. The witness said that it was ‘the Muslims from Chad and Sudan who caused problems’ and that due to their conduct, ‘the solution was that the Chadians should go back to their country’, so ‘convoys were organised for them to leave through the north exit of Bangui’.⁶⁷¹⁷ Alfred Legrand Ngaya indicated that ‘at one point, all Chadian nationals had to return to their country’, they left PK5 and took the road to the northern exit of Bangui, taking with them the properties they had ‘looted from non-Muslims’ and ‘taken to PK5’.⁶⁷¹⁸

v. Number of displaced persons

2718. As regards the number of victims, the Prosecution alleges that, at the end of December 2013, there were ‘nearly 100,000’ internally displaced persons in the third district of Bangui, where PK5 is located.⁶⁷¹⁹ It submits that this comprised (i) Muslim civilians of Boeing and Cattin; (ii) ‘thousands’ of Muslim civilians displaced from ‘other areas of Bangui’, who had also been forced to flee their homes due to the Bangui Attack; and (iii) ‘thousands’ of ‘displaced Muslims’ from the provinces, who had been victims of Anti-Balaka attacks there.⁶⁷²⁰

2721. Salehou Ndiaye said that there were other Muslim men, women and children who left on or after 5 December 2013 because they were targeted and had no alternative but to leave.⁶⁷²² This included those who did not place palm leaves on their front doors and risked being killed if they stayed, as they were not prepared to being attacked and they had no weapons.⁶⁷²³ The majority of these Muslims fled to ‘host families’ in PK5, some stayed in PK5 and others left, some might have returned to Boeing and Cattin two or three years after things calmed down.⁶⁷²⁴ Salehou Ndiaye indicated that some Muslims were able to return to the places where they lived before ‘the events’.⁶⁷²⁵ He was also aware of people who could not go back, including the muezzin of the Boeing Mosque, who still lived at PK5 at the time of the witness’s testimony, another individual crossed to Zongo and died there.⁶⁷²⁶

2722. The Chamber notes that Christian residents of Boeing at the time, namely Thierry Kpademona and P-1705, recalled Muslim families from Boeing fleeing to PK5 in the context of the attack on Boeing, which took place during the Bangui Attack.

2723. Thierry Kpademona, a Gbaya of Christian faith,⁶⁷²⁷ whose family also fled to the airport to seek refuge, stated that many Muslim families fled to PK5 ‘because of the 5th December attack’, fearing that they would be killed in what had ‘now’ become a fight between Christians and Muslims.⁶⁷²⁸ The witness recalled that many Muslims were killed by the Anti-Balaka because ‘they were caught up by surprise during the attack’, he saw bodies of his Muslim neighbours laying on the ground when the attack had quietened down.⁶⁷²⁹ Thierry Kpademona said that once ‘all the Muslims had fled’, things were ‘calmer’.⁶⁷³⁰

2724. P-1705 said that when ‘the Balaka’ arrived, the two communities were no longer living side by side peacefully and all the Muslims were ‘driven out’.⁶⁷³¹ P-1705 recalled that on 5 December 2013, ‘when there were shots fired’ in Boeing, some people took refuge in Kilometre 5 and others took shelter in their own homes and were killed by the Anti-Balaka, the houses and the mosque were destroyed.⁶⁷³² P-1705 specified that he knew it was the Anti-Balaka who killed them because ‘those who went to see what was going on’ told him about the events.⁶⁷³³

2725. The Chamber notes that elements belonging to Mr Yekatom’s group also attested to the fleeing of Muslim residents of Boeing and Cattin following the group’s attack on these locations but without specifying the numbers.

2728.Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, who joined Mr Yekatom's group in December 2013 when they were based in Yamwara,⁶⁷³⁹ testified that after the Bangui Attack, Muslims living in districts such as Boeing fled and gathered around Kilomètre 5, after which there were 'no more Muslims' living in those districts.⁶⁷⁴⁰

2729.The Chamber has also received evidence from witnesses who were in PK5 themselves at the relevant time, namely P-2472 and D29-5014, but who were unable to provide any estimates about the number of people in PK5 that had come from Boeing and Cattin at the relevant time. P-2472 stated that in Boeing, the attacks were intense and many Muslims living there were killed by the Anti-Balaka while 'the survivors' fled to PK5.⁶⁷⁴¹

2730.D29-5014 confirmed that she learnt that Anti-Balaka forces had killed individuals at the Boeing Market and that, as a consequence, many people sought refuge at Kilomètre 5, specifying that after 5 December 2013, while there were 'a few' Muslims that were still in 'the Christian neighbourhood', the 'majority' of the Muslims sought refuge in Kilomètre 5.⁶⁷⁴²

2731.In the Chamber's view, all of the above accounts generally illustrate the fleeing of Muslims from Boeing and Cattin to PK5 in the context of the attacks on 5 December 2013 in these locations.

2732.The Chamber has no accurate estimates of the number of Muslims that lived in Boeing and Cattin before and after the concerned events, except for those provided by Salehou Ndiaye, who stated that before 5 December 2013, around 100 Muslim families were living in Boeing and Cattin.⁶⁷⁴³ Nonetheless, the Chamber notes the abundant evidence on the case record pointing to the massive displacement of the Muslim population of Bangui to PK5 and to other parts within and outside of the CAR, in the context of the Bangui Attack.⁶⁷⁴⁴

vi. Circumstances further affecting the displaced persons

2733. In assessing the circumstances relevant to the allegations concerning displacement, the Chamber has considered (i) fear and threats to physical security; (ii) the lack of freedom of movement; (iii) the living conditions at PK5; and (iv) the fear of being identified as a Muslim following the events.

2734. As regards the climate of fear and threats to physical security, the Chamber finds that Muslims who fled to PK5 continued to feel threatened by the Anti-Balaka's presence around PK5 and Bangui generally. P-1865, who sought refuge at PK5 at the time, stated that they could not exit PK5 as they were afraid of the Anti-Balaka, who were in the other neighbourhoods of Bangui.⁶⁷⁴⁵

2735. P-2472 indicated that after the Bangui Attack, there were 'continuous attacks by the Anti-Balaka' against the Muslim population in Bangui for about three months, the Muslims living in PK5 were 'encircled' and could not get out, and they spent months unable to sleep, 'in constant fear of being attacked'.⁶⁷⁴⁶

2736. P-1666, a Muslim resident of Mbaïki who fled to PK5 in February 2014,⁶⁷⁴⁷ testified that the Muslims from all the neighbourhoods of Bangui and also from the provinces found themselves together in PK5.⁶⁷⁴⁸ He indicated that it was difficult to go out of the PK5 perimeter, '[y]ou would run the risk of being killed', '[i]t was impossible for those who were there to leave'.⁶⁷⁴⁹ He also indicated that the aim of the Anti-Balaka was 'to eradicate

Kilometre 5' and that their attacks were regular, coming there almost every day, they surrounded them and had their bases around Kilometre 5.⁶⁷⁵⁰

2738. Notably, P-0876, who claimed being the only member of the government who had been able to enter PK5 'at the peak of the crisis', witnessed the 'desolation' and indicated that they lived in an 'enclosure', they could no longer leave, even if they wanted to, they preferred to stay there and suffer as that meant they could stay alive.⁶⁷⁵¹

2739. P-0475 stated that he knew the Ali Babolo Mosque in the 3rd arrondissement but he did not go there 'during the crisis' because entry into KM5 was not possible.⁶⁷⁵² He also indicated that after 'that date', PK5 around the 3rd arrondissement became an enclave for those who lived there, including Muslims and Christians; those who lived in PK5 could not come out, and those outside PK5 could not have access to those neighbourhoods.⁶⁷⁵³

2740. The Chamber has also considered the Prosecution's submission that Mr Yekatom's group attacked PK5 'on several occasions' during this time, making it impossible to leave without risking being killed.⁶⁷⁵⁴ In the Chamber's view, the Prosecution did not point to any evidence specific and reliable enough showing that Mr Yekatom's group was attacking PK5 during this time.⁶⁷⁵⁵ Assessing P-2926's report and his testimony together in respect of the portions cited by the Prosecution, the Chamber cannot ascertain the source of his knowledge; as he acknowledged in court, 'when it comes to attacks at PK5, this is not mentioned in the 2741. At the same time, as set out below, the Chamber finds that the living conditions at PK5 made the environment practically uninhabitable. Witnesses described the living conditions in PK5 as difficult and dire, and highlighted the lack of food, medicines, basic sanitary conditions and rest.

2742. P-1865 stated that people were generous and shared their food; later, the 'PAM' distributed oil, rice and sometimes money to buy food, as they had nothing to eat.⁶⁷⁵⁸ P-1865 recalled not sleeping or eating well, the bathrooms were unclean, there was a lot of noise.⁶⁷⁵⁹ Similarly, P-2472 stated that they could not access food nor move outside of PK5 for fear of being attacked by the Anti-Balaka, saying it was easy to recognise a Muslim from the prayer marks.⁶⁷⁶⁰

2745. Moreover, the Chamber has received evidence showing that in the months that followed, the fear of being identified as a Muslim persisted. In the view of the Chamber, this further reinforced the decision taken by Muslims, such as Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, to flee to other countries and the fear of coming back to the CAR.

2746. D30-5014 explained that when she went back home to PK5 at least two months after January 2014, she and her children had to raise their veils and wear shorts to disguise themselves so that they would not be easily recognised as Muslims, for their own safety, to save their lives.⁶⁷⁶³ She explained that the fact that she could not wear her usual Muslim clothing on the way back to PK5 made her feel uneasy and uncomfortable, because as a Muslim she has to cover herself up.⁶⁷⁶⁴ She said that ‘the others had to do the same thing’ and ‘if I went to the trouble of disguising myself, it means that the others did the same thing’.⁶⁷⁶⁵

vii. Conclusion

2747. On the basis of the above, the Chamber finds that the majority of Muslims, including Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, fled Boeing and Cattin to PK5, while some others fled to other parts of the CAR, in the context of the attack by Mr Yekatom’s group on Boeing and Cattin. Muslim persons who fled to PK5 continued to fear for their security because of the presence of the Anti-Balaka around PK5 and Bangui generally. With the influx of Muslims fleeing the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013, PK5 became overcrowded, uninhabitable, and unsafe. As a result, some Muslims, including Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, then fled to neighbouring countries fearing for their safety. In this regard, the Chamber recalls the abundant evidence on the case record pointing to the massive displacement of the Muslim population of Bangui to PK5 and to other parts within and outside of the CAR, in the context of the Bangui Attack.

2748. During this period, the people who fled endured the loss of their family members, loss of their home, loss of their belongings, and sense of material and non-material unsafety for prolonged periods. During their stay in PK5, they lived through uninhabitable living conditions that aggravated this loss. P-2682 mourned her husband in this environment.

2749. The Chamber now turns to the link between these Muslims fleeing and actions attributed to Mr Yekatom's group.

2750. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that the Prosecution's case relies on 'dual false premises', first being that the departure of Muslims caused by the events in Boeing and Cattin from 5 December 2013 onward can automatically be attributed to Mr Yekatom's group; and second that the 'military operations' in this period by Mr Yekatom's group were unlawful.⁶⁷⁶⁶

2751. As regards the first argument, the Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence submits that the Boeing Market events did not lead to the departure of Muslims from Boeing and Cattin,⁶⁷⁶⁷ and the same applies to departures caused by combat between Mr Yekatom's group and 'PK5-based Seleka and/or Muslim self-defence groups'.⁶⁷⁶⁸

2752. This has not been borne out by the evidence. In this respect, the Chamber recalls its evidentiary analysis and findings in respect of the involvement of Mr Yekatom's group in the events at the Boeing Market, Boeing Mosque and Cattin.⁶⁷⁶⁹ The Chamber further recalls its conclusions on the evidence provided by Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682.⁶⁷⁷⁰

2753. As regards the second argument, the Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence argues that the operations of Mr Yekatom's group on 5 December 2013 were not unlawful and therefore, Mr Yekatom is not liable for Muslims leaving these locations during or due to these operations.⁶⁷⁷¹ Having regard to its conclusions concerning the nature of these operations further below,⁶⁷⁷² the Chamber finds that this argument also has no effect on the conclusions reached herein.

2754. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that multiple armed groups were present and active in Boeing/Cattin, prior to, during and after 5 December 2013 and therefore, responsibility cannot be ‘automatically attributed’ to Mr Yekatom’s group.⁶⁷⁷³ The Yekatom Defence also points to the ‘multiplicity of reasons’ that caused Muslims of Boeing/Cattin to depart, including (i) ‘indiscriminate reprisal attacks’ on civilians by the Seleka in Boeing/Cattin on 5 December 2013 and the following days;⁶⁷⁷⁴ (ii) ‘rumours of imminent “anti-balaka” attacks on Muslims’;⁶⁷⁷⁵ (iii) the ‘veritable explosion of anti-Muslim hostility and mob violence on the part of the civilian population’ which ‘effectively rendered Bangui (with the exception of PK5) uninhabitable for Muslims’;⁶⁷⁷⁶ and (iv) generalised insecurity that followed the Seleka period.⁶⁷⁷⁷

2755. The Chamber considers that while it is true that responsibility cannot be ‘automatically’ attributed to Mr Yekatom’s group, it is also true that the purported presence of other groups does not negate the responsibility of Mr Yekatom’s group.

2756. Indeed, the surrounding context of the alleged Seleka reprisals, the communal violence, and atmosphere of insecurity cannot be ignored. However, in the view of the Chamber, these circumstances did not intervene in the link between the actions attributed to Mr Yekatom’s group and the fleeing of Muslims. They contributed to it.

2757. The same reasoning applies to the purported presence of other armed groups in Boeing and Cattin at the time. Furthermore, the Chamber has received no reliable evidence that there were other groups present in Boeing and Cattin on 5 December 2013. Significantly, as is made clear by Salehou Ndiaye’s and P-2682’s evidence, these Muslims linked their flight to the events which are attributed to Mr Yekatom’s group and no other.

2758. The Chamber now turns to the Prosecution’s argument that the Muslims in Boeing and Cattin fled also in the context of ‘the crimes that [Mr Yekatom’s] elements continued to commit’ while later based at Yamwara.⁶⁷⁷⁸

2759. In this regard, the Chamber has considered Salehou Ndiaye's account concerning his brother-in-law who was interrogated, beheaded, and buried by the 'Anti-Balaka' between 12 and 17 December 2013 in Boeing.⁶⁷⁷⁹ The Chamber also noted Thierry Kpademona's evidence concerning the exhumation of bodies in Boeing.⁶⁷⁸⁰ Without more, the Chamber is unable to conclude that the person that Salehou Ndiaye talked of is the person buried at the location that Thierry Kpademona spoke of. Having considered the description provided by Salehou Ndiaye, the Chamber did not find sufficient indicia linking this incident to the Bangui Attack. Salehou Ndiaye appeared to be referring to events that took place in Boeing between 12 and 17 December 2013 and do not appear to concern in any way the attack by Mr Yekatom's group in Boeing of Cattin on 5 December 2013. Same is true for P-1654's family moving away from Boeing towards the end of December 2013.⁶⁷⁸¹

C. The attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013

2760. On 5 December 2013, the same day on which Bangui was attacked by several Anti-Balaka groups,⁶⁷⁸² the town of Bossangoa was attacked by other Anti-Balaka groups, in coordination with those engaged in Bangui (the 'Bossangoa Attack').

2761. Prior to these two attacks, as discussed above, Anti-Balaka groups launched offensives in Bossangoa and villages in its surroundings.⁶⁷⁸³ These offensives were launched with a view to seizing weapons and ammunition to attack Bossangoa and subsequently Bangui.⁶⁷⁸⁴ The Chamber also recalls in this context its discussion of the advance of Anti-Balaka groups towards Bangui.⁶⁷⁸⁵

2762. While the Anti-Balaka advanced through the provinces and were active in the Bossangoa area, the Seleka maintained two checkpoints in Bossangoa town, at the northern entrance⁶⁷⁸⁶

2765. From the evidence before it, in particular as provided by Odette Namsona⁶⁸⁰² and P-2453,⁶⁸⁰³ the Chamber is unable to conclude that this base still existed at the time of the Bossangoa Attack. Rather, based on the testimony of P-2049, who lived close to this school at the

The Chamber notes that P-2049 appeared to state that the Seleka checkpoint was not located at the SOCOCA or SOCADA sites, also known as 'cellule coton' (see P-2049: T-102, p. 19, lines 6-21). Noting that the SOCOCA site was marked on the map shown to P-2049 as Sangaris base, P-2049 expressed doubt as to whether the Seleka and Sangaris could have shared the same site (see P-2049: T-103, p. 55, line 16 – p. 56, line 16; Map, CAR-OTP-2118-9140 (showing 'SDIC Coton RCA (Base SANGARIS)'; see also Map (annotated by P-2049), CAR-REG-0001-0003). In this regard, the Chamber takes into account that P-2049 stated that the Sangaris arrived in Bossangoa after the Bossangoa Attack (see P-2049: T-103, p. 26, line 7 – p. 28, line 11) and that the map shown to him is dated 23 July 2014, therefore not overlapping with the time period at which Seleka would have been present in Bossangoa.

The Chamber notes in this regard that the witness fled to the École de la Liberté after the first attack in Bossangoa in September 2013, until being transported to Chad on 15 February 2014 (see P-2453 Statement, CAR-OTP-2111-0415-R04, at 0427-28, paras 56-57, at 0428, para. 61, at 0433, para. 85, at 0435, para. 97).

time,⁶⁸⁰⁴ the Chamber concludes that the Seleka briefly had a temporary base in or around Boro school in September 2013.

1. Unfolding of the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013

On 5 December 2013, in coordination with the Anti-Balaka attack on Bangui on the same day, Anti-Balaka elements, divided into two groups led by Florent Kema and Théophile Ndangba, respectively, carried out an attack on the town of Bossangoa. The attack started at approximately 13:00 and lasted until the late afternoon or early evening.

During the attack, the Anti-Balaka targeted residential areas, including the Boro neighbourhood, generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood in Bossangoa, with the intention of showing that the Anti-Balaka were attacking not only Bangui but also in the provinces, and to ‘free’ the town from Seleka and all Muslims, thereby targeting Muslim civilians and drawing no distinction between them and the Seleka. During the attack, the Anti-Balaka was well armed, with some AK-47s and RPGs, as well as hunting weapons.

2766. For the factual findings in this section, the Chamber relies primarily on the evidence of the following witnesses which, subject to discrete aspects discussed below, it finds particularly reliable: Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana and P-2602, the Anti-Balaka insiders who participated in the Bossangoa Attack; P-2462, P-2657, P-2049 and P-2200, Muslim civilians who were living in Bossangoa during the events.

i. Arrival in Bossangoa

2767. The Anti-Balaka from Gobere arrived near Bossangoa a few days before the Bossangoa Attack. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana, an Anti-Balaka element who participated in the Bossangoa Attack, stated that he was secretary for chief Alexis Mandago (also known as ‘Sol Sol’),⁶⁸⁰⁵ who told them that their group was going with Florent Kema and Ndangba to Bossangoa.⁶⁸⁰⁶ The witness testified that the Anti-Balaka arrived 30 kilometres away from Bossangoa between 2 and 3 December 2013 and, as they did not expect to attack Bossangoa on 5 December, had a three-day fast to ask for God’s blessings prior to fighting.⁶⁸⁰⁷

⁶⁸⁰⁴ P-2049: T-102, p. 18, line 21 – p. 19, line 5 (the witness explained that the Seleka had a base at the École mixte de Boro for a maximum of two days).

2768.P-2602 stated that the FACA leaders of various Anti-Balaka groups were in contact with each other via phone or via a messenger.⁶⁸⁰⁸ P-2602 stated that four days before the Bossangoa Attack, Anti-Balaka leaders met five kilometres from Bossangoa at the cemetery and voted that on 5 December 2013⁶⁸⁰⁹ they were going to attack Bossangoa, Bouar, and Bangui.⁶⁸¹⁰ P-2602 stated that the attack on Bossangoa was to take place at 14:00 and the attack on Bangui at 05:00.⁶⁸¹¹

2769.P-2602 stated that some military men native to Bossangoa⁶⁸¹² were sent ahead in the night,⁶⁸¹³ they blocked the road for them on the day of the Bossangoa Attack at around 14:00.⁶⁸¹⁴ P-2602 further mentioned that these Bossangoa natives were guiding them to particular areas of Bossangoa during the Bossangoa Attack.⁶⁸¹⁵

ii. Anti-Balaka members involved in the Bossangoa Attack

2770.The evidence as outlined below shows that Florent Kema led the Bossangoa Attack. Florent Kema was under the command of Dedane in Gobere, and was chosen by Dedane as the ComZone of Bossangoa before the Bossangoa Attack. Witnesses stated that ComZone

Florent Kema⁶⁸¹⁶ was a FACA member⁶⁸¹⁷ and had worked as a PG.⁶⁸¹⁸ After Dedane's death subsequent to the Bangui Attack,⁶⁸¹⁹ Florent Kema took over Dedane's position and became the Anti-Balaka ComZone in the prefecture of Ouham⁶⁸²⁰ and later a member of parliament.⁶⁸²¹

⁶⁸¹⁶ The Chamber notes that Jo-Brice Ouabi Dana did not mention the first name of Kema and refers to him as 'Kema' or 'ComZone Kema'. Considering that the witness explained that Kema was a ComZone in Bossangoa and was a FACA member, the Chamber is of the view that he was referring to Florent Kema (see P-0966 Statement, CAR-OTP-2031-0241-R03, at 0247, para. 33). Regarding Florent Kema being the ComZone of Bossangoa without indication of specific dates or periods, see P-0889 Interview Transcript, CAR-OTP-2122-8112-R02, at 8135-36, lines 811-854 (stating that Florent Kema was the head of the Anti-Balaka group in Bossangoa and that Maxime Mokom from Zongo was in contact with him); P-2269 Statement, CAR-OTP-2111-0336-R01, at 0354, para. 135 (stating that Ndangba and Kema were ComZones in Bossangoa). See also P-0287 Statement, CAR-OTP-2115-0239-R01, at 0264, paras 123-125, at 0265, para. 131, at 0266, para. 137 (stating that during his interview with Florent Kema on 18 April 2015, Florent Kema was the regional coordinator of Ouham and controlling one of the two groups of Anti-Balaka in Bossangoa with Dorassio and Dangba); P-1521: T-082, p. 37, line 18 – p. 38, line 6 (stating that, in 2014, Florent Kema was the prefectural coordinator of Ouham and commander of the zone of Nana-Bakassa); D30-4496 Statement, CAR-D30-0022-0001-R03, at 0009, para. 46 (stating that she knew Florent Kema, former deputy of Bossangoa who was in the Anti-Balaka); P-2133 Statement, CAR-OTP-2093-0267-R02, at 0278, para. 82 (stating that the Anti-Balaka leader in Benzambé went by the name Kema, a former PG); P-0884: T-055, p. 30, lines 3-14 (stating that Florent Kema was military and in Gobere when being shown List, CAR-OTP-2030-0280). The Chamber notes that P-2658 stated that Kema was not a soldier (see P-2658: T-134, p. 55, lines 5-6). It notes that P-2658's account is contrary to that of other witnesses, and as P-2658 stated that he did not know Kema personally (see P-2658: T-135, p. 59, lines 18-25), it does not rely on P-2658's account in this regard.

2771. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana testified that Dedane appointed Kema as the Anti-Balaka ComZone⁶⁸²² when they were in Bossembélé before the 5 December 2013 attack on Bossangoa.⁶⁸²³

2772. Théophile Ndangba⁶⁸²⁴ was chosen as ComZone Florent Kema's deputy.

2773. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana and P-2602 both stated that Théophile Ndangba was from Kabo and a FACA member.⁶⁸²⁵ Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana testified that Ndangba was Florent Kema's deputy and was supposed to be chosen as the ComZone of Bossangoa, but Dedane chose Florent Kema as the ComZone.⁶⁸²⁶

2774. P-2602 stated that Théophile Ndangba was the leader of a group in Gobere⁶⁸²⁷ and was under the command of Danboy Dedane.⁶⁸²⁸ P-2602 stated that Florent Kema was senior to Théophile Ndangba when they were based at Gobere.⁶⁸²⁹

2775. As to other Anti-Balaka elements involved in the Bossangoa Attack, Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that before they set off to attack Bossangoa, ComZone Kema appointed him company chief.⁶⁸³⁰ He kept the register of Anti-Balaka companies and their members and provided them to ComZone Florent Kema who would forward those lists to Maxime Mokom in Zongo.⁶⁸³¹ 2776.P-2602 stated that Anti-Balaka groups came to Bossangoa from different directions: Théophile Ndangba from Benzambé,⁶⁸³² a group from Ouham-Bac direction led by Alexis Mandago,⁶⁸³³ and Florent Kema's group from Bowaye.⁶⁸³⁴ P-2602 stated that there were Anti-Balaka groups coming from Zere led by Dedane's group and from the airport.⁶⁸³⁵ P-2602, however, later confirmed that Dedane was progressing towards Bangui on 5 December 2013 and was not in Bossangoa⁶⁸³⁶ and that Dedane's elements were not involved in the Bossangoa Attack.⁶⁸³⁷ P-2602 further stated that he did not speak to Dedane on 5 December 2013 on the telephone.⁶⁸³⁸ Concerning the attack from the airport, P-2602 clarified that the airport attacked was the airport in Bangui and that Houranti and Bama participated in the Bangui Attack, not the Bossangoa Attack.⁶⁸³⁹ The Chamber accepts this evidence.

iii. Objectives of the attack

⁶⁸³¹ P-0966 Statement, CAR-OTP-2031-0241-R03, at 0247, para. 36; P-0966: T-116, p. 14, line 21 – p. 15, line 13. ⁶⁸³⁶ P-2602 Interview Transcript, CAR-OTP-2118-9714-R01, at 9175, lines 32-35. The Chamber notes that P-2049, a Muslim civilian who lived in Bossangoa at the relevant time, testified that Dedane participated in the Bossangoa Attack, as he heard that those involved in the Bossangoa Attack were Dedane, 'Dangba' and Florent Kema (see P-2049: T-101, p. 33, line 18 – p. 35, line 1). Considering P-2049's remote information on this, and bearing in mind that he sought refuge at the École de la Liberté in the course of the attack without seeing Anti-Balaka elements that day (see P-2049: T-103, p. 65, lines 2-9), the Chamber does not rely on this aspect of P-2049's testimony.

2778. In particular, Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that the objective was to free Bossangoa and then march towards the capital, Bangui, to recapture it.⁶⁸⁴⁰ The witness further stated that their task was to occupy the centre of Bossangoa and free Bossangoa so Christians could live in peace after having sought refuge in the Catholic Church and getting stuck there.⁶⁸⁴¹

2779. P-1577, a photojournalist who was present in Bossangoa during and after the attack, stated that a few days after the attack on 5 December 2013, he travelled with Anti-Balaka elements who said that they had taken part in the Bossangoa Attack, that they were attacking the Muslims to try to force them out of the area that they were living in, that Bossangoa was theirs and they did not want Muslims there, that the CAR was for Central Africans, and they did not want Muslims in the country.⁶⁸⁴² P-1577 stated that the language used ‘felt a lot harder [...] post the attack on 5 December than on previous occasions’.⁶⁸⁴³

2780. Furthermore, P-2453 testified that when he was caught by the Anti-Balaka on 6 September 2013, he heard the Anti-Balaka discuss among themselves that ‘Caporal Florent K[ema]’ had told them ‘to kill all Muslims. Not to leave them alive’.⁶⁸⁴⁴

chase out all the Seleka, and while Florent Kema spoke about this as an ongoing objective, he did not mention from when this had been their main aim.⁶⁸⁴⁵

2784. P-2200 explained that when the Seleka arrived in Bossangoa, they met with the prefect and three days later, the imam and 11 members of his mosque went to greet them at the prefect’s residence, to bless and advise them as they were in charge of the country, to treat Christians and Muslims equally, also stating that the Christian population was not happy to see the Seleka arrive because they were predominantly opposed to the new Seleka government.⁶⁸⁴⁸

⁶⁸⁴⁷ P-2049: T-103, p. 41, lines 7-13. P-2049 also commented on a BBC news report of 4 November 2013 according to which ‘[a]t Muslim Friday prayers, some people came into the mosque leaving their shoes outside but not their Kalashnikovs’ (see Press article, CAR-OTP-2001-4118, at 4119), stating that the majority of the Seleka were Muslims and came every Friday to the mosque to pray (see P-2049: T-103, p. 43, line 24 – p. 45, line 12). He confirmed that arms could have been hidden in the mosque, and further stated that the rule was that Muslims cannot enter the mosque with weapons and knives, but no one had the power to prevent the Seleka officials from entering the mosque with weapons (see P-2049: T-103, p. 45, line 15 – p. 46, line 5). P-2049 further commented on a UN mission report according to which on 19 December 2013, Anti-Balaka stole weapons stored in a barn in the Boro neighbourhood belonging to the imam’s deputy (see Report, CAR-OTP-2110-0915, at 0919, para. 24), stating that individuals did join the Seleka at the beginning of the events, but he had not heard that arms were found under the carpets in the prayer hall or the barn of the imam’s deputy in the days or weeks following 5 December 2013 (see P-2049: T-103, p. 68, lines 3-10, p. 72, line 10 – p. 73, line 5). In relation to this report, the Chamber also notes its considerations above (see footnote 3609 above).

2785. Other witnesses provided information based on what they heard or what the population's 'feeling' appears to have been at the time.⁶⁸⁴⁹

2786. Specifically, Odette Namsona, neighbourhood chief in the 2nd arrondissement in Bossangoa at the time, stated that Seleka were visiting the houses of Muslims, that she heard the Seleka visited Gara Iné and Bichara who were traders close to the imam, that the Seleka invaded all the districts of the city, especially the Arab quarter, stayed in Muslim compounds, and occupied the Boro school next to the Arab neighbourhood.⁶⁸⁵⁰

2787. D30-4608, without detailing the source for his claims, stated that the large houses in Boro were occupied by the Seleka leaders, the Muslims of Bossangoa had always been armed, even before the arrival of the Seleka, it was 'well known' that there were weapons at mosques, the Seleka gave weapons to the Muslims, and that some of the Muslims joined the Seleka, giving examples of individuals who joined or were armed.⁶⁸⁵¹

2788. Michel Ningando, a priest in Bossangoa who stayed in Bangui for extended periods at the time, heard from some Christian youths that the Seleka gave money and weapons to some local youths, some of which followed them to Bangui while others stayed in Bossangoa and stated that the general feeling amongst the Christian population was that the Muslims were aligned with the Seleka because on their arrival, they went straight to the Muslim neighbourhood Boro, and the Seleka would eat with the Muslims.⁶⁸⁵² The witness believed that not all of the Muslims supported the Seleka.⁶⁸⁵³

2789. On the basis of the above, and as also outlined in relation to the CAR more generally,⁶⁸⁵⁴ the Chamber concludes that some Muslims in Bossangoa joined the Seleka, and that some Muslims collaborated with the Seleka, but that the great majority did not join the Seleka nor were they armed at the time of the Bossangoa Attack, as further discussed below.⁶⁸⁵⁵ The Chamber considers that this is underscored by the evidence showing that thousands of Muslims indeed fled to the *École de la Liberté*⁶⁸⁵⁶ in light of the Anti-Balaka engaging in the Bossangoa Attack.⁶⁸⁵⁷

iv. The attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013

a. Coordination of the Bossangoa Attack with the Bangui Attack

2790. The evidence before the Chamber shows that the Anti-Balaka groups that had come to Bossangoa, upon hearing that the Bangui Attack had taken place, started their attack in Bossangoa to ensure both attacks were coordinated.

2791. In particular, Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana testified that at 05:00 on 5 December 2013, they heard over RFI radio that Bangui had been attacked.⁶⁸⁵⁸ P-2602 similarly stated that before they attacked Bossangoa, they heard about the Bangui Attack and that some of their men had died.⁶⁸⁵⁹

2792. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that at around 06:00 or 07:00,⁶⁸⁶⁰ the ComZones told them that Bangui had been attacked and to be ready.⁶⁸⁶¹ Florent Kema and Romain received instructions in a phone call and relayed that ‘the chiefs, the superiors had told’ them to attack Bossangoa.⁶⁸⁶² The witness stated that Florent Kema did not give them the identity or names of those chiefs.⁶⁸⁶³ The witness stated that after the Bangui Attack, they had to attack

⁶⁸⁵⁵ See paragraphs 2811-2814 below.

⁶⁸⁵⁶ The Chamber notes that witnesses mentioned the name of the school such as ‘École Liberté’, ‘Ecole Liberté’, ‘Ecole Liberte’, ‘Liberty school’, ‘École de Liberté’. The Chamber considers that they are the different variations of the name referring to the same ‘École de la Liberté’, and has used ‘École de la Liberté’ for uniformity.

Bossangoa to show that the movement had national reach, and that as the movement had been established in Gobere, the superiors coordinating wanted to ensure that the attack was coordinated so as to give greater visibility to the movement.⁶⁸⁶⁴

2793.P-2602 stated that Théophile Ndangba received calls from Bangui from his Gobere colleagues who were with the chiefs, referring to Mobam, Andjilo and Benjamin, who wanted to know why Bossangoa had not been attacked as agreed.⁶⁸⁶⁵ It was explained that they were waiting to launch the attack at 14:00 in line with tradition⁶⁸⁶⁶ that they had consulted.⁶⁸⁶⁷ P-2269, an Anti-Balaka element who participated in the Bangui Attack, stated that, in addition to Bangui, they planned to attack in other regions on 5 December 2013, mentioning Damara and Bossangoa, but some attacks did not take place because ‘they’ needed more time.⁶⁸⁶⁸

2794.P-2602 stated that they were communicating with Richard Bejouane⁶⁸⁶⁹ from Bangui, who was told that they were waiting to attack.⁶⁸⁷⁰ He stated that during or after the Bossangoa Attack, Théophile Ndangba was also in contact with Maurice from the 4th arrondissement at Cité Jean XXIII.⁶⁸⁷¹

2795.Furthermore, and bearing in mind Maxime Mokom’s role in coordinating throughout the advance of the various Anti-Balaka groups towards Bangui as well as towards Bossangoa,⁶⁸⁷² the Chamber notes the evidence of P-2602 who stated that on 5 December at about 11:28, Maxime Mokom called Théophile Ndangba to find out whether Mokom’s relatives were safe.⁶⁸⁷³ P-2602 stated that Maxime Mokom had first called Florent Kema, who gave him Théophile Ndangba’s phone number to enquire about his family.⁶⁸⁷⁴ P-2602

stated that Maxime Mokom had been calling Théophile Ndangba from late 2013 to early 2014, for four months, to find out what was going on in the CAR and with his relatives and properties whilst he was abroad, and Théophile Ndangba told him about Seleka operations and attacks on people in the small villages.⁶⁸⁷⁵ P-2602 stated that Théophile Ndangba was in Bodoro where Maxime Mokom's grandparents were located, but did not know where Maxime Mokom was calling from.⁶⁸⁷⁶

b. Unfolding of the attack

2796. To conduct the attack on Bossangoa, the Anti-Balaka divided into two groups.

2797. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that, before the attack, they divided into two groups, one led by Florent Kema and the other by Ndangba.⁶⁸⁷⁷ P-2602 stated that before the Bossangoa Attack, the Anti-Balaka groups were located in and nearby Bossangoa, surrounding the town.⁶⁸⁷⁸

2798. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana testified that Florent Kema's group was to attack from behind the Maria radio station.⁶⁸⁷⁹ P-2602 stated that Alexis Mandago's group came from Ouham-Bac direction to block the bridge leading to Bossangoa⁶⁸⁸⁰ and Florent Kema's group came from Bowaye and passed through Benzambé, near Ouham river, crossing Zoudame, and arriving in the Sembe neighbourhood.⁶⁸⁸¹ P-2602 stated that in the last contact between Florent Kema and Théophile Ndangba, the former was crossing the Zoudame river, at Radio Maria, by the Catholic mission.⁶⁸⁸² This group included 'Charlie', who P-2602 stated came from Bangui, 2799. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that he was in Ndangba's group which took the main road to Bossangoa,⁶⁸⁸⁵ approaching from Benzambé in the north where there was a Seleka base near the cemetery.⁶⁸⁸⁶ He stated that they attacked the Seleka posted outside the entrance of Bossangoa,⁶⁸⁸⁷ towards the cemetery.⁶⁸⁸⁸

2800. P-2602 confirmed that Théophile Ndangba was one of the leaders,⁶⁸⁸⁹ who approached Bossangoa through the main road of Benzambé.⁶⁸⁹⁰ P-2602 stated that Théophile Ndangba attacked the secondary position of the Seleka at the Kafa cemetery.⁶⁸⁹¹ P-2602 stated that during the attack, Théophile Ndangba had seven sections chiefs and 207 people.⁶⁸⁹²

2801. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that they left at 09:00 to attack Bossangoa at 13:00.⁶⁸⁹³ P-2602 stated that it was decided that the Bossangoa Attack was to start at 14:00 in accordance with tradition.⁶⁸⁹⁴ Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana and P-2602 each stated that they approached from Benzambé in the north where there was a Seleka base near the cemetery⁶⁸⁹⁵ and attacked and fought against the Seleka in military uniform.⁶⁸⁹⁶ Minutes after the attack started at 14:00, Théophile Ndangba was struck by a bullet in his leg.⁶⁸⁹⁷

2803. Other witnesses similarly testified to hearing gunshots/detonations from around 13:00⁶⁸⁹⁹ or 14:00.⁶⁹⁰⁰

2804. As they were advancing, the group under lead of Théophile Ndangba attacked the Boro neighbourhood. Boro was one of the Muslim neighbourhoods of Bossangoa.⁶⁹⁰¹ Areas going further south included Arabe and Fulbe.⁶⁹⁰²

2805. Specifically, Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that they went to Boro because this location had been indicated to them as a Seleka post or base, and they found the Seleka there and attacked.⁶⁹⁰³ The witness did not know whether there were Muslims in Boro because he did not know the town.⁶⁹⁰⁴ He testified that while they were advancing towards the Boro neighbourhood, they were struck by bullets by some Seleka in the trees.⁶⁹⁰⁵

2806.P-2602 similarly stated that Théophile Ndangba was already injured but was firing at the Seleka who were shooting at them as the Anti-Balaka progressed through Boro neighbourhood to Moniyondo.⁶⁹⁰⁶ P-2602 also stated that some Seleka were at their secondary positions, others at home, but had weapons.⁶⁹⁰⁷

2807.P-2049 stated that the Anti-Balaka went to the Arabe and Fulbe quarters to neutralise the Seleka.⁶⁹⁰⁸ P-2049 clarified that on 5 December 2013, he was at the École de la Liberté and did not see the Anti-Balaka, but heard from others who witnessed it.⁶⁹⁰⁹

2808.Michel Ningando heard that the Anti-Balaka came from the north of Bossangoa and came close to the Muslim neighbourhood of Boro.⁶⁹¹⁰

2809.P-1577 stated that he was driving out of the imam's house at around 13:00⁶⁹¹¹ and that the Seleka camp was in the main town, at least several kilometres away from where he was.⁶⁹¹² While driving out of the imam's house, just as the firing started, P-1577 passed a group of Seleka troops at the marketplace in the centre of town.⁶⁹¹³ The Seleka were in light brown pick-up trucks, and had weapons he could not identify as they were passing.⁶⁹¹⁴ The Seleka was moving in the direction towards where the imam's house was but P-1577 did not know whether they were going to the imam's house.⁶⁹¹⁵

2810.As the Anti-Balaka were attacking, they were well armed. Indeed, P-1577 stated that as he was driving away from the imam's house at around 13:00, the Anti-Balaka were behind them using Kalashnikovs or AK light weapons and RPGs.⁶⁹¹⁶ It was clear that it was coming from the direction of the imam's house and that it was the Anti-Balaka using these weapons.⁶⁹¹⁷ P-2200 similarly saw the Anti-Balaka armed with 'Kalas' (AK) and 'rockets', they were more heavily armed compared to the first attack in September.⁶⁹¹⁸ While P-2602 stated that two FACA in Florent Kema's group had an AK-47 while the rest, civilians, had hunting weapons,⁶⁹¹⁹ he further confirmed that in Théophile Ndangba's group the latter had an automatic weapon (FM-DKM) and two other FACA members also had automatic weapons, in addition to the group having an RPG and a 'Galil', both of which were used during the attack against the Seleka.⁶⁹²⁰ Bearing in mind this witness's role in the attack, the Chamber does not consider his statement about the civilians in his group being armed with hunting rifles to distract from its overall conclusion that the Anti-Balaka conducting the attack was well armed.

2811. In relation to whom the Anti-Balaka attacked while advancing through Bossangoa, the Chamber notes the evidence of Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana, an Anti-Balaka element who participated in the attack, according to which they assumed that if someone stayed in a house as opposed to fleeing, the person had a weapon to defend himself.⁶⁹²¹ According to Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana, the attack was against the Seleka who were bearing arms, but he could not know who was military or civilian and fought all individuals bearing arms.⁶⁹²² The Chamber considers this evidence in the context of the same witness's explanation according to which 'whoever was a Muslim was a Seleka' in Bossangoa,⁶⁹²³ and that for Christians of Bossangoa to 'live in peace' and go 'back to their lives', the Anti-Balaka 'cleansed' the houses in Bossangoa because the houses were 'dirty of the Seleka'.⁶⁹²⁴ It can be inferred from the

2812. Further in this regard, the Chamber notes that P-2200 stated that as there were not many Seleka at the time of the attack on 5 December 2013, in the afternoon, the Seleka distributed weapons to certain Muslim men who knew how to use them, so that they could defend their families.⁶⁹²⁶

2813. P-2602 stated that he saw the Muslim population fleeing to the École de la Liberté and that some of them were armed with the same weapons that the Seleka were using, namely the 12-7 mounted on top of vehicles.⁶⁹²⁷ He stated that the Peuhl were also armed and shooting at them.⁶⁹²⁸ P-2602 stated that he did not see any of the Christian population of Bossangoa in the neighbourhood as he advanced; at that time they were at the bishop's house and there was nobody moving.⁶⁹²⁹

2814. On the basis of the above, and contrary to the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that a large proportion of Muslim civilians actively participated in the Bossangoa Attack,⁶⁹³⁰ the Chamber finds that while some Muslim civilians may have been armed during the Bossangoa Attack, the large majority were not, as is also evidenced by their fleeing in great numbers to the École de la Liberté in the face of the attack. Regarding the Ngaïssona Defence's arguments on specific alleged victims being armed during the Bossangoa Attack, the Chamber will discuss each of these individuals below.

⁶⁹²⁵ The Chamber notes in this regard also the evidence of Michel Ningando, who heard from his deputy who was in Bossangoa at the time, that when the Anti-Balaka arrived, they attacked all the Muslims, whether armed or not, as they saw the Muslims as accomplices of the Seleka (see P-2652 Statement, CAR-OTP-2126-0175-R01, at 0186-87, para. 61).

i. Attack near the Imam Naffi's residence in the Boro neighbourhood

2815. The residence of the imam of Bossangoa, Imam Naffi, was located near the Boro neighbourhood, in the 'Arabe' neighbourhood.⁶⁹³¹ P-2049 described the location of the imam's residence and estimated that it could take between seven and 10 minutes to walk from the mosque in Boro to the imam's house.⁶⁹³²

2816. Imam Naffi was warned about the Bossangoa Attack before it started. P-2049 testified that Imam Naffi said that FOMAC had warned him about the attack and to take refuge at the École de la Liberté where the FOMAC elements were securing displaced persons at that time.⁶⁹³³

2817. Other witnesses provided similar evidence. P-2200 stated that at around 12:00 on 5 December 2013, 'UDAC' soldiers from Guinea and Cameroon came to the neighbourhood to advise Muslims to shelter in the school.⁶⁹³⁴ P-2200 stated that about 40 or 50 people first sought refuge at his residence.⁶⁹³⁵ P-2200 stated that from 13:00, they began to hear detonations and around one hour afterwards went to the school as the soldiers had advised.⁶⁹³⁶ P-2200 stated that they were escorted by the 'UDAC' soldiers and by the Seleka and it took them around 15 minutes by foot to reach the school.⁶⁹³⁷ P-2200 did not remember the name of the school but it was situated close to Bossangoa tribunal, close to the Muslim quarters and there were only Muslims at the school.⁶⁹³⁸ Taking into account the descriptions by P-2200, the Chamber considers that P-2200 is referring to the École de la Liberté.⁶⁹³⁹

2818. P-2453 stated that he was in the École de la Liberté on 5 December 2013 but heard that the Congolese soldiers of FOMAC went to the imam's house in the morning to warn that they had encountered Anti-Balaka who were about to launch the attack on the outskirts of Bossangoa⁶⁹⁴⁰ and that the Muslim community should gather at the École de la Liberté.⁶⁹⁴¹ P-2453 stated that the imam refused at first but people managed to convince him to move to the school and soon thereafter, the witness and others saw a large group led by the imam arriving at the École de la Liberté.⁶⁹⁴² P-2453 stated that from the École de la Liberté, they saw the Seleka on their vehicles rushing towards the entrance of the town and heard gunshots at around 11:00 coming from that direction, the Anti-Balaka defeated the Seleka posted at this barrier and eventually entered the Boro neighbourhood.⁶⁹⁴³ P-2453 stated that a Seleka driver drove back to Boro and went to the imam's house to tell the Muslim civilians to seek protection at the school.⁶⁹⁴⁴ P-2453 stated that the group led by the imam left Boro as the Anti-Balaka were approaching and started shooting at them, when the group arrived to the school, some had bullet wounds.⁶⁹⁴⁵

2819. P-2658 stated that in the morning of 5 December 2013, MISCA went to the imam and advised him to ask all the Muslims to gather at the École de la Liberté, where MISCA was based.⁶⁹⁴⁶ P-2658 identified the imam at the École de la Liberté in a photograph.⁶⁹⁴⁷

2821.P-2602 stated that most of the Muslim population fled to École de la Liberté.⁶⁹⁵⁰

ii. A Muslim family fleeing to the Imam Naffi's residence

During the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, Batoul Naffi and several other individuals were injured. An Anti-Balaka element forced P-2462 into sexual intercourse, having blindfolded and undressed her, and after the group of five Anti-Balaka he was in had threatened her with their weapons.

Fleeing the imam's residence

2822.P-2462 stated that after hearing detonations at around 14:00, she took the children to the imam's house where there were many people, including women and children.⁶⁹⁵¹ P-2462 stated that she returned home to collect other members of her family, and whilst they were en route to the imam's residence, the people previously gathered there fled, including the imam.⁶⁹⁵²

2823.P-2462 explained that she was with her aunt Khadidja Adjaro, her mother Fane Adjaro, her grandmother Fane Batoul, her brother-in-law Abdel and his younger brother Atahir, her uncle Koursi Mahamat who was also called Koursi Abdelrahim, and Fane Issa.⁶⁹⁵³ P-2462

⁶⁹⁴⁸ The Chamber notes that P-1577's indication of the residence on a satellite image seems to locate it slightly north of the Boro school (see Satellite image (annotated by P-1577), CAR-OTP-2088-0731; P-1577 Second Statement, CAR-OTP-2088-0717-R01, at 0719; see also Map, CAR-OTP-2118-9140). The witness also stated that the imam's house was close to the Muslim trading area (see P-1577: T-027, p. 62, line 24 – p. 63, line 14). The Chamber further notes that P-2049 stated that he saw a journalist and a Peuhl with a leg wound at the imam's house on 5 December 2013 at around 13:00 (see P-2049: T-100, p. 71, lines 13-24). Considering the evidence before it, the Chamber concludes that the residence mentioned by P-1577 was that of Imam Naffi.

2824.P-2462 testified that the Anti-Balaka had surrounded the entire building⁶⁹⁵⁶ and started to shoot; Khadidja Adjaro and Abdel shouted that they had been struck by bullets and the gunshots were so powerful that everybody fled in different directions.⁶⁹⁵⁷ P-2462 said she knew that they were Anti-Balaka because some of them had plaited hair, others wore gris-gris and had scarves, others wore military dress.⁶⁹⁵⁸

2826.P-2657 testified that they decided to go to the imam's residence but there were gunshots, Kadidja Adjaro was shot and Abdel Abakar was killed with a bullet wound.⁶⁹⁶³ P-2657 stated that she did not see who shot Khadidja Adjaro and Abdel Abakar, but believed it was the Anti-Balaka as they were the ones 'cracking down on Muslims'.⁶⁹⁶⁴ P-2657 denied being aware that Seleka troops, armed elements, had gone towards the mosque and the imam's residence at the beginning of the Bossangoa Attack.⁶⁹⁶⁵ P-2657 also stated that she saw the body of Atahir, who is a relative of her husband, when they left the house of the imam, and that he was shot and killed.⁶⁹⁶⁶

P-2657 stated that there were many assailants and that there were some in military outfits, but many were wearing civilian clothing, they were wearing gris-gris and they also had red 'head banners'.⁶⁹⁶⁸

2828.The evidence before the Chamber shows that Batoul Naffi was injured in the vicinity of the imam's compound, receiving a bullet wound to the leg and machete wounds to the head, and that she was found the day after the attack.⁶⁹⁶⁹ According to P-2462, the Anti-Balaka caused Batoul Naffi's injuries.⁶⁹⁷⁰

2830.P-2453 testified that eight wounded people, all Muslims, arrived at the dispensary at the École de la Liberté on 5 December 2013 at approximately 17:00, some arriving at 16:00, others at 16:45, including elderly men and young people with gunshot wounds and a lady with a machete wound.⁶⁹⁷³ While P-2453 did not see how these people were injured, the people arriving to the school said Anti-Balaka were shooting at them, and he further clarified

⁶⁹⁶⁸ P-2657: T-105, p. 33, lines 6-12. The Chamber notes in this regard an HRW report which quotes a Boro resident who was interviewed on 6 December 2013 and who stated that the attackers included 'real FACA soldiers and Presidential Guards, armed with AK-47s and RPGs [rocket-propelled grenades], and they were in uniform and wearing the red berets [of the former presidential guard]' (see HRW Report, CAR-OTP-2001-2043, at 2055). In a similar vein, P-2658 stated that before or around September 2013, he saw about 100-200 Anti-Balaka in Benzambé who were all armed and had red headbands and gris-gris (see P-2658: T-134, p. 25, line 16 – p. 27, line 5).

that the injured victims were civilians and did not have weapons with them, otherwise the FOMAC would not have let them enter the school site.⁶⁹⁷⁴ As the small clinic at the École de la Liberté would only administer first aid, the ambulance took more serious cases to the prefectural hospital.⁶⁹⁷⁵

2831. P-1577 described meeting a man at the École de la Liberté on 5 December 2013 or the day after who told him that he had been shot and left for dead in a burning building, but managed to flee to the École de la Liberté.⁶⁹⁷⁶ The man told P-1577 that he was attacked by the Anti-Balaka and that they were mixed forces of traditional Anti-Balaka and more regimented FACA PG.⁶⁹⁷⁷

Events concerning P-2462 and P-2657

2832. The Chamber now turns to the events surrounding the assaults of P-2462 and P-2657. In this context, the Chamber bore in mind in particular its direct impression of these witnesses when providing, in court, their testimonies in an open manner and replete with individual details.

2833. P-2462 testified that as the Anti-Balaka started shooting, everybody fled in different directions.⁶⁹⁷⁸ P-2462 stated that she entered and hid in an unoccupied house and that when she felt that it was a bit calm to come out, a group of five ‘Balaka’ came in, threatened her with their weapons.⁶⁹⁷⁹ P-2462 stated that, although she saw the Anti-Balaka who were shooting at her, she did not know whether they were the ones who found her in the house.⁶⁹⁸⁰ The Chamber notes that P-2462 later clarified that she was outside when she was stopped and taken to the house of a school and was raped.⁶⁹⁸¹

2834. P-2462 testified that one of them said not to kill her, they told their leader, ‘Chief, chief, now you have a wife’ and he said ‘Yes, that’s fine’ and he came close to P-2462 and asked her whether she knew him and she said she did not know him.⁶⁹⁸² Asked how she knew the five people, especially the one who raped her, were Anti-Balaka, P-2462 stated that they were armed, had gris-gris and military clothes and spoke Sango.⁶⁹⁸³

2835. P-2462 testified that they said that they must leave, because if they remained there the Seleka might show up, so they blindfolded P-2462 and took her to a school, the name of which P-2462 did not know.⁶⁹⁸⁴ P-2462 stated that Chawlin asked his companions to stay outside and to wait for him – he undressed and removed her skirt and her underpants and he ‘slept’ with her.⁶⁹⁸⁵ P-2462 stated that after he raped her, he took off the blindfold and then asked her again if she knew him and she said no, she did not know him and he left.⁶⁹⁸⁶

2837. P-2462 remained in that school until the next morning and came out after hearing the FOMAC car outside, they asked her what happened, she said she was hiding there and when she asked them to take her to the imam, they said that there was nobody at the imam’s residence and that everyone had moved to the École de la Liberté.⁶⁹⁹⁰ P-2462 stated that at the École de la Liberté, she found her mother who was crying and had thought P-2462 was dead and that it was only the following morning that she told her mother the entire story of what had happened to her.⁶⁹⁹¹ P-2462 stated that her mother started crying and said that P-2462 must not kill herself, she suggested things so that P-2462 would get more confidence in herself and decided to take P-2462 to the hospital.⁶⁹⁹²

2839.P-2462, asked about Aichatou Mahamat, stated that she was one of the women who fled with her when she went to the ‘camp’ and that they were in the same town in Bossangoa and she married a man who was in the same neighbourhood.⁶⁹⁹⁶ P-2462 stated that she came to see her after the Bossangoa Attack and explained that she suffered the same things that P-2462 went through, which P-2462 understood as being raped.⁶⁹⁹⁷ P-2462 stated that she told her that it was the Anti-Balaka but did not give any other details.⁶⁹⁹⁸

2840.P-2657 testified that, as there were gunshots, she ran into a house of some people who lived along the road and locked herself up inside.⁶⁹⁹⁹ P-2657 stated that seven men came into the house and talked to each other, discussing whether P-2657 should be killed.⁷⁰⁰⁰ One of them proposed that she should be taken ‘to their leader Ngaïssona’.⁷⁰⁰¹ P-2657 also heard them talk about Charly, who was a prominent individual and was well-known in the villages around Bossangoa.⁷⁰⁰² P-2657 stated that they were all armed and some were in military outfits while others were not, and they were speaking Gbaya and Sango.⁷⁰⁰³ P-2657 stated that she recognised one of them as Armand from Ouham-Bac, whose father was a pastor in

Ouham-Bac and close to her father.⁷⁰⁰⁴ P-2657 stated that Armand pretended not to know P-2657 and after a while, five of them went out and Armand and another man who remained raped her.⁷⁰⁰⁵ P-2657 stated that after they had raped her, they left her in the house and left.⁷⁰⁰⁶

2841. P-2657 stated that two days after the rape, she told her husband about it and he decided to take her to a hospital, where she had tests and got negative results in the HIV test.⁷⁰⁰⁷ Asked about P-2462, P-2657 stated that she knew such a person but not specifically and that she met P-2462 at the École de la Liberté and saw her at the MSF hospital.⁷⁰⁰⁸ P-2657 stated, asked about her interaction with P-2462 at the hospital, that she was there but because P-2657 had her own problem, she did not want to ask P-2462 what had happened to her.⁷⁰⁰⁹

2842. Other witnesses support P-2462's and P-2657's accounts. P-2049 testified that his wife, P-2657,⁷⁰¹⁰ and his 'sister', referring to P-2462, were raped.⁷⁰¹¹ P-2453 stated he learned from a woman he worked with that the Seleka rescued two women who were with Koursi Abdelrahim when he was killed: Aichatou Mahamat and Fane Adjaro.⁷⁰¹² P-2453 further stated that neither of them ever told him what happened to them in the bush but 'when men take women into the bush, the assumption is that they force them to have sexual intercourse'

⁷⁰⁰⁴ P-2657: T-104, p. 19, lines 12-18, p. 20, lines 11-19. The Chamber notes in this regard that the Ngaïssona Defence also doubts P-2657's credibility on the basis of her identifying a perpetrator that is said to have died before the Bossangoa Attack (see Ngaïssona Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2736-AnxA-Corr-Red, para. 395 and n. 1353). In the view of the Chamber, even assuming a person of the same name and hailing from the same village as the person identified by P-2657 were identified as dead before the Bossangoa Attack (see also Decision on the Ngaïssona Defence Request to Exclude Evidence or, Alternatively, to Recall Prosecution Witness P-2657, 5 June 2024, ICC-01/14-01/18-2521-Conf, para. 2), this would not put into doubt P-2657's specific identification of one of the perpetrators of her assault, in particular bearing in mind that the witness was in a position to explain further how she knew that person.

⁷⁰¹² P-2453 Statement, CAR-OTP-2111-0415-R04, at 0430, para. 70; P-2453: T-138, p. 44, line 20 – p. 45, line 4. See also paragraph 2849 below.

and because of that rumour, Fane Adjaro is still not married because no man is interested in her now.⁷⁰¹³

2845. First, the Ngaïssona Defence argues that the incident of rape with which Mr Ngaïssona is charged has not been established beyond reasonable doubt,⁷⁰¹⁶ due to issues with P-2462's credibility on the basis of inconsistencies in her and with P-2657's account as well as 'implausible' circumstances regarding the rape,⁷⁰¹⁷ and the authenticity of the medical reports which the witness provided.⁷⁰¹⁸

2846. In relation to the first alleged inconsistency, regarding the location where P-2462 was stopped by the Anti-Balaka before being taken to the school,⁷⁰¹⁹ the Chamber notes that the witness initially stated she was in an unoccupied house when a group of five 'Balaka' came in and threatened her,⁷⁰²⁰ while later clarifying that she was stopped outside and taken to the house of a school where she was raped.⁷⁰²¹ The Chamber finds this inconsistency minor.

2847. In relation to the alleged inconsistencies between the accounts of P-2462 and P-2657, the Ngaïssona Defence argues that (i) P-2462 said she fled with P-2657⁷⁰²² while the latter did not mention P-2462 fleeing with her,⁷⁰²³ and (ii) P-2657 stated seeing P-2462 at the imam's house on the evening of the attack,⁷⁰²⁴ while P-2462 said she stayed in the school where she was raped until the next morning.⁷⁰²⁵

2848. As regards the first point, the Chamber notes that although one witness mentioned fleeing with the other while the other did not mention the first, both witnesses stated seeing each other on the same day. Considering the circumstances surrounding the witnesses' situations at the time of the attack, the Chamber does not consider these accounts to be inconsistent.

2849. In relation to the second point, the Chamber notes that P-2657 did not mention P-2462's full name, but in fact mentioned seeing 'Fane Adjaro'.⁷⁰²⁶ In this regard, the Chamber notes that this is the name of P-2462's mother, who was also seeking refuge at the imam's residence on the day of the attack.⁷⁰²⁷ At the same time, P-2462 testified that she is sometimes called by her mother's name,⁷⁰²⁸ and indeed P-2453 mentioned this name when describing how he assumed that she was, like P-2657, raped during the attack.⁷⁰²⁹ On this basis, the Chamber is unable to conclude that P-2657 was in fact referring to P-2462, instead of her mother, when stating whom she met at the imam's residence.

2852. Further, the Chamber finds without merit the Ngaïssona Defence's arguments regarding the credibility of P-2462 and P-2657, in relation to them (i) not being forthcoming about their relations; (ii) having limited first-hand knowledge of events in Bossangoa and the Ouham region in 2013;⁷⁰³³ and (iii) not seeing the alleged victims being killed.⁷⁰³⁴

2853. On the first point, the Chamber notes that neither P-2462 nor P-2657 denied their relationships and explained how they were related when asked.⁷⁰³⁵ Indeed, the witnesses were honest and forthcoming. On the second point, the Chamber does not find that any limited first-hand knowledge of events that are not part of the charged events the witnesses were called to testify about in any way impacts their evidence on their first-hand and direct experience of events these witnesses lived through. On the third point, the Chamber notes that P-2657 testified being with the victims at the time of the attack and seeing their injuries, while P-2462 was with the victims at the time at which the shootings occurred.⁷⁰³⁶ The Chamber found their testimonies regarding the attack at the imam's residence credible, reliable and generally consistent with each other.

and thus in particular P-2462's identification of the five individuals linked to her assault as Anti-Balaka cannot be relied on.⁷⁰³⁷

2855. At the outset, the Chamber recalls that P-2462 identified the five individuals as Anti-Balaka in the context of giving additional information, explaining she knew they were Anti-Balaka because they were armed, wore military outfits, had plaited hair, gris-gris, red turbans, and spoke Sango, which she thought the Seleka could not speak.⁷⁰³⁸ P-2657, when shown photographs and a video, explained that Anti-Balaka had gris-gris, weapons, and some had knives, while Seleka had turbans, berets and weapons, and civilians did not carry gris-gris or weapons.⁷⁰³⁹ In relation to her assault, P-2657 specified that the seven Anti-Balaka spoke Gbaya and Sango,⁷⁰⁴⁰ and that she heard them say 'Ngaïssona' was their leader, regarding whom she learned later from the airwaves that he was the leader of the Anti-Balaka.⁷⁰⁴¹ Considering the above, the Chamber finds that P-2462 and P-2657 were able to identify and distinguish between members of the Seleka and Anti-Balaka, and consequently identified the individuals involved in their respective assaults as Anti-Balaka elements.

2856. Moreover, P-2462 in fact knew the Anti-Balaka element who raped her, identifying him as 'Chawlin', a butcher in Bossangoa.⁷⁰⁴² In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-2602 stated that 'Chawlin' was previously a butcher who joined the Anti-Balaka in Gobere after the Seleka had killed his brother, and that he was a section chief under Dedane.⁷⁰⁴³ P-2049 stated that he knew well a 'Chaolin' of Dagba ethnicity who was a butcher at Bossangoa centre.⁷⁰⁴⁴ P-2658 mentioned knowing a 'Chaolin' and his brother Arna Hervé Nesto, who were butchers in Bossangoa.⁷⁰⁴⁵ P-2658 further heard from a person at the École de la Liberté that

‘Chaolin’ was an Anti-Balaka who had kidnapped the wife and children of his Muslim neighbour, Toukour, in Bangui and demanded money for their release.⁷⁰⁴⁶

2857. The Chamber notes that P-2602 indicated that Chawlin went to Bangui for the attack there with Dedane and did not participate in the Bossangoa Attack.⁷⁰⁴⁷ Further the Chamber notes the evidence of D30-4608, who said he was told by ‘Chaolin’s’ wife that the former had been detained and died before 5 December 2013.⁷⁰⁴⁸ However, in light of the unambiguous identification of the perpetrator of her sexual assault by P-2462 herself, combined with the other evidence indicating that this person was a member of the Anti-Balaka, the Chamber does not rely on these parts of these witnesses’ evidence in this regard. Considering further that P-2462 provided detailed descriptions of what she experienced and explanations of how she identified her assailants, that she provided medical documents attesting to her condition after the rape, and that her account is supported by the evidence of, inter alia, P-2657 and P-2049, the Chamber finds that P-2462 was attacked by elements of the Anti-Balaka engaged in the Bossangoa Attack and, specifically, that she was forced into sexual intercourse by ‘Chawlin’ or ‘Chaolin’, a butcher from Bossangoa who, at the time of the events, was an element of the Anti-Balaka.

Killings

In the course of the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka killed at least the following 18 persons who were not armed or taking part in hostilities: Khadidja Adjaro; Koursi Abdelrahim; Abdel, also known as Adaye, Abakar; Atahir Abou; ‘C-17’, a taxi driver; Atahir Djime (or Djimet); Halima Hisseini; Hamadou Bouba; Ousman Abacar; Ousman Abacar’s mother; Abdallah Mahamat; Abdelkhadir; Mariam Yamwha; Amadou Oumarou; Abakar; Ismael; Salamatou, a Peuhl; Sale Adim.

2858. The Chamber will now examine the evidence before it on the victims alleged to have been killed during the Bossangoa Attack. On the basis of this evidence, and as further outlined below, the Chamber concludes that the identified victims were civilians and not engaged in hostilities, who were killed by the Anti-Balaka during the Bossangoa Attack. The arguments presented by the Ngaïssona Defence in this context are without merit.

2859. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution argues that at least 18 Muslims known to be civilians were killed during the Bossangoa Attack,⁷⁰⁴⁹ although the evidence suggests that there may have been 28 Muslims killed.⁷⁰⁵⁰

2860. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that (i) the record does not support the allegation of 28 victims as some were counted multiple times and the evidence is insufficient to establish the death of others;⁷⁰⁵¹ (ii) the Anti-Balaka did not attack indiscriminately as it ‘appropriately distinguished between Seleka forces and Muslim civilians’ and ‘solely engaged with the Seleka, or any other persons bearing arms’;⁷⁰⁵² (iii) the Anti-Balaka did not target Muslim civilians, but ‘legitimate military objectives’;⁷⁰⁵³ (iv) the Anti-Balaka took precautionary measures not to target civilians by placing women and children into the ‘Liberté’ neighbourhood and recognising the École de la Liberté as refuge for civilians, not going after them there;⁷⁰⁵⁴ and (v) the attack was proportionate since the number of alleged victims is low compared to the large number of persons who made it safely to a place of shelter.⁷⁰⁵⁵

2861. The question of how many victims were killed during the Bossangoa Attack is addressed further below. As regards the second and third argument of the Ngaïssona Defence, the Chamber recalls its conclusions above as to what the objective of the Anti-Balaka during the attack was, namely to chase out the Seleka as well as all Muslims from Bossangoa.⁷⁰⁵⁶ The Chamber further recalls its conclusions as regards the residential areas which the Anti-Balaka progressed into, including specifically the Boro neighbourhood and adjacent areas in the Arabe and Fulbe neighbourhoods.⁷⁰⁵⁷ The Chamber recalls that while Seleka bases were located in the centre of Bossangoa,⁷⁰⁵⁸ the Anti-Balaka attacked the areas mentioned in pursuit of unarmed individuals who were identifiable as Muslims,⁷⁰⁵⁹ with the role of each individual victim being further discussed below. These arguments of the Ngaïssona Defence therefore fail on the basis of the evidence.

2862. In this context, the Chamber also notes the Ngaïssona Defence's suggestion that the fighting would have been 'particularly intense' at the imam's house, for which reason 'it is impossible to discount the possibility that the alleged victims might have been unfortunately killed in cross or friendly fire'.⁷⁰⁶⁰ First, the Chamber recalls P-1577's evidence according to which the closest Seleka base in relation to the imam's residence was three to four kilometres away,⁷⁰⁶¹ and that indeed he did not see any Seleka close to the imam's house when he left the Peuhl family there,⁷⁰⁶² as well as its finding that the Seleka base at Boro school was there only temporarily during September 2013.⁷⁰⁶³ Second, the Chamber recalls that while P-1577 saw Seleka driving in the direction of the imam's residence, he could not say if they in fact went there.⁷⁰⁶⁴ Third, the Chamber finds that P-1577's reference to an 'intense battle' in the area of the imam's house was made in relation to the number of spent cartridges he found on the ground, the bullet holes in walls, and the blood spatter on ground and walls a few days after the attack,⁷⁰⁶⁵ and not because he was aware of a battle taking place at that location. Fourth, and in any event, the suggestion that victims would have been killed 'in cross or friendly fire' is, with nothing further, purely speculative. On this basis, the Chamber does not follow the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that intense fighting between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka would have taken place in the area of the imam's residence.

2863. In relation to the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that Anti-Balaka would have brought civilians to safety, the Chamber notes that the specific account referenced does not pertain to the Bossangoa Attack but to other Anti-Balaka attacks in the villages around Bossangoa before 5 December 2013.⁷⁰⁶⁶ The Chamber also notes that Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that they did not capture anyone on the day of the Bossangoa Attack,⁷⁰⁶⁷ and that neither Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana nor P-2602 could have placed or mentioned placing people in the school during the Bossangoa Attack.⁷⁰⁶⁸ Further, the fact that Anti-Balaka members may not have attacked civilians within the École de la Liberté is, as discussed below, explained by the presence, and interceding, of FOMAC.⁷⁰⁶⁹

2864. The final argument of the Ngaïssona Defence in relation to the attack having been ‘proportionate’ fails on its flawed submission that proportionality is shown when comparing the number of the alleged victims with the number of civilians who managed to seek shelter at the École de la Liberté.⁷⁰⁷⁰ First, this assumes that a legitimate military objective was attacked in the area of the imam’s residence which, as stated above, the Chamber does not find to have been the case. Second, the argument fails due to the comparative basis being used: even if a legitimate military objective is targeted, proportionality of such targeting is not assessed by comparing the possible civilian casualties with any – civilian – individuals that were spared.

2865. Turning its discussion to the individual victims killed during the Bossangoa Attack, the Chamber notes that the Prosecution submits that in the context of the Muslim family fleeing towards the imam’s house, as discussed above,⁷⁰⁷¹ four individuals were killed by the Anti-Balaka, namely Khadidja Adjaro, Abdel Abakar and his younger brother Atahir, and Koursi Mahamat, also known as Abdelrahim.⁷⁰⁷²

While Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana claimed that they placed women and children in the ‘Liberté’ neighbourhood ‘[a]s good Christians’ (see P-0966 Statement, CAR-OTP-2031-0241-R03, at 0252, para. 63), he also testified that he did not go further than Boro (see P-0966: T-117, p. 64, lines 1-2). The Chamber thus discards this claim. The Chamber notes that P-2602 mentioned the imam of Bossangoa fleeing to the bishop’s house (see P-2602 Interview Transcripts, CAR-OTP-2118-9500-R01, at 9521, lines 708-730; CAR-OTP-2118-9683-R01, at 9684-85, lines 35-43; CAR-OTP-2118-9705-R01, at 9706-07, lines 29-42; CAR-OTP-2118-9737-R01, at 9751-52, lines 471-488).

2866. The Ngaïssona Defence questions the death of these individuals, as well as their role at the time of their death, arguing that (i) Koursi Abdelrahim and Koursi Mahamat are the same person,⁷⁰⁷³ and (ii) two of the four individuals, namely Khadidja Adjaro and Koursi Abdelrahim, were affiliated with the Seleka.⁷⁰⁷⁴

2867. The Chamber will in the following discuss each of these individuals and address the arguments made by the parties as relevant and appropriate.⁷⁰⁷⁵

⁷⁰⁷⁵ As noted above (see paragraphs 2852-2853 above), the Chamber finds P-2462 and P-2657 credible in their accounts, including as regards the events near the imam's residence.

The Chamber notes that HRW Report, CAR-OTP-2001-2043, at 2055 mentions the death of 'Khadija Iné, 35, the wife of Muslim trader Gara Iné', being a sister to 'Adei Abacar'. While the name and family relation to 'Adei Abacar' are not reflected correctly, the Chamber considers this to also refer to the death of Khadidja Adjaro (see also P-2049: T-101, p. 54, line 23 – p. 55, line 2, where the witness confirmed that the name of his father is Gara Ine).

2870. On the basis of the evidence before it, the Chamber concludes that Khadidja Adjaro was not a member of the Seleka, not engaged in fighting against the Anti-Balaka on 5 December 2013, but was shot and killed while seeking refuge from the attack. The Chamber finds that Khadidja Adjaro was a Muslim civilian killed by the Anti-Balaka during the Bossangoa Attack.

2871. Koursi Abdelrahim: At the outset, the Chamber notes that the charges as confirmed by the Pre-Trial Chamber list Koursi Mahamat and Koursi Abdelrahim as two individuals killed during the Bossangoa Attack,⁷⁰⁸⁶ while both the Prosecution and the Ngaïssona Defence argue that they are the same person.⁷⁰⁸⁷ In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-2462 stated that Koursi Mahamat, also called Koursi Abdelrahim, was a trader and deputy mayor of Bossangoa,⁷⁰⁸⁸ while P-2453 testified that Koursi Mahamat Abdelrahim is one and the same person, representative of the traders.⁷⁰⁸⁹ In contrast, P-2049 testified that his uncle Koursi Abdelrahim is a different person from Koursi Mahamat, the former killed during the Bossangoa Attack, the latter in Zere.⁷⁰⁹⁰ Similarly, P-2200 stated that Koursi Abdelrahim, father of five children and third assistant mayor of Bossangoa, was killed during the Bossangoa Attack.⁷⁰⁹¹ He also stated that Koursi Mahamat, husband of one of P-2200's daughters and father of four children, was shot in the legs in the Arabe quarter.⁷⁰⁹² P-2657 in turn stated that Mahamat was killed in the attacks outside Bossangoa before 5 December 2013,⁷⁰⁹³ and she knew that Koursi, who lived in their neighbourhood and was part of the imam's in-laws, was killed on the road to Zere during those attacks.⁷⁰⁹⁴ In light of this evidence, and in particular bearing in mind P-2049's direct family relation with Koursi Abdelrahim, the Chamber concludes that Koursi Abdelrahim and Koursi Mahamat are two different individuals. The Chamber also concludes that Koursi Mahamat was not killed during the Bossangoa Attack, but earlier.⁷⁰⁹⁵

2872. Turning to the death of Koursi Abdelrahim, P-2657 stated that she saw Koursi Abdelrahim slaughtered on the road near the compound of the imam's house, and while she did not see the person who killed him, she did see the injuries.⁷⁰⁹⁶ P-2657 further stated that the people who came to collect the body the next day told her that his throat was slit.⁷⁰⁹⁷ P-2049 testified that the throat of his uncle Koursi Abdelrahim was slit as if he were a cow.⁷⁰⁹⁸ Also P-2200

stated that Koursi Abdelrahim was a victim of the Bossangoa Attack, having his throat cut.⁷⁰⁹⁹

2873. In relation to the Ngaïssona Defence's challenge to Koursi Abdelrahim's role at the time of this death in light of his supposed affiliation with the Seleka as well as him attacking young men and his wives bearing weapons on 5 December 2013,⁷¹⁰⁰ the Chamber notes that Faustin Ngamesse stated that Koursi Abdelrahim pointed out Christian traders to the Seleka,⁷¹⁰¹ while Nestor Wiabona said he knew that Koursi financed the Seleka because he had some means during this period.⁷¹⁰² In contrast, P-2453 stated that, because of the pillaging by the Seleka, the imam asked Koursi Abdelrahim as representative of the traders to talk with the Seleka about their bad behaviour, and that he did not get on with the Seleka in any way.⁷¹⁰³ P-2462 stated that Koursi Abdelrahim, a trader, did not belong to the Seleka.⁷¹⁰⁴ As the hearsay evidence of Faustin Ngamesse and Nestor Wiabona is not supported by any other evidence, and in light of the evidence to the contrary, the Chamber does not find that Koursi Abdelrahim was affiliated with the Seleka. Even if there had been such affiliation, the evidence before the Chamber does not support that Koursi Abdelrahim was armed or engaged in active hostilities at the time of his death.

2874. On the basis of the evidence before it, the Chamber concludes that Koursi Abdelrahim was not a member of the Seleka, not engaged in fighting against the Anti-Balaka on 5 December 2013, but was killed while seeking refuge from the attack. The Chamber finds that Koursi Abdelrahim was a Muslim civilian killed by the Anti-Balaka during the Bossangoa Attack.

2875. Abdel, also known as Adaye, Abakar: P-2657 testified that the name of her sister-in-law's husband is 'Abdel Abakar', and while she did not see who killed him, she saw him get shot, along with her mother-in-law, and saw his body.⁷¹⁰⁵ P-2657 stated he had nothing to do with an armed group, was not armed and was a civilian.⁷¹⁰⁶ P-2657 further clarified that ‘Adef’ and ‘Abdel Abakar’ are the same person, and ‘Abdel’ is also known as ‘Abdayé’, having a younger brother called ‘Atahir’.⁷¹⁰⁷ P-2462 stated that she was with her brother-in-law ‘Abdel’ when the Anti-Balaka were shooting and he also shouted that he had been shot.⁷¹⁰⁸ ‘Abdel’ was a cattle-breeder and not part of the Seleka, and P-2462 heard from her mother who saw his body when it was brought to the École de la Liberté that he was shot in the head.⁷¹⁰⁹ P-2049 testified that Adaye was struck by a bullet when they fled to hide in the compound next to the imam’s house.⁷¹¹⁰ P-2200 stated that Khadidja Adjaro’s son-in-law, Adaye, was killed by a bullet a bit further from Khadidja Adjaro.⁷¹¹¹ P-2453 collected the names of dead Muslim civilians from their relatives at the school, including that of Adaye Abakar.⁷¹¹² In light of the evidence before it, the Chamber concludes that Abdel, also known as Adaye, Abakar was not a member of the Seleka, not engaged in fighting the Anti-Balaka on 5 December 2013, but was killed while seeking refuge from the attack. The Chamber finds that Abdel, also known as Adaye, Abakar was a Muslim civilian killed by the Anti-Balaka during the Bossangoa Attack.

2876. Atahir Abou: P-2657 saw the body of ‘Atahir’ when leaving the house of the imam, noticing that he had been killed, they understood he had been shot.⁷¹¹³ P-2462 heard from that her mother who saw her brother-in-law ‘Abdel’s’ younger brother ‘Atahir’, who was a cattle breeder, that he had a bullet wound to the stomach when the body was brought to the École de la Liberté.⁷¹¹⁴ P-2049 stated the brother of Adaye, Atahir Abou was killed by a bullet.⁷¹¹⁵

The Chamber notes that HRW Report, CAR-OTP-2001-2043, at 2055 mentions the killing of ‘Adei Abacar’, aged 38, being the brother of ‘Khadija Iné, wife of Muslim trader Gara Iné. While the name, family relation to Khadidja Adjaro, and manner of death do not strictly correspond to the other evidence before the Chamber, the Chamber concludes that this report also refers to the death of Abdel, also known as Adaye, Abakar.

P-2453 collected the names of dead Muslim civilians from their relatives at the school, including that of Atahir Abou.⁷¹¹⁶ In light of the evidence before it, the Chamber concludes that Atahir Abou was not a member of the Seleka, not engaged in fighting the Anti-Balaka on 5 December 2013, but was killed while seeking refuge from the attack. The Chamber finds that Atahir Abou was a Muslim civilian killed by the Anti-Balaka during the Bossangoa Attack.

2877. Further to the four individuals killed as outlined above, P-2200, P-2049 and P-2453 each provided lists of names of the persons killed during the Bossangoa Attack, while P-1577 also received some names of victims from someone else. The Ngaïssona Defence argues in this regard that there is insufficient evidence that the individuals mentioned were killed during the Bossangoa Attack as some individuals were known by several names and counted more than once, the evidence is based on hearsay and not corroborated, and P-2049's evidence is not credible.⁷¹¹⁷ The Chamber is of the view that the evidence before it, including that further outlined below, suffices to establish the death of the individuals mentioned to the requisite standard. In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber has, in particular, considered the sources of the witnesses' knowledge.

2878. P-2200 stated that 18 people were killed during the Bossangoa Attack, including three women, giving the names of Khadidja Adjaro, Koursi Abdelrahim, Koursi Mahamat, Abdallah Mahamat, Abdelkhadir, Mariam Yawha, Amadou Oumarou, Djime Atahir and Abdaye, while not remembering the names of the other victims that day.⁷¹¹⁸ P-2200 stated these Muslims were neither Seleka nor soldiers, and not armed or fighting when they were killed.⁷¹¹⁹ P-2200 also explained that once the Seleka had transported the bodies to the school site, he participated in their burial the day following the attack, seeing the bodies of 18 victims with wounds and blood on their clothes.⁷¹²⁰ As it was too dangerous to leave the school, they did not have clean shrouds in which to wrap the bodies, nor was there the usual washing of the bodies.⁷¹²¹ The 15 men were buried in one communal hole, while the three women were buried in another.⁷¹²² P-2200 stated that they could not access the usual cemetery because the Anti-Balaka were still around in the town.⁷¹²³

2879.P-2049 stated that 19 people were killed during the Bossangoa Attack, including three women, confirming the names, previously given in his statement, of Khadidja Adjaro, Adaye Abakar, Koursi Abdelrahim, Atahir Abou, Atahir Djime, ‘C-17’ Moussa, Halima Hisseini, Ila Adj, Sali Adj, Yaya Mokomzi, Abakar Moussa, Amadou Bouba, Salamatou Madji, Ismael Amat, Hamid Ali, Ahamat Zakaria, Mahamat Adam, Abdasamat Mounine and Ibrahim Hassan.⁷¹²⁴ P-2049 stated that these victims included Peuhls and herdsmen.⁷¹²⁵

2880.P-2453 provided the names of the following 11 victims which he collected from their relatives at the school, specifying that the victims were Muslims who had stayed in Boro and did not manage to flee with the imam’s group, and were found in the vicinity of the imam’s house: Halima Hisseini, a housewife with children; Abakar; Ismael; Khadidja Adjaro, niece of Imam Ismail Naffi, wife of Gara Ine and mother of Fadil Gara; Salamatou, a Peuhl; Adaye Abakar; Sale Adim, a trader; Atahir Djimet, who sold tea and coffee on a small table on the side of the road; Hamadou Bouba, a Peuhl; Koursi Abdelraman Mahamat, the traders’ representative whose throat had been cut; Atahir Abou.⁷¹²⁶

2881.P-1577 spoke with the person who collected the bodies of the people killed during the Bossangoa Attack for an article, which states that at least 11 civilians were killed with machetes and gunfire, including Ousman Abacar, a Peuhl; his mother; nine other Muslims, including Khadija Iné; Adei Abacar; Qursi Abdulrahim, 50, trader; Ali Atahir, 45, trader; Jimey Atahir, 42, trader; Aishta Oumar, 38, mother of three children; Nami Yawa, a Mbororo mother of four children; her sister Hawa Yama, a Mbororo mother of six children; Hamidou ‘Seize-Dix-Sept’, a popular motorcycle taximan.⁷¹²⁷ Furthermore, P-1577 returned to the area of the imam’s residence on a couple of days later, where he found hundreds of spent

2882. More generally, P-2657 stated that 18 Muslims were buried at the École de la Liberté following the Bossangoa Attack, clarifying they could not go to the cemetery as it was far, the situation was unstable, and the Anti-Balaka would attack the Muslims.⁷¹³⁰ P-2462 stated that she was at the École de la Liberté on 6 December 2013 when she heard that the Red Cross brought 16 corpses to the school of individuals killed during the Bossangoa Attack, which included two or three women and four of her relatives.⁷¹³¹ She did not see the bodies and did not know the exact number of bodies that were brought.⁷¹³² P-2658 stated that the day after the attack, when there was no more fighting, the Muslims collected the bodies in the neighbourhoods of Bossangoa and brought them to the École de la Liberté.⁷¹³³

Seleka, and never carried a weapon.⁷¹³⁵ P-2049 testified that ‘C-17’, a young man from Bossangoa, was killed just in front of the mosque during the Bossangoa Attack.⁷¹³⁶ P-2049 could not say whether ‘C-17’'s real name was Abakar Moussa and denied knowing whether ‘C-17’ was armed and fighting along the Seleka.⁷¹³⁷ An HRW report also mentions a ‘popular motorcycle taximan’ called ‘Hamidou “Seize-Dix-Sept”’ among the killed.⁷¹³⁸ The Chamber notes the Ngaïssona Defence’s argument that P-2453 did not in fact witness the killing.⁷¹³⁹ However, the Chamber considers that even if P-2453 did not see the actual killing of ‘C-17’, he specified that the individual was his friend and he described the circumstances in which he was killed. Therefore, and in light of the evidence before it, the Chamber finds that ‘C-17’, a taxi driver from Bossangoa, was a Muslim civilian killed by the Anti-Balaka during the Bossangoa Attack.

2886. Hamadou Bouba: P-2453 stated that Hamadou Bouba, among the names of victims he collected, was a Peuhl.⁷¹⁵¹ The Chamber recalls that P-2453 specified that the names of the victims he collected were of Muslims who had stayed in Boro, did not manage to flee with the imam’s group, and were found in the vicinity of the imam’s house.⁷¹⁵² The Chamber notes that P-2049 confirmed the name of ‘Amadou Bouba’ as one of the victims of the attack,⁷¹⁵³ and stated that an ‘Adamou Bouba’ who was a group chief in Zere was victim of the attack in Zere in August 2013.⁷¹⁵⁴ Similarly, also P-2657 and P-2453 knew of a chief called ‘Bouba’ who was burnt in Zere.⁷¹⁵⁵ According to Faustin Ngamesse, Amadou Boua was ‘one of those who rallied with the Seleka’.⁷¹⁵⁶ The Chamber concludes that Bouba, the group chief from Zere, was a different individual than Hamadou Bouba as listed to have been killed during the Bossangoa Attack. On the basis of the above, bearing in mind that Faustin Ngamesse did not provide any basis for his assertion which, in any event, does not, as such, mean that Hamadou Bouba was a Seleka, armed, or actively engaged in hostilities at the time of his death, and further recalling its conclusion that no battle between the Seleka and Anti-Balaka took place in the vicinity of the imam's residence,⁷¹⁵⁷ the Chamber finds that Hamadou Bouba was a Muslim civilian killed by the Anti-Balaka during the Bossangoa Attack.

2887. Ousman Abacar and Ousman Abacar's mother: P-1577 stated that he was told by the man who picked up the bodies that Ousman Abacar's family had all been killed inside or around the imam's house on 5 December 2013 by the Anti-Balaka, specifically their throats were slit, but denied knowing whether the infants in Ousman's family were killed.⁷¹⁵⁸ P-1577, when asked whether Ousman Abacar's family was related to armed groups, stated that he was under the impression that they were Peuhl herders and did not see any weapons that would indicate them being a part of a military group and that they had handmade bows and arrows.⁷¹⁵⁹ On the basis of the above, and further recalling its conclusion that no battle between the Seleka and Anti-Balaka took place in the vicinity of the imam's residence,⁷¹⁶⁰ the Chamber finds that Ousman Abacar and his mother were killed by the Anti-Balaka during the Bossangoa Attack.

c. End of the hostilities on 5 December 2013

2896. While some Anti-Balaka elements eventually retreated, other Anti-Balaka members advanced further but were stopped by Congolese FOMAC forces near the École de la Liberté.

2897. In the Boro neighbourhood, Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that as some of their elements were struck by bullets, they were compelled to retreat towards Benzambé and other directions.⁷¹⁷⁷

2898. P-2602 stated that Théophile Ndangba's group continued the attack from Boro and retreated when it was near the École de la Liberté.⁷¹⁷⁸ P-2602 stated that they attacked the Seleka in Bossangoa at Kafa and from Kafa to Boro, from Boro to Sembé, and from Sembé to the École de la Liberté.⁷¹⁷⁹ Florent Kema was behind them, coming from Sembé neighbourhood as the group was arriving opposite the École de la Liberté.⁷¹⁸⁰ P-2602 saw the Seleka at the École de la Liberté with equipment, vehicles and weapons.⁷¹⁸¹ According to P-2602, the Seleka withdrew to their base at the École de la Liberté where the Congolese FOMAC

separated the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka, saying in Sango that the fight was over.⁷¹⁸² They retreated, but FOMAC shot at them as they were leaving and some Anti-Balaka elements were killed.⁷¹⁸³ P-2602 went back to Benzambé but some elements of Théophile Ndingba's group retreated behind the cathedral in Bossangoa.⁷¹⁸⁴ P-2602 did not know what happened to Florent Kema's group after FOMAC stopped them and only later heard about the death of some of them.⁷¹⁸⁵ As also further discussed below, the Chamber does not rely on P-2602's suggestion that the Seleka would have been based at the École de la Liberté.⁷¹⁸⁶

2899. P-1577 stated that he heard from FOMAC forces that the only other armed units operating in the area near the market place of the Muslim neighbourhood at the time were the Anti-Balaka.⁷¹⁸⁷ P-1577 knew that the Anti-Balaka came very close to the FOMAC compound and stated that there was public footage of fire fights around the compound.⁷¹⁸⁸ P-1577 provided video footage that he took of a FOMAC commander talking on a walkie-talkie about the possibility of meeting with the Anti-Balaka to tell them not to attack the school site, but stating at this time, around 16:30, that this was not yet the time to talk, and to first contain the situation, sending reinforcements to the school.⁷¹⁸⁹ P-1577 stated that at around 15:00 or 16:00, he heard via walkie-talkie that the Anti-Balaka had been stopped from coming into the school.⁷¹⁹⁰

2900. P-2453 stated that on 5 December 2013, he was living in the *École de la Liberté*⁷¹⁹¹ and heard the explosions outside⁷¹⁹² from 14:00 to 16:00 and that the Anti-Balaka approached the premises of the school but the soldiers of FOMAC pushed them back.⁷¹⁹³ P-2453 testified that the Anti-Balaka even killed a Congolese soldier, but no refugee or displaced person was injured inside the school as they were protected by the Congolese soldiers.⁷¹⁹⁴ P-2453 similarly stated that the Congolese commander at the school called for reinforcement.⁷¹⁹⁵ P-2453 testified that he could not see what was happening outside since the people inside the École de la Liberté were ordered to lie down on the ground.⁷¹⁹⁶ P-2453 stated that at around 16:00, the Seleka managed to fight back, took Boro back from the Anti-Balaka, and the Anti-Balaka retreated near the bush at the entrance of Bossangoa, on the side of Boro.⁷¹⁹⁷

2901. In the context of the above, the Chamber notes the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that the Seleka was supported by FOMAC during the Bossangoa Attack, by referring to P-2602 and P-1577.⁷¹⁹⁸

2902. P-2602 mentioned that the Anti-Balaka successfully chased the Seleka away and that the Seleka retreated to the École de la Liberté and were protected by FOMAC.⁷¹⁹⁹ The Chamber also notes that Michel Ningando heard that the Anti-Balaka were saying that FOMAC were accomplices of the Seleka.⁷²⁰⁰ P-1577 testified that he had the impression that FOMAC forces had challenged an Anti-Balaka group close to the École de la Liberté.⁷²⁰¹

2903. The Chamber notes that P-2049 testified that FOMAC were based both in the École de la Liberté and the bishop's house and only left the bishop's house after a FOMAC soldier was attacked.⁷²⁰² P-2049's account is supported by Michel Ningando who stated that around January 2014, a FOMAC soldier was killed and all the FOMAC forces left the bishop's house and went to protect the Muslims in the École de la Liberté.⁷²⁰³

⁷²⁰² P-2049: T-103, p. 27, lines 13-21. The Chamber further notes that P-2049 stated that FOMAC was stationed at the École de la Liberté even in September 2013 (see P-2049: T-100, p. 67, line 22 – p. 68, line 11).

⁷²⁰³ P-2652 Statement, CAR-OTP-2126-0175-R01, at 0188, paras 67-68.

2904. In the Chamber's view, the fact of FOMAC interposing between two opposing parties to a conflict and actively protecting civilians seeking refuge on school premises does not equal FOMAC supporting, or fighting alongside, the Seleka, but indeed quite the contrary.

2905. Once the Anti-Balaka had been stopped by FOMAC at the height of the École de la Liberté, some of its elements retreated from Bossangoa, while others remained in town. Moreover, the evidence suggests that following Michel Djotodia's resignation more Anti-Balaka entered Bossangoa and effectively took control of the town.

2906. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana testified that they retreated to Benzambé and the Seleka began retaliating in the neighbourhoods.⁷²⁰⁴ P-2602 stated that Théophile Ndongba retreated to Benzambé, but some elements of the group retreated to behind the cathedral in Bossangoa.⁷²⁰⁵ P-2602 further stated that Théophile Ndongba left for Bangui 11 days after the Bossangoa Attack, after they succeeded gaining control of the situation in Bossangoa.⁷²⁰⁶ P-2602 stated that before Théophile Ndongba left for Bangui, Kema and Mandago were in Bossangoa, they were recovering from having been shot.⁷²⁰⁷ When Théophile Ndongba then left, Kema was in charge.⁷²⁰⁸ According to P-2602, they agreed that some Anti-Balaka should remain in Bossangoa, Benzambé and in the small districts as they thought the Seleka mercenaries from Chad would harm the population.⁷²⁰⁹

2907. P-1577 stated that the battle moved through the town; initially there was gunfire in different places, then slowly in one or two places, then in one just place as the battle subsided.⁷²¹⁰ P-1577 heard from the captain of the African Union over walkie-talkie that there was a moment of celebration by the Anti-Balaka close to the church, at a point at which they thought they were in position to control the town.⁷²¹¹ P-1577 also stated that around the area of the École de la Liberté, they could see Anti-Balaka elements and when he started to travel out of the centre of the town, the checkpoints had changed from Seleka checkpoints to Anti-Balaka checkpoints.⁷²¹² P-1577 stated that while looking out from the FOMAC compound, he observed a mixed group with people looking quite similar to what had been seen before and others more kind of military structured, more uniforms, much heavier weapons, while in the days after the attack, they did not see Anti-Balaka elements controlling the town in a very structured sense.⁷²¹³

2908. P-1577 also provided photographs that he took on 10 December 2013 around Bossangoa, depicting individuals carrying weapons who identified themselves as members of the Anti-Balaka who stated that they would take the journalists to see their central command in Benzambé, yet they were forced to turn back to Bossangoa due to a tree blocking the road.⁷²¹⁴ P-1577 stated that the Anti-Balaka were more numerous and had more weapons than on his previous trip, estimating between 50 to 100 armed Anti-Balaka elements along the road and in the villages.⁷²¹⁵

2909. In light of this concrete evidence before it, including from individuals who were among the Anti-Balaka that remained in Bossangoa, the Chamber does not rely on D30-4608's overly generalised statement that there were no Anti-Balaka in Bossangoa in the weeks following 5 December 2013, and that he would have seen them for the first time after the Muslims at the École de la Liberté left in April 2014,⁷²¹⁶ or that, in contrast, the Seleka were in the entire town, more concentrated towards Boro.⁷²¹⁷

2910. It appears that following the Bossangoa Attack, also some Seleka remained in Bossangoa.

P-1577 stated that as he was circulating the town on 7 December 2013, the Seleka groups had been told to stay in their camp, and he did not see any military in the centre of town.⁷²¹⁸

2911. However, the Seleka did eventually leave the town. Indeed, Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana testified that they heard on the radio that Michel Djotodia had resigned when he and his group were heading towards Bossangoa, they took a path close to the airport and headed towards the bishopric to set up post in Bossangoa.⁷²¹⁹ Once they controlled Bossangoa, he was asked by FACA ComZone Florent Kema to write a mission order to allow some FACA Anti-Balaka to establish checkpoints in Bossangoa.⁷²²⁰ Similarly, Michel Ningando stated that the Seleka disappeared from Bossangoa overnight at the time of Michel Djotodia's resignation, and even the Sangaris did not know how the Seleka had left.⁷²²¹ While Roger de Martial Yagao did not recollect the date, he also stated that the armed Seleka left town one night, with Bossangoa remaining under control of the Congolese contingent of MISCA, which was subsequently replaced by the Chadian MINUSCA contingent, the Sangaris, police and the gendarmerie.⁷²²² He further stated that the Anti-Balaka in Bossangoa were living in the 'Camp Chic' neighbourhood behind the municipal stadium, not far from the church where the displaced Christians were staying, occupying the houses of civilians who had fled to the church.⁷²²³ Roger de Martial Yagao got to know the spokesperson of the Anti-Balaka nicknamed 'Atakoli' in Sango or 'Koko' in Gbaya, which means grandfather, because he introduced himself as such during meetings.⁷²²⁴

2912. Bearing in mind the above, and also considering its discussion below,⁷²²⁵ the Chamber gives little weight to D30-4608's assertion that some Seleka left with the Muslims from the École de la Liberté at the time of their transport from there, or that after the Muslims' departure the Sangaris accompanied the Seleka at night, ‘ne voyant plus leur raison d’être depuis le départ des musulmans’.⁷²²⁶

2913. After the Bossangoa Attack, the Anti-Balaka reported, including on casualties.

2914. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana testified that after the Bossangoa Attack, there were many cases of injuries and a report had to be made about these because after every attack, a report on the elements had to be made to the ‘superiors’.⁷²²⁷ As to the recipient of the reports, Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana testified that he thought they reported to the ‘superiors’ or ‘chiefs’ whom they were in the habit of calling, but he did not know to whom they reported.⁷²²⁸ The witness testified that Alexis Mandago was shot and Lamine died, they went to Benzambé where they handed over the injured to Doctors Without Borders to take them to Bossangoa and take care of them.⁷²²⁹ The witness testified that they had lost two chief corporals and also Théophile Ndangba and ‘Charly’ were injured during the attack.⁷²³⁰

2915. P-2602 similarly stated that during the Bossangoa Attack, the group lost two ‘chief corporals’ called Maragot and Eyafio, one element lost his arm and one his hands.⁷²³¹ P-2602 stated that the two military men who died were from Bossangoa, and those who the Anti-Balaka sent first into the town.⁷²³²

2916. P-2602 stated that Alexis Mandago had progressed with his group to block the bridge but did not succeed⁷²³³ and was hit by a bullet behind Bossangoa town hall.⁷²³⁴ P-2602 stated that he was informed of this when he was in Benzambé; he heard that Alexis Mandago was first taken to Benzambé and then to Bossangoa for treatment.⁷²³⁵ P-2602 stated that Théophile Ndangba and ‘Charlie’ were shot during the Bossangoa Attack.⁷²³⁶

2917. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that after the Bossangoa Attack, they were recovering in Benzambé and learned that they had been given 500,000 CFA to buy food and medicine⁷²³⁷ and that this money came through the Cameroon border to Bouar.⁷²³⁸ The witness further stated that they organised a meeting of chiefs and Florent Kema decided that two chiefs should be sent to collect the money.⁷²³⁹ When the two chiefs returned, only 180,000 CFA was left as they had used some of the money to buy solar panels to charge cell phones, leading to anger and a huge dispute among the elements.⁷²⁴⁰ Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana stated that he never found out who the money came from.⁷²⁴¹ The witness stated that later in Bangui, there was a dispute between Dedane and Andjilo over the money; Andjilo, who was under Dedane, was angry at not having received his share and Andjilo’s younger brother killed Dedane.⁷²⁴² The witness stated that he was in Benzambé when this happened and asked to inform his family, so he wrote a letter to Sidony Danboye, Dedane’s sister.⁷²⁴³

2. Events during and in the aftermath of the Bossangoa Attack

i. Destruction of houses and looting of goods following the Bossangoa Attack

At some point between 5 and 8 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka burned and destroyed residential structures, lived in by Muslims at the time of the attack, in the immediate vicinity of the imam’s residence.

2918. The evidence before the Chamber shows that in the aftermath of the Bossangoa Attack, residential structures in Bossangoa were destroyed. Specifically, residential homes in the vicinity of the imam's residence were burned and destroyed by the Anti-Balaka between 5 and 8 December 2013.

2919. According to the CAR Panel Interim Report of 2014, testimonies from eyewitnesses and local authorities showed that there were three waves of destruction in Bossangoa, with a second taking place between 5 December 2013 and 22 January 2014, period during which the destruction of building was related to the attack of Anti-Balaka groups 'in retaliation of actions of Seleka fighters'.⁷²⁴⁴ A third wave of destruction took place, according to the panel, between 22 January and 28 February 2014, committed by 'local groups associated with the anti-Balaka, targeting more specifically the neighbourhood of Boro that is predominantly inhabited by Muslims', and which by the time of the report, 'appear[ed] now almost completely destroyed'.⁷²⁴⁵

2920. Expert witness Lars Bromley analysed satellite imagery with images taken before and after the Bossangoa Attack, 4 and 12 December 2013, concluding that 'the image from 4 December [2013] includes hundreds of structures that exhibit signs of destruction but would need comparison with a previously acquired image for verification'.⁷²⁴⁶ The witness further concluded that indications of burning were 'relatively frequent' on both assessed dates and 'at least a few destroyed structures were burned', the image of 4 December 2013 included 'hundreds of structures' exhibiting 'signs of destruction', and 'at least 17 structures were destroyed in various areas [...] by 12 December 2013'.⁷²⁴⁷ Further analysis of satellite imagery from 5 December 2013, 22 January 2014 and 28 February 2014 concluded on 227 destroyed buildings (probable) by 5 December 2013,⁷²⁴⁸ an additional 893 destroyed buildings by 22 January 2014, and a further 114 destroyed buildings by 28 February 2014, leading to a total of 1,234 destroyed structures.⁷²⁴⁹ The CAR Panel concluded accordingly that ‘1,007 buildings were destroyed between 5 December 2013 and 28 February 2014’.⁷²⁵⁰

2921. P-1577 visited an area in the vicinity of the imam’s residence on 5 December 2013, at which time buildings there were not destroyed, while several of these buildings had been destroyed by the time he returned to the same area around 7 December 2013.⁷²⁵¹ Indeed, P-1577 provided photographs showing signs of burning and destruction which, according to their metadata, were taken on 8 December 2013.⁷²⁵² P-1577 explained that the photographs were taken at the buildings very close to the imam’s house, and he was told that the Anti-Balaka had looted and set them on fire during the attack on 5 December 2013.⁷²⁵³ P-1577 stated that there was a recent burning smell and it was very clear that it was a recent fire.⁷²⁵⁴ P-1577 testified that the area close to the imam’s house was very clearly a Muslim district and Muslims lived in those homes as when he visited there in the morning of 5 December 2013, it was filled with individuals who identified themselves as Muslims, other residents also identified this area as the Muslim neighbourhood, and when he returned, there was evidence of Arabic writing on papers strewn around the floor and the names on identification documents had Muslim sounding names.⁷²⁵⁵ The location which P-1577 believed to be a Muslim school, with tablets for teaching children the Koran, was almost razed to the ground,

See also P-1577 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2081-0769-R01, at 0783, para. 49, at 0788-90. Regarding Photograph, CAR-OTP-2085-3122, Lars Bromley explained, asked whether it was consistent with the kind of damage he observed in the satellite imagery for Bossangoa, that a pre-image would show the structure with a roof and for the post-image, the big clue would be that the roof was gone and there would be blackened charred remains on the ground, and also some, very subtle but certainly visible, white ash (if the image had been collected while it was still visible), which tends to blow away relatively quickly, but the blackened soot would remain and gradually ablate (see P-2193: T-019, p. 26, line 7 – p. 27, line 2, p. 59, lines 11-25). P-2200 stated that Photograph, CAR-OTP-2085-3122 was taken in ‘Soumbe’ neighbourhood, close to Boro, and believed this house belonged to Agba Abchouka, an ‘old and tired man’ who lived in Chad at the time of the witness’s statement – according to P-2200, only the Muslim houses were destroyed in this neighbourhood (see P-2200 Statement, CAR-OTP-2088-2146-R04, at 2165, para. 95).

with no roof and all of the walls blackened.⁷²⁵⁶ P-1577 further explained that he found bullet shells and unexploded ammunition in the Muslim trading area quite close to the imam's house, and that shops were looted and items taken.⁷²⁵⁷ P-1577 did not know who was responsible for the looting but was told that it was the Anti-Balaka on the day of the Bossangoa Attack.⁷²⁵⁸

2923. In addition to the evidence provided by P-1577, P-2200 stated that some 'children' snuck out of the École de la Liberté and reported back that the Anti-Balaka were destroying houses.⁷²⁶⁰ According to P-2200, between 5 and 8 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka destroyed all of the Muslim houses across the entire town, with certain neighbourhoods such as Boro, Arabe and Fulbe almost entirely destroyed.⁷²⁶¹ According to P-2200, the Anti-Balaka specifically targeted Muslim houses, and in areas like Manandou and Soumbe, where many Christians also lived, only the houses of Muslims were destroyed.⁷²⁶²

2924. P-2049 stated that most of the residential houses were set on fire during the Bossangoa Attack, both Christian and Muslim.⁷²⁶³ P-2049 testified that the houses next to and around the mosque and near the market which were inhabited predominantly by Muslims were set alight and also in the Arabe, Foulbé, and Boro neighbourhoods.⁷²⁶⁴ P-2049 stated that he was at the École de la Liberté when the houses were set alight, so he did not know how many houses were burnt, although he believed it was the majority.⁷²⁶⁵

When shown the latter photograph, P-2200 also believed that it was probably taken at a Koran school, as there were tablets with writings from the Koran which were particularly used in such schools (see P-2200 Statement, CAR-OTP-2088-2146-R04, at 2163, para. 93).

2925. The Chamber notes that P-2049 commented on a video⁷²⁶⁶ which shows the destroyed and burnt mosque and residential buildings in Bornou and Foulbé neighbourhoods.⁷²⁶⁷ P-2049 explained that he received the video from another person⁷²⁶⁸ and thought that it was filmed after the Bossangoa Attack as he believed that the mosque shown in the video was destroyed two or three days after 5 December 2013.⁷²⁶⁹ Lars Bromley agreed that the damage to the buildings appearing in the video was consistent with the type of damage he saw in the satellite imagery for Bossangoa, with indications of burning and frequent roofless structures, and stated the video may have been taken some time afterwards, so some of the blackened soot would have washed away in the rains.⁷²⁷⁰ P-2453 stated that the video showed several places within Boro, explaining that the white house at 00:07:01 was his and that the roof was damaged, and naming owners of the other houses depicted in the video.⁷²⁷¹ P-2453 further stated that the houses would normally have had roofs, doors and windows and that in his assessment, the video was filmed after the Bossangoa Attack, as it was only after that attack that the houses in the Boro neighbourhood, intact until 5 December 2013, were pillaged and damaged.⁷²⁷² On the basis of this evidence, the Chamber concludes that the video was filmed at some point after the Bossangoa Attack, without being able to conclude on the specific date.⁷²⁷³

2926. Considering the above, the Chamber gives no weight to an aspect of the testimony of Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana, who stated that the Anti-Balaka could not have set alight houses and schools on the day of the Bossangoa Attack.⁷²⁷⁴ Indeed, his evidence as such does not undermine the allegation that Anti-Balaka may have been engaged in damaging or destroying structures in the aftermath of the Bossangoa Attack.

2927. Further in this context the Chamber notes the CAR Panel's observation of 'the inscription of "anti-Balaka" on destroyed houses owned by members of the Muslim community in the Boro neighbourhood'.⁷²⁷⁵ Aurélien Llorca, member of the panel, explained in this regard that on 30 April 2014, he took four photographs which 'accurately reflect[ed]' what he saw on that day, with the word 'Anti-Balaka' and machete drawings clearly visible in the copies of better resolution.⁷²⁷⁶ The witness remembered often seeing 'Anti-Balaka' written on other walls in several areas in the CAR.⁷²⁷⁷ On the basis of this evidence, the Chamber is unable to conclude when these inscriptions were made.

2928. In addition to structures being damaged and destroyed, some witnesses testified to the looting of items during or after the Bossangoa Attack.

2930. P-2049 heard that the Anti-Balaka also looted during or after the Bossangoa Attack, explaining that when one day after the Bossangoa Attack he and others went to the Bossangoa stadium, he saw armed people in attires carrying property on their heads, who were arrested by the gendarmerie commander.⁷²⁷⁹ P-2049 also testified that he and others at the École de la Liberté went outside from time to time and saw some people collect property and pass behind the mosque, carting the items away.⁷²⁸⁰

2931. Without mentioning a specific date, Roger de Martial Yagao stated that in Bossangoa, after most of the Anti-Balaka had left for Bangui, there was less tension, but the Anti-Balaka and some Christian civilians pillaged and destroyed Muslim houses and administrative buildings.⁷²⁸¹ The witness also stated more generally that when the Seleka arrived ‘with the Muslim connotation associated with them’, the Anti-Balaka and the Christian community turned against the Chadian Muslims by attacking them, pillaging and destroying their houses.⁷²⁸²

2932. P-2453 stated that the French army arrived two or three days after the Bossangoa Attack, and that five days thereafter, the president of the youth asked a French army captain whether some people at the École de la Liberté could check the conditions of their houses, which he did later and those that went to check informed others on return that houses had been looted and burned down.⁷²⁸³

2933. P-2462 heard that all the houses, including her house in the Fulbe neighbourhood,⁷²⁸⁴ had been destroyed and all of their possessions had been looted.⁷²⁸⁵

2934. Faustin Ngamesse stated that the homes of the Muslims were looted by civilian thieves, after the Muslims had left Bossangoa.⁷²⁸⁶

2935. The Chamber notes that in addition to witnesses stating that destruction and looting was committed by Anti-Balaka elements, other evidence suggests that also Seleka members were involved in destruction of structures.

2936. Specifically, P-2200 stated that the Seleka did not destroy houses when they first arrived, but they destroyed houses in response to Anti-Balaka attacks when fighting the Anti-Balaka.⁷²⁸⁷ Other evidence suggests that Seleka forces were destroying houses in the area of Bossangoa airport around 7 December 2013.⁷²⁸⁸ According to D30-4608, he knew of this incident within a week of the Bossangoa Attack, in which Seleka forces said there were Anti-Balaka elements in certain houses and initiated the burning of houses, specifically around Boro.⁷²⁸⁹ The Chamber finds D30-4608's evidence unclear and illogical considered together with the information from the post insofar as the other information talks of destruction by the Seleka in the area of the airfield, whereas D30-4608 located the destruction within Boro, a predominantly Muslim neighbourhood, stating the Seleka suspected 'auto-defence people' in those houses.

2937. Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana, an Anti-Balaka element who participated in the Bossangoa Attack, witnessed the Seleka setting fire to grassland on the day of the Bossangoa Attack, stating that the Seleka set fire to the short grass and bushes around the houses in Bossangoa in pursuit of the Anti-Balaka, as opposed to the houses belonging to Muslims, which remained intact.⁷²⁹⁰

2938. In relation to the question of the alleged perpetrators of destruction and looting in Bossangoa during and after the Bossangoa Attack, the Chamber finds no merit in the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that only because there may have been no eyewitnesses to the destruction or looting, the identity of any perpetrators cannot be established to the requisite standard.⁷²⁹¹ At the same time, the evidence before the Chamber suggests that some destruction and looting in Bossangoa either took place at some point after the time period relevant to the charges,⁷²⁹² or was committed by individuals other than Anti-Balaka members. Therefore, in conclusion and on the basis of the evidence before it, the Chamber finds that the Anti-Balaka burned and destroyed residential structures in the vicinity of the imam's residence at some point between 5 and 8 December 2013.

ii. Destruction of Bossangoa's central mosque

2939. The evidence before the Chamber shows that the central mosque in Bossangoa, to which Muslims went for Friday prayers, was located between Bornou 2 and Arabe neighbourhoods, opposite the Boro market, while smaller mosques were in the neighbourhoods.⁷²⁹³

2940. Witnesses testified both about the date on which the central mosque of Bossangoa was last seen intact, as well as the date on which it was discovered to have been destroyed. The Chamber notes in this regard the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that 'no building along the main road in the Boro neighbourhood was destroyed before 22 January 2014'.⁷²⁹⁴

2941. A video from the end of November 2013 shows an unbroken one-story building with 'Mosquee Centrale de Bossangoa' written on the front wall, with Arabic text below.⁷²⁹⁵ P-2049, asked about this video, thought it showed the central mosque of Bossangoa before its destruction and that the person calling the Muslims to prayer was Toukroun.⁷²⁹⁶ P-2049 explained that, before the Bossangoa Attack, a person of goodwill painted the mosque, both inside and outside so the colour of the mosque was different from the video.⁷²⁹⁷

2942.P-2462 stated that the central mosque of Bossangoa, located opposite Boro market, was intact on 5 December 2013,⁷²⁹⁸ while P-2453 stated that the central mosque was intact the day before the attack.⁷²⁹⁹

2944.P-1577 testified that when he returned to the Muslim neighbourhood on 8 December 2013, the Bossangoa mosque did not appear to be damaged or destroyed,⁷³⁰⁴ whereas the imam's house and the school had been attacked and damaged.⁷³⁰⁵ P-1577 assumed that this was because the mosque was more centrally located, close to the market, and at a distance from the locations that witnesses told P-1577 had been attacked by the Anti-Balaka.⁷³⁰⁶ The Chamber finds P-1577's account particularly persuasive as he returned to the Muslim quarter within a short window of time and was thus able to compare the state of affairs.

2945.P-2200 stated that he heard from 'the children' at the École de la Liberté, who went out to see what was happening, that approximately four days after the attack, on 9 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka began to attack the two mosques in Bossangoa and destroyed them entirely.⁷³⁰⁷ Without providing a specific date, P-2200 stated that he, accompanied by a few of his faithful and some armed Seleka, subsequently saw that the large mosque had been entirely destroyed.⁷³⁰⁸

2946. Michel Ningando stated that the main mosque of Bossangoa was destroyed and was unsure of the date of the destruction, but believed it was ‘from 5 December [2013] onwards’.⁷³⁰⁹

2947. Some witnesses provided different accounts regarding the date that the central mosque of Bossangoa was destroyed or testified to hearing that the mosque was destroyed by civilians.

2948. Roger de Martial Yagao indicated the date of destruction as being before the Bossangoa Attack. The witness stated that he arrived in Bossangoa at the end of September or early October 2013⁷³¹⁰ and saw that the central mosque of Bossangoa was already destroyed and that he did not know who had destroyed it.⁷³¹¹ The Chamber notes that the witness’s account is not supported by any other evidence and that other witnesses consistently testified that the central mosque of Bossangoa was not destroyed before or on the day of the Bossangoa Attack. It therefore does not find Roger de Martial Yagao reliable on this aspect.

2949. On the other hand, P-2453 stated that he heard that Sale Garba, the man living next to the central mosque, told the imam that he witnessed the pillaging and damaging of the mosque on 2 January 2014.⁷³¹² P-2453 stated that the man did not say who was responsible.⁷³¹³ P-2453 further stated that in February 2014, their convoy passed in front of the central mosque which had been totally emptied and the roof and the windows had been removed.⁷³¹⁴ P-2453 stated that he did not know who was responsible for damaging the central mosque.⁷³¹⁵ P-2462 similarly stated that when she left for Chad around 2 or 3 April 2014, she saw the roof of the central mosque of Bossangoa was gone.⁷³¹⁶

2950.P-2602, an Anti-Balaka element who participated in the Bossangoa Attack, stated that they clashed with the Seleka near the mosque, but the mosque was not destroyed during the attack but after the Anti-Balaka had left, he was not there, and that those who were in the town destroyed the mosque, not the Anti-Balaka.⁷³¹⁷ He denied that the Anti-Balaka entered and searched the mosque.⁷³¹⁸

2951.Faustin Ngamesse stated that he did not see it, but heard from young Christians that they had gone to destroy the mosque in Bossangoa.⁷³¹⁹

2952.Odette Namsona testified that the mosque was not destroyed by the Anti-Balaka but by the entire population, young people from the locality, as she was told on her return to Bossangoa by young men who said that the ‘young people of Bossangoa’ were angry because their houses had been torched and their possessions looted.⁷³²⁰

2953.D30-4608 heard that there had been looting and that the mosque in Boro had been destroyed after the Bossangoa Attack.⁷³²¹ D30-4608 did not know who was responsible but one day saw that the mosque had disappeared.⁷³²² As to the timing of the destruction of the mosque, D30-4608 believed that it was after the departure of the Muslims for Chad, since ‘[i]t would have been impossible [...] when the Muslims and Seleka were present’, as ‘we couldn’t have done that without facing reprisals’.⁷³²³

2954.The Chamber notes that witnesses did not provide wholly consistent evidence regarding the date of the destruction of the central mosque. It further notes that witnesses testified to hearing about the destruction of the central mosque, but that there are no eyewitnesses to the central mosque’s destruction. For all the above reasons, the Chamber is unable to ascertain the exact date of the destruction of the central mosque of Bossangoa. However, the Chamber finds that the central mosque of Bossangoa was intact before the Bossangoa Attack on 5

December and remained intact until at least 8 December 2013. Further, the Chamber concludes that the central mosque had been destroyed by February 2014.

2955. The Chamber notes that P-2200 is the only witness who specifically mentioned that Bossangoa's central mosque was destroyed by the Anti-Balaka. Although the Chamber finds P-2200 credible and reliable, his evidence is limited to what he heard from 'the children', who reported to him seeing the Anti-Balaka destroying the mosque approximately four days after the Bossangoa Attack, on or around 9 December 2013. It further notes that there is no other evidence that supports P-2200's account as to the Anti-Balaka being responsible for the destruction of the central mosque. On the contrary, the Chamber notes that several witnesses testified to having heard that the civilian population of Bossangoa destroyed the mosque.⁷³²⁴ Considering the evidence before the Chamber, it is unable to conclude who was responsible for the destruction of the central mosque of Bossangoa.

iii. Muslim population at the École de la Liberté and its eventual transportation mainly to Chad

During the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, the Muslim civilian population of Bossangoa fled the attacked neighbourhoods to seek shelter at the École de la Liberté, where their numbers rose into several thousands.

2956. The École de la Liberté is located in the centre of Bossangoa.⁷³²⁵

2957. Already before the Bossangoa Attack, starting from late summer 2013, Muslims from the surrounding villages of Bossangoa started seeking refuge at the École de la Liberté, as described by various witnesses.⁷³²⁶ Witnesses also described how after the first attack on 2958. On the day of the Bossangoa Attack, more Muslims sought refuge at the École de la Liberté.

See also D30-4608: T-292, p. 47, line 24 – p. 48, line 10 (the witness stated that people from the surrounding areas, like Bangui road, around Korompoko, Bozoum road and Ouham-Bac were the first people seeking refuge at the school, and confirmed that people were at the École de la Liberté when he went there before 5 December 2013).

⁷³²⁸ P-0505 Statement, CAR-OTP-2014-0129-R01, at 0133, para. 24 (the witness stated that he travelled to Bossangoa on 22 September 2013 and estimated that 1,000 Muslims were gathered in a school named ‘École Liberté’, fearful of revenge attacks from Christians); P-2652 Statement, CAR-OTP-2126-0175-R01, at 0187, para. 65 (the witness stated that there were less than 1,000 displaced Muslims at the École de la Liberté before 5 December 2013); P-1577 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2081-0769-R01, at 0773, paras 17-18; P-1577: T-027, p. 10, lines 4-9, p. 34, line 20 – p. 35, line 13, p. 65, lines 3-22 (the witness stated that during his first visit to Bossangoa from 31 October to 6 November 2013, a few hundred people were living around the buildings of the École de la Liberté; when he returned to Bossangoa on 4 December 2013, the displaced camps at both the school and the church were more populated than the first time because people were fleeing attacks from both groups). P-1577 also provided photographs, dated 1 November 2013, which depicted Muslims who had sought refuge at the École de la Liberté and who told him that they had fled attacks from the Anti-Balaka who had also killed members of their families (see P-1577 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2081-0769-R01, at 0778; P-1577: T-027, p. 32, line 13 – p. 33, line 20; Photograph, CAR-OTP-2085-1241; Metadata, CAR-OTP-2085-1242; CAR-OTP-2085-2619; Photograph, CAR-OTP-2085-1251; Metadata, CAR-OTP-2085-1252; CAR-OTP-2085-2624; Photograph, CAR-OTP-2085-1261; Metadata, CAR-OTP-2085-1262; CAR-OTP-2085-2627; Photograph, CAR-OTP-2085-1271; Metadata, CAR-OTP-2085-1272; CAR-OTP-2085-2630). The Chamber notes that P-2467 provided a significantly higher estimate, stating that around 4,000 Muslims had sought refuge in a school and tribunal building at the time he provided a statement in a committee hearing in November 2013 (see P-2467 Statement, CAR-OTP-2109-0520-R01, at 0525, para. 26 referring to Sub-Committee Statement, CAR-OTP-2081-0496, at 0540). Considering that the other witnesses were more consistent in their estimates of there having been several hundred to a thousand Muslims at the school, the Chamber does not rely on this higher estimate.

that those to whom he spoke thought that there were as many as 10,000 Muslims seeking refuge, but that he did not recall seeing that many people there at the time.⁷³³⁰

2960.P-2049 stated that, on 5 December 2013, he was rushing on the road in the midst of gunfire and people were rushing and running in all directions in order to seek refuge.⁷³³¹ After 5 December 2013, all the Muslims were at the École de la Liberté and there were no Muslims in the neighbourhood.⁷³³² He stated that for the period that he stayed there, the number of persons at the École de la Liberté was about 7,000, including people who came from Bossangoa and the surrounding areas, the World Food Programme, which provided assistance, had this figure.⁷³³³

2961.P-2658 stated that, on 5 December 2013, he heard gunshots everywhere in the city and all the Muslims of Bossangoa went to the École de la Liberté, where there were many people.⁷³³⁴ P-2453 testified that he saw a crowd of people going towards the École de la Liberté, children, elderly people, pregnant ladies and whoever had the strength to get to the camp.⁷³³⁵ P-2200 stated that during the course of the afternoon, all of the inhabitants of the Arabe neighbourhood arrived at the school site, where there were also Muslims from the Boro, Soumbe and Manado neighbourhoods.⁷³³⁶ P-2200 stated that during the Bossangoa Attack, he heard that many Muslims were chased by the Anti-Balaka and that the Seleka found Muslims and brought them to the school site to avoid them being killed.⁷³³⁷

from Bossangoa and people from the surrounding villages who had all gathered there.⁷³⁴⁰ There were men, women and children.⁷³⁴¹ P-2657 stated that the people at the École de la Liberté were Muslim and there were also some Christians who were married to Muslims.⁷³⁴²

2963. P-2462 testified that the Muslims went to the imam's compound and then they all went to the École de la Liberté.⁷³⁴³ P-2462 said that there were about 1,000 people living in the École de la Liberté.⁷³⁴⁴ P-2658 stated that he was at the École de la Liberté on 5 December 2013 and that there were many people but he could not estimate how many.⁷³⁴⁵

2965. Odette Namsona confirmed hearing that thousands of displaced Muslims sought shelter at the École de la Liberté following the Bossangoa Attack.⁷³⁴⁹ She testified that there were no longer any Muslims in town by the time she got back to Bossangoa.⁷³⁵⁰

2966. Aurélien Llorca stated that from the narrative of all interlocutors with whom he met, he understood that the Anti-Balaka had driven out the inhabitants of the Boro neighbourhood who were mostly of the Muslim faith.⁷³⁵¹

2967. Documentary evidence provides diverse figures on the number of Muslims at the École de la Liberté after the Bossangoa Attack, ranging from 4,000⁷³⁵² over 7,000⁷³⁵³ to 8,000⁷³⁵⁴ and 8,500.⁷³⁵⁵

⁷³⁵² Press article, CAR-2079-1159 (dated 14 January 2014, stating that since the first Anti-Balaka attacks in September and following reprisals by the Seleka, the number of internally displaced people in the two main camps multiplied, with around 4,000 Muslims taking refuge at a school). The Chamber notes that the Ngaïssona Defence argued this item has limited probative value due to the lack of clarity on how the information was collected and the hearsay nature of most of its content (see Annex 1 to Defence Response to the "Prosecution's Eleventh Application for the Submission of Open-source Evidence from the Bar Table" ICC-01/14-01/18-2010-Conf, ICC-01/14-01/18-2114-Conf-Anx1, p. 28). The Chamber considers in this regard that it has assessed this item in the context of other evidence before it, and has not based any conclusions on this item alone, or the concrete figures contained therein specifically.

See also UNHCR Report, CAR-OTP-2127-4086, at 4091 (indicating that since 5 December 2013, 3,750 households were assisted in both the École de la Liberté and at the bishopric).

2014, and even further by 22 January 2014, to ‘perhaps several hundred tightly grouped tent structures’.⁷³⁵⁷

2969. P-1577 stated that two satellite images of the École de la Liberté before and after the Bossangoa Attack⁷³⁵⁸ corresponded to what he witnessed at the time in that camp and that the more populated image corresponded well to his experience of the camp around 7 December 2013 when he visited it.⁷³⁵⁹

2970. On the basis of the evidence as outlined, the Chamber concludes that the numbers of Muslim inhabitants of Bossangoa seeking refuge at the École de la Liberté following the Bossangoa Attack rose into the several thousands.

⁷³⁵⁷ P-2193: T-019, p. 23, line 7 – p. 25, line 5; P-2193 Report, CAR-OTP-2127-6617, at 6620, 6622. See also Reports, CAR-OTP-2005-0197, at 0205; CAR-OTP-2001-2043, at 2062. The Chamber notes that the two reports have identical images and content. They provide that ‘[s]ince July 2013, several hundred displaced Muslim civilians sought shelter within the main buildings of a local school (Ecole Liberté) in the Muslim Boro quarter of Bossangoa’ and that ‘[t]he number of displaced in Boro dramatically increased when over 7,000 local Muslims residents sought emergency shelter and protection at the school which was heavily protected by African Union troops and the ex-Seleka fighters at the time’. The satellite image of 4 December 2013 shows four buildings in the centre that are spaced out and in front of one of the buildings is a blueish rectangular object. The satellite image of 12 December 2013 shows numerous blue and white rectangular objects between and around the buildings. The Chamber notes that in relation of Report, CAR-OTP-2005-0197, the Ngaïssona Defence noted that the satellite images were not put to a satellite imagery expert, and that the absence of sources and methodology deprives the Chamber from any possibility to assess the item’s reliability (see Annex 1 to Defence Response to the “Prosecution’s Eleventh Application for the Submission of Open-source Evidence from the Bar Table” ICC-01/14-01/18-2010-Conf, ICC-01/14-01/18-2114-Conf-Anx1, pp. 16-17). The Chamber considers in this regard that it has assessed the information in this report only within the context of the evidence provided by a satellite imagery expert, as described. It has further not relied on other aspects of this report for purposes of reaching conclusions.

⁷³⁵⁹ P-1577: T-027, p. 66, lines 10-19. The Chamber notes in this regard also the evidence of P-2467, who was in the CAR between 30 October and 5 November 2013 and again from 18 to 25 March 2014, and who believed that the images reflected the locations in which he conducted interview with displaced Muslims who had fled to Bossangoa (see P-2467 Statement, CAR-OTP-2109-0520-R01, at 0522, para. 13, at 0525, para. 26).

2972. In relation to what appears to be a challenge to the individuals at the École de la Liberté being civilians or being in a position of insecurity during their time there, the Chamber notes the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that (i) 'Muslim civilians at École [de la] Liberté were under the protection of FOMAC forces and Seleka elements',⁷³⁶¹ (ii) Seleka elements were armed in the photograph taken by P-1577 at the École de la Liberté on 6 December 2013;⁷³⁶² and (iii) since Seleka elements often wore plain civilian clothes, it cannot be excluded that other non-identifiable elements were present at the school.⁷³⁶³

2973. P-2602 stated that the Seleka who remained after he drove them out were at the École de la Liberté and protected by the MISCA,⁷³⁶⁴ and that some of the Muslim population fleeing to the school were armed with the same weapons as the Seleka were using.⁷³⁶⁵ According to P-2602, he saw Seleka with vehicles and weapons within the grounds of the school on 5 December 2013.⁷³⁶⁶

2974. D30-4608 claimed that the Seleka were at the École de la Liberté to protect Muslims as wherever there were Muslims, protection was offered by the Seleka, that the Sangaris never even started disarming the Seleka at the school, that the civilian Muslims at the school were armed and always carried their weapons when walking around.⁷³⁶⁷ D30-4608 heard it said that the 'indigenous' populations found refuge in the École de la Liberté so that they could be taken care of and for fear of being attacked by the Anti-Balaka, which he took to be untrue as the Muslims supported the Seleka.⁷³⁶⁸ The Chamber is of the view that D30-4608 provided no source for his overly generalised assertions, which also included his personal assessments, for which reason the Chamber attaches no weight to these claims.

2975. In any event, and in contrast to the above, P-2453 stated that the Sangaris forbade the Seleka bearing arms, that the Seleka were forced to remain in the military base in Sembe, while within the École de la Liberté no one bore arms except the FOMAC soldiers.⁷³⁶⁹ Similarly, P-2658 stated that no Seleka elements were at the École de la Liberté, but some Seleka were in the city, and MISCA did not allow Seleka members to enter the school at which there were men, women and children.⁷³⁷⁰

2976. P-2049 stated that the Seleka had a base at the police station located opposite the *École de la Liberté*⁷³⁷¹ but after the Bossangoa Attack, they were no longer based there, they were forced to leave when FOMAC arrived.⁷³⁷²

2977. P-2200 stated that when the Sangaris arrived at the school after the attack, they disarmed the few Seleka who had taken refuge there, as well as confiscated machetes from the Muslims and even the slingshots used by the Peuhl shepherds.⁷³⁷³ Once disarmed, all the last remaining Seleka left.⁷³⁷⁴

2978. Michel Ningando stated that after 5 December 2013, the Seleka fled to stay next to the École de la Liberté and in the town hall near the school.⁷³⁷⁵ FOMAC blocked the Seleka from entering the school.⁷³⁷⁶ The witness heard that weapons were found under some of the Muslims' mats in the school, but he did not see this when he went to the school to distribute food.⁷³⁷⁷

2979. The Chamber also notes that, without providing a detailed account of where the weapons were amassed, P-1577 provided photographs⁷³⁷⁸ dated 9 December 2013 and taken at the

FOMAC compound, depicting the weapons that were collected by FOMAC and stored either at the FOMAC compound or another compound for displaced persons.⁷³⁷⁹

2980. On the basis of the above, the Chamber concludes that to the extent there may have been some armed individuals within the premises of the École de la Liberté initially, they were quickly disarmed by FOMAC and Sangaris forces.

The Muslim civilians that had sought refuge at the École de la Liberté remained confined to the school premises for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, staying there in cramped and generally dire conditions. The Muslim civilians at the École de la Liberté were dependent on the protection of international forces for their safety and could not leave the school premises venturing into Bossangoa without risk to their person.

2981. In the period following the Bossangoa Attack, and until their transportation from Bossangoa in February and April 2014, as discussed further below, the Muslim inhabitants of Bossangoa that had sought refuge at the École de la Liberté were confined to the school premises in fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka.

2982. At the outset, the Chamber recalls its analysis above according to which part of the Anti-Balaka groups remained in Bossangoa following the Bossangoa Attack.⁷³⁸⁰ Even if the Anti-Balaka were not in control of the town completely, the Chamber finds without merit the Ngaïssona Defence's suggestion that the Anti-Balaka retreated from Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 and therefore could not have posed a direct threat or exercise any control over Muslim civilians at the École de la Liberté.⁷³⁸¹

armed guard and not travel too far away from the protection of the camp for fear of being attacked.⁷³⁸⁴

2984. P-2200 stated that the school was protected by several different military contingents, first Cameroonian and Guinean soldiers who were replaced by Chadian soldiers and that the Sangaris patrolled the town.⁷³⁸⁵ P-2200 stated that the situation for Muslims in Bossangoa at that time was like being in prison, in that they were encircled from all sides by the Anti-Balaka who had established their positions at several places in the town in such a way that those in the school did not dare to leave.⁷³⁸⁶ P-2200 further stated that they sometimes saw the Anti-Balaka pass on motorbikes in front of the school to trouble them and that when the Chadian soldiers started to guard the site, the Anti-Balaka stopped coming because the soldiers shot at them as soon as they approached.⁷³⁸⁷ P-2200 stated that the bishop visited and told him not to leave the site in order to remain safe.⁷³⁸⁸

2985. Further, P-2200 stated that they could not go to the market, instead the Christians came to the École de la Liberté to sell chicken and fish, and there were no problems with the Christians who came to sell their produce.⁷³⁸⁹ P-2200 stated that if they left the school, the Muslims risked confrontations with Christian families who supported the Anti-Balaka and threw stones at them.⁷³⁹⁰ A Christian person from P-2200's area, whose name P-2200 did not remember, warned them not to leave because the Anti-Balaka were hunting down Muslims.⁷³⁹¹ P-2200, however, also stated that some Muslim 'children' snuck out of the school to see what was happening in their areas and reported back to him.⁷³⁹²

2986. Odette Namsona testified that FOMAC elements ensured the safety of the Muslims at the school, protecting them from the Anti-Balaka, since FOMAC thought that ‘these boys had come out of the bush and were furious’ and were going to attack the Muslims.⁷³⁹³

2988. P-2657 testified that when she arrived at the École de la Liberté on the night of the Bossangoa Attack, the gunshots and firing had stopped and they were under FOMAC’s protection.⁷³⁹⁸ P-2657 said that FOMAC asked them not to go out but to remain within the school and not to leave without their instructions since they were only responsible for those who were within the school, providing protection from the Anti-Balaka.⁷³⁹⁹ P-2657 further said that the school was almost like a prison.⁷⁴⁰⁰

2989. P-2462 felt safe within the school as the Congolese FOMAC soldiers were maintaining security⁷⁴⁰¹ and said it was unsafe to go outside of the school for security reasons.⁷⁴⁰² P-2462 testified that the people staying at the École de la Liberté did not leave as they needed protection, all of the houses had been destroyed and their possessions had been looted, ‘so it was practically impossible for the displaced people to return home’.⁷⁴⁰³

2990. Michel Ningando stated that around January 2014, a FOMAC soldier was killed⁷⁴⁰⁴ and all the FOMAC forces left the bishop's house and went to protect the Muslims in the École de la Liberté.⁷⁴⁰⁵ The witness stated that people could not leave either site as it was too dangerous and that the Anti-Balaka were attacking the Muslims and the Seleka were attacking the Christians.⁷⁴⁰⁶

2991. Roger de Martial Yagao stated that MINUSCA were outside the school to protect the Muslims from Anti-Balaka attacks.⁷⁴⁰⁷ He stated that after the armed Seleka left town one night, the town remained under control of the Congolese contingent of MISC, subsequently replaced by the Chadian MINUSCA contingent, the Sangaris, police and gendarmerie.⁷⁴⁰⁸

2992. P-2602 stated that if the Muslims had remained in their neighbourhoods, they would have been killed, since a military professional would understand what it meant to face an unarmed person, but a civilian – 'those civilians who are angry and joined the A[nti-Balaka]' – would not and kill them.⁷⁴⁰⁹

2993. P-2453 stated that a day or so after the Bossangoa Attack, the Sangaris arrived that came to the École de la Liberté to reassure the community, stating that they had nothing to fear, should stay calm and could leave and go about their normal business and activities, but people were scared and no one dared to leave.⁷⁴¹⁰ P-2453 testified that the French Sangaris stated that they were, from that moment, in charge of security in Bossangoa and organised many patrols in town, and they would also escort civilians who needed to leave the school or the bishop's house.⁷⁴¹¹ P-2453 stated that the Seleka were forced to remain in the military base in Sembe and left after a few weeks and that he did not see the Anti-Balaka again after 5 December 2013.⁷⁴¹² At the same time, P-2453 stated that it was not safe for Muslims to return to their neighbourhoods, the Congolese soldiers advised them not to try to go back home ‘because we would risk being attacked by the Anti-Balaka who were still present in the area’.⁷⁴¹³ P-2453 stated that also after the ‘Chadians’ had left Mbaïki, they were kept as prisoners inside the school, they had nothing to go back to since their houses and mosques had been destroyed and they could not go back to work.⁷⁴¹⁴

2994. In light of the consistent evidence above according to which Muslims at the École de la Liberté were specifically advised not to leave the school for risk of being attacked by the Anti-Balaka, the Chamber does not consider credible the account of D30-4608 who alleged that Muslims were not threatened since the Seleka were roaming the city, while Christians at the bishopric had no possibility of leaving.⁷⁴¹⁵ This same witness also stated that the Anti-Balaka conducted attacks on the École de la Liberté after the Bossangoa Attack, according to him targeting the Seleka who had withdrawn around the school for fear of the Muslims possibly being attacked.⁷⁴¹⁶ Similarly, and also bearing in mind the dire living conditions at the school as further outlined below, the Chamber accords no weight to Faustin Ngamesse’s suggestion that the Muslims stayed at the school even though it was not dangerous for them to leave.⁷⁴¹⁷ It is clear from the evidence before the Chamber that the Muslims at the school did not remain there having been in a position to genuinely choose between remaining or not. The Ngaïssona Defence’s argument that Muslim civilians had the possibility to leave the school premises and that there is no evidence that Anti-Balaka elements were the reason why they remained in the school⁷⁴¹⁸ is dismissed in this same context.

2995. The Prosecution also argues that the threat that the Muslims received was real as a Muslim was killed after leaving the École de la Liberté.⁷⁴¹⁹ Three witness gave evidence on this incident.

2996. Without providing a specific date or period, P-2049 testified that a young person called Yaya at the École de la Liberté left to check his house which was near the Bornou school and the mosque, and in the evening those at the bishopric called to say that a young Muslim had been killed in the Bornou neighbourhood.⁷⁴²⁰ The next morning, they called the Sangaris who found and brought the body back for burial within the Bossangoa tribunal, and people were afraid to leave the school at the risk of death.⁷⁴²¹

2997. Similarly, P-2453 stated that Yaya Makonzi, a Muslim who was with them at the school, insisted on going back to his neighbourhood to check on his house.⁷⁴²² P-2453 stated that after two days, Yaya had still not returned, so a group of youths reported it to MISCA, who called the Sangaris and one went with his men to look for him.⁷⁴²³ P-2453 stated that they found his body in the neighbourhood, he had been killed by machete; the person returned to the school and asked a few youths to help recuperate his body.⁷⁴²⁴ P-2453 stated that when they brought his body back to the school, it was already covered, so P-2453 did not look at it, and that he was buried in the compound of the tribunal next to the school as there was no space to bury him at the school and it was not safe to go their cemetery.⁷⁴²⁵

2998. P-2658 stated that three Muslims who left the École de la Liberté were killed and the body of only one of them, 'Yayah', was found by the French army.⁷⁴²⁶ P-2658 stated that the three left despite being advised by MISCA not to leave the École de la Liberté.⁷⁴²⁷

3000. Considering the evidence before it, and contrary to the Ngaïssona Defence's argument,⁷⁴²⁹ the Chamber concludes that Muslims at the École de la Liberté were unable to leave the school for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka. The Chamber recalls in this regard its conclusion as to the one of the objectives which the Anti-Balaka pursued with its attack on Bossangoa, namely to 'free' Bossangoa from the Seleka and all the Muslims,⁷⁴³⁰ its analysis of the Anti-Balaka groups remaining in Bossangoa following the Bossangoa Attack, as well as its conclusion that more Anti-Balaka took control of the town following Michel Djotodia's resignation.⁷⁴³¹ Even if the Anti-Balaka were not in control of the town completely before that, the Muslim civilians at the École de la Liberté were dependent on the protection of international forces for their safety and could not leave the school premises venturing into Bossangoa without risk to their person.

3001. Witnesses privy to the situation at the École de la Liberté described the deplorable living conditions at the school premises.

3002. P-1577 stated that the École de la Liberté was 'very densely populated', with no significant latrines or sanitation available, a typical scene of a displaced camp, that is, a very busy place with people cooking outdoors, the smell of cooking, lots of crying, uncomfortable people, and dirty children.⁷⁴³²

3003. Photographs provided by this witness illustrate well his description of the dire conditions at the school.⁷⁴³³

general cleanliness, and UNICEF took care of the education component, and HCR distributed accessories to women.⁷⁴³⁵

3005. P-2462 said that since they were not at home, living conditions were necessarily difficult, it was the cool season and they did not have good food, only rice every day.⁷⁴³⁶ She similarly stated that the WFP provided assistance, bringing tarpaulins for shelters, rice, blankets, mats, oil, and salt.⁷⁴³⁷ From tarpaulins, MSF built washrooms for the men and women which one had to queue to access.⁷⁴³⁸ She further stated that MSF built two ‘water points’, which operated morning and evening but they did not have enough vessels to store water.⁷⁴³⁹ P-2462 further said that MSF opened a clinic with two staff assisted by people locally recruited in the camp, but things did not operate as they should.⁷⁴⁴⁰ She testified that UNICEF set up a tent with toys for the children and recruited people in the camp to supervise the children, but that no proper education or schooling was given.⁷⁴⁴¹

3006. P-2453 stated that although the École de la Liberté was very big, comprised of six buildings, it was not enough to accommodate all of them, so some stayed in tents outside.⁷⁴⁴² He stated that he was sleeping on a mat on a classroom floor with many other people, the women and children on one side and the men on the other, and that only a few people who had arrived in early September had mattresses.⁷⁴⁴³ P-2453 stated that, as before the Bossangoa Attack, they relied on the UNHCR for food, water and hygienic supplies, while MSF took care of medical treatment and ensured clean water.⁷⁴⁴⁴ P-2453 stated that he worked as a medical assistant from 2 December 2013 until 3 January 2014 for MSF within the École de la Liberté, treating young children, testing for malaria, cleaning wounds, and calling the ambulance to take people to hospital.⁷⁴⁴⁵ P-2453 stated that there were many children amongst the displaced and some UNHCR employees would play with them but no formal education was provided.⁷⁴⁴⁶

3007.P-2658 stated that there were many Muslims gathered at the École de la Liberté.⁷⁴⁴⁷ He further stated that those who arrived first, from villages around Bossangoa, slept in the classrooms but most of the Muslims of Bossangoa who arrived on 5 December 2013 stayed in the yard of the school because there was no space in the classrooms.⁷⁴⁴⁸ P-2658 also stated that MSF provided medical care, setting up a clinic within the school compound.⁷⁴⁴⁹

3008.P-2657 testified that while they were at the École de la Liberté, HCR provided food and built latrines.⁷⁴⁵⁰ She said that there was a ‘water point’ and also a small health centre and that whenever there were serious health cases, FOMAC would transport the sick people to the hospital.⁷⁴⁵¹ She further said they did not have any problems with water and were provided with the necessary food supplies.⁷⁴⁵² P-2657 also testified that some people slept inside while others slept on the verandas and that tents had been distributed to them, as well as blankets and mats, and some people went back to their homes and brought back mats.⁷⁴⁵³

3009.P-2200 stated that, at the beginning, they used the school toilets or those in the tribunal opposite the school, but the ‘water point’ was very far away and that around two months after arrival, the HCR or OCHA installed latrines and two large water cisterns, and disturbed sugar, flour, rice and soap, and that a French doctor came to the site and a hospital was improvised in the tribunal.⁷⁴⁵⁴

3010.Michel Ningando stated that the living conditions in both the École de la Liberté and the bishopric were very difficult, there were a lot of people, sleeping on top of one another, while humanitarian workers had installed some tarpaulin shelters.⁷⁴⁵⁵ He further stated that they were not able to provide them with enough water and food and that it was the same situation at the bishopric; the displaced people just wanted to leave the sites.⁷⁴⁵⁶

3011. Roger de Martial Yagao stated that the imam of Bossangoa was managing the organisation of the IDP camp at the school and that some displaced people were staying in some classrooms with their families, and single men and women were in separate classrooms, while some people were staying outside in tents.⁷⁴⁵⁷ The witness also stated that many Muslims had fled to the school with their merchandise and that they had set up a sort of small market within the area of the school.⁷⁴⁵⁸

3012. The Chamber gives no weight in the context of the overwhelming evidence to the contrary to D30-4608's assertion that Muslims who lived at the school, since they were the ones selling commodities at the market, were able to withstand more than individuals who had fled to the church and could no longer buy commodities at the market.⁷⁴⁵⁹

3013. The evidence before the Chamber suggests that in the aftermath of the Bossangoa Attack, meetings were held involving various participants, including members of the Anti-Balaka and of the Seleka.

3014. D30-4608 knew of a mediation meeting at the École de la Liberté attended by the bishop, pastor, Archbishop Nzapalainga and Imam Kobine.⁷⁴⁶⁰ P-2049 stated that one meeting was held with the Sangaris which told them that they intended to organise a meeting between the leaders of the Anti-Balaka, Seleka, the imam, and the bishop.⁷⁴⁶¹

3015. P-2049 stated that a meeting was held in the presence of the Seleka leaders, Anti-Balaka leaders, the bishop and his team, and the imam and his team, as shown in a photograph taken in January 2014.⁷⁴⁶² In this regard, D30-4608 stated that after the Bossangoa Attack, they tried to renew dialogue between the communities and a crisis meeting was convened by the bishop at the Hôtel de Chasse, involving him and the bishop, the imam, the prefect, FOMAC and Sangaris, at which they discussed the possibility of 'faire sortir la population et de rouvrir les marchés', and they wanted to meet the Anti-Balaka leaders such as Kema, while the Seleka and Muslims wanted that the bishopric IDP site be evacuated since they thought the Anti-Balaka had mixed with the refugees.⁷⁴⁶³ D30-4608 stated there were no results to this meeting.⁷⁴⁶⁴ Faustin Ngamesse, who said he was still in Bangui at the time, recognised the imam of Bossangoa, the prefect, Atakoli, the chief of Sembe III, the chief of Bac, 'Monseigneur', the chief of Sara, and stated that this was a meeting of reconciliation and social cohesion.⁷⁴⁶⁵ According to Roger de Martial Yagao, the photograph was taken at the MISCA base of Bossangoa, identifying several people including a Seleka whose name he did not know, a Sangaris soldier whose name he did not know, the bishop's assistant Tonfio, a Congolese MISCA called Herman, the imam, Atakoli, then-prefect Clotilde Nambona, Seleka colonel Salle, the bishop of Bossangoa, and Gangar-Gangar, the representative of the neighbourhood chiefs.⁷⁴⁶⁶

3016. The Chamber concludes from the above evidence that while there may have been meetings with representatives of various groups and organisations, they clearly remained without result, and certainly did not lead to the creation of conditions which would have allowed Muslims confined to the École de la Liberté to return to their homes.

Eventually, in light of the prevailing insecurity as well as the dire and cramped living conditions at the École de la Liberté, all Muslims staying at the school were transported away from Bossangoa to Chad in two separate convoys, leaving in February and April 2014, respectively, following which Bossangoa was emptied of its Muslim population.

3017. Many Muslims remained in the dire conditions at the École de la Liberté for months.

3018. For example, P-2462 stated that she stayed at the school for about four months from 5 December to 2 or 3 April.⁷⁴⁶⁷ P-2657 stated that they remained at the school for four months and a few days and eventually left to Chad because of the crisis and because they were enclaved.⁷⁴⁶⁸ She testified that many people – she thought even the imam – refused to leave, but some could not handle the living conditions anymore, so the majority took the decision to leave.⁷⁴⁶⁹

3019.P-2658 stated that he left Bossangoa due to the war and the fact that the Muslim community was targeted by the Anti-Balaka; if the Muslims had stayed, they would have been killed.⁷⁴⁷⁰ P-2658 added that the Muslims at the École de la Liberté had no choice but to go to Chad because only Chad sent trucks to ‘evacuate’ them.⁷⁴⁷¹

3020.P-2200 stated that he lived at the school for two months and 17 days, until his departure for Chad.⁷⁴⁷² P-2200 stated that the Anti-Balaka had killed many Muslims, stolen and killed their livestock and destroyed their houses, so ‘we’ could not stay in the CAR, particularly without the protection of the Chadian soldiers.⁷⁴⁷³

3021.P-2453 stated that they could not continue to live in the conditions at the school and felt like they did not have a home anymore, so they wanted to be evacuated.⁷⁴⁷⁴

3022.D30-4608 testified that the imam described the state of affairs to him, complaining that life was ‘blocked’, goods could not be sold at the market and there was no socialising, so it was necessary to ‘go back’ and ‘take up life again in Chad’.⁷⁴⁷⁵ He testified that a loss of trust and a position of insecurity led to the departure of Muslims from Bossangoa.⁷⁴⁷⁶

3023.Eventually, convoys were organised to transport the Muslims confined to the École de la Liberté away from Bossangoa.

3024.P-2200 stated that HCR employees came to the school to take a census and suggested to take them to Bambari or Chad and that in the first trip, 600 people were transported with 14 vehicles to Chad.⁷⁴⁷⁷

3026.P-2453 stated that after the ‘Chadians’ were transported to Chad in convoys of trucks, the rest of the Muslims remained at the school and were subsequently transported.⁷⁴⁸² P-2453 stated that OCHA, MSF and UNICEF took a census of all the people remaining and determined that there were 517 of them, and that the majority wanted to be evacuated out of Bossangoa.⁷⁴⁸³ UNHCR, OHCA and MISCA organised their transport to Chad on 14 February 2014.⁷⁴⁸⁴ P-2453 testified that they could not leave with all of their personal belongings since there was not enough space in the vehicles, they could only take rucksacks with some substantial essential items and had to abandon other belongings.⁷⁴⁸⁵ P-2453 stated that approximately 20 vehicles, including large trucks and private vehicles, escorted by the Cameroonian MISCA contingent transported them to the Chadian border.⁷⁴⁸⁶

them.⁷⁴⁸⁷ P-2049 said that in April, OCHA organised a meeting with the HCR at which arrangements were made for people to be taken to Bambari, but since it was not possible to guarantee security in Bambari, the imam of Bossangoa negotiated with OCHA to instead take people to Paoua, and eventually the conclusion was that there was also no security in Paoua and the decision was taken to bring the people to Chad, leading to a group of 517 persons being brought to Chad, P-2049 being one of them.⁷⁴⁸⁸

3028. As to the second convoy, P-2462 testified that leaders held meetings with officials of the HCR and asked that people be evacuated because of the prevailing insecurity, following which trucks were brought to transport them to a safe place in Chad.⁷⁴⁸⁹ P-2462 explained that 517 people were transported in the second convoy, and she knew the exact figure because she was part of the team that organised the headcount in the camp asked for by the HCR.⁷⁴⁹⁰ P-2462 stated that the Chadian elements of MISCA provided security for them during the transport.⁷⁴⁹¹

3029. P-2200 initially refused to leave, but felt unsafe after the first convoy left, and as the Chadian soldiers were about to leave Bossangoa, they insisted that he leave with them.⁷⁴⁹² P-2200 stated that the second convoy left two months after the first and around 500 of them left in 13 vans.⁷⁴⁹³ P-2200 stated that the Anti-Balaka were not involved in the transport.⁷⁴⁹⁴ He stated that he noticed the presence of the Anti-Balaka along the route until the border, adding that without the escort by Chadian soldiers, they would not have been able to pass.⁷⁴⁹⁵

community by the Anti-Balaka, the IOM transported Muslims to Chad and Paoua; he recalled that there were many Chadian Muslims in Bossangoa due to the influx, into the CAR, of supporters of former Chadian president Hissene Habré.⁷⁴⁹⁷ P-2657 stated that the HCR organised the transport and FOMAC guaranteed their safety by taking them to the border.⁷⁴⁹⁸

3031. Bearing in mind the evidence above, the Chamber gives no weight to the suggestion of Faustin Ngamesse according to which Muslims decided to leave Bossangoa for Chad despite peace having returned,⁷⁴⁹⁹ or to that of D30-4608 who, in any event, contradicted himself when stating, on the one hand, that the Muslims left because under the Seleka no longer any trade was possible and that the Seleka left after the Muslims, while saying, on the other hand, that without Seleka, the Muslims feared for their lives as there was no longer any protection.⁷⁵⁰⁰

3032. Following the transports, and in line with the Anti-Balaka's objective to 'free' Bossangoa not only from Seleka, but from all Muslims, there were no Muslims left in Bossangoa. P-0567 stated that the UN COI missions to the provinces started in July 2014 and that he participated in a mission to Bossangoa which took place from 7 October to 12 October 2014, at which time there was no Muslim population in Bossangoa.⁷⁵⁰¹ P-2232 stated that there were no Muslims in the provincial areas, Bossangoa, Yaloké, on the Bossangoa axis, and the Bouar axis.⁷⁵⁰²

3033. P-2049 was still a refugee in the refugee camp in Chad at the time of his testimony, being at the disposition of the UNHCR since his arrival there.⁷⁵⁰³ P-2049 testified that he really had the desire to return home, that his country remained his country where he had relatives, but peace was not restored in Bossangoa and he had no home to return to, no means to rebuild a house, and no way to survive, which was why he preferred to stay in the refugee camp.⁷⁵⁰⁴

3034. P-2462 said that she has not returned to Bossangoa since and she and the rest of her family lived in refugee camps.⁷⁵⁰⁵ P-2462 testified that she no longer lives like she used to – they sleep on the tarpaulins in tents built by HCR, she sleeps on a wooden bed; her school life has been destroyed; her mother suffers a lot because she does not know what to do – P-2462 is the only one who is able to remain with her mother and help her, so the living conditions for them are extremely difficult.⁷⁵⁰⁶

3035. P-2657 confirmed that she was still living in Chad and had been for approximately eight years.⁷⁵⁰⁷ With respect to their living conditions, P-2675 stated that for the moment, they did not have any problems and were under the protection of HCR.⁷⁵⁰⁸ P-2657 further stated that when she and other Muslims arrived, they had tents and after that houses were built from mud bricks and that she was appointed to make meals for children, for students.⁷⁵⁰⁹ P-2657 stated that three of her children were provided with education, while two were not.⁷⁵¹⁰ Asked whether she would want to go back to Bossangoa, P-2657 testified that she did not even think about it and was scared to go back after having suffered these atrocities.⁷⁵¹¹

3036. Michel Ningando stated that until the time of his statement, it was hard for Muslims to return to Bossangoa since all their houses were destroyed so they do not have any place to stay and the local youth and the Anti-Balaka would also not allow the Muslims to return, with the Anti-Balaka still playing a role in Bossangoa.⁷⁵¹²

D. The events at Yamwara on and around 24 December 2013

1. Elements and structure at Yamwara

Mr Yekatom's group established a base at Yamwara at one point in December 2013 following the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013. Elements who had not participated in this attack joined Mr Yekatom's group at Yamwara after 5 December 2013. Considerable number of elements received accommodation in the school buildings or in provisory shelters around the premises of Yamwara, including Cœur de Lion.

3038. The evidence shows that following the Bangui Attack, some Anti-Balaka elements began occupying the school compound at the Yamwara school and surrounding houses located in Boeing, Bangui, less than one kilometre from the M'Poko airport (hereinafter: 'Yamwara').⁷⁵¹⁴

3039. The Prosecution submits that Mr Yekatom established a base in Yamwara after the Bangui Attack, billeting around 1,000 elements there.⁷⁵¹⁵ The Yekatom Defence posits that by mid-December 2013, Mr Yekatom's group arrived at Yamwara and set up their base there, and more precisely around 13 December 2013.⁷⁵¹⁶

3040. As regards the timeframe, the evidence suggests that, between 6 and 20 December 2013, certain individuals identified as Anti-Balaka, including Mr Yekatom's group, started arriving at Yamwara.⁷⁵¹⁷

The Chamber notes that this video appears to have been shot in the field in the middle of Yamwara; the school buildings can be seen in the background, together with elements dressed in part civilian and part military attire. It shows Rodrigue Momokama (the journalist uses the name 'Rodrigue') speaking with the journalist, saying that their elements ('nos éléments'), who were in the bush, have been brought 'here' ('on le fait ramener ici'). He said that they have deployed about 100 elements at PK9 towards the route to Mbaïki (see Transcript, CAR-OTP-2118-0005, at 0006, lines 12-13, 17-18).

commander;⁷⁵³⁴ and that when he joined, Yamwara was already a base.⁷⁵³⁵ P-1839 said that she joined Mr Yekatom's group after 5 December 2013 when they had already set up operations at Yamwara.⁷⁵³⁶

3044. In addition to the aforementioned, other elements from Mr Yekatom's group identified by witnesses present there include Aristide Beina,⁷⁵³⁷ Ephraïm Odimba-Youngaïna,⁷⁵³⁸ Alban Goliatha,⁷⁵³⁹ Cheveux de la Mort,⁷⁵⁴⁰ and Jean Baptiste Seda.⁷⁵⁴¹

3045. As regards the purpose of setting up a base at Yamwara, the Chamber heard P-1839 who said that it was to liberate the country from the Seleka mercenaries.⁷⁵⁴²

3046. Yamwara included three school buildings that contained classrooms. P-1839, who stayed at Yamwara at the time, said that there was a large football pitch and a 'fountain' in the middle of the school, with buildings on both sides.⁷⁵⁴³ In addition, audio-visual evidence before the Chamber shows that the interior layout of the premises also included mango trees, next to a water well.⁷⁵⁴⁴

3047. Some of Mr Yekatom's elements, but not all, lived in the school buildings that used to be classrooms.⁷⁵⁴⁵ P-1786 said that the elements did not have any rooms so it was decided to lodge them in these various school buildings.⁷⁵⁴⁶ P-1839 added that she could not say that 'all' elements were living at Yamwara; while there were those that lived 'within the base itself', some were in certain zones for their own security.⁷⁵⁴⁷

Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili also recognised the location in this photograph with the two schoolroom buildings in the back as Yamwara. P-1647 recognised the person in this photograph as someone who was in his 'class' and was a policeman (see P-1647: T-194, p. 16, line 20 – p. 17, line 5, p. 18, lines 3-6). See also Photograph, CAR-OTP-2095-5517 taken on the same day, 12 December 2013, that appears to depict part of the group that has gathered under a tree, dressed in part-military, part-civilian attire, armed with machetes.

example of Alkanto, who was the chief of the 1st company, 1st division and was commanding 30 people in his section.⁷⁵⁵⁴

3050. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that considerable number of elements received accommodation in the school buildings or in provisory shelters around the premises of Yamwara, including Cœur de Lion.

3051. Yamwara included at least three other houses within its premises or sufficiently close by that were occupied by Anti-Balaka chiefs. P-1716, who had studied at the primary school in Yamwara, said that apart from the four separate buildings, all of which were used as classrooms, there were also ‘several houses’ around, separate from the other school buildings, one of which was used by the directors of the school.⁷⁵⁵⁶

See also Annex 1 to P-2193 Report, CAR-OTP-2127-6626, at 6627, Map 1a, Inset 3 containing Satellite images, CAR-OTP-2127-6646, dated 27 November 2013 (corresponding to TIFF file in CAR-OTP-2127-6679); CAR-OTP-2127-6645, dated 8 December 2013 (corresponding to TIFF file in CAR-OTP-2127-6678). The Chamber further notes that Lars Bromley commented on Photograph, CAR-OTP-2126-0269, depicting an aerial view of what appears to be Yamwara, stating that this is indeed the area that he analysed, but that this image was taken at a much later date, based on the changes to the landscape (see P-2193: T-019, p. 80, line 12 – p. 81, line 6).

⁷⁵⁵⁶ P-1716: T-148, p. 27, line 23 – p. 28, line 5; P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0068, para. 34. See also P-1990 Statement, CAR-OTP-2124-0247-R02, at 0257, para. 47 identifying the classroom buildings, toilet blocks, and certain private houses on aerial image of Yamwara in Annex A, Map, CAR-OTP-2124-0261, at 0261.

3052. The evidence suggests that one such house was occupied by Cœur de Lion,⁷⁵⁵⁷ whereas Alkanto and his elements had two buildings to themselves.⁷⁵⁵⁸ P-1839 placed Cœur de Lion's house just outside and west of Yamwara.⁷⁵⁵⁹

Mr Yekatom did not live at Yamwara and slept elsewhere close to the airport. Mr Yekatom did regularly visit Yamwara and maintained a constant presence there through his elements.

3053. As set out below, the evidence shows that while Mr Yekatom did not live at Yamwara and slept elsewhere close to the airport, he regularly visited Yamwara and maintained a constant presence there through his elements.⁷⁵⁶⁰

3054. In arriving at this conclusion, the Chamber has also considered the Yekatom Defence's arguments challenging his presence at Yamwara, the frequency of Mr Yekatom's visits and the length of his stay. The Yekatom Defence submits that while Cœur de Lion was 'situated' in Yamwara and maintained a 'permanent presence' there, Mr Yekatom resided 'outside' and 'approximately 30 minutes by foot from Yamwara'.⁷⁵⁶¹ It argues that Mr Yekatom 'infrequently visited Yamwara, and that such visits were brief often lasting only a few minutes'.⁷⁵⁶²

3055. The evidence cited by the Yekatom Defence in support of its arguments shows that Mr Yekatom maintained a regular presence at Yamwara. P-1839 said that Mr Yekatom lived in a place that was less than 30 minutes on foot from Yamwara.⁷⁵⁶³ P-1786 stated that Mr Yekatom did not sleep at Yamwara but either at the Kette-Goussa airport, where Wenezoui and other FACA stayed, or at the M'Poko airport refugee site.⁷⁵⁶⁴ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili said that Mr Yekatom slept in neither of those places, but admitted that they were not always together.⁷⁵⁶⁵ P-1786 said that Mr Yekatom's 'right-hand man', Habib Beina, lived in one of the houses in Yamwara with P-1786.⁷⁵⁶⁶ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili said that, at the time, 'Chef Ouandjio' was at Yamwara 'all the time' and Mr Yekatom would come 'once a week sometimes'.⁷⁵⁶⁷

⁷⁵⁵⁷ P-1839 described Cœur de Lion's house as building number 5 in Annexe N, Satellite image, CAR-OTP-2066-1468, see P-1839: T-172, p. 6, lines 5-12.

⁷⁵⁵⁸ P-1839 said that Alkanto and she had a building for themselves – marked as '2' in red pen on Satellite image, CAR-OTP-2066-1468; Alkanto and she slept in this building while Alkanto's elements slept in the building next door marked '3' (see P-1839: T-170, p. 21, line 25 – p. 22, line 6; T-173, p. 30, line 17 – p. 31, line 11).

⁷⁵⁶⁰ In assessing Mr Yekatom's presence at Yamwara, the Chamber has also considered audio-visual material (see Videos, CAR-OTP-2065-5148, CAR-OTP-2065-4536, CAR-OTP-2065-4851, CAR-OTP-2065-3476, CAR-OTP-2065-5264, CAR-OTP-2065-4565, CAR-OTP-2065-4561, CAR-OTP-2065-2173, CAR-OTP-2065-2177, CAR-OTP-2065-4880, CAR-OTP-2065-4849). See further paragraphs 2473-2476 below.

3056. Further, the Yekatom Defence's arguments concerning Mr Yekatom's presence at Yamwara did not diminish the Chamber's appreciation of his role as a leader of the elements at Yamwara and his regular presence there during the relevant time. Indeed, the fact that individuals at Yamwara at the time, including his own elements, recognised Mr Yekatom as the 'chief' and superior to Cœur de Lion, despite not living there, spoke to an even greater authority he exercised over his elements.

When the base at Yamwara was established, Mr Yekatom's group set up checkpoints along its perimeter to monitor passage of vehicles and people, including, at least, one set up by Alkanto close to Yamwara.

3057. The evidence shows that, at the end of 2013 and early 2014, including when Mr Yekatom's group was present there, the Yamwara premises were not walled and were open to the local population.⁷⁵⁶⁸

⁷⁵⁶³ P-1839: T-173, p. 27, line 18 – p. 28, line 12. P-1647 said that Mr Yekatom lived about 30 minutes away, about 2.5 kms from Yamwara; P-1647 recognised Mr Yekatom's house in a Video, CAR-OTP-2065-3865, at 00:00:23 (see P-1647: P-195, p. 17, lines 8-11, p. 19, lines 18-25).

P-1786 circled and labelled the houses where Habib Beina and Cœur de Lion occupied with 'A' and 'B' respectively in the Satellite image, CAR-OTP-2058-0216, and where he himself stayed with a 'C'. Roofs marked A and C are right next to each other. When asked in court, P-1786 confirmed that he shared a house marked as 'C', toward the bottom of the centre of the image, with Habib Beina (see P-1786: T-197, p. 27, line 3 – p. 28, line 1). 3058. The evidence shows that when the base at Yamwara was established, Mr Yekatom's group set up checkpoints along its perimeter to monitor passage of vehicles and people,⁷⁵⁶⁹ including, at least, one set up by Alkanto close to Yamwara.⁷⁵⁷⁰

Mr Yekatom was in charge of Yamwara with Cœur de Lion as his deputy. All witnesses who were at Yamwara during the relevant time considered Mr Yekatom to be the 'chief' of all activities at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom was also the overall chief on matters of punishment and enforcing discipline at Yamwara, and his section chiefs also had a responsibility to discipline elements. Mr Yekatom maintained overall control over the activities at Yamwara at all times, including through Cœur de Lion. Mr Yekatom had undisputed authority over Cœur de Lion, Alkanto and Bojos, among others.

3059. The evidence demonstrates a hierarchical setup at Yamwara during the relevant time that resembled military hierarchy. Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, when asked, agreed that, at Yamwara, a FACA member was head of each 'section'.⁷⁵⁷¹ Further, P-1786's evidence, discussed above, demonstrates the setting up of military units, 'sections' and 'companies', terminology that is also used by P-1839 when describing Alkanto's position within the group.⁷⁵⁷² Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, who had the rank of FACA corporal at the time of joining at Yamwara, stated that he was appointed 'commander of a company' one week after he joined.⁷⁵⁷³

3060. The evidence shows that all witnesses who were at Yamwara during the relevant time considered Mr Yekatom to be the 'chief' of all activities in Yamwara.⁷⁵⁷⁴ Stéphane

⁷⁵⁷⁰ P-1339 sketched Alkanto's 'base' at Yamwara in Sketch, CAR-OTP-2041-0775 and explained it in P-1339: T-155, p. 31, lines 10-19, for the citation of the sketch, see p. 30, lines 3-7. P-1990 said that he was checked at the checkpoint on the road to Avicom (a former poultry farm) and it was 20-30 metres from Yamwara (see P-1990: T-236, p. 33, line 15 – p. 34, line 9; P-1990 Statement, CAR-OTP-2124-0247-R02, at 0254, para. 31).

⁷⁵⁷² See also paragraph 3048 below.

⁷⁵⁷³ P-1647: T-194, p. 9, lines 6-14; P-1647 Statement, CAR-OTP-2050-0654-R02, at 0658, para. 33.

Chrisostome Dawili stated that every morning and every evening, there was a gathering of the company to check who was present; all companies would come together once a week in the grounds of the school; these gatherings were attended by the ‘Company Adjutants, the Deputy, and Yekatom’ and it was Mr Yekatom who addressed the soldiers, warning people not to go against his orders.⁷⁵⁷⁵

3061. The evidence shows that Mr Yekatom was also the overall chief on matters of punishment and enforcing discipline at Yamwara, and his section chiefs also had a responsibility to discipline elements. Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili said that section chiefs were responsible for their own disciplinary matters and if one of the elements committed a minor ‘mistake’, they would take care of the discipline; if the mistake was ‘more serious’, they would ask their ‘superiors’; when elements did things that were ‘not okay’, then Mr Yekatom would ‘have them punished by wetting or thrashing them’.⁷⁵⁷⁶

3062. As set out below, the Chamber finds that Freddy Ouandjio aka Cœur de Lion was Mr Yekatom’s deputy at Yamwara in December 2013.⁷⁵⁷⁷ In its view, Mr Yekatom maintained overall control over the activities in Yamwara at all times, including through Cœur de Lion.

⁷⁵⁷⁷ In reaching this conclusion, the Chamber has also considered evidence that suggests that Mr Yekatom may have been closer to members of his group other than Cœur de Lion. However, the Chamber finds that this does not negate the existence of a hierarchical relationship between Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion. In particular, P-1839 considered Mr Yekatom as the overall commander with Cœur de Lion as his deputy, but said that Habib Beina was also very close to Mr Yekatom and was his ‘right-hand man’; she also said that Mr Yekatom would complain to her about Cœur de Lion (see P-1839: T-170, p. 18, lines 3-7; T-174, p. 19, lines 15-21). P-1786 stated that (i) Mr Yekatom was closer to Momokama and Habib Beina than Cœur de Lion; (ii) Cœur de Lion did not always get along with Mr Yekatom and would keep his distance; (iii) Cœur de Lion did not like that Mr Yekatom stayed behind and did not fight on the front lines with them; and (iv) Cœur de Lion thought that Mr Yekatom kept money he got from the Seleka, whereas, the former was only interested in chasing away the Seleka (see P-1786 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0200-R03, at 0210, para. 56).

3063. At the outset, the Chamber recalls that Cœur de Lion was a former PG and Gbaya,⁷⁵⁷⁸ had fled to Zongo and crossed back to the CAR with Mr Yekatom.⁷⁵⁷⁹

3064. As part of its submission that Mr Yekatom's group was not 'a strict military structure with Mr Yekatom as the commander-in-chief',⁷⁵⁸⁰ the Yekatom Defence raises several arguments concerning the hierarchy of command and interpersonal relations between Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion. In particular, the Yekatom Defence (i) disputes that Cœur de Lion was Mr Yekatom's 'deputy', de facto or otherwise;⁷⁵⁸¹ and (ii) asserts that there was functional independence between their respective units.⁷⁵⁸² In respect of the latter, the Yekatom Defence further submits that each unit had the capacity to operate independently from the other,⁷⁵⁸³ Cœur de Lion's elements were 'strictly loyal to him',⁷⁵⁸⁴ conducted separate operations,⁷⁵⁸⁵ and there was friction between Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion.⁷⁵⁸⁶ Specifically in relation to Yamwara, the Yekatom Defence submits that Cœur de Lion operating independently was also seen in relation to 'decisions taken at Yamwara', in that Mr Yekatom 'did not occupy a building at the base', 'very rarely visited the base', and 'when he did visit, it was for brief periods of time'.⁷⁵⁸⁷

⁷⁵⁷⁸ P-1786: T-198, p. 28, lines 22-24. P-1839 recognised Cœur de Lion in Video, CAR-OTP-2065-4512, 00:00:40-00:01:05 as the person wearing a green t-shirt (see P-1839: T-173, p. 49, line 19 – p. 50, line 6).

Lion as Mr Yekatom's 'deputy' during the time at Yamwara.⁷⁵⁸⁹ P-1786 also said that, aside from Mr Yekatom, he did not know of another chief that would give instructions to elements in Yamwara; there was only Mr Yekatom who could give instructions to 'Habib', who would then relay them.⁷⁵⁹⁰ P-1786 said that Mr Yekatom was the 'topmost commander' and that his 'deputy was Cœur de Lion'.⁷⁵⁹¹

3066. Notably, Cœur de Lion's own words to a journalist at Yamwara in December 2013 show that he was the deputy of the 'movement' (C'est moi qui suis adjoint de ce mouvement); relatedly, he is seen saying to another element that he must seek authorization from his chief (Il fallait que je demande l'autorisation d'abord. Je ne peux pas faire ça à mon niveau, il faut que je demande mon chef d'abord).⁷⁵⁹²

3067. The Chamber furthermore notes the evidence on Cœur de Lion being considered as Mr Yekatom's deputy also in other locations and contexts.⁷⁵⁹³

3068. In light of this, the Chamber is not persuaded that Cœur de Lion's 'more years of military service' than Mr Yekatom and his assignment to an 'elite' PG reversed,⁷⁵⁹⁴ or otherwise changed, the dynamics of the relation inter se, or the perception of the members of Mr Yekatom's group, of which Cœur de Lion himself was part. The Yekatom Defence has pointed to no reason why, despite its assertions as to Cœur de Lion's higher or comparable authority vis-à-vis Mr Yekatom, their own elements would consistently testify to Cœur de Lion being the 'deputy'. This is regardless of the purported formality of the title 'deputy' or whether military and non-military members understood it differently. In both formal and informal sense, military or civilian, it conveys the same and unambiguous directional flow of authority.

⁷⁵⁸⁹ P-1839: T-170, p. 17, line 25 – p. 18, line 2. P-1839 used the word 'adjoint' for Cœur de Lion (see P-1839: T-170-FRA, p. 17, lines 15-22).

3069. The Chamber has also considered P-1839's description of an event that took place after the incident that took place at Yamwara on and around 24 December 2013, that she thought was an example of crimes allegedly committed by Cœur de Lion without Mr Yekatom's knowledge or agreement.⁷⁵⁹⁵ P-1839 recalled that Cœur de Lion ordered two female elements to execute two persons at Yamwara who had been tied up in 'arbatacher' manner and interrogated.⁷⁵⁹⁶ P-1839 did not remember which chief was present, but said that one could not have done such a thing without some 'chiefs' being present alongside.⁷⁵⁹⁷ P-1339 appeared to describe a similar incident concerning 'two Muslims' but with 'Cynthia' and Bougie Noire as assailants and said that Cœur de Lion was implementing Mr Yekatom's instructions to kill.⁷⁵⁹⁸ In describing this incident, P-1339 said that the elements used the term 'peeling the papaya' and Cœur de Lion gave the orders;⁷⁵⁹⁹ and that Cœur de Lion would not have killed them if Mr Yekatom had refused because Mr Yekatom was the leader and he 'certainly gave the order for them to be put down'.⁷⁶⁰⁰

3070. As regards the Yekatom Defence's arguments concerning Cœur de Lion's 'repeated disagreements' with Mr Yekatom and the resulting friction between them, the Chamber considers that such a dynamic is premised on an expectation on Cœur de Lion to follow, or otherwise implement Mr Yekatom's orders. This argument does not demonstrate Cœur de Lion's functional or relational independence from Mr Yekatom.

3071. The Chamber considers that there is overwhelming evidence on the record that shows that Cœur de Lion was Mr Yekatom's deputy. In light of this and the evidence discussed above, the Chamber cannot conclude, or otherwise entertain a reasonable doubt about Cœur de ⁷⁵⁹⁵ P-1839: T-174, p. 18, lines 8-16. The Prosecution submits that this incident described by P-1839 involved the killing of two Muslims 'using the same modus operandi' as the one in the Yamwara Incident (see Prosecution Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2738-Conf, para. 683 referring to P-1339 and P-1839).

The Chamber notes that P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom was not there that day and that the person who gave the order for their throats to be slit was 'Ouandjio' (see P-1339: T-155, p. 27, lines 15-25). However, upon questioning by the Presiding Judge in relation to his previous statement, P-1339 said that Mr Yekatom was there when the victims were brought in and Cœur de Lion ('Ouandjio') executed the order given by Mr Yekatom (see P-1339, T-155, p. 35, line 24 – p. 36, line 12). When later confronted with these versions of the same event, P-1339 maintained that Mr Yekatom was at the door of the director's house with Cœur de Lion ('Ouandjio') (see P-1339: T-159, p. 21, line 15 – p. 22, line 5).

Lion's position to 'take independent decisions and issue separate orders' generally and, at the very least, in relation to the Yamwara Incident.⁷⁶⁰¹

3072. In assessing hierarchies at Yamwara between Mr Yekatom and other elements, the Chamber has also considered evidence concerning two other individuals in Mr Yekatom's group who have been implicated in the Yamwara Incident by the relevant witnesses and identified by name – Bojos and Alkanto.⁷⁶⁰²

3073. P-1839 said that Bojos, also spelt 'Bodjos' or 'Bodios', was a FACA soldier and a chief of section at Yamwara.⁷⁶⁰³

3074. Alkanto alias Mahamat Abdoulaye was a former PG and a member of Mr Yekatom's group during the Bangui Attack and at Yamwara.⁷⁶⁰⁴ P-1839 recognised him in a photograph.⁷⁶⁰⁵ P-1839 said that he was a specialist in launching rockets.⁷⁶⁰⁶ P-1839 testified about an element in Alkanto's section who was later his bodyguard;⁷⁶⁰⁷ P-1839 said that they would 'talk a lot' and Alkanto would tell stories to show that 'he was a winner'.⁷⁶⁰⁸ P-1839 also said that Alkanto gave this element a commando knife upon joining Mr Yekatom's group at Yamwara.⁷⁶⁰⁹ P-1839 said that Cœur de Lion was Alkanto's boss, they would meet from time to time at Yamwara to talk, and Alkanto had to accept what Cœur de Lion told him.⁷⁶¹⁰ P-1839 also said that Alkanto's chief was Mr Yekatom,⁷⁶¹¹ and, when asked, agreed that Mr Yekatom was 'afraid' of Alkanto because he was the one who really knew how to use the rockets, so some of the chiefs were afraid of him.⁷⁶¹²

3075. The Yekatom Defence submits that Alkanto was part of 'Ouandjio's unit' and Mr Yekatom had to 'seek permission' from him to assign specific tasks to an element within his section.⁷⁶¹³ P-1839 confirmed that Cœur de Lion was Alkanto's 'boss' and 'had to accept' what he told Alkanto.⁷⁶¹⁴ P-1839 also testified that when an element in Alkanto's section started working with Mr Yekatom directly, he asked Alkanto's 'permission' as a 'superior' to assign this element as a treasurer, meaning that all the chiefs from PK9 to Sekia would hand over to this element the money that Mr Yekatom's group was collecting at the checkpoints manned by them.⁷⁶¹⁵

3076. P-1839's evidence is clear that this element in Alkanto's section was also subordinate to Alkanto,⁷⁶¹⁶ who regularly reported to Cœur de Lion.⁷⁶¹⁷ Both Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom questioned this element upon joining their group,⁷⁶¹⁸ who was then assigned to work with Alkanto.⁷⁶¹⁹

3078. Having assessed the evidence concerning the relations between Alkanto, Cœur de Lion, and Mr Yekatom at Yamwara in December 2013 in its totality, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom had undisputed authority over Cœur de Lion, Alkanto, and Bojos among others.

3079. Having regard to the evidence concerning the setting up of Yamwara and the relevant hierarchies, the Chamber finds that at least as of 20 December 2013, Mr Yekatom's group had established a military base at Yamwara. Witnesses P-1839, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, P-1786 and P-1339 were present at Yamwara at least during the second half of December 2013.

At some point in mid-December 2013, Mr Yekatom's group at Yamwara was joined by elements from Bossangoa, referred to as the 'Gobere group'. Elements within the Gobere group at Yamwara followed the orders from their own chiefs, who would, in turn, wait for the orders of Mr Yekatom.

3080. The Chamber now turns to the presence of elements from Bossangoa at Yamwara. The Prosecution submits that members of the Anti-Balaka 'Gobere' group arrived at Yamwara while P-1839 was present and that evidence suggests that this group recognised Mr Yekatom as their chief.⁷⁶²² The Yekatom Defence acknowledges their presence at Yamwara but argues that these individuals were distinct from Mr Yekatom's group and did not integrate.⁷⁶²³

3081. As set out below, the Chamber finds that, at some point in mid-December 2013, Mr Yekatom's group at Yamwara was joined by elements from Bossangoa, referred to as the 'Gobere group'.

3082. Members of the so-called Gobere group at Yamwara have been identified in audio-visual evidence before the Chamber.⁷⁶²⁴ P-1839 said that after she had joined Mr Yekatom's group at Yamwara, a number of people from Bossangoa came to Yamwara and they would call them 'Gobere'.⁷⁶²⁵ Thierry Kpademona recalled that some of the elements who arrived at Yamwara were from Bossangoa and outside of Bangui.⁷⁶²⁶

⁷⁶²⁶ P-1990 Statement, CAR-OTP-2124-0247-R02, at 0253, para. 26.

3084. Having regard to this, the Chamber finds that the elements within the Gobere group at Yamwara followed the orders from their own chiefs, who would, in turn, wait for the orders of Mr Yekatom, who was the supreme leader of all elements at Yamwara.

2. Training at Yamwara

At Yamwara, Mr Yekatom’s group, including civilian elements, received training of military nature. There was no training in international humanitarian law at Yamwara.

3085. The Prosecution submits that, through his commanders, Mr Yekatom organised military training for the new recruits at Yamwara which would take place in classrooms, and that Mr Yekatom ‘permitted outsiders to provide limited training to some of his elements’ on international humanitarian law, but not including the principle of distinction.⁷⁶³⁴

In the video, an individual wearing a striped hat with red, black, and yellow colours identifies himself as a ‘the coordinator’ and is talking on the phone and mentions being in contact with Maxim Mokom and Hervé Ganazoui (see Video Transcript, CAR-OTP-00000810, at 000003, lines 9-30). P-1705 recognised the ‘coordinator’ in Video, CAR-OTP-2012-0523, at 00:36:00-00:37:20, as the one who was wearing a white cap with three stripes, yellow, red and black (see P-1705: T-211, p. 52, line 12 – p. 53, line 10). ⁷⁶³⁴ Prosecution Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2738-Red, paras 486-487.

3086. The Yekatom Defence submits that ‘all FACA members had received training in International Humanitarian Law and its application in situations of armed conflict’, including on the principle of distinction, and ‘shared this training with non-military members that would have joined the movement’.⁷⁶³⁵ It argues that this training ‘adhered to the overall objectives of the movement – namely to restore peace and security in CAR and to prevent harm to the civilian population’ and that it was important to ‘train members so as not to commit the same acts of violence committed by the Seleka forces against the civilian population’.⁷⁶³⁶ It further argues that both Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion ‘stressed the principle of distinction’ and this was given effect in various ways.⁷⁶³⁷ The Yekatom Defence also submits that ‘[g]iven that the movement was composed of FACA personnel, it was not necessary to have a fixed instructor within each unit’ and that section chiefs were responsible for training the members that reported to them.⁷⁶³⁸ It also submits that while there was not a fixed schedule for trainings, they would have been held on a daily basis, ‘supplemented’ by trainings on international humanitarian law ‘provided by international entities’.⁷⁶³⁹

3088. At the outset, the Chamber notes the audio-visual evidence showing trainings at Yamwara. It depicts a varying number of individuals, some of whom are armed with machetes and sticks, appearing in a disciplined fashion in a classroom, receiving lessons from what appears to be an instructor.⁷⁶⁴⁰

3089. P-1786, a FACA member, when asked whether military training was provided to the ‘youth and the soldiers that were in the group’, agreed that it was military training and said that

P-1647 commented on this video excerpt and said that this reflected roughly the number of elements that he saw when he was at Yamwara and also recalled having attended gatherings like this there with the pastor addressing the elements and Mr Yekatom being present (see P-1647: T-194, p. 31, line 20 – p. 33, line 11). because civilians had joined the group, they had to be trained so that they could acquire a ‘military spirit’ in order to ‘perform their job well’, involving how to manipulate weapons, what to do if the Seleka attacked, how they had to get close to the ground in the case of a Seleka attack, how to get up, move around, et cetera.⁷⁶⁴¹

3090. P-1786 said that Mr Yekatom instructed the section chiefs to provide military training to the elements in their section, but did not give training himself, saying that Mr Yekatom ‘was the top chief’, ‘[i]t wasn’t up to him to come and train the young people’; ‘[h]e simply provided instructions’.⁷⁶⁴² Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili said that all the leaders ‘if they felt comfortable’ would participate in training but there were no fixed instructors nor a fixed schedule.⁷⁶⁴³ The witness said that Mr Yekatom himself would not train; he could ‘designate others and the elements would do their work’.⁷⁶⁴⁴

3091. Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, a company commander of about 120 people at Yamwara, said that he gave them ‘some military training’; and that there were some other military members in the group who would take over to train the non-military in the group in combat.⁷⁶⁴⁵ The witness stated that during the regular gatherings of the elements at Yamwara in which Mr Yekatom would address the soldiers, he would tell them that they were ‘tasked to protect the population not to harass them’.⁷⁶⁴⁶

⁷⁶⁴¹ P-1786: T-197, p. 69, lines 10-18, p. 70, line 20 – p. 71, line 5, p. 72, lines 1-8 referring to Video, CAR-OTP-2065-0951. P-1786 identified Mr Yekatom, Habib Beina, Rodrigue Momokama, and Cœur de Lion in the video but did not know the location and said that it showed a time before P-1786 had joined them. From an assessment of the video excerpt shown to the witness, it does not appear to be shot at Yamwara, as it shows no school buildings or other recognisable features; instead it shows several thatched huts in the middle of vegetation. In the video, Mr Yekatom is saying, inter alia, that it was from here that they left to go into action (‘[c]’est d’ici qu’on avait quitté pour aller à l’action’) and refer to training of the youth and the majority being from the military (‘on est en train de leur former, et majorité sont des militaires’) (see Transcript, CAR-OTP-2107-6928, at 6929, lines 6-8, lines 18-24).

Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, commenting on this photograph, said that the persons receiving the training are standing at attention, waiting for instructions given by their leader and they are being taught by someone called Iblock who was a ‘caporal-chef’ at the time (see P-1647: T-194, p. 18, lines 8-24). Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili also recognised Iblock in another Photograph, CAR-OTP-2095-5262 (see P-1647, T-194, p. 19, lines 4-7).

3092. As regards training with weapons, the Chamber notes video footage of Cœur de Lion saying that they could not show them how to fire a weapon at Yamwara because it would scare the adjoining population into fleeing the village so they have to do it without showing them,⁷⁶⁴⁷ and Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili agreed that this was indeed the case at Yamwara; they neither trained with live ammunition nor with blanks.⁷⁶⁴⁸ The witness said that they would show the people how to disassemble and reassemble weapons.⁷⁶⁴⁹

3094. However, P-1786 relativised this when asked about whether they received training on what to do if they captured Seleka elements; he responded that most of the time, they would be unable to get their hands on Seleka elements, but when ‘the Anti-Balaka would get their hands on a Seleka element, that was certain death for them’.⁷⁶⁵¹ P-1786 was asked further about ‘certain death’ for the captured Seleka elements and said that this was not reserved to the elements at Yamwara under Mr Yekatom’s command – during the events, ‘if a Central African who was apprehended in an area under Muslim control was systematically killed’, ‘[t]he same was true for the Anti-Balaka in the Yamwara sector’ and ‘the Central Africans would chase out the Muslims that were present in their sectors and vice versa’.⁷⁶⁵² P-1786 also said that ever since he was part of Mr Yekatom’s group, he had not heard any military

The Chamber notes that P-1786 also said that the sections were scattered and each section was in their own space, receiving their own separate training, and he himself admitted not being able to be everywhere in such a way that he would have been aware of the content of the training for each section (see P-1786: T-197, p. 77, line 11 – p. 79, line 15 referring to Video, CAR-OTP-2065-3188 showing Max Maidanda, who, according to P-1786, was in-charge of giving training to civilians in his group and was part of the group at Yamwara). in this group talk about killing Muslim civilians.⁷⁶⁵³ P-1786 said that they told the elements at Yamwara ‘that once they had got hold of someone believed to be Muslim that they should call us and we will come and question them to see if they are Seleka or not’ and ‘forbid the elements from apprehending people in any old fashion’.⁷⁶⁵⁴

3095. The Chamber also recalls the video footage of Max Maidanda using words showing anti-Muslim sentiment and its conclusion on the Anti-Muslim sentiment prevalent in Mr Yekatom’s group.⁷⁶⁵⁵ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili said that Max Maidanda was one of the leaders at Yamwara tasked with training elements but suggested that he was one of those elements who would smoke weed and who would ‘speak in their own way’.⁷⁶⁵⁶

3096. As regards training on international humanitarian law, it is not disputed by either the Prosecution or the Yekatom Defence that FACA members of Mr Yekatom’s group would have had such training prior to the events.⁷⁶⁵⁷

3097. As set out below, the Chamber finds that there was no training in international humanitarian law at Yamwara.

Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili said that he was familiar with the video and that he knew the two soldiers that were talking in it and that one could see that they are people who smoke ‘dope’ and that a proper soldier would not say what he said (see P-1647: T-194, p. 46, line 4 – p. 48, line 21). Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili also recalled that ‘white’ ‘[p]eople from the outside’ provided trainings on international humanitarian law to elements at Yamwara.⁷⁶⁶⁰

3099. Furthermore, there is no other evidence suggesting that the purported trainings on international humanitarian law were provided to civilian elements at Yamwara. Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, as a company commander and a FACA member said that he trained elements at Yamwara on international humanitarian law, agreeing that he instructed them not to target civilians and those not involved in combat.⁷⁶⁶¹ Whereas, P-1839, a civilian element within the group, received some training of military nature, consisting of using weapons, and described the training as ‘intense’ and provided to both men and women.⁷⁶⁶² She said that the elements were trained to crawl and do push-ups and learned how to disassemble and reassemble firearms and how to use the weapon.⁷⁶⁶³

3100. P-1839 said that she did not know of any international humanitarian law training at Yamwara.⁷⁶⁶⁴ Furthermore, P-1839’s testimony in the context of the two incidents involving captured ‘Muslims’ demonstrates no respect for any norms of international humanitarian law.⁷⁶⁶⁵

3. Yamwara Incident

3101. The confirmed charges concern four men and three Muslim women being stopped at a checkpoint, after which they were taken to Yamwara by Anti-Balaka members and mistreated, resulting in the death of Saint Cyr Lapo N’Gomat (hereinafter: ‘Saint Cyr’) at the end of December 2013.

3102. The Chamber heard from all, except one, of the direct victims of the Yamwara Incident in court, namely P-1704, P-1705, P-1716, P-0967, and P-1811 (the ‘Five Witnesses’). Some

3103. The Chamber introduced the prior recorded testimony of P-1654, Saint Cyr's father, pursuant to Rule 68(2)(c) of the Rules.⁷⁶⁷¹

3104. The Chamber also heard from an element of Mr Yekatom's group, P-1839, as further outlined below, who directly observed parts of the incident and who has been identified and described as a woman of 'mixed race' at Yamwara by several witnesses.⁷⁶⁷²

3105. The Yekatom Defence argues that the evidence provided by the Five Witnesses and P-1654 is contaminated by their close association with each other i.e. being 'interconnected and belong[ing] to a close-knit circle'.⁷⁶⁷³ In particular, the Yekatom Defence alleges two layers of contamination, through: (i) a letter written by P-1654 (the 'Letter') as the 'original source of contamination', which was read by P-1705 and P-0967 prior to their respective testimonies;⁷⁶⁷⁴ and (ii) contacts amongst the concerned witnesses, which led the witnesses 'to significantly alter their testimonies and add information they did not personally experience', 'with full knowledge that such collusion would have been prohibited'.⁷⁶⁷⁵ These arguments also concern a complaint by P-1654 to the CAR authorities regarding the Yamwara Incident (the ‘Complaint’).⁷⁶⁷⁶

3106. The Chamber notes that all witnesses were eyewitnesses to all or parts of the Yamwara Incident and have coherently described their respective experiences. The Chamber found them generally reliable and credible.

3107. The Chamber considered the discrepancies within and among these testimonies concerning the Yamwara Incident which are discussed in detail below.⁷⁶⁷⁷ In this regard, the Chamber appreciates the time that has elapsed since the Yamwara Incident and its traumatic nature, and is of the view that a majority of these inconsistencies were either minor or did not concern facts material to the allegations. Therefore, they did not undermine the credibility of these witnesses generally. On the contrary, these inconsistencies, when assessed in their totality, suggested to the Chamber that the witnesses’ accounts were genuine and not rehearsed, or otherwise agreed upon prior to their testimony before the Chamber, contrary to the Yekatom Defence allegations concerning contamination. In places, where these discrepancies did concern material factual allegations, these have been discussed in detail below.

3108. Having regard to this, the Chamber turns to the specific Yekatom Defence allegations concerning contamination of the evidence. First, the Yekatom Defence submits that both P-0967 and P-1705 read the Letter and that it influenced their evidence: while P-0967 modified her statement during the witness familiarisation process,⁷⁶⁷⁸ P-1705 changed his testimony to include Mr Yekatom’s interactions with P-1654, which did not feature in his original statement.⁷⁶⁷⁹ Second, the Yekatom Defence submits that ‘the Lapo Family Group witnesses were each aware of one another’s involvement in these proceedings’ and no efforts were undertaken to minimise witness contamination, as the witnesses had exchanges with each other about their potential testimony, altering their evidence.⁷⁶⁸⁰

3110. The Chamber also finds that these witnesses were in some contact with each other after the incident. P-1705 said that P-1704 lived with him in the family home for several months after the events,⁷⁶⁸³ and maintained ties with the Lapo N’Gomat family, admitting to talking with them about what they experienced and meeting P-1716.⁷⁶⁸⁴ P-1705 and P-1716 had friendly relations prior to the incident and remained in touch after it and would run into each other.⁷⁶⁸⁵ P-1811 confirmed that she was close to the Lapo N’Gomat family, and after 2013, she saw them⁷⁶⁸⁶ and P-0967 regularly.⁷⁶⁸⁷ P-0967 said that, because the events were painful, she did not see her sister, who was P-1654’s wife and Saint Cyr’s mother, for several years afterwards but eventually met the Lapo N’Gomat family and had ‘a conversation as a family’;⁷⁶⁸⁸ and she also spoke with P-1705.⁷⁶⁸⁹

3111. Some of these witnesses, P-1704, P-1705, P-1716, and P-1654, also went together to meet with the Prosecution when they were interviewed; P-1704, P-1705 and P-1716 were each questioned in court about accompanying each other to meet with the Prosecution.⁷⁶⁹⁰

3112. For the reasons outlined below, the Chamber finds that the quality or veracity of the witnesses’ testimony was not compromised as a result of contacts between each other.

3113. First, as regards the Yekatom Defence’s submissions concerning the Letter, the Chamber notes that P-1705 said that he transmitted the Letter to the Prosecution in June 2021 after P-

1654's death.⁷⁶⁹¹ P-1705 explained that P-1654 had written it as an 'aide-memoire' but unfortunately, his health deteriorated, and he passed away.⁷⁶⁹²

3114. While both P-1705 and P-0967 had read it prior to their testimony before the Court,⁷⁶⁹³ the Chamber finds that reading the Letter was normal human behaviour and this, in and of itself, did not mean that their testimonies were affected by it.

3115. The Chamber finds that both witnesses were open about having read the Letter. P-1705 explained the circumstances in which he read the Letter before giving it to the Prosecution.⁷⁶⁹⁴ However, from P-1705's account of P-1654's visit to Yamwara, it is clear that he was not an eyewitness to the exchange between P-1654 and Mr Yekatom when they met and would not have heard what was said.⁷⁶⁹⁵ The Chamber has borne this in mind when assessing the facts surrounding this meeting, in light of the Yekatom Defence's submissions.⁷⁶⁹⁶

3116. As regards P-0967, the Chamber finds that she was particularly forthcoming about certain details that she only learnt after reading the Letter.⁷⁶⁹⁷ For example, P-0967 said that she had corrected her statement to include Bojos' name as being present at the checkpoint, as she had read this name in the Letter.⁷⁶⁹⁸ P-0967 said that she initially thought that P-1716 had been released before the group was taken to Yamwara as she did not see him there, but then read that he had been mentioned in the Letter.⁷⁶⁹⁹ P-0967 was asked if she discussed the content of the document drafted by P-1654 with P-1705 and she responded that she never discussed the content of the document; it was P-1705's mother who gave her the document in an envelope.⁷⁷⁰⁰

3118. Second, as regards the Yekatom Defence's submissions concerning the 'Lapo Family Group witnesses' being aware of one another's involvement in these proceedings, the Chamber notes that P-0967 confirmed that her sister (P-1654's wife and Saint Cyr's mother) knew that she would be testifying before the Court and that she had to know because the idea was to come and testify concerning her son; it was all for her son that she agreed to come to testify.⁷⁷⁰¹ P-1704 denied speaking with P-1654 or his wife, P-1705, nor P-1705's sister about coming before the court to give his testimony.⁷⁷⁰² There is nothing else in the evidence to show that the other witnesses shared the fact of and the details of their testimony with each other. Even if they did, having assessed their evidence in totality, the Chamber finds that this did not appear to have affected their evidence in this instance.

3119. Further, as regards their contacts with each other generally, the Chamber finds that the Five Witnesses were questioned in detail about this by the Yekatom Defence and appeared generally forthcoming about their frequency and nature. The Chamber indeed considered such contacts to be normal given that most of them are related to the same family or were close friends. During these contacts, the witnesses indeed discussed the details of the Yamwara Incident with each other in varying degrees after the fact. However, as set out below, an assessment of their testimony about these contacts did not reveal anything of concern to the Chamber.

3120. P-0967 was able to specifically point to aspects of the incident that she discussed with the others. P-0967 said that she learnt P-1704's and P-1716's name years after the Yamwara Incident,⁷⁷⁰³ and spoke to P-1705 about P-1704's Facebook username⁷⁷⁰⁴ and the name of Yamwara.⁷⁷⁰⁵ P-0967 denied seeing P-1716 and P-1704 in person after the Yamwara Incident.⁷⁷⁰⁶

⁷⁷⁰³ P-0967: T-200, p. 20, line 23 – p. 21, line 7; P-0967: T-199, p. 36, line 22 – p. 37, line 10.

⁷⁷⁰⁴ P-0967: T-200, p. 37, lines 1-9.

⁷⁷⁰⁶ P-0967: T-200, p. 39, lines 5-8.

3121. After the Yamwara Incident, P-1704 maintained some ties with the Lapo N’Gomat family and talked with them about what they experienced. P-1704 said that after he separated from his wife, he maintained ties with the Lapo N’Gomat family, they met frequently, talked about what they experienced, as it was not something they could forget about, but he did not talk with P-1811 about the incident.⁷⁷⁰⁷ Before 2017, he saw P-1654, P-1705 and possibly P-0967 and they had an opportunity to recall that time and to talk about it together.⁷⁷⁰⁸

3122. P-1705 and P-1716 expressed some inability or unwillingness to talk about the Yamwara Incident after the fact given the difficult nature of their experiences.⁷⁷⁰⁹ P-1716 said that he was no longer close with P-1705 and could not remember the last time that he saw P-1705 or the Lapo N’Gomat family after their interview with the Prosecution.⁷⁷¹⁰ P-1705 said that he and P-1704 also did not have a chance to meet with P-1716 together and discuss the Yamwara Incident with each other.⁷⁷¹¹ P-1716 could not remember the last time he would have been in contact, through any form of communication, with P-1705, P-1654 or P-1704.⁷⁷¹²

3123. P-1811 confirmed that she remained close to the Lapo N’Gomat family and they continue to see one another,⁷⁷¹³ however, denied having spoken to P-1654 about his visit to Yamwara,⁷⁷¹⁴ or having had the opportunity to discuss the Yamwara Incident with other witnesses.⁷⁷¹⁵

3124. Given the openness of the witnesses when answering the questions about their contacts with each other and having considered their respective answers, the Chamber finds the nature of these contacts genuine, understandable, and even reasonable. The Chamber is not persuaded that these contacts, in themselves, meant that the witnesses contaminated each other’s accounts.

⁷⁷¹⁰ P-1716: T-148, p. 11, lines 7 – p. 12, line 23, p. 39, lines 1-7.

⁷⁷¹¹ P-1705: T-212, p. 13, lines 9-20. See also P-0967: T-200, p. 37, lines 10-15.

P-1716 said that he held back on talking with the Prosecution investigators at that point in time (see P-1716: T-148, p. 36, lines 8-16). According to P-1704, P-1716 was 'scared' and refused to have another meeting, he did not have any support and did not want to talk about the Anti-Balaka attack (see P-1704: T-128, p. 68, lines 4-15). The Chamber notes that P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 were indeed interviewed on different days. P-1716's statement mentions that he was interviewed on 29 April 2017 and between 29 April 2017 and 5 May 2017 (see P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0062). Whereas P-1705, asked about his meeting with the Prosecution investigators on 30 April 2017 and 1 May 2017, stated that he went there by himself and not with his father (see P-1705: T-212, p. 4, line 15-17, p. 54, line 23 – p. 55, line 2). P-1704 was interviewed on 10-12 June 2017 (see P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1136).

3127. Third, and more importantly, given that the witnesses had a shared traumatic experience and spoke about it with each other afterwards, it is inevitable and indeed natural that their respective versions will have been affected by the collective memory. The Chamber has taken these factors into account when assessing their evidence holistically, in light of the discrepancies that emerged during their testimonies.

3128. The Chamber also notes that the witnesses were able to point out when they were speaking from personal experience and when they had received information from another witness. It was telling that the witnesses acknowledged the fact that they had received information from each other, and specifically explained when and from whom the information was received.⁷⁷²³ This permitted the Chamber to assess the witnesses' respective testimony in light of their contacts with other witnesses when reaching conclusions.

3129. Lastly in this respect, the Chamber has had due regard to the passage of time in assessing the evidence concerning traumatic events. The Five Witnesses were testifying approximately ten years after the events, and it is understandable that they did not recall all the details with precision.

3130. Notwithstanding these general observations, when the Yekatom Defence's arguments concern specific factual allegations, the Chamber has assessed them below.

On 24 December 2013, following the death of a member of the Lapo N'Gomat family, Saint Cyr's older brother, three women related to the family were to be escorted back to their home before dark because of the security situation in Bangui at the time. The four men, namely P-1704, P-1705, P-1716 and Saint Cyr, who were relatives and friends of the Lapo N'Gomat family, escorted the three women, namely, P-0967, P-1811 and another (together, seven persons), to the main road to find them a taxi.

3131. The Chamber notes that Saint Cyr's and P-1705's elder brother, Charlemagne Lapo N'Gomat had passed away at the Castor hospital on the early morning of 24 December ⁷⁷²³ See e.g. P-1811 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0003-R05, at 0009, para. 36 stating that P-1704 told her at the M'Poko site that the Anti-Balaka found Saint Cyr's FACA identity card; P-0967: T-199, p. 50, lines 6-17 where P-0967 stated that P-1704 spoke to her that both ears of Saint Cyr had been cut off; P-1705: T-212, p. 26, lines 14-18 where P-1705 said that P-1654 told him about the Lapo family being exterminated if the base would be attacked and P-1705 denying having heard this personally; P-0967: T-200, p. 29, line 4 – p. 30, line 2 where P-0967 said that after reading a document from P-1654, she did not understand how P-1716 was at the base since she saw him sent away at the checkpoint and because she did not see him at the base; P-0967: T-200, p. 35, lines 18-23 where she said that she read the document drafted by P-1654 and made modifications to her statement.

2013.⁷⁷²⁴ A group of family and friends, including the Five Witnesses, had gathered at the hospital and decided to bring his body to the Lapo N’Gomat family house in Cité de la Paix, a neighbourhood next to Boeing, for the funeral.⁷⁷²⁵ P-1704, P-1705 and P-1716 were either residents or otherwise familiar with the neighbourhood around Yamwara and generally aware of the security situation at the time,⁷⁷²⁶ and were able to explain well their journey from the hospital to the Lapo N’Gomat house.

3132. The Five Witnesses described travelling together in an ambulance from the hospital,⁷⁷²⁷ through PK5 to Boeing, and during this trip, they were stopped, at least once,⁷⁷²⁸ at a post

⁷⁷²⁶ At the time, P-1704 lived with his family in Cattin, which is next to Boeing (P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1138, para. 13). P-1705 lived in the Boeing neighbourhood towards Avicom (P-1705: T-211, p. 9, lines 20-24). P-1716 was familiar with the location of the Lapo N’Gomat family house (P-1716: T-148, p. 9, lines 13-21).

close to the Lapo N’Gomat family house in Cité de la Paix.⁷⁷²⁹ Some witnesses remembered that those who stopped the ambulance said that they were checking vehicles for Seleka elements and weapons.⁷⁷³⁰ After they searched it and saw the body of the deceased, the ambulance was allowed to carry on.⁷⁷³¹ When they arrived at the Lapo N’Gomat house, the dead body was taken out and the family continued preparing for the funeral.⁷⁷³²

3133. With the funeral ceremony expected to be held later the same day,⁷⁷³³ Oumi, who was the daughter of Colonel Bertrand Mamour (hereinafter: ‘Mamour’)⁷⁷³⁴ and whom P-1705 considered as ‘elder sister’,⁷⁷³⁵ had accompanied the Five Witnesses in the ambulance, and needed to go back home to her infant.⁷⁷³⁶ P-0967 and P-1811 also decided to return to their houses.⁷⁷³⁷

Saint Cyr, were to accompany them to the main road to find them a taxi as the women were unfamiliar with the area.⁷⁷³⁹

3135. The Five Witnesses and Oumi (collectively, the ‘six persons’), together with Saint Cyr, left the Lapo N’Gomat house somewhere between 13:00 and 16:00.⁷⁷⁴⁰

Elements from Mr Yekatom’s group apprehended these seven persons at a checkpoint led by Alkanto close to the Lapo N’Gomat family house and to Yamwara. Alkanto pointed to the women as belonging to the family of Mamour and Michel Djotodia in the presence of the elements in his group. Alkanto’s identification of the women being related to Djotodia and Mamour as well as being Muslims, combined with Alkanto’s negative feelings centred around a desire for revenge against the women, predisposed Alkanto’s group to perceive the seven persons as ‘Muslims’.

3136. The Chamber notes that, soon after, on the way to the main road, around the same location where the ambulance was checked earlier in the day and close to a hut selling coffee, the seven persons were stopped by what they described as armed ‘Anti-Balaka’.⁷⁷⁴¹ Some of the

Some witnesses also describe a person called ‘Willy’ or ‘Wilfried’, a friend of the deceased, who was present with the group during this time (see P-1705: T-211, p. 19, lines 5-18; T-212, p. 16, line 19 – p. 18, line 3; P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0066, para. 25; P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1141, para. 28; P-1704 Corrections, CAR-OTP-2136-0486, at 0493, para. 28). He appears to have left the group later on and was not brought to Yamwara with them (see footnote 7778 below).

⁷⁷⁴¹ The Chamber notes that it is unclear from the evidence whether this was an already established roadblock and/or barricade at the time, however, the Five Witnesses were consistent in their description of the individuals that stopped them and it conforms to the description of the Anti-Balaka provided by other witnesses in this case, particularly the use of gris-gris and being clothed in part-civilian and part-military attire. The witnesses were also consistent on the approximate location of where they were stopped. Some of them recognised this location as the same as where the ambulance was stopped earlier that day, near ‘Avicom’ and about 300-400 metres from the Lapo N’Gomat family house (see P-1704: T-128, p. 10, line 11 – p. 12, line 8, p. 35, lines 17-22; P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1141, para. 26; P-1705: T-212, p. 14, line 22 – p. 15, line 19, p. 16, lines 6-9, p. 18, line 9 – p. 19, line 3, p. 22, line 24 – p. 23, line 8; P-1716: T-148, p. 18, lines 16-24; P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0066-67, para. 26; P-1811: T-114, p. 14, lines 5-14, p. 15, lines 18-22; P-1811: T-115, p. 8, line 14 – p. 9, line 22; P-1811 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0003-R05, at 0007, para. 23). This location appears to correspond to the hut and the intersection close to Yamwara that appears in the Photo, CAR-OTP-2126-0775. P-1990, a former school director at Yamwara, agreed that the road in front of the small red kiosk in this photo is the road that goes down and meets with the Cattin-M’Poko-Bac road; he said that this is the shop where the drinks are sold and to the right-hand side, this road comes out in Cattin (see P-1990: T-237, p. 50, lines 1-23).

witnesses recalled that these elements were numerous⁷⁷⁴² and recognisable by their gris-gris, clothing, and arms.⁷⁷⁴³ P-1716 said that the group themselves stated that they were ‘Anti-Balaka’ and that he immediately knew that they were ‘Anti-Balaka’ because, at the time, they were the only ones who would carry arms in that particular way and weapons of that type.⁷⁷⁴⁴ P-1704 said that there were also civilians around, who were people from the neighbourhood, gathered to see what was going on.⁷⁷⁴⁵

⁷⁷⁴² P-1704 said that there were about 50 ‘Anti-Balaka’ members (see P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1141, para. 26; P-1704: T-128, p. 35, lines 2-11). P-1705 said that they were in great number, about a ‘hundred’ (see P-1705: T-211, p. 20, line 23 – p. 21, line 11). P-1716 did not know the number, but stated the group was surrounded by a large number (see P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0066-67, para. 26; P-1716: T-148, p. 22, lines 15-23).

⁷⁷⁴⁶ The Chamber notes that some witnesses at the time did not seem to know Alkanto’s name. However, when read together with P-1839’s testimony, the Chamber finds that the person they were referring to as the ‘leader’ of this group at this post is a reference to Alkanto. P-0967 and P-1811 used the words ‘leader’ and ‘chief’ whereas P-1705 used the term ‘in charge of the roadblock’ (P-0967: T-199, p. 33, line 19 – p. 35, line 14; P-1811 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0003-R05, at 0007, paras 23, 25; P-1811: T-114, p. 15, lines 9-17, p. 16, lines 6-14, p. 18, lines 4-8; P-1705: T-211, p. 21, lines 12-15). P-1716 did not know who the leader of the roadblock was but found out when he arrived in Yamwara (see P-1716: T-148, p. 25, line 19 – p. 26, line 2). In addition to this, the Chamber has also considered that P-1704 indicated in his prior recorded testimony that he heard the ‘Anti-Balaka’ using the name ‘Alkanto’ to call him (see P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1141, para. 27). P-1704 said in court that Alkanto introduced himself to the group (see P-1704: T-128, p. 12, lines 9-17). The Chamber further notes that P-1704, P-1705, and P-0967 were shown Video, CAR-OTP-2065-4585, at 00:00:03 depicting a man with braided hair wearing a green and white striped t-shirt with gris-gris across the chest standing outside in a bush with several men standing around him, who appears to be Alkanto. P-0967 said that she thought that the person with braids was the one that stopped them, mentioning that it was very difficult to recognise him clearly since she only saw him once (see P-0967: T-200, p. 41, lines 11-18). P-1704 and P-1705 did not recognise him (see P-1704: T-128, p. 36, line 24 – p. 37, line 21; P-1705: T-212, p. 48, lines 1-9). In the Chamber’s view, P-1704’s and P-1705’s inability to recognise Alkanto in this video does not affect the credibility of their testimony about him. See also Photograph, CAR-OTP-2125-0742; P-1839: T-172, p. 11, lines 8-13.

⁷⁷⁴⁹ P-0967: T-200, p. 22, lines 1-4; P-1811: T-114, p. 16, line 25 – p. 17, line 18, p. 32, line 12 – p. 33, line 6. See also P-1839: T-173, p. 65, lines 23-25 where P-1839 said that one of the women in the group was a minister’s wife.

3138. The Yekatom Defence does not dispute that Alkanto, having recognised P-1811, stopped the seven persons at a checkpoint near Yamwara. However, it argues that it was P-1811's presence, P-0967 and P-1811's 'ties to Djotodia', together with a group of 'unrecognisable individuals from outside the neighbourhood' that 'aroused reasonable suspicion' amongst Alkanto's elements,⁷⁷⁵⁰ and not because the group was identifiable as Muslim.⁷⁷⁵¹

3139. The evidence shows that while P-0967 and P-1811 were not wearing clothes that would necessarily identify them as Muslim,⁷⁷⁵² after Alkanto recognised them personally and identified them out loud, his group came to know that the women were Muslim. P-0967 said that Alkanto stepped out from a small shed, stopped the group, and pointed at P-1811, saying that she was Mamour's wife.⁷⁷⁵³ Alkanto also pointed at P-0967 and said 'You are the sister of Djotodia, the president. You are as black as he is' and started to insult her too.⁷⁷⁵⁴ P-1839 said that Alkanto personally knew one of these women as a minister's wife.⁷⁷⁵⁵ P-0967 said that after he recognised P-1811, whom he knew very well, Alkanto also knew that they were 'Muslims [...] and that is why he stopped us'.⁷⁷⁵⁶ The Chamber further notes that the four men accompanying the three women were, in fact, not Muslim by faith.⁷⁷⁵⁷

The Yekatom Defence also points out that the Mamour family was close to Djotodia. It submits that Alkanto worked at the Presidential Palace with Fatima Mamour, who is P-1811's co-wife (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Conf-Corr, para. 430). The Chamber finds that P-1811, P-1705 and P-0967 confirmed that P-1811 and Fatima Mamour are Mamour's co-wives. P-1705 said that Fatima Mamour worked at the Presidential Palace as a governor under Djotodia's presidency (see P-1811: T-115, p. 5, lines 4-19; P-1705: T-212, p. 10, line 22 – p. 11, line 2; P-0967: T-199, p. 29, lines 4-5). It is also noted that P-1786 said that Alkanto was also a member of the presidential security unit (see P-1786: T-198, p. 28, line 25 – p. 29, line 2).

The Chamber further notes that Saint Cyr's parents, P-1654 and his wife, were both Christian. (see P-1654, CAR-OTP-2053-0112-R04, at 0112; P-1811 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0003-R05, at 0006, para. 19). See further P-1811 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0003-R05, at 0007, para. 22 ('Tous les hommes étaient chrétiens, et nous les femmes, musulmanes').

3140. According to the Yekatom Defence, Alkanto's 'vigilance' was heightened by 'personal grievances' and 'vendetta' towards P-1811.⁷⁷⁵⁸ It argues that Alkanto's group suspected the seven persons of being 'Seleka informants' after 'Seleka cards' were found on the men during the searches at the checkpoint; and that these were the reasons they were brought to Cœur de Lion at Yamwara.⁷⁷⁵⁹

3141. The evidence shows that Alkanto may have indeed borne negative feelings against P-1811 and the Mamour family, and also made them known to the elements at the checkpoint. All witnesses remembered Alkanto saying out loud that he had previously worked with Mamour.⁷⁷⁶⁰ Some of them remembered that Alkanto also spoke about his friend having been mistreated by the Mamour family and wanting revenge.⁷⁷⁶¹ 3142. Based on this and what follows, the Chamber finds that it was a combination of Alkanto's negative feelings centred around a desire for revenge, the women being identified as related to Djotodia and Mamour, as well as being Muslims, that predisposed Alkanto's group to their perception of the seven persons. This was despite the fact that the men in the group were non-Muslims.

Following Alkanto's identification of the women, his elements started to threaten the group with death, telling the group that they would be 'skinned like a papaya'. The expression 'peeling' or 'skinning' the 'papaya' was used by elements in Mr Yekatom's group in relation to the treatment of captured persons suspected of being Seleka.

3143. As set out below, the evidence shows that, following Alkanto's identification of the women, his elements started to threaten the group with death.

The Chamber has considered that P-1839 and P-0967 did not know about Alkanto wanting to seek revenge on the women but finds this apparent inconsistency to be minor (see P-1839: T-173, p. 66, lines 1-23; P-0967: T-200, p. 42, lines 11-15; P-1705: T-212, p. 23, lines 9-17).

3144.P-0967 said that Alkanto said that '[w]hen it rains, it's the period to sow seeds, and today we are going to sow some seeds'.⁷⁷⁶² P-1811 understood this to mean that 'since the soil is wet, it would open and they would bury them' there.⁷⁷⁶³ P-1811 said that the group told the seven persons that it was the end for them and they would not survive.⁷⁷⁶⁴ P-0967, P-1705, and P-1704 said that Alkanto's elements gathered around the group and said to them that they were going to be 'skinned like a papaya'.⁷⁷⁶⁵ P-0967 explained what this phrase meant to her: '[...] somebody who carries a machete and doesn't have any fruit in his hands, it's an image which shows that the fruit or, rather, the plant which should be sown today would have been us [...] a very strong image. It was quite clear to us that it meant that we would be buried that day'.⁷⁷⁶⁶

3145.The Chamber notes that the expression 'peeling' or 'skinning' the 'papaya' has been used by elements in Mr Yekatom's group in relation to the treatment of captured persons suspected of being Seleka in other contexts.⁷⁷⁶⁷ Mr Yekatom himself used this phrase at least once in his phone call with P-0954,⁷⁷⁶⁸ and is seen in a video responding to one of his elements about a certain captured person and the expression 'faire sa papaye'.⁷⁷⁶⁹

Alkanto ordered his elements to search the male captives at the checkpoint. Alkanto's elements beat P-1704 and P-1716 and accused them of being traitors. Following this search, no arms were found on any of the captives. An element searched Saint Cyr and found a ⁷⁷⁶⁹ Video, CAR-OTP-2065-2404, at 00:02:00-00:03:48. The video shows an element reporting to Mr Yekatom at night about a person captured by the youth of the village that had been brought to Mr Yekatom's elements, and about whom Mr Yekatom asks if this captured person was an 'arabe' ('...vrai arabe?') and what this person had said. The element responds that this captured person was doing reconnaissance about the positions of Mr Yekatom's elements on the ground and that was all; and then says 'we did his papaya, we will do his papaya, we asked the girls to do his papaya' ('on fait sa papaya, on va faire sa papaya, on a demandé aux filles de faire sa papaye'). Another element asks if the captured person had been killed ('On l'a tué ?') and Mr Yekatom responds 'Non'. This element then asks what 'faire sa papaye' means ('Faire sa papaye, ça veut dire quoi ?'), and the element reporting to Mr Yekatom responds 'we put him in prison' ('On l'a mis en prison'). Mr Yekatom then turns away from the camera saying 'leave it for now, we will talk about it later' ('c'est bon, laisse tomber; nous en causerons après') (see Transcript, CAR-OTP-2127-3644, at 3646, lines 14-28).

‘Seleka card’ on him. None of the seven persons posed a threat to Yamwara or the security of the elements placed there. In fact, the nature and the purpose of them being together and close to Yamwara was linked to the funeral of Saint Cyr’s older brother.

3146. The Chamber now turns to the captives being searched at the checkpoint. An element, who was in Alkanto’s section within Mr Yekatom’s group at the time and not present when the seven persons were stopped, joined them at this stage.⁷⁷⁷⁰ P-1839 seemed to think that the Anti-Balaka suspected the group of spying or at least wanting to act as spies on the base.⁷⁷⁷¹ As per P-1839, Alkanto instructed his elements to search the men’s pockets and the persons who searched them took their belongings, including their mobile phones.⁷⁷⁷² One of the elements frisked the men and recovered ‘Seleka cards’,⁷⁷⁷³ and therefore considered them to be Seleka members.⁷⁷⁷⁴

3147. P-0967 and P-1716 recalled that Saint Cyr had a ‘military card’ that the Anti-Balaka found and according to them he was a soldier serving in the FACA.⁷⁷⁷⁵ P-1705 recalled that the military card was found on Saint Cyr when the group was searched after their arrival at Yamwara.⁷⁷⁷⁶ In the view of the Chamber, both of these inconsistencies were minor and explainable by the passage of time and the traumatic nature of the events. When assessed together with P-1839’s evidence, it is clear to the Chamber that Saint Cyr was searched

P-1839 agreed that she had seen these Seleka cards but did not know what happened to them. She described them as having the same shape as an identification card with ‘Seleka’ written on them (see P-1839: T-170, p. 33, lines 18-24; T-173, p. 67, line 24 - p. 68, line 4; see also T-170-FRA, p. 33, lines 1-5 where the phrase ‘Coalition de la Séléka’ appears). The Yekatom Defence submits that P-1839’s recollection about the ‘Seleka cards’ is consistent with the fact that Seleka identification cards were circulated as early as April 2013 (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 431, n. 1457 referring to P-2050’s evidence and Photographs, CAR-OTP-2076-1428; CAR-OTP-2076-1435; CAR-OTP-2076-1449; CAR-OTP-2076-1450). The Chamber notes that none of these witnesses, including P-1839, was questioned on whether they had seen the ‘Seleka cards’ shown to P-2050.

P-0967 said that Saint Cyr had a document attesting to the fact that he was a soldier and that it was discovered, but only learnt this after the fact; at the time, she did not know that he had such an identity card on him (see P-0967: T-200, p. 26, lines 16-21).

twice, once at the checkpoint where the purported ‘Seleka card’ was discovered and once later upon his arrival at Yamwara where he was seen bare-chested by P-0967.⁷⁷⁷⁷

3148. The evidence shows that elements in Mr Yekatom’s group beat P-1704 and P-1716 at the checkpoint. P-1704 and P-1716 recall being beaten at this stage at the checkpoint and accused of being traitors and spies.⁷⁷⁷⁸ P-1716 said that when they were arrested, they were being treated as ‘B2s’, which meant that they were ‘traitors’, and they were being told that they were going to die.⁷⁷⁷⁹

3149. Noting that no arms were found any of the seven persons during this frisking, the Chamber finds that none of the seven persons were armed, or otherwise, posed a threat to Yamwara or the security of the elements placed there. In fact, the nature and the purpose of them being together and close to Yamwara was linked to the funeral of Saint Cyr’s older brother, as set out above.

After threatening them with death and accusing them of being traitors, Alkanto ordered his elements to take the seven persons, including Saint Cyr Lapo N’Gomat, P-1704, P-1705, P-1716, P-0967 and P-1811, to Yamwara.

3150. Following this search, according to P-1811, Alkanto spoke on the phone with ‘the person of authority’ from the base to say that he had arrested Djotodia’s family members.⁷⁷⁸⁰ P-1811 said that she knew that Alkanto called their ‘chief’ because when he finished the phone call, he told them that the ‘chief’ had ordered that they be taken to the base.⁷⁷⁸¹

⁷⁷⁷⁷ See paragraph 3167 below.

⁷⁷⁷⁹ P-1716: T-147, p. 14, line 25 – p. 15, line 10; P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0067, para. 29.

⁷⁷⁸¹ P-1811: T-114, p. 18, line 25 – p. 19, line 3.

3151. The Chamber is not a position to conclude whether, at this stage of the events, Alkanto called Cœur de Lion or Mr Yekatom. P-1811 seemed to think that it was Mr Yekatom, because Mr Yekatom later introduced himself as the ‘chief’.⁷⁷⁸² P-1839, on the other hand, did not know whether Alkanto called Cœur de Lion before sending the group to Yamwara,⁷⁷⁸³ but agreed that when the group later arrived at Yamwara, they were taken directly to Cœur de Lion.⁷⁷⁸⁴

3152. The evidence shows that Alkanto then ordered his elements to take the seven persons to Yamwara.⁷⁷⁸⁵

3153. The Chamber finds that by this stage Alkanto’s elements perceived the seven persons to all be Muslims. P-1705 said that Alkanto’s elements considered the group to be ‘all Muslims’ and that they had to be taken to Yamwara where their fate would be decided.⁷⁷⁸⁶ P-0967 said that, once Alkanto saw them, he knew that they were Muslims.⁷⁷⁸⁷

3154. The witnesses described walking from the checkpoint to Yamwara. P-1705 said that the group was not allowed to look around while they walked to Yamwara.⁷⁷⁸⁸ P-1716 stated they were all escorted to the school by the crowd, being kicked and slapped and having insults shouted at them, they were being taunted and told that they were going to die, and he felt as though he was already as good as dead and believed that if he did not go with them, he would be killed.⁷⁷⁸⁹

3155. The transfer from Alkanto’s checkpoint to Cœur de Lion’s house in Yamwara took a few minutes. P-1704 said that it did not take much time to go from the roadblock to Yamwara.⁷⁷⁹⁰ P-0967 thought it was ‘bit far’; they left the main route and walked roughly the same distance as between the Lapo N’Gomat house and the main road to reach Yamwara.⁷⁷⁹¹ P-1839 said that the checkpoint was a few minutes apart from Cœur de Lion’s house.⁷⁷⁹²

Elements in Mr Yekatom’s group, namely Alkanto and others, brought the captives to Cœur de Lion’s house at Yamwara. There, in Cœur de Lion’s presence, elements in Mr Yekatom’s group, including Bojos, interrogated the four men individually on their identity, ethnicity, and reasons for being there with the women, also demanding the captive men to speak in the dialect associated with their respective ethnicities. Saint Cyr and another captive, who were Boffi from their father’s side and Goula from their mother’s side, gave their ethnicity but neither could speak their dialect. Saint Cyr said that he was ‘Boffi’ but could not speak in this language. When Saint Cyr was unable to do so, elements in Mr Yekatom’s group accused him of being ‘Goula’, and therefore associated with Djotodia. The elements in Mr Yekatom’s group kept the women apart from the male captives but close by, under the veranda of Cœur de Lion’s house. Mr Yekatom was not present at Yamwara during the group’s arrival there or during the said interrogation at Cœur de Lion’s house.

3156. The evidence shows that, at Yamwara, elements in Mr Yekatom’s group, namely Alkanto and others,⁷⁷⁹³ brought the seven persons in front of Cœur de Lion’s house.⁷⁷⁹⁴ P-1811 said that it was getting dark, and she did not dare to look at the Anti-Balaka members directly, but recalled having seen female ‘Anti-Balaka members’, one of whom matched P-1839’s physical appearance.⁷⁷⁹⁵

3157. According to P-1839, Cœur de Lion was present when the group arrived at his house.⁷⁷⁹⁶

⁷⁷⁹² P-1839: T-173, p. 68, lines 16-20. The Chamber also notes that P-1839 was not able to specify which road the checkpoint was located on because this was not her area. Further, referring to Map, CAR-D29-0003-0052, at 0054, P-1839 shown Yamwara School and Cœur de Lion’s house, could not place Alkanto’s checkpoint on this map; and neither on the one at 0055. However, asked how much time it would take to go on foot from the checkpoint to Cœur de Lion’s house, P-1839 said that it was a few minutes apart and not very far (see P-1839: T-173, p. 60, lines 17-24, p. 62, line 16 – p. 64, line 19, p. 68, lines 16-20).

P-1786 also recognised himself in a video still in front of the ‘building where Cœur de Lion used to live’ (see P-1786: T-197, p. 68, line 7 – p. 69, line 3 referring to Video, CAR-OTP-2065-4849, at 00:03:49).

⁷⁷⁹⁶ P-1839: T-173, p. 69, lines 8-13. The Chamber notes that P-1716 recalled that Cœur de Lion arrived at some point later when the four men were being interrogated (see P-1716: T-147, p. 16, lines 1-10; T-148, p. 31, lines 17-22; P-

3158. As set out below, the evidence shows that, in Cœur de Lion's presence, in front of his house, elements in Mr Yekatom's group, including Bojos,⁷⁷⁹⁷ interrogated the four men individually on their identity and their relations with the three women, also demanding the captive men to speak in the dialect associated with their respective ethnicities. Saint Cyr and P-1705, who were Boffi from their father's side and Goula from their mother's side, gave their ethnicity but neither could speak their dialect. Saint Cyr said that he was 'Boffi' but could not speak in this language. When Saint Cyr was unable to do so, elements in Mr Yekatom's group accused him of being 'Goula', and therefore associated with Djotodia.

3159. P-1716 said that, in front of the house, the men were forced to go on their knees with their hands on their heads and several people individually questioned them on their identity and ethnicity, sometimes two people could speak at the same time, and they did not know how to answer.⁷⁷⁹⁸

3160. When questioned by Bojos, P-1705 explained that they were coming back from a funeral and were not Muslims, but the Anti-Balaka did not want to listen to them.⁷⁷⁹⁹ However, when someone spoke to him in the dialect of P-1705's ethnicity, P-1705 was unable to understand it and respond, following which the Anti-Balaka told them that they would all be executed.⁷⁸⁰⁰

1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0069, paras 40-41). The Chamber gives more weight to P-1839 in this respect as she was a member of Mr Yekatom's group, stationed at Yamwara at the time, and therefore, more familiar with the locations and identities of the various chiefs there.

⁷⁷⁹⁷ P-1704 and P-1705 knew 'Bojos' alias Mbrai as a young person from the Cattin neighbourhood and recognised him at Yamwara (see P-1705: T-211, p. 32, lines 17-25, p. 40, lines 10-18; T-212, p. 25, lines 2-21; P-1704: T-128, p. 44, line 17 – p. 45, line 15; P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1142, para. 33). P-1705 said that, at the time, Bojos was giving instructions in the absence of Mr Yekatom (see P-1705: T-211, p. 28, line 24 – p. 29, line 1). P-1704 described Bojos as Mr Yekatom's 'deputy', a FACA member and a former bodyguard of General Lapo; P-1704 knew him as they were both from Cattin (see P-1704: T-128, p. 15, lines 10-18). P-1704 also recognised Bojos in Video, CAR-OTP-2012-0523, at 00:50:42-00:50:53 as the man to the left of the image in a yellow, red and green hat wearing a yellow T shirt and carrying an AK-47 (see P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1147, para. 67). 3161. P-1704 stated that Bojos interrogated him in Sango and told him that he was from the Goula ethnic group; P-1704 replied that he was Gbaya, so they brought a man who spoke to P-1704 in Gbaya, asking P-1704 very basic questions to test his knowledge of the language to prove that he could speak Gbaya and that he was not a Goula,⁷⁸⁰¹ a Muslim ethnic group⁷⁸⁰² associated with Djotodia.⁷⁸⁰³ P-1704 explained to them that he was only assisting his in-laws with a funeral but was forced to remain silent.⁷⁸⁰⁴

3162. P-1716 said that both he and P-1704 were able to speak the dialect associated with their respective ethnicities.⁷⁸⁰⁵ P-1716 stated that he told the Anti-Balaka his name and the name of his father and that he did not know the ladies and that he was only escorting them back to their home.⁷⁸⁰⁶ He told them his ethnicity and that he was P-1705's friend, and he heard Saint Cyr and P-1705 give their ethnicity but neither could speak the dialect.⁷⁸⁰⁷ Saint Cyr, in particular, said he was 'Boffi' but could not speak in his language and was accused of being 'Goula' and therefore associated with Djotodia.⁷⁸⁰⁸

3163. The evidence shows that the elements in Mr Yekatom's group kept the women apart but close by, under the veranda of Cœur de Lion's house.⁷⁸⁰⁹ P-1811 stated that the men were outside seated on the ground while the women were brought underneath the veranda.⁷⁸¹⁰ P-0967 said that on the veranda, they had the possibility of seeing what was going on and some of the soldiers removed their veils, took her bag, and took out the prayer mat and everything else that was in it.⁷⁸¹¹

3164. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom was not at Yamwara when the group arrived there, but only arrived later in the day.⁷⁸¹² The Prosecution does not allege that Mr Yekatom was present at this stage of the events but argues that it was his ‘subordinates’ that subjected the abductees to severe physical and mental injury at Yamwara.⁷⁸¹³

3165. The Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom was not present at Yamwara during the group’s arrival there or during the said interrogation at Cœur de Lion’s house. Only P-1704 recalled him being present and described (i) the captives being presented to Mr Yekatom when they arrived at Yamwara; and (ii) Alkanto telling Mr Yekatom that the captives were from General Mamour’s family.⁷⁸¹⁴

3166. The Chamber notes, in this regard, that the Prosecution does not rely on his account to establish Mr Yekatom’s presence at Yamwara at this point, and that the Yekatom Defence argues that P-1704’s testimony is contradicted by all other witnesses who were present at the scene. Having assessed the evidence holistically, the Chamber finds that P-1704’s account is not reliable in relation to the two aspects mentioned and therefore, does not rely on it.

Following the men’s interrogation, the elements in Mr Yekatom’s group forced them to undress, searched them again, threatened them with death, and found no weapons on any of them. Upon another search of the captives, an element in Mr Yekatom’s group recovered a SIM card in the trousers of one of the female captives and no weapons were found on them. The elements in Mr Yekatom’s group took the women inside Cœur de Lion’s house while Saint Cyr’s interrogation continued outside, and from where they could hear what was happening outside. Elements in Mr Yekatom’s group continued to interrogate Saint Cyr and beat him, despite him showing his identification card and insisting that he was a FACA member. Cœur de Lion, who was observing Saint Cyr’s mistreatment, encouraged the assailants and ordered them to continue, saying, inter alia, that the victims were ‘Muslims’ and ‘Seleka’ and to ‘do the job properly’. Elements in Mr Yekatom’s group specifically beat Saint Cyr’s legs, breaking them, and tied him up in ‘arbatacher’ manner, continuing to assault him. An element in Mr Yekatom’s group, cut off Saint Cyr’s toes, fingers, and an ear, being encouraged by Cœur de Lion’s presence at the scene and his words, and feeling that there was no choice but to do it. P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 were present when Mr Yekatom’s elements interrogated and beat Saint Cyr and cut off his toes, fingers, and an ear. After Saint Cyr’s beating and maiming, the elements of Mr Yekatom’s group took him away. Saint Cyr then died. His relatives never saw him again and his dead body was never recovered.

3167. The evidence shows that, following the men's interrogation as discussed above, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group forced them to undress, searched them again, threatened them with death, and found no weapons on any of them. When asked about the events when the group arrived at Yamwara, P-1705 said that the Anti-Balaka insisted that the group had to undress, and they had to obey.⁷⁸¹⁵ P-1705 said that, during this time, elements in Mr Yekatom's group said that they were going to kill them, they would be 'peeled like a papaya', they would be 'decapitated', their throats were going to be slit and that they would have to dig their own graves.⁷⁸¹⁶ P-0967 saw the three men bare-chested and kneeling down with their hands on their heads.⁷⁸¹⁷

3168. The evidence shows that an element in Mr Yekatom's group searched the captives again and recovered a SIM card in the trousers of one of the women.⁷⁸¹⁸ P-1839, when asked, agreed that the finding of this SIM card, which nobody had found during the previous search, showed to the 'chiefs' that this element was valuable and could be trusted.⁷⁸¹⁹ According to P-1839, Alkanto and the other elements congratulated this element.⁷⁸²⁰ P-1839 also agreed that the fact that the SIM card was found hidden in the trousers increased their suspicions about the group.⁷⁸²¹

3169. The evidence shows that, following this second search, Mr Yekatom's elements took the three women inside Cœur de Lion's house while Saint Cyr's interrogation continued outside, and from where they could hear what was happening outside.⁷⁸²² P-0967 said that the three women entered the house and were seated with their backs to the wall, next to each other,

However, P-1811 also said that, when she was outside the house, the men had not been asked to undress yet (see P-1811: T-115, p. 19, lines 17-25). In the view of the Chamber, this inconsistency with other accounts on the men being forced to undress is not material and does not otherwise affect P-1811's credibility generally.

and she thought that there was an armed soldier guarding the entrance of the house.⁷⁸²³ P-0967 recalled that, from inside the house, one could hear what people were saying outside when speaking aloud, but one could not see what was going on.⁷⁸²⁴

3170. The evidence shows that elements in Mr Yekatom's group continued to interrogate Saint Cyr, despite him showing his identification card and insisting that he was a FACA member. According to P-1705, the persons who brought them to the base accused Saint Cyr of being Djotodia's aide-de-camp in Camp de Roux, and they appeared to be confusing him with one of P-0967's sons, who drove a small vehicle from the military, picking up the wounded.⁷⁸²⁵ P-1705 said that Saint Cyr showed his identification card and insisted that he was a FACA member and when the assailants asked him to lie down on the ground, Saint Cyr refused.⁷⁸²⁶

3171. The evidence shows that elements in Mr Yekatom's group beat Saint Cyr, breaking his legs, and tied him up, continuing to assault him. P-1705 and P-1704 said that the assailants knocked Saint Cyr to the ground and used a stick to force him down on his knees.⁷⁸²⁷ At this point, the assailants beat Saint Cyr on his legs, breaking them and as he continued to resist, they tied his hands in the back together with his feet, in the 'arbatacher' manner, and continued to assault him.⁷⁸²⁸

3172. The evidence shows that Cœur de Lion, who was present at the scene and observing Saint Cyr's mistreatment, encouraged the assailants and ordered them to continue, saying, inter alia, that the victims were 'Muslims' and 'Seleka' and to 'do the job properly'. According to P-1839, Cœur de Lion encouraged the elements, including her, saying that they were 'doing great' ('C'était bien ce que tu fais') and they should 'not regret' ('il faut pas regretter, c'est normal'), that the victims were 'Muslims' and 'Seleka', that they had come to spy on them and kill them, and that 'God had delivered them' ('Dieu les a livrés').⁷⁸²⁹ P-1716 said that when Cœur de Lion arrived, people had a lot of respect for him and were reporting everything that was happening to him and that he was the one in ‘command’ of the elements who were there.⁷⁸³⁰ P-1716 stated that Cœur de Lion said to ‘his men that were beating’ Saint Cyr to ‘do the job properly’ and they continued to beat Saint Cyr.⁷⁸³¹ P-1716, when asked specifically if Cœur de Lion gave the order to cut Saint Cyr’s ears, said that it was difficult to know who gave this order.⁷⁸³²

3173. The evidence shows that an element in Mr Yekatom’s group cut off Saint Cyr’s ‘toes, the fingers, and the ear’ (les orteils, les doigts et l’oreille),⁷⁸³³ being encouraged by Cœur de Lion’s presence at the scene and his words and feeling that there was no choice but to do it. P-1839 said that this element cut off these body-parts without specific orders from anybody, and also said that if one did not do it, one would not be trusted and so this element did it to gain the trust of the leaders.⁷⁸³⁴ P-1839 clarified that some ‘people’ were encouraging them to do it (poussent à le faire) and that this element felt that there was no choice but to do it.⁷⁸³⁵

3174. The evidence shows that P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 were present during Saint Cyr’s interrogation, maiming and beating. Neither P-1705 and P-1716 could recall who cut off Saint Cyr’s ear,⁷⁸³⁶ but recalled witnessing parts of Saint Cyr’s mistreatment with their own eyes from where they were and remembered feeling helpless and being able to ‘do nothing’.⁷⁸³⁷ P-1705 recalled turning to see blood coming out of Saint Cyr’s ear and him shouting ‘my ear, my ear!’ but that he could not keep looking at what was going on as he feared being ‘assaulted’ himself.⁷⁸³⁸ P-1705 said that they were afraid that they would be killed and not certain that they would be released.⁷⁸³⁹ P-1716 recalled Cœur de Lion being present when Saint Cyr's ear was cut off.⁷⁸⁴⁰

3175. From the evidence, the exact location of Saint Cyr's mistreatment is unclear, but it appears that it took place around Cœur de Lion's house that had a wide compound and was next to a mango tree.⁷⁸⁴¹ P-1839 said that it occurred on the veranda of Cœur de Lion's house when the women were inside.⁷⁸⁴² P-0967 said that, during this time, from inside the house, she could hear cries and realised that it was Saint Cyr who was being subjected to this beating.⁷⁸⁴³ P-1705 and P-1716 seem to recall a slightly different location but still placed it close to Cœur de Lion's house: according to P-1705, it happened 'behind' Cœur de Lion's house,⁷⁸⁴⁴ while P-1716 thought that the beating and the cutting of the ear happened 'near' a house where Saint Cyr was later taken,⁷⁸⁴⁵ and that this was not on the school property.⁷⁸⁴⁶

3176. P-1839 said that after cutting off Saint Cyr's body parts, the element that did it left to go back to the checkpoint.⁷⁸⁴⁷ The Chamber found compelling how P-1839 described the impact that this incident continues to have on her to this very day. P-1839 testified that her life no longer has meaning, she feels 'traumatised' and 'afraid' and is living a 'very difficult' life.⁷⁸⁴⁸ She finds it hard to cope with the 'bad memories' of the events and is unable to make friends, and as her past is not known to the people where she lives, she prefers to be alone

so that they would not know things about her and ask her many questions.⁷⁸⁴⁹ P-1839, having left the scene, was not an eyewitness to the events that followed.

3177. The evidence shows that after his mistreatment and when the night fell, the elements of Mr Yekatom's group took Saint Cyr 'away'; he then died and his relatives never saw him again, nor was his dead body ever recovered.⁷⁸⁵⁰ P-1716 recalled Saint Cyr being in 'a very critical' state when he was taken away.⁷⁸⁵¹ P-1705 recalled that, after being tied up and beaten, Saint Cyr was thrown onto the ground in front of the window of Cœur de Lion's house.⁷⁸⁵² P-1716 also said that they realised that it would be very unlikely that he would still be able to stay alive.⁷⁸⁵³ P-1839 said that she learnt from Alkanto later that Saint Cyr was killed after she had left but that she did not see it herself.⁷⁸⁵⁴ Saint Cyr has not been seen since.⁷⁸⁵⁵

Elements in Mr Yekatom's group beat P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 and threatened them with death.

3178. The Chamber finds that, around the time that Saint Cyr was being beaten, elements in Mr Yekatom's group beat the remaining three men, P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716, and threatened them with death. P-1705 testified that he, together with P-1716 and P-1704, was taken behind the house and beaten by the Anti-Balaka.⁷⁸⁵⁶ P-1716 stated that the three men ⁷⁸⁴⁹ P-1839: T-172, p 12, line 10 – p. 13, line 16.

⁷⁸⁵⁰ The Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence Closing Brief addresses '[e]xhumation of bodies at Yamwara' with reference to P-1990's and P-2475's evidence (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, paras 477-479). See also Yekatom Defence Closing Statements: T-308, p. 58, line 10 – p. 60, line 12. The Chamber has not examined this matter as there is no allegation on the record about the purported graves being linked to the Yamwara Incident. To the extent that this may be related to P-2475's evidence, the Chamber refers to P-2475's credibility assessment (see paragraphs 506-523 above).

⁷⁸⁵¹ The Chamber notes that P-1716's and P-1705's recollection of where Saint Cyr was taken exactly is slightly different. P-1716 said that Saint Cyr was taken inside the house near to where his body-parts were cut (see P-1716: T-148, p. 27, lines 9-14; P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0070, para. 44). P-1705 said that Saint Cyr was thrown in front of the window of the house with the veranda where the female captives were being kept at this time, which corresponds to Cœur de Lion's house (see P-1705: T-211, p. 36, lines 2-8).

⁷⁸⁵² P-1705: T-211, p. 36, lines 2-18. P-1716 recalled that Saint Cyr was taken inside another house nearby to the school but not part of the school property (P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0069-70, para. 43).

were beaten with sticks and hands and it was everyone who beat them.⁷⁸⁵⁷ The men were forced to go on their knees with their hands on their heads and the Anti-Balaka hit and beat them.⁷⁸⁵⁸ P-1704 stated that he was hit everywhere, including his head and body,⁷⁸⁵⁹ and that the men were beaten repeatedly in turns and told that they were going to get killed.⁷⁸⁶⁰

Mr Yekatom was not present at the scene during the mistreatment of Saint Cyr, P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716. However, shortly after the fact, Mr Yekatom came to know about this incident, including the actions of the element that had cut off Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and an ear. Later, Mr Yekatom told P-1839 that this element had done a 'good job' insofar. Mr Yekatom did not punish this element for these acts and, on the contrary, rewarded this element with posts of responsibility within his group, including as part of his security detail. Mr Yekatom considered Saint Cyr a 'traitor' and 'in cahoots with the Seleka' and that therefore, they could not 'keep him'. When asked about Saint Cyr's treatment, Mr Yekatom said in Sango 'eforolo tonga na papai' – meaning that 'they peeled the papaya', 'they removed the skin like they would do to a papaya'.

3179. The Chamber now turns to Mr Yekatom's presence during Saint Cyr's mistreatment and the keeping of the three women in Cœur de Lion's house and veranda. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom was not present at this time and did not give any orders to mistreat Saint Cyr.⁷⁸⁶¹ The Prosecution does not allege that Mr Yekatom was present at the scene and that he himself gave the orders to mistreat Saint Cyr, or to search the women, it only alleges Mr Yekatom being physically present later when meeting the women in Cœur de Lion's house.⁷⁸⁶²

3180. The evidence shows that Mr Yekatom was not present at the scene during the mistreatment of Saint Cyr, P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716. Indeed, none of the witnesses, except P-1704, talked about Mr Yekatom's presence during this stage of events.⁷⁸⁶³

3181. P-1704 described (i) Mr Yekatom giving his element an order to cut Saint Cyr's 'ears'; and (ii) Cœur de Lion stabbing Saint Cyr at his neck with a knife.⁷⁸⁶⁴ Having assessed this portion of his testimony together with that of other witnesses, the Chamber finds that P-1704 is not reliable on this aspect of his testimony, as none of the other witnesses recall Mr Yekatom being present at this point in time.

3182. Importantly, P-1839 said that Mr Yekatom was not present when the seven persons were brought to Yamwara and interrogated in front of and around Cœur de Lion's house.⁷⁸⁶⁵ All witnesses, except P-1704, recall Mr Yekatom not being present when Saint Cyr was being interrogated, beaten, and maimed, nor when the remaining three men were being beaten.⁷⁸⁶⁶ Likewise, having regard to the same evidence, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom was not present to order elements at Yamwara to beat the four men, nor did he order his elements to cut off Saint Cyr's ear.

3183. The Chamber recalls that, at the time, P-1839, Alkanto, Bojos, and Cœur de Lion were Mr Yekatom's subordinates and reported to him.⁷⁸⁶⁷

⁷⁸⁶³ The Chamber notes that P-0967 and P-1811 testified about Mr Yekatom entering their room after Saint Cyr's cries could no longer be heard outside (see paragraphs 3217-3226 below).

P-1716 said that he met Cœur de Lion who said that he was waiting for Mr Yekatom who would arrive later (see P-1716: T-147, p. 16, line 18 – p. 17, line 24). P-0967 recalled first meeting Mr Yekatom when the three female captives were kept inside the house, and this happened after Saint Cyr's cries could no longer be heard (see paragraphs 3218-3221 below).

⁷⁸⁶⁷ P-1704: T-128, p. 15, line 10 – p. 16, line 2; P-1716: T-147, p. 16, lines 1-10, p. 17, lines 5-24. See paragraphs 3062-3078 above.

3185. The Yekatom Defence argues that neither P-1839 nor P-0954 can be relied upon to establish Mr Yekatom's knowledge.⁷⁸⁶⁹ It argues that P-1839's testimony on this point was based on her own assumptions and that the Yamwara Incident was 'never actually discussed' between them.⁷⁸⁷⁰ As regards P-0954, the Yekatom Defence argues that P-0954 did not have direct knowledge about the Yamwara Incident and gave a false narrative which is full of inaccuracies, contradictions, and misinformation.⁷⁸⁷¹

3186. As set out below, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom came to know about this incident, including the actions of the element that had cut off Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and an ear, shortly after the fact. Later, Mr Yekatom told P-1839 that this element had done a 'good job insofar'.

3188. In court, when asked about Mr Yekatom's knowledge about the Yamwara Incident, P-1839 first said that she did not know if Mr Yekatom happened to know what this element had done during the Yamwara Incident.⁷⁸⁷² P-1839 was then shown her answers to the investigators in relation to this.⁷⁸⁷³

3189. P-1839, after having read these excerpts in court and asked again if Mr Yekatom had alluded to something this element had done and what her understanding was why he did that, said that Mr Yekatom just said to this element 'good job' ('il a juste dit « bon boulot ») and that she did not know if he was referring to that ('je ne sais ce qu'il fait référence à ça'); this is why she said that what this element had done at Cœur de Lion's place was passed on to Mr Yekatom ('qu'on lui a transmis'), but other than that, she did not know.⁷⁸⁷⁴ When specifically asked what she meant with 'passed on to him' ('peut-être que ça lui a été rapporté'), P-1839 said that Mr Yekatom was 'aware', that she was surprised that he knew about it ('il était au courant et j'étais surpris qu'il était au courant'), and that Alkanto had said that the three women had been taken to 'his place' and maybe things were explained there, she did not know ('peut-être en emmenant ces trois femmes-là qu'on lui a expliqué les choses là-bas, je ne sais pas').⁷⁸⁷⁵ P-1839 confirmed that she recalled that Mr Yekatom said to this element 'good job insofar'.⁷⁸⁷⁶

3190. The evidence shows that Mr Yekatom did not punish the element who cut off Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and an ear, for these acts and, on the contrary, rewarded this element with posts of responsibility within his group, including as part of his security detail. P-1839 said that this element was not punished, 'in contrast, it was something to be congratulated for'.⁷⁸⁷⁷ As a result of this incident, this element was 'welcomed' by Mr Yekatom and trusted by the 'chiefs' and respected by other elements.⁷⁸⁷⁸ Subsequently, and after the incident with the two thieves,⁷⁸⁷⁹ this element started working as Alkanto's bodyguard and was given an AK-47,⁷⁸⁸⁰ and later was Mr Yekatom's treasurer and part of his security detail.⁷⁸⁸¹

3191. Turning to P-0954, the Prosecution submits that P-0954 confirmed that the abductees were released upon Ngremangou's orders and that P-0954 had a telephone call with Mr Yekatom after the Yamwara Incident in which Mr Yekatom 'admitted' that 'Djotodia's wife' had been freed and, in respect of Saint Cyr, 'brazenly informed him that "we have removed the skin of the papaya"'.⁷⁸⁸² The Yekatom Defence challenges the granular details in P-0954's testimony and requests that his testimony on this event should be dismissed in its entirety.⁷⁸⁸³

3192. As set out below, the Chamber has assessed P-0954's evidence concerning the Yamwara Incident holistically, in light of the parties' arguments.

3193. At the outset, the Chamber notes that P-0954 did not claim to have first-hand or accurate details about the Yamwara Incident and was forthcoming on the details that he did not know.⁷⁸⁸⁴ For example, P-0954 recalled hearing about this incident from some of his elements, including someone called Armand Motema, who reported it to him.⁷⁸⁸⁵ P-0954 did not know where exactly the killing took place,⁷⁸⁸⁶ or how.⁷⁸⁸⁷ P-0954 said that he could not remember the exact day of the incident and estimated that this person died when Djotodia was still in power and tension was at its peak in the country.⁷⁸⁸⁸ P-0954 also did not recall when the phone call with Mr Yekatom took place; when asked about specific time frames, P-0954 said that it was both before 20 December and 27 December 2013.⁷⁸⁸⁹

⁷⁸⁸⁴ What P-0954 knew about the Yamwara Incident indeed does not comport with the evidence before the Chamber, as also pointed out by the Yekatom Defence. Namely, P-0954 seemed unaware of (i) the actual identities of the persons that had been apprehended and killed; (ii) how they had been apprehended; (iii) the number of people that had been apprehended; (iv) where 'one woman' was kept prior to her release; (iv) how and when the individual was killed; and (v) when the Yamwara Incident took place (see e.g. Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, paras 469-470, nn. 1603-1613).

⁷⁸⁸⁵ P-0954 Statement, CAR-OTP-2048-0171-R03, at 0186, para. 86. The Yekatom Defence raises a number of arguments concerning those who apparently informed P-0954 about the Yamwara Incident (namely, Likoundou, Motema, Sagma, Bojos, Kando, P-1786) and how his information about them and what they relayed to him was incorrect (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Conf-Corr, paras 472-473). The Chamber accepts that P-0954 was informed by others and that this information may not have been accurate or otherwise, accurately understood or recalled by him. The Chamber notes that P-1858 also recalled an incident involving Mr Yekatom's elements where FACA General Lapo's 'son', who was 'Djotodia's wife's bodyguard', was killed behind the airport (see P-1858 Statement, CAR-OTP-2063-0050-R04, at 0065, paras 91-92). P-1858's source of information about this incident is someone called Armand Motema who was claiming to be 'Lapo's brother'. The Chamber cannot be certain about P-1858's source of information as he was not questioned further about it in court. P-1705 denied knowing a 'brother' called Armand Motema (see P-1705: T-212, p. 10, lines 9-11).

⁷⁸⁸⁷ P-0954: T-168, p. 60, lines 16-22. The Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence also points to a discrepancy in P-0954's answer contained in this excerpt, in that P-0954 had mentioned in his statement that the person killed was tied up, whereas in court he said that he was not (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, n. 1612). The Chamber notes that, in his statement, P-0954 indeed referred to Mr Yekatom's elements, inter alia, tying up the aide-de-camp (see P-0954 Statement, CAR-OTP-2048-0171-R03, at 0185-0186, para. 86). In court, asked if Mr Yekatom had admitted that he was present and 'had ordered that the aide-de-camp be tied up and killed' in their phone call together, P-0954 said that 'I didn't talk to you about being – him being tied up'. The Chamber does not consider this to be a discrepancy.

⁷⁸⁸⁸ P-0954: T-166, p. 39, line 19 – p. 40, line 3; P-0954 Statement, CAR-OTP-2048-0171-R03, at 0186, para. 86.

3194. Indeed, the Chamber cannot rely on P-0954 to establish conclusions on how the Yamwara Incident unfolded or how Saint Cyr died. However, P-0954's evidence is telling about where he placed Mr Yekatom in relation to the Yamwara Incident.

3195. As set out below, P-0954's testimony demonstrates that details of the Yamwara Incident were indeed relayed to him. His evidence contains descriptions which have an inescapable similarity with the Yamwara Incident as described above and noticeably show that he was indeed talking about the Yamwara Incident and would have received this information from those who knew about it. For example, P-0954 stated that Mr Yekatom's elements 'attacked Djotodia's wife, as she travelled in a vehicle with her aide-de-camp [when] [...] [t]hey were in Boeing on their way to a funeral', that they then brought 'Djotodia's wife' to 'Yekatom's base' and she was released later, and that the killing of the aide-de-camp happened at the time when Mr Yekatom was still based at Yamwara, before Djotodia had left power.⁷⁸⁹⁰

3196. While it is unclear which details about the incident he learnt from Mr Yekatom himself and which he was told by others, P-0954 is clear about having a direct exchange with Mr Yekatom on the death of someone he knows to be the 'aide de camp to Djotodia's wife', which the Chamber understands to be a reference to Saint Cyr.⁷⁸⁹¹

3197. When describing the phone call in court, P-0954 said that he came to know from Mr Yekatom and some other elements around him that Mr Yekatom's elements stopped the 'wife of Djotodia' and her 'aide-de-camp' who were on their way to bury someone in Boeing, which was under Mr Yekatom and Ngremangou at the time, identifying him as a 'Seleka' and subsequently 'this element was coldly killed before Yekatom' ('élément a été froidement abattu [...] devant Yekatom').⁷⁸⁹² Upon receiving this information, P-0954 checked that 'the element was indeed killed' ('l'élément a été tué') and was a 'FACA person', and said that 'Yekatom said this person was together with the Seleka' ('Yekatom a dit qu'il est en connivence avec la Séléka') and so he was 'a traitor' and 'therefore needs to never took place. In any event, as set out below, the Chamber does not rely on P-0954 when entering conclusions on how the Yamwara Incident unfolded or when this phone call took place.

be killed’ (‘donc, il faut pas le garder, [...] il faut le tuer’) and that this is why he was killed (‘le gars a été tué’).⁷⁸⁹³

3198.P-0954 said that he called Mr Yekatom and asked him what happened to ‘the child of General Lapo’ who was ‘aide-de-camp to Djotodia’s wife’, and that Mr Yekatom answered in Sango ‘eforolo tonga na papai’ – meaning that ‘they had peeled the papaya’, ‘they removed the skin like they would do to a papaya’.⁷⁸⁹⁴ P-0954 said that he told Mr Yekatom that this person was a ‘militaire’ but Mr Yekatom responded that he ‘is’ a ‘traitor’ and ‘in cahoots with the Seleka so we cannot keep him’.⁷⁸⁹⁵

3199.The Yekatom Defence disputes that this call between Mr Yekatom and P-0954 ever took place. It refers to CDR to argue that P-0954 and Mr Yekatom did not have a conversation with each other during this time where they would have had the chance to speak about the Yamwara Incident, amongst other things.⁷⁸⁹⁶ The Prosecution argues that the absence of CDR is ‘of no moment’ and it is ‘uncontestable’ that P-0954 and Mr Yekatom ‘collaborated as Anti-Balaka commanders’.⁷⁸⁹⁷ The Chamber finds that the CDR, in itself, does not conclusively demonstrate that P-0954 and Mr Yekatom were not otherwise in contact with each other in December 2013 through other means or telephone numbers.⁷⁸⁹⁸

3200.Further, the Chamber notes that P-0954 was able to explain the basis of his knowledge about Mr Yekatom’s purported role in the events and used qualified language. While in his statement, P-0954 appeared to categorically state that Mr Yekatom was present and ordered the killing in question,⁷⁸⁹⁹ in court, he explained why he thought so. P-0954 said that listening to the words used by Mr Yekatom ‘we decapitated him’ during their phone call, he understood this to mean that Mr Yekatom, as the ‘chief’ was the one who issued the order, and added that ‘if he said that he wasn’t there, I would believe him, but he actually said “we decapitated him” [...] mean[ing] that it was done in his presence’.⁷⁹⁰⁰ P-0954, asked again if Mr Yekatom was present when the person was killed, said that ‘Yekatom told me that he was a – a traitor, and therefore, he was an element that needed to be killed’ and ‘[i]f he said that to me, then he – what it meant was that he was present’ (‘c’est ce que Yekatom a dit que c’est un traître, c’est un élément à abattre. Mais s’il dit ça, donc, ça veut dire qu’il est présent, que les choses se passaient’).⁷⁹⁰¹ P-0954 agreed that Mr Yekatom confirmed to him on the phone that he was in Yamwara when the incident took place.⁷⁹⁰²

3201. Having regard to P-0954’s evidence holistically, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom considered Saint Cyr a ‘traitor’ and ‘in cahoots with the Seleka’ and that therefore, they could not ‘keep him’. When asked about Saint Cyr’s treatment, Mr Yekatom said in Sango ‘eforolo tonga na papai’ – meaning that ‘they peeled the papaya’, ‘they removed the skin like they would do to a papaya’.

3202. The Chamber notes that P-0487 was also questioned about the Yamwara Incident⁷⁹⁰³ and that the Yekatom Defence provides arguments on why his testimony does not incriminate Mr Yekatom.⁷⁹⁰⁴ Having regard to its findings concerning P-0487’s credibility,⁷⁹⁰⁵ the Chamber does not rely on him to enter any conclusions concerning the Yamwara Incident.

When elements in Mr Yekatom’s group searched the female captives at Yamwara, they removed their veils and brought them inside Cœur de Lion’s house at gunpoint. Inside Cœur de Lion’s house, the elements in Mr Yekatom’s group forced them to undress to their underwear, searched them again, threatened them with death, and kept them in this location. At this time, the female captives could hear the interrogation and mistreatment of Saint Cyr taking place outside. An element in Mr Yekatom’s group pointed a weapon in the women’s direction and asked P-1811 about her tribe. At some point, the female captives could no longer hear Saint Cyr crying outside. During their captivity inside Cœur de Lion’s house, elements from Mr Yekatom’s group were going in and out of the house and threatened them with death. Mr Yekatom met the female captives inside Cœur de Lion's house later that evening and introduced himself as 'Rombhot' and 'the chief'. Mr Yekatom interrogated the female captives about their ethnicities and family background. Mr Yekatom knew that the three women were Muslim. Mr Yekatom's presence and words at this stage were not reassuring to the female captives. The female captives had no indication about, or reason to believe, the genuineness of Mr Yekatom's composure or the purported efforts to have them released, nor the possibility that they would be released. Mr Yekatom knew that his elements had captured, mistreated, and kept them at gunpoint at Yamwara.

3203. The evidence shows that the elements in Mr Yekatom's group searched the female captives again, removing their veils, and brought them inside Cœur de Lion's house at gunpoint. P-1811 said that before entering the house, three women from the 'Anti-Balaka' were called and each one searched them and took their money.⁷⁹⁰⁶ P-0967 said that, while the women were on the veranda, some men came towards them and removed their veils.⁷⁹⁰⁷ Then, the 'Anti-Balaka women' elements brought them inside the house, while the men pointed their weapons at them.⁷⁹⁰⁸

3204. As set out below, the Chamber finds that, after the female captives were brought inside Cœur de Lion's house, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group forced them to undress to their underwear, searched them, and threatened them with death.

3205. P-1811 said that the Anti-Balaka instructed the female captives in Sango to undress but to leave their underwear on, they were forced to take their clothes off inside and remained in their underwear.⁷⁹⁰⁹ While P-0967 is less clear on whether the undressing took place inside or outside, she places this in time when Saint Cyr was being interrogated 'outside', suggesting that she was inside at the time. When asked later, P-0967 categorically said that at no point was she undressed outside the house to the point of her underwear.⁷⁹¹⁰ P-0967 said she did not know what was happening outside, but as far as they were concerned, 'three young women' elements came and stood in front of them, and they ordered them to get undressed.⁷⁹¹¹

3206. P-0967 said that she took off her pagne, skirt, and robes, Oumi too undressed and kept her undergarments, and P-1811 took off her robes but kept on her trousers, as she had her period.⁷⁹¹² P-1811 said that they were then searched, and she recalled some male elements being present in the room and not being able to escape their looks.⁷⁹¹³

3207. Both P-0967 and P-1811 recalled threatening words being used by these elements during this time. P-1811 said that ‘the women’ elements told them that they were finished and asked them to say their last prayers as they were going to kill them and throw them away.⁷⁹¹⁴ P-0967 said that the female elements insulted them saying that the ‘Seleka have arrived’ and that ‘[t]hey’ve killed my family’.⁷⁹¹⁵

3208. The Chamber notes in this regard that P-1705 and P-1716 stated that the female captives had been asked to undress before being sent into the house.⁷⁹¹⁶ The Yekatom Defence points out that this is contrary to the evidence provided by P-1811 and P-0967.⁷⁹¹⁷ Having considered the testimony of P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 on this point, the Chamber finds them unreliable in this aspect, in light of the evidence by P-0967 and P-1811. As discussed in detail above, P-1811 recalled that the undressing took place once the women were inside the house.

3209. Having regard to this, the Chamber finds that while the female captive’s belongings were indeed searched outside, elements in Mr Yekatom’s group ordered them to undress inside Cœur de Lion’s house.

3210. As regards the identity of the elements that searched them inside the house, P-1811 stated all three were ‘young women’, the only women she saw among ‘the Anti-Balaka’, they did not carry weapons, were dressed in civilian clothes, pants and t-shirt, and while P-1811 did

The Chamber also notes that P-1704 stated that the Anti-Balaka took the head dresses of the female captives at the checkpoint and does not find him reliable on this aspect of his testimony (see P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1142, para. 31).

not pay attention to their shoes, she did not see them with gris-gris or any jewellery.⁷⁹¹⁸ P-1811 did not hear anyone mention the names of these female elements.⁷⁹¹⁹

3211. P-0967 and P-1811 recalled there being a ‘mixed race’ woman among the three female elements that searched them, with P-1811 describing her as if ‘one of her parents was white’ and who had ‘light skin, hair cut very short’ and ‘bien en chaire’,⁷⁹²⁰ a description that appears to match that of the element that maimed Saint Cyr. P-0967 said that this element stood in front of P-1811 and they seemed to know each other; she asked P-1811 why, being Gbaya, she had married a Muslim who had come and murdered their parents.⁷⁹²¹

3212. Having regard to this, the Chamber notes that P-1839 did not know about the orders to the female captives to undress inside the house,⁷⁹²² and P-0967 said that she was unable to ‘officially’ identify ‘the girl’ who had stood opposite her during the search when shown a video depicting an armed female element.⁷⁹²³ While P-0967 appeared to have placed ‘a mixed-race person with light skin’ searching the female captives inside Cœur de Lion’s house,⁷⁹²⁴ she also admitted to not being in a position ‘to remember all the details’ because of the traumatic nature of her experiences.⁷⁹²⁵

3213. The Chamber now turns to P-1811’s and P-0967’s recollection that there was a ‘mixed race’ woman among those that searched them inside Cœur de Lion’s house. Likely, given this element’s role in Saint Cyr’s mistreatment and the element’s subsequent departure from the scene, the Chamber considers unlikely that this element also searched the female captives inside Cœur de Lion’s house – while Saint Cyr was being maimed outside or at any point later. Further, the Chamber considers that the element that cut off Saint Cyr’s body parts was not present when the other elements in Mr Yekatom’s group forced the female captives to undress inside Cœur de Lion’s house.

3214. The Chamber now turns to the women's captivity inside Cœur de Lion's house following their search.

3215. The evidence shows that both P-0967 and P-1811 could hear Saint Cyr being interrogated and beaten outside while they were inside Cœur de Lion's house.⁷⁹²⁶ P-0967 said that she heard crying and heard that the elements in Mr Yekatom's group were asking Saint Cyr to speak in his dialect.⁷⁹²⁷ P-1811 and P-0967 said that, from inside the house, they could hear Saint Cyr being interrogated and P-0967 shouted Saint Cyr's name.⁷⁹²⁸ P-1705 said that he could hear the three women telling the male captives to remain calm and implore God.⁷⁹²⁹

3216. As set out below, the Chamber finds that while they were inside the house, an element in Mr Yekatom's group pointed a weapon in the direction of the female captives and asked P-1811 about her tribe. At some point, the female captives could no longer hear Saint Cyr crying outside anymore.

3217. P-0967 and P-1811 recalled that an element had a weapon pointed in their direction.⁷⁹³⁰ This element asked P-1811 about her tribe, to which she said that she is 'Gbayá from Boda'; asked to speak in Gbayá, she explained what the three women were doing there, following which this person told the female captives to get dressed.⁷⁹³¹ P-0967, who did not understand Gbayá,⁷⁹³² recalled a man entering and ordering the three women to get dressed.⁷⁹³³ From P-1811's and P-0967's testimony, it is unclear who this person was.⁷⁹³⁴

P-0967 was asked about the identity of this person and said, inter alia, she was 'not sure' and did not remember specifically whether 'Rombhot' was the person who came back and told them to put their clothes back on (see P-0967: T-199, p. 46, line 12 – p. 47, line 1).

⁷⁹³⁵ P-0967: T-199, p. 42, line 10 – p. 43, line 5.

relative to the time at which they were asked to get dressed, she also testified that during the time when they were inside being searched and interrogated, she could hear Saint Cyr crying outside but at some point later, they could no longer hear him crying.⁷⁹³⁶

3219. The evidence shows that during the women's captivity inside Cœur de Lion's house, elements from Mr Yekatom's group were coming in and out of the house and threatened the female captives with death. P-0967 recalled being told that they would be cut to pieces and would die on that day and be buried, and that at the main entrance there was an element, who had a weapon that was pointed in their direction.⁷⁹³⁷ While P-0967 is unclear on when this happened relative to the other events during their stay inside Cœur de Lion's house, she agreed that she was scared and it was difficult to follow what was happening around her.⁷⁹³⁸ During her captivity in this house, P-0967 recalled an element claiming to be Bozizé's 'nephew' entering the house and threatening them,⁷⁹³⁹ and according to her, he spoke Sango with a Gbaya accent and was wearing sportswear.⁷⁹⁴⁰

3220. As set out below, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom met the female captives inside Cœur de Lion's house that night and introduced himself as 'Rombhot' and 'the chief'. Mr Yekatom interrogated the female captives about their ethnicities and family background. On the basis of this interrogation, Mr Yekatom knew that the three women were Muslim.

3221. P-0967 and P-1811 said that, afterwards, a man with a beard entered the house and introduced himself by saying 'I am Rombhot' and that he was 'the chief'.⁷⁹⁴¹ He then left and came back again and spoke to P-1811 in Gbaya.⁷⁹⁴²

⁷⁹⁴² P-0967: T-199, p. 40, line 18 – p. 41, line 19, p. 47, lines 8-12; T-200, p. 47, lines 14-24, p. 49, lines 3-8. See also P-1811 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0003-R05, at 0009, para. 38.

3222. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom was ‘calm’ in his interactions with the female captives and made ‘genuine efforts to reassure the Lapo family and secure their freedom; it also points to CDRs ‘revealing that he contacted French forces in the evening of 24 December 2013, and in the following days’ in order for them to be retrieved.⁷⁹⁴³

3223. In this respect, the Chamber has considered the timing of Mr Yekatom’s visit as well as the nature of his interactions with them.

3224. As regards the timing of Mr Yekatom’s meeting the female captives, P-0967 said that it was after the visit of the person described as ‘Bozize’s nephew’.⁷⁹⁴⁴ P-1811 said that when the night had ‘already fallen’, Mr Yekatom entered Cœur de Lion’s house where the three female captives were being kept at this time.⁷⁹⁴⁵ Both P-0967’s and P-1811’s testimony indicate that when Mr Yekatom entered the house, the female captives were dressed.⁷⁹⁴⁶

3225. As regards the nature of their interactions, the Chamber considers that P-1811 and P-0967 did not feel reassured by Mr Yekatom’s words, actions, or presence. P-1811 said that Mr Yekatom questioned the female captives one by one, asking their age, tribe, and parents’ name; she answered that she lived in Gbaya neighbourhood, to which Mr Yekatom said that he used to live in Gbaya in Cattin next to the Banga-Banga family; after P-1811 said that Banga-Banga was her big brother, Mr Yekatom told her that nothing bad would happen to them.⁷⁹⁴⁷ P-1811 recalled still feeling afraid and not reassured.⁷⁹⁴⁸ From this questioning, it also emerged that P-0967’s mother was Gbaya.⁷⁹⁴⁹ P-0967 recalled Mr Yekatom mentioning

3226. P-1811 said that Mr Yekatom was not aggressive to them in any way, but talked to them in a calm manner and even asked them why they had come there or how they had come to be there.⁷⁹⁵² P-1811 said that she did not see Mr Yekatom interact with the elements who took them from the hut to the base,⁷⁹⁵³ but came to understand the next day that Mr Yekatom was the leader of this group.⁷⁹⁵⁴ Following Mr Yekatom’s meeting with the three female captives, another person entered the house and took down their names in a notebook and also asked P-1811 whether she was Mamour’s wife.⁷⁹⁵⁵

3227. Based on this and having regard to the overall circumstances of their captivity and mistreatment endured until that point, the Chamber is convinced that Mr Yekatom’s presence and words at this stage were not reassuring to the female captives, contrary to what is argued by the Yekatom Defence. The Chamber recalls that the female captives had been captured, mistreated, stolen from, forcibly undressed and searched, threatened with death, interrogated about their ethnic background, and kept captive under gunpoint. The Chamber also has regard to the fact that, at this stage, the female captives were still in the dark about Saint Cyr’s state and that of the other men accompanying them. While they had heard Saint Cyr’s cries and interrogation outside, they did not know what had happened to him and what would be their fate and that of the other male captives.

believe, the genuineness of Mr Yekatom's composure or purported efforts to have them released, or the possibility that they would be released. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that the mistreatment of the captives did not stop following Mr Yekatom's meeting with the female captives.⁷⁹⁵⁶

3229. Additionally, without more evidence as to the contents of the purported calls between Mr Yekatom and the French forces, the Chamber cannot conclude, only based on the CDR pointed to by the Yekatom Defence, that Mr Yekatom called the French forces in an effort to secure the release of the 'Lapo family', as argued.

3230. Having regard to Mr Yekatom's interactions with the female captives on the night of 24 December 2013, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom knew that his elements had captured, mistreated, and kept them at gunpoint at Yamwara.

The same evening of these events at Yamwara, P-1654, who was Saint Cyr's father, came to meet Mr Yekatom at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom, with Bojos and Cœur de Lion, questioned P-1654 about his family for hours, including about his ethnicity, and threatened him and his family with death. They asked him why 'the Goula', in particular, Mamour's relative, had been invited to the funeral; they also asked about Saint Cyr's relation with him. Mr Yekatom did not inform P-1654, who was fearful for Saint Cyr, about the state and location of Saint Cyr or that of the other captives. After hearing the questioning from Mr Yekatom and his elements and upon P-1654's return from Yamwara to his house, the day after Saint Cyr and the others were captured, P-1654 and the rest of his family fled Boeing.

Mr Yekatom was aware of Saint Cyr's presence and mistreatment at Yamwara, at the very latest during P-1654's encounter with him on the evening of 24 December 2013. Mr Yekatom knew that his elements had mistreated Saint Cyr, and that he subsequently died. Mr Yekatom knew that, at the time of his capture, Saint Cyr was escorting the three women, with whom he had familial relations, together with the other three men, to find transport to go home, in the context of a burial of a family relative. Mr Yekatom knew that Saint Cyr had family links with the 'Goula' and that he was unarmed at the time of his capture.

3231. At the same time, related events unfolded outside of Yamwara. P-1654, Saint Cyr's father, described how in the evening of 24 December 2013, about twelve men arrived at ⁷⁹⁵⁶ See paragraphs 3251-3255 below.

Charlemagne's funeral at the Lapo N'Gomat family house and ordered him to follow them; P-1654 was searched for weapons and informed that 'Rombot' wanted to see him.⁷⁹⁵⁷

3232. As set out below, the evidence shows that, once at Yamwara, P-1654 saw P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 there. P-1654 was interrogated and threatened by Mr Yekatom, Bojos, and Cœur de Lion, who questioned P-1654 about his family for hours, including about his ethnicity, and threatened him and his family with death.⁷⁹⁵⁸ They asked him why 'the Goula', in particular Mamour's wife, had been invited to the funeral; they also asked if Saint Cyr was his son. Mr Yekatom did not inform P-1654, who was fearful for Saint Cyr, about the state and location of Saint Cyr or that of the other captives.

3233. When he arrived at Yamwara, P-1654 recognised Bojos who had been his brother's aide-de-camp before the conflict.⁷⁹⁵⁹ P-1654 had not met Mr Yekatom or Cœur de Lion, but both of them were referred to by name in his presence.⁷⁹⁶⁰ P-1654 recalled being surrounded by many armed elements, with some carrying AK-47 rifles.⁷⁹⁶¹

3234. P-1654 stated he was given a chair to sit on and the three 'boys', P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 were seated near him; he heard P-1704 whisper to him in Sango that Saint Cyr's 'ears' had been cut off and that the three women were being held at Yamwara.⁷⁹⁶²

3235. P-1654 said that Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion, and Bojos questioned him about his ethnicity and why the Goula, in particular Mamour's wife, had been invited to the funeral; they also asked if Saint Cyr was his son.⁷⁹⁶³ P-1654 stated that P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 were in the same place as he was but he could not see their physical condition as it was dark.⁷⁹⁶⁴ P-1654 stated that his questioning went on until almost 22:00; Mr Yekatom warned him not to go to the authorities or he and his family would be killed and told him to return the following morning.⁷⁹⁶⁵

⁷⁹⁵⁷ P-1654 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0112-R04, at 0116, paras 30, 34, 36. P-1654 said that this happened around 19:00. P-1704 said that P-1705 was sent to show P-1654's house, following which P-1654 came to Yamwara. This does not comport with the other evidence, particularly that of P-1654 and P-1705. The Chamber has not relied on P-1704 concerning P-1654's visit (see P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1144-45, para. 46).

3236. P-1654 recalled being traumatised: he had lost an older son already that day and he had been prevented from mourning his loss, and he was also fearful for his second son, Saint Cyr, as he had not seen him when he arrived at Yamwara, and it appeared to him that Saint Cyr was still in Mr Yekatom's custody.⁷⁹⁶⁶

3237. P-1705 said that he witnessed the encounter between P-1654 and Mr Yekatom. The Yekatom Defence argues that P-1705 took information from P-1654 that 'Mr Yekatom would have been present during an alleged encounter with P-1654 – an allegation which did not feature in P-1705's original statement'.⁷⁹⁶⁷ The Prosecution does not rely on P-1705 to establish facts surrounding P-1654's encounter with Mr Yekatom.⁷⁹⁶⁸

3238. Having assessed this portion of P-1705's testimony, together with other parts of his testimony and that of P-1654 and P-1716, the Chamber finds it unreliable. P-1705's testimony about this encounter is contrary to P-1654's own statement that he had not seen Saint Cyr when he arrived at Yamwara. P-1705 recalled that when this exchange was taking place between P-1654 and Mr Yekatom, Saint Cyr was still in the place where he had been mistreated, on the ground ('au sol') close to Cœur de Lion's house; and everyone else was in the same position seated on the ground.⁷⁹⁶⁹ P-1705 said that he was not in a position to confirm whether Saint Cyr may have been alive when Mr Yekatom arrived at the scene and he did not recall Mr Yekatom saying anything to Saint Cyr or about him to P-1654.⁷⁹⁷⁰ P-1705 was not certain whether Mr Yekatom saw Saint Cyr or whether P-1654 talked to Saint Cyr at this time.⁷⁹⁷¹

⁷⁹⁷¹ P-1705: T-211, p. 48, lines 6-12.

3239. At the same time, this portion of P-1705's testimony is contrary to him later suggesting that the first time Mr Yekatom spoke to him was only later at the M'Poko airport base.⁷⁹⁷² Similarly, P-1716 recalled seeing P-1654 but did not recall whether this happened in the evening or the morning after and he also did not recall whether there were any exchanges between P-1654 and Cœur de Lion.⁷⁹⁷³

3240. Having regard to this and the Yekatom Defence arguments, the Chamber has not relied on P-1705 to enter conclusions on P-1654's encounter with Mr Yekatom.

3242. Considering Mr Yekatom's direct interaction with P-1654,⁷⁹⁷⁴ P-0954,⁷⁹⁷⁵ and the three women captives,⁷⁹⁷⁶ as separately discussed above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom knew that, at the time of his capture, Saint Cyr was escorting the three women, with whom he had familial relations, together with the other three men, to find transport to go home, in the context of a burial of a family relative. Mr Yekatom knew that Saint Cyr had family links with 'Goula' and that he was unarmed at the time of his capture.

3244. Having regard to the evidence provided by P-1839, P-0954, and P-1654, as discussed above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom was aware of Saint Cyr's presence and mistreatment at Yamwara, at the very latest during his encounter with P-1654 on the evening of 24 December 2013. The Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom knew that his elements had mistreated Saint Cyr, and that he subsequently died.

P-1716 remained captive at Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch on the night of his capture. During this time, elements in Mr Yekatom's group threatened P-1716 with death and Cœur de Lion interrogated him. P-1716 was released the following morning after his father paid a ransom to Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom. Mr Yekatom knew of P-1716's capture and his mistreatment at the very latest by the morning of 25 December 2013.

3245. Turning to the events that followed, the Chamber notes that at some point in the evening, the captives were divided into two groups: (i) P-1716 remained at Yamwara next to Cœur de Lion; and (ii) the three women and P-1704 and P-1705 were grouped together (the 'Five Captives').

3246. Turning first to P-1716's experience, the evidence shows that P-1716 remained captive in Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch on the night of his capture. During this time, elements in Mr Yekatom's group threatened P-1716 with death and Cœur de Lion interrogated him.

3247. P-1716 recalled that Cœur de Lion told him that someone had been sent to get his father but could not find him.⁷⁹⁷⁸ At some point, P-1704 and P-1705 were brought back to join P-1716 but were kept separated.⁷⁹⁷⁹ Since his father could not come to Yamwara, P-1716 had to spend the night there next to Cœur de Lion, and whilst waiting for his father, the Anti-Balaka elements threatened P-1716 with death and showed him where they had buried some people.⁷⁹⁸⁰ During this time, Cœur de Lion interrogated P-1716, asking why he was with the group, to which P-1716 responded that he was P-1705's friend and did not know the three ladies.⁷⁹⁸¹

⁷⁹⁸¹ P-1716 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0062-R05, at 0070, paras 45-46.

3248. P-1716 was not moved to the same location as the Five Captives and remained in place next to Cœur de Lion.⁷⁹⁸² When P-1654 returned to Yamwara the next morning at around 06:30, he saw P-1716.⁷⁹⁸³ P-1654 and P-1716 spoke and the latter said that the others, including P-1704 and P-1705, were not with him.⁷⁹⁸⁴

3249. As set out below, the Chamber finds that P-1716 was released the following morning after his father paid a ransom to Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom. Mr Yekatom knew of P-1716's capture and his mistreatment at the very latest by the morning of 25 December 2013.

3250. P-1716's father arrived at Yamwara the morning after his capture and negotiated his release after paying a ransom to Cœur de Lion. P-1716 said that his father arrived at about 06:00 the next morning and met P-1716, Cœur de Lion, and Mr Yekatom, and Cœur de Lion introduced himself to the father and demanded 100,000 CFA for P-1716's release, while Mr Yekatom set the conditions for his release.⁷⁹⁸⁵ P-1716 stated that, at about 09:00 the same morning, his father returned with 80,000 CFA and handed it over to Cœur de Lion,⁷⁹⁸⁶ who said that he was going to report back to his 'chief' and then proceeded with the release.⁷⁹⁸⁷ P-1716 stated that Mr Yekatom warned him that if he spoke about what happened, his family would be thrown into disarray.⁷⁹⁸⁸ P-1716 states he left with his father that morning and, as he was released, P-1716 did not hear or see the other captives.⁷⁹⁸⁹ P-1716 learnt several days later that P-1705 and P-1704 were released.⁷⁹⁹⁰ He stated that for several days afterwards, the Anti-Balaka 'patrolled by our house intimidating us'.⁷⁹⁹¹

The Chamber notes that, in his statement, P-1716 had not mentioned Mr Yekatom setting the conditions of his release and was questioned on this. P-1716 replied that no one had asked him about it at the time (see P-1716: T-147, p. 19, line 15 – p. 20, line 8, p. 23, line 2 – p. 24, line 7).

Elements in Mr Yekatom's group brought the three women outside of Cœur de Lion's house, regrouped them with P-1704 and P-1705, and brought them to another location in Yamwara. The elements in Mr Yekatom's group continued to keep the three women, together with P-1704 and P-1705, in captivity at this location in Yamwara at gunpoint, where the female captives were threatened and told that they would be peeled 'like a papaya'. Saint Cyr was not amongst them.

3251. Turning to the remaining captives, other than P-1716, after nightfall on 24 December 2013, the evidence shows that elements in Mr Yekatom's group brought the three women outside of Cœur de Lion's house, regrouped them with P-1704 and P-1705, and brought them to another house.⁷⁹⁹² P-1839 said that she heard that the three women were taken to 'the house of Mr Yekatom Alfred Rambo'.⁷⁹⁹³ P-1811 said that after questioning her, Mr Yekatom went outside and spoke to 'the Anti-Balaka', following which, the element guarding the door asked them to get up and follow them out of Cœur de Lion's house.⁷⁹⁹⁴

3252. As set out below, the evidence shows that the elements in Mr Yekatom's group continued to keep the Five Captives in captivity at another location in Yamwara at gunpoint, where the female captives were threatened and told that they would be peeled 'like a papaya'. Saint Cyr was not amongst them.

3253. Once outside, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group brought the Five Captives a bit further to an unfinished house without any doors or windows.⁷⁹⁹⁵

3254. P-0967 described being brought to another 'house' and made to walk in a single file with P-1811, P-1704 and P-1705, which was when she realised that Saint Cyr was no longer with them and P-1704 told her that 'both ears of Saint Cyr had been cut off', while one of the elements remarked that the one she was talking about – Saint Cyr – was going to 'stay and work’ with them because he was a soldier.⁷⁹⁹⁶ According to P-1811, ‘Rombhot’ did not follow them and the ‘Anti-Balaka’ who had brought them, left.⁷⁹⁹⁷

3255. Both P-1811 and P-0967 recalled it being dark inside this ‘second house’ as it was night-time and that the floor of the house had not been laid.⁷⁹⁹⁸ There were ‘Anti-Balaka’ members, armed with at least a machete and a firearm, inside the house keeping them captive, and one of the elements threatened P-0967.⁷⁹⁹⁹ P-1811 recalled that an element grazed the wall with a machete, surprising P-0967 by raising it towards her, and called her a ‘chicken’ and that they would ‘peel you like papaya’.⁸⁰⁰⁰ P-0967 said that, sometime later, a ‘leader’ came in, whom she did not recognise, and ordered them to stand up and walk outside, he said that they would be ‘Djotodia’s messengers’ and ‘would be led to the Sangaris’.⁸⁰⁰¹

During the intervening night of 24 and 25 December 2013, the elements in Mr Yekatom’s group made P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811 and one other captive walk from Yamwara to a location close to the M’Poko airport. Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion, or Bojos did not accompany them. At this location, the elements in Mr Yekatom’s group handed over P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811 and one other captive to Sylvestre Yagouzou, who introduced himself as the ‘coordinator of the base behind the airport’ and a ‘spokesperson’ of the Anti-Balaka. Sylvestre Yagouzou then kept P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811 and one other captive at a location close to the airport until the following day under circumstances that, to P-0967 and P-1811, were frightening.

3256. As set out below, the evidence shows that Mr Yekatom’s elements then made the Five Captives walk overnight from Yamwara to a location close to the M’Poko airport. Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion, or Bojos did not accompany them.

3257. According to P-0967, this ‘leader’ escorted the Five Captives as they walked from Yamwara during the night with the ‘soldiers’ forming columns, they walked slowly and she did not know how long they walked, as it was an area she was unfamiliar with.⁸⁰⁰² P-0967 said that, along the way, they were told to stop and arrived at a place full of elements where there was a house, and they were told to stay near the house, then someone came over and asked her to stay calm and that they were going to take them to the Sangaris.⁸⁰⁰³ P-0967 said that after this, they stopped three times on the way; the elements escorting them would gather together and then come back telling the Five Captives to keep walking.⁸⁰⁰⁴

3258. P-1704 said that Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Bojos did not accompany them and there was nobody he knew in this ‘Anti-Balaka’ group accompanying them.⁸⁰⁰⁵

3259. P-1811 said that she did not know which route they took and, while walking, the people escorting them lit the way with telephones.⁸⁰⁰⁶ Their ‘group’ sometimes fell in holes and was picked up again and were shaking as they had not eaten that day.⁸⁰⁰⁷

3260. As set out below, the evidence shows that elements in Mr Yekatom’s group brought the Five Captives to another person, ‘Sylvestre’, who introduced himself as the ‘coordinator of the base behind the airport’ and a ‘spokesperson’ of the Anti-Balaka, and the elements who had been escorting them walked back.⁸⁰⁰⁸

3261. P-1811 described ‘Sylvestre’ as someone not very big, speaking Sango, wearing jeans and a jacket, and a hat.⁸⁰⁰⁹ P-0967 and P-1705 recognised him in audio-visual material.⁸⁰¹⁰ The Chamber understands ‘Sylvestre’ to be a reference to Sylvestre Yagouzou.

⁸⁰⁰⁹ P-1811 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0003-R05, at 0010, para. 41.

⁸⁰¹⁰ P-1705 recognised the ‘coordinator’ in Video, CAR-OTP-2012-0523, at 00:36:00-00:37:20, as the one who was wearing a white cap with three stripes, yellow, red and black (see P-1705: T-211, p. 52, line 12 – p. 53, line 10). P-1339 recognised him in the same video as the man in the red sweatshirt at 36:13 (see P-1339 Statement, CAR-OTP-2041-0741, at 0757, para. 111). P-0967, shown Video, CAR-OTP-2050-0648, at 00:49:57, recognised Sylvestre Yagouzou as the ‘bald one’ (see P-0967: T-200, p. 8, line 19 – p. 9, line 14).

3262.P-0967 said that ‘Sylvestre’ said to the captives that if they were lucky, they would be released and handed to the Sangaris but if they were unlucky, there was no telling what might happen to them.⁸⁰¹¹

3263.As set out below, the evidence shows that Sylvestre Yagouzou then kept the Five Captives at a location close to the airport until the following day under circumstances that, to P-0967 and P-1811, were frightening.⁸⁰¹²

3264.P-0967 said that ‘Sylvestre’ was giving instructions to the soldiers and there were a lot of ‘Anti-Balaka’ around them; he ordered them to bring a mat for P-0967 to sit on and some food.⁸⁰¹³ P-1811 recalled feeling that some of the ‘Anti-Balaka’ wanted to harm them by how they were treating them and found their behaviour violent, and even though they were not explicitly threatening them, she was frightened to look at them.⁸⁰¹⁴

3265.Following this, as per P-1811, the ‘spokesperson’ took them to another house and set them up there.⁸⁰¹⁵ P-1811 said that the ‘Anti-Balaka’ took the mat and put it in a small house, telling them to sleep there.⁸⁰¹⁶ P-0967 said that they were kept inside this house for the night and the door was closed, an armchair was placed outside the door and someone was sitting on it to protect them.⁸⁰¹⁷ P-1811 and P-0967 recalled feeling fearful and not being able to sleep.⁸⁰¹⁸

3267. P-1811 recalled being told that there were people around that wanted to hurt them and so the elements brought the Five Captives on foot to a deacon who was not far away.⁸⁰²⁰ P-1811 recalled being guarded by a FACA member, who she did not know before and whose name she did not recall, and that this person would follow them everywhere, even to the shower, because otherwise the others might hurt them.⁸⁰²¹ It is unclear whether it refers to any particular time but during their stay behind the airport, P-1811 recalled that the ‘spokesperson’ told them to stay where they were; there were ‘Anti-Balaka’ members who must have had a family link with Bozizé and was after P-1811 (‘qui [...] m’en voulait’) and wanted them to be killed (‘Lui voulait qu’on soit tués’); while the others said that they could not hurt them.⁸⁰²²

On the morning of 25 December 2013, Mr Yekatom met P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811 and one other captive at this location and introduced himself. Mr Yekatom was aware that Sylvestre Yagouzou kept them in the location close to the M’Poko airport surrounded by Anti-Balaka elements. On or about 27 December 2013, P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811 and one other captive were released and handed over to Sangaris.

3268. The evidence shows that the same morning, on 25 December 2013, Mr Yekatom met the Five Captives at this location close to the airport and introduced himself.⁸⁰²³ P-1811 specifically stated that ‘Rombhot’ said that he was the person who had questioned them the day before.⁸⁰²⁴ P-1705 testified that ‘Rambo’ told them that he would release them in the presence of an ‘international opinion’.⁸⁰²⁵

3269. On the basis of this interaction between Mr Yekatom and the Five Captives, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom was aware that Sylvestre Yagouzou kept them in the location close to the M’Poko airport surrounded by Anti-Balaka elements.

3270. The evidence shows that the Five Captives stayed with the deacon until their release and the ‘Anti-Balaka’ guarded the house.⁸⁰²⁶ P-1704 said that P-0967 introduced herself to ‘Sylvestre’ as being a municipal counsellor in the mayor’s office of the 7th arrondissement, whose number she then gave to ‘Sylvestre’ so that he could call him.⁸⁰²⁷ P-1811 stated that ‘the spokesperson’ called the mayor of the 7th arrondissement, who was in a meeting with other mayors, including Samba-Panza, the then mayor of Bangui, and who confirmed that P-0967 worked with him; Samba-Panza also called ‘the spokesperson’ and P-0967 and said that she would send someone for her.⁸⁰²⁸ P-0967 believed that they were released and handed over to the Sangaris in the end following Samba-Panza’s intervention as well as that of the governor at the palace.⁸⁰²⁹

3271. Catherine Samba-Panza confirmed having had contact with Sylvestre Yagouzou,⁸⁰³⁰ and making a public announcement regarding the captives.⁸⁰³¹ She said that Sylvestre Yagouzou insisted on her to say that they had apprehended ‘Muslims’ and they had freed them and that this was an act of humanity and patriotism and the Anti-Balaka should not be treated as anti-Muslim.⁸⁰³²

3272. The evidence shows that the Five Captives were released and handed over to Sangaris on or about 27 December 2013.⁸⁰³³ A Sangaris helicopter arrived together with armoured cars.⁸⁰³⁴ P-1704 recalled that Sylvestre Yagouzou was present, but Rhombot, Bojos, and Cœur de Lion were not there at that time.⁸⁰³⁵ P-1811 said that Sylvestre Yagouzou brought them to the Sangaris and then were put in one of the vehicles and brought to Mpoko base.⁸⁰³⁶ The Five Captives were then taken to an infirmary and examined.⁸⁰³⁷ P-1704 stated that he and P-1705 had small wounds on their heads and backs.⁸⁰³⁸ The Five Captives were then escorted in a vehicle to the French Embassy together with the Ambassador and his attaché and then brought to General Mamour's house.⁸⁰³⁹

Mr Yekatom approved of his elements capturing, interrogating, keeping captive, and mistreating the seven captives. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements beating, interrogating, maiming, and killing Saint Cyr. As regards the remaining six captives, Mr Yekatom approved of his elements capturing, interrogating, threatening with death, forcing them to undress, keeping them captive at gunpoint, and keeping them within hearing distance of Saint Cyr's mistreatment at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements beating P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 at various stages of their captivity. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements keeping P-1716 overnight at Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements transferring P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811 and one other captive to another Anti-Balaka base close to the airport and handing them over to Sylvestre Yagouzou.

3273. As regards Mr Yekatom's actions overall concerning the Yamwara Incident, the Chamber notes that there is no evidence brought before it showing, or otherwise suggesting, that Mr Yekatom disciplined or otherwise sanctioned military or civilian elements in his group,

The Chamber notes that P-1705's evidence concerning the date of their release appears to be at odds with what other witnesses remembered. P-1705 first said that they stayed in detention until 31 December and were released the next day, however, later said that they spent Christmas in detention and were released before the new year (see P-1705: T-211, p. 50, lines 14-18; T-212, p. 47, lines 5-25). P-1704 recalled that they spent 25-27 December at the base behind the airport and P-1654 recalled that they were released 3-4 days after they were stopped i.e. around 27-28 December 2013 (P-1654 Statement, CAR-OTP-2053-0112-R04, at 0118, para. 46). including Cœur de Lion, Alkanto, Bojos, or others, for their involvement in the Yamwara Incident. The Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom approved of the actions of the element that cut off Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and an ear, and awarded this element with posts of responsibility.⁸⁰⁴⁰ Notably, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto continued to form part of Mr Yekatom's group's advance to Mbaïki in the month that followed.⁸⁰⁴¹

3274. At various stages, as discussed in detail above, Mr Yekatom himself interacted with P-1716, P-1705, P-0967, and P-1811. Mr Yekatom was in a position to directly observe the victims and the circumstances of their captivity and mistreatment, as well as the involvement of his elements. There is no evidence before the Chamber showing, or otherwise suggesting, that Mr Yekatom instructed his elements to exercise their duty of care or obligations under international humanitarian law towards any of the seven captives.

3275. Having regard to this, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom approved of his elements capturing, interrogating, keeping captive, and mistreating the seven captives. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements beating, interrogating, maiming, and killing Saint Cyr. As regards the remaining six captives, Mr Yekatom approved of his elements capturing, interrogating, threatening with death, forcing them to undress, keeping them captive at gunpoint, and keeping them within hearing distance of Saint Cyr's mistreatment at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements beating P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 at various stages of their captivity. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements keeping P-1716 overnight at Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements transferring the Five Captives to another Anti-Balaka base close to the airport and handing them over to Sylvestre Yagouzou.

Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with Wenezoui and Sylvestre Yagouzou and the Anti-Balaka based behind the M'Poko airport in the transfer and captivity of P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811 and one other captive.

3276. As set out below, the evidence shows that the Five Captives were released and that Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with Wenezoui and Sylvestre Yagouzou and the Anti-Balaka based behind the M'Poko airport in the transfer and captivity of the Five Captives.

3277. The evidence shows that Ngremangou had some involvement in the release of P-1704, P-1705, P-0967 and P-1811 from Yamwara. P-0954 said that Captain Ngremangou and his elements were based in Boeing behind the airport,⁸⁰⁴² and that it was on his orders that 'Djotodia's wife' was released,⁸⁰⁴³ although the source of his knowledge is unclear, or otherwise unknown.

3278. As per P-0884, he was directly involved in facilitating the release of what he called 'hostages', together with Ngremangou, and described it in quite some detail. P-0884's understanding of what unfolded at Yamwara is limited to what he was told by others. However, P-0884's account of the captives being held at Sylvestre Yagouzou's base in a house and their subsequent release contains some specific details.

3279. P-0884 said that at one point, 'the wife of General Mamour, General Djotodia' and 'children' who were 'all Muslims' came across some of Mr Yekatom's elements who stopped them.⁸⁰⁴⁴ P-0884 and Ngremangou were informed and decided to free the people who had been taken hostage as the situation could 'degenerate' and it would have been 'serious' if 'the men' had killed them.⁸⁰⁴⁵ According to P-0884, Ngremangou and his elements left to meet Mr Yekatom, and after discussions they were able to get the hostages and 'they took them to Boy'.⁸⁰⁴⁶ As there was a great deal of tension because these people were 'Muslims', P-0884 put them in a house and stood guard for two days to make sure that no one could come and assault them.⁸⁰⁴⁷ P-0884 was told by 'the wife' that Mr Yekatom's elements had killed 'two' of her 'siblings', but was unable to confirm this himself.⁸⁰⁴⁸ P-0884 told a Sangaris official that 'there were relatives of the president', and asked that they be brought to a safe place, since in P-0884's view, if they had stayed there they would have been killed.⁸⁰⁴⁹ Eventually, Catherine Samba-Panza, the mayor of Bangui at the time, decided to get the hostages.⁸⁰⁵⁰ According to P-0884, '[t]hey came to the base to get those seven people', and Catherine Samba-Panza made a statement on the radio saying that 'she had been at the Anti-Balaka base' and 'confirmed that two of the people who had remained behind had been killed by Mr Yekatom's elements'.⁸⁰⁵¹

3280. The Yekatom Defence argues that P-0884's testimony is not credible on these events and points to the inaccuracies in P-0884's account concerning: (i) the composition of the group of captives; (ii) how the events unfolded, particularly the circumstances under which the group would have been stopped, which are inconsistent with his prior statement; (iii) Catherine Samba-Panza going to the base to retrieve the 'seven people' for their release.⁸⁰⁵²

3281. At the outset, the Chamber notes that there are indeed several inaccuracies in what P-0884 recalls. P-0884 himself admitted not remembering all the details given that it was already 'nine years ago that these events took place'.⁸⁰⁵³ This is clear from the remainder of his testimony about this event. For example, P-0884 did not recall the exact date on which this occurred and placed it 'before 1 January [...] in December'.⁸⁰⁵⁴

3282. As regards the composition of the group, P-0884 clearly mistook the exact number and ages of the captives. P-0884 seemed to think that there were nine hostages, two of whom were killed and seven were released.⁸⁰⁵⁵ P-0884 received the information about the death of 'two' persons from one of the female hostages.⁸⁰⁵⁶ P-0884, asked about the approximate age of the women and the 'children' in the hostage group, said that he did not know the ages of the women and the children were '10 years and older, young people, and children who were adolescents but of school age’.⁸⁰⁵⁷ P-0884’s assessment of the age of the ‘children’ is not accurate.⁸⁰⁵⁸

3283. During his testimony, P-0884 was also confronted with certain portions of his testimony that do not comport with Samba-Panza’s radio announcement, namely: (i) whether there were seven people that had been released;⁸⁰⁵⁹ (ii) whether Catherine Samba-Panza had visited the Anti-Balaka base;⁸⁰⁶⁰ and (iii) whether she said that two people had been killed.⁸⁰⁶¹

3284. P-0884 said that he did not know how Ngremangou’s people managed to get the hostages handed over and what they said, but when asked to clarify who gave the instruction for the release of the hostages, he said that Mr Yekatom was ‘the one who released the hostages’ and ‘[w]hen his military colleagues arrived they discussed things, and after that he released them to the military’ who brought them to ‘us’ following which, ‘we led them to the government’.⁸⁰⁶²

3285. P-0884 was asked how he knew that Mr Yekatom’s elements were involved in taking the hostages to begin with and said the hostages told them that ‘Rambo’s elements’ came and took them to Yamwara, which was Mr Yekatom’s base.⁸⁰⁶³ P-0884 was confronted with his prior statement concerning the circumstances in which the hostages had been apprehended,

⁸⁰⁵⁸ P-1705 and P-1704 were 15 and 26 years at the time, born in 1997 and 1987, respectively (see P-1705: T-211, p. 7, lines 17-18; P-1704 Statement, CAR-OTP-2054-1136-R05, at 1138, para. 11).

⁸⁰⁶⁰ P-0884, when played another portion of Catherine Samba-Panza’s radio announcement, Audio, CAR-OTP-2042-1457, at 00:02:59-00:04:00 (Transcript, CAR-D29-0006-0092, at 0093, line 19 – at 0094, line 3), said that Catherine Samba-Panza’s statement was correct, that she went to get them, but it was the Sangaris that handed them over (see P-0884: T-057, p. 88, line 6 – p. 90, line 3).

but P-0884 maintained that it was Mr Yekatom and his elements who took these people hostage and if he and Ngremangou had not intervened, they would have been killed.⁸⁰⁶⁴

3286. P-0884, asked in relation to his prior statement which suggests that ‘we’ went to get the hostages, said that ‘a delegation of the Anti-Balaka’ went to Yamwara and ‘[p]eople went from our base to go and collect these people’.⁸⁰⁶⁵ From P-0884’s testimony, it emerged that he himself did not get the ‘hostages’. When it was put to P-0884 that he never went to Mr Yekatom’s base to get the hostages, never guarded them and never spoke to them, P-0884 said that this was false and that he protected the hostages, that he ‘often’ went to ‘Rambo’s base’ and knew him well, but that they decided to send ‘other people’ to collect the hostages.⁸⁰⁶⁶

3287. Asked how he knew that the hostages were related to Mamour, and who Mamour is, P-0884 said that after they brought the hostages back, one of the captives told him that ‘Rambo’s elements had detained them and taken them to their camp’, and Mamour and the brother of Djotodia contacted him, thanking him for what the witness had done to free his wife.⁸⁰⁶⁷

3288. P-0884, asked where the captives were kept during the two days that he was guarding them, said that it was just behind the airport, at the ‘Yagouzou base’, an empty house of people who had fled following the firing and which they took as place where they could protect these people.⁸⁰⁶⁸ P-0884 did not remember at which time they arrived at the base.⁸⁰⁶⁹

3289. The Chamber has considered P-0884’s evidence in light of the Yekatom Defence’s arguments with a view to assessing Mr Yekatom’s group’s coordination with other ‘Anti-Balaka’ groups, not with a view to assessing Mr Yekatom’s responsibility regarding the Yamwara Incident, which is a related but separate matter.

3290. In the Chamber’s view, the Yekatom Defence’s arguments that P-0884’s testimony on these events is not credible does not have merit. Indeed, P-0884 cannot be relied upon for the purpose of evaluating the commission of crimes underlying the Yamwara Incident as he was not an eyewitness, and his account contains discrepancies that cannot be reconciled with what the Chamber knows from first-hand accounts of the incident. P-0884 was also clear that he received parts of the information from the captives and that he himself did not visit Mr Yekatom's base to retrieve the hostages. Nonetheless, when P-0884's testimony is considered keeping in mind the source of his knowledge, it is quite telling when it comes to Mr Yekatom's role in the release of the captives. It appears that, in P-0884's mind, there was no question that Mr Yekatom had the authority to release hostages kept at Yamwara and would hand them over to the people sent by Ngremangou.

3291. In any event, in concluding on Mr Yekatom's role in the Yamwara Incident, the Chamber has relied on his direct interactions with, and actions described by, the Five Witnesses, P-1839, P-1654 and P-0954.

3292. There is evidence showing that Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with Sebastien Wenezoui's group that was based behind the airport. P-1858 stated that Boeing, where Yamwara is situated, was under Wenezoui's control and his base was behind the airport and had a lot of elements there.⁸⁰⁷⁰ P-1786 considered that Mr Yekatom's group would only coordinate with those who were based 'behind the airport' and 'did not work with anyone else', they would coordinate with 'Wenezoui', including on attacks, and 'act together'.⁸⁰⁷¹ P-1858 stated that the person in the national coordination who was in charge of operations ('chargé des opérations') – initially Maxime Mokom with Sylvestre Yagoussou as his deputy – was in contact with the ComZones, supervising them.⁸⁰⁷²

3293. The Chamber now turns to the Yekatom Defence arguments that there was silence around the Yamwara Incident that resulted in unreliable testimony, and that witnesses who claimed to know about it, like P-0954 and P-0884, often contradicted themselves.⁸⁰⁷³ It is unclear from the Yekatom Defence's arguments concerning the purported silence on whether it asserts that Mr Yekatom was unaware of Saint Cyr's death. It references the evidence provided by P-1839, P-0487, Jacob Mokpem-Bionli, P-0876, P-0884, P-0954, and Catherine Samba-Panza.⁸⁰⁷⁴

3294. The Chamber recalls the evidence on this issue. P-1839's evidence has shown that she did infer that Mr Yekatom knew about the element that cut off Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and an ear, and what this element did at Cœur de Lion's house, and approved of it, later assigning this element to posts of trust and higher responsibility within his group.⁸⁰⁷⁵ P-0954 himself had a phone call with Mr Yekatom about it, as has been discussed above.⁸⁰⁷⁶ P-0876 said that he was not yet at Yamwara when the Yamwara Incident took place and learnt about it on the radio 'like everyone else', that he contacted Mr Yekatom by SMS and was informed that they had indeed taken Mamour's wife,⁸⁰⁷⁷ but that since Mr Yekatom was a 'man of few words', he did not say anything else on this particular event.⁸⁰⁷⁸ P-0884⁸⁰⁷⁹ said that he did not talk to Mr Yekatom about this, while Jacob Mokpem-Bionli had not heard of any event involving the members of Mamour family.⁸⁰⁸⁰ The radio announcement of Catherine Samba-Panza did not mention Saint Cyr's death specifically, and neither did her testimony about this event.⁸⁰⁸¹

3295. From a holistic reading of this evidence and its findings above, no conclusions can be drawn as to Mr Yekatom's purported reticence to talk about Saint Cyr's death with the concerned witnesses or of the information received by them, or lack thereof, about the Yamwara Incident as a whole.

3296. The Chamber notes that the Yamwara Incident impacted several individuals. The Chamber has assessed them in detail below.⁸⁰⁸²

E. The Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki Axis

1. The departure of Mr Yekatom's group from Yamwara and its advance on the axis

Starting on 10 January 2014, Mr Yekatom and elements under his control left Yamwara and advanced from Bangui on the road towards Mbaïki, taking over a number of villages in the Lobaye prefecture, located in the south-west part of the country, including Sekia, Ndagala, Bimon, Kapou, Bossongo and Pissa. They did not meet with resistance as they passed from PK9 to Sekia and Pissa, since the Seleka had fled these areas after learning that the Anti-Balaka were approaching.

At the time of the group's presence on the Mbaïki road, Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto instructed the elements to kill all the Muslims in their area.

3297. Following Michel Djotodia's resignation on 10 January 2014,⁸⁰⁸³ Mr Yekatom and elements under his control left Yamwara and headed towards the Mbaïki road.⁸⁰⁸⁴

3298. P-1839 testified that she participated in a meeting at Yamwara with at least ten other Anti-Balaka elements, including Mr Yekatom, Kamezolaï, Cœur de Lion, 'Habib' and the chief of her section Alkanto, in which they agreed to leave the school.⁸⁰⁸⁵ As confirmed by both P-1839 and Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, Kamezolaï proposed their departure because there were problems in providing food to the elements.⁸⁰⁸⁶

3299. P-1839 testified that one morning, the elements at Yamwara were summoned by their respective chiefs of section.⁸⁰⁸⁷ They were told to assemble in rows, they lined up and were counted, and the 'leaders' – including Mr Yekatom, Kamezolaï and Cœur de Lion –, informed them that they would be leaving the school for the Mbaïki road.⁸⁰⁸⁸ The elements and the chiefs, including Mr Yekatom, left the base the same morning of the gathering and walked away from the school heading to the Mbaïki road.⁸⁰⁸⁹

3300. P-1839 indicated that at the time of the group's presence on the Mbaïki road, 'the chiefs', referring to Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto, instructed the elements to kill all the Muslims in their area.⁸⁰⁹⁰ She explained, when asked, that there was no difference between armed and unarmed Muslims because 'the unarmed Muslims also had weapons that they hid in their homes' so 'they all were thought to be the same'.⁸⁰⁹¹ P-1839 also confirmed her previous statement according to which all the Anti-Balaka had in their minds that all the Muslims, whether armed or unarmed, were the same.⁸⁰⁹² She explained that she said this because 'after the clashes of the 5th, the Seleka were mixed with the civilians in order to fight' and the 'chiefs' put this to them so that they had in their minds that 'everyone who is a Muslim, Christian or Seleka [...] have weapons are the same'.⁸⁰⁹³

3301. Further, P-1839 indicated, when asked how the Anti-Balaka members and the chiefs talked about Muslims, that 'the Muslims were enemy number one' and that everywhere they went, 'there were no Muslims'.⁸⁰⁹⁴ She explained that the reason for this was 'an eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth', in the sense that when the Seleka entered the CAR, some Christians 'had to pay the price', 'so it was the same thing the other way around'.⁸⁰⁹⁵ When later asked about her statement that the Muslims of Bimon fled because otherwise they would have been killed and how she could know this, P-1839 reiterated that 'it was an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth, so anybody who was Muslim would be killed'.⁸⁰⁹⁶

3302. The Chamber notes that P-1839 also indicated, when asked whether she recalled any specific instance in which Mr Yekatom gave instructions that Muslims had to be killed, that she was told about it but she did not see it with her own eyes.⁸⁰⁹⁷ She indicated that most of the people who were killed in front of her were ‘civilians, Christians, not Muslims’.⁸⁰⁹⁸ P-1839 then confirmed her previous indication that Anti-Balaka chiefs gave instructions to kill Muslims.⁸⁰⁹⁹

3303. At the same time, P-1839 confirmed that she had never heard any instructions from Mr Yekatom or Habib Beina to attack unarmed Muslim civilians.⁸¹⁰⁰ P-1839 also confirmed her previous statements according to which when she was based at Yamwara, ‘[t]he order he gave us was, if the enemy attacks, we defend ourselves’ and her understanding that ‘[t]he enemy are the Seleka’.⁸¹⁰¹

3304. The Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence refers to P-1839’s allegations that she never heard Mr Yekatom issuing orders to attack unarmed Muslim civilians and that the order was to defend themselves if the enemy, the Seleka, attacked, to dispute the evidence that Mr Yekatom issued orders to kill Muslims.⁸¹⁰² In the Chamber’s view, however, these two specific allegations have to be considered together with the rest of P-1839’s testimony and, in particular, with the evidence outlined above. Having done so, it is clear to the Chamber that P-1839 unambiguously testified that Mr Yekatom and other leaders of the group under his command instructed his elements to kill all the Muslims on the Mbaïki road, without making any distinction between armed and unarmed Muslims since it was considered, by the group in general and the ‘chiefs’ in particular, that all Muslims could have weapons hidden at their homes and that they were therefore all the same. Others explained that the

Anti-Balaka sought revenge following the Seleka violence, and suspected that Muslim civilians hid weapons in their homes.⁸¹⁰³

3305. Regarding alleged instructions to kill Muslim children, the Chamber notes that while P-1839 initially testified that the instruction to kill all the Muslims in their area extended to children, she later clarified that ‘killing Muslims’ meant killing both men and women, but not children, and confirmed that this was how the leaders expressed it.⁸¹⁰⁴

3306. The Chamber notes that video footage shows Mr Yekatom saying that he created the Anti-Balaka movement ‘to chase out these mercenaries [the Seleka] who came to destroy [their] country’.⁸¹⁰⁵ P-1839 confirmed her previous statements according to which after reaching the main road, they wanted to ‘free up the Bimbo road so that at least people who wanted to go and see their families could go and cross over’.⁸¹⁰⁶ She also confirmed that the overarching objective was ‘to free up the country’.⁸¹⁰⁷ P-1786 stated that ‘R[ombhot]’ gave the order to go to Mbaiki to chase away the Seleka.⁸¹⁰⁸ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili stated that Mr Yekatom’s instructions for the ‘troops’ were that they were going to ‘fight the enemy and not the civilians’.⁸¹⁰⁹ Vivien Beina testified that at a certain point in time, Mr Yekatom

made clear that Muslims could continue their activities on the PK9-Mbaiki axis without any problems.⁸¹¹⁰

3307. The Chamber notes that from its above conclusions, it follows that chasing out the Seleka from the PK9-Mbaiki axis and freeing up the road necessarily implied chasing out the Muslims as well, as the Anti-Balaka considered them to be the same. The Chamber further notes that the allegations in the preceding paragraph contrast with abundant evidence indicating that the freedom of movement of Muslims on the PK9-Mbaiki was limited at the time. The Chamber will discuss this evidence further below.⁸¹¹¹

3308. The Chamber notes that not all of the elements based at Yamwara followed Mr Yekatom's group in their advance towards Mbaiki. According to Thierry Kpademona, some of the elements 'defected from the Anti-Balaka and left the school on the same day', returning to 'their normal lives' in the neighborhood.⁸¹¹² Moreover, P-1339 explained that one Anti-Balaka group remained in Boeing, under the command of lieutenant Donoh.⁸¹¹³

3309. The Chamber heard the account of several insider witnesses who took part in the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaiki axis. The Chamber notes that the itineraries as described slightly differ from one account to the other, particularly as regards the exact order of the locations the group passed through. The Chamber considers variations in such descriptions normal, bearing in mind also the passage of time, and finds that their accounts in combination with other evidence, assessed below, provide sufficient basis to reach a conclusion on the approximate itinerary followed by Mr Yekatom's group in its advance towards Mbaiki.

3310. The evidence shows that after leaving Yamwara, Mr Yekatom's elements passed through PK9 and crossed the PK9 bridge. Notably, P-0954 stated that the day after Djotodia stepped down, Mr Yekatom moved to PK9.⁸¹¹⁴ He also indicated that Mr Yekatom occupied the ‘Pissmiss house’ at PK9 after 10 January 2014.⁸¹¹⁵ Likewise, P-1858, who was a member of P-0954’s group, indicated that Mr Yekatom and his elements started out at PK9.⁸¹¹⁶ P-1786 stated that before going to Mbaïki ‘to chase away the Seleka’ following Mr Yekatom’s order, the group went to PK9 and Pissa and drove the Seleka out of PK9.⁸¹¹⁷

3311. Further, the Chamber notes that Gérard Ouambou, who was filming at PK9 on the day of Djotodia’s resignation and on the following days, explained that the video footage he recorded shows ‘R[ombhot]’ and ‘his elements’ crossing the PK9 bridge the day after Djotodia’s resignation.⁸¹¹⁸ Another video footage recorded at PK9 shows Seleka and elements of Mr Yekatom’s group, including Mr Yekatom himself, positioned at the bridge.⁸¹¹⁹

3312. The Chamber notes that the evidence suggests that Mr Yekatom had already deployed some elements from Yamwara to PK9 before starting their advance along the axis towards Mbaïki therefrom on 10 January 2014. In particular, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili stated that around 4, 5 or 6 January 2014, they (‘we’) left ‘the school’ and ‘attacked’ PK9, Sekia and Ndangala, without finding any resistance from the Seleka from Sekia all the way to PK9.⁸¹²⁰ Moreover, in video footages Rodrigue Momokama and Mr Yekatom himself seem to indicate that there were elements at PK9 when Mr Yekatom’s group was still based in Yamwara.⁸¹²¹

The Chamber notes that the video footage shows Rodrigue Momokama telling a journalist that they had to deploy almost 100 elements to PK9, towards the other road leading to Mbaïki, and that they were waiting for Djotodia as he had said on RFI that he wanted or was ready to negotiate with the Anti-Balaka, despite them (‘on’) not having a need to negotiate with him. In the Chamber’s view, this is a clear indication that the video footage was recorded prior to Djotodia’s resignation (and thus, prior to the departure from Yamwara described in paragraph 3297 above). See also P-1786: T-197, p. 81, line 2 – p. 83, line 16 (indicating that the abovementioned video seemed to have been recorded at Yamwara and confirmed that some elements were deployed to PK9, but not himself). See further Video, CAR-OTP-2065-3889; Transcript, CAR-OTP-2127-3761; Translation, CAR-OTP-2127-3680, at 3682. 3313. Further, the Chamber notes that Gérard Ouambou explained that the video footage he recorded shows Anti-Balaka on the other side of the PK9 bridge on 10 January 2014,⁸¹²² that is, at a time when Mr Yekatom's elements were about to leave Yamwara.⁸¹²³ This supports the evidence above which indicates that some of Mr Yekatom's elements were deployed to PK9 already before the majority of the group left the base at Yamwara and embarked on its advance from Bangui down the axis towards Mbaïki.

3314. The evidence indicates that Seleka elements were present at PK9 by that time. Notably, Vivien Beina testified that a Seleka group was based at PK9 before Djotodia's resignation.⁸¹²⁴ P-1839 confirmed that the Seleka were at PK9 'before the clashes at the PK bridge with the Seleka'.⁸¹²⁵

3315. The fact that both groups faced each other at PK9, each one on one side of the bridge, is illustrated by a video showing first a Seleka element claiming that they had 'replied' after the Anti-Balaka opened fire, and thereafter Mr Yekatom indicating that they had not attacked the Seleka and that the Seleka were the ones who started firing.⁸¹²⁶

3316. In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-0954 stated that there had not been any fighting between the Seleka and the Anti-Balaka at PK9 because of the Sangaris: the Sangaris 'locked down the area', and 'there wasn't an Anti-Balaka-Seleka clash up until the point when the Seleka left that particular location'.⁸¹²⁷ The Chamber notes that the presence of the Sangaris in PK9 at least by 11 or 12 January 2014 is also mentioned by Gérard Ouambou.⁸¹²⁸

3317.P-1786 confirmed, when asked, that Mr Yekatom's group attacked the Seleka at the PK9 bridge once, after Djotodia's resignation.⁸¹²⁹ However, he also indicated, when asked for further details, that he was at Yamwara during that attack and therefore 'not in a position to know what happened there'.⁸¹³⁰

3318. Similarly, P-1839 confirmed that there were clashes at the PK9 bridge with the Seleka.⁸¹³¹

3320. Further, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili stated that '[w]hen we reached PK9 there were clashes between us and the S[e]leka, but we managed to keep a position at the bridge' until after 10 January 2014.⁸¹³⁶ The witness later testified that there had only been clashes with the Seleka at PK9, where there had been 'a bit of resistance'.⁸¹³⁷

3321. In light of the aforementioned evidence, the Chamber concludes that at least one of the groups fired at the other, without this confrontation escalating further. In the Chamber's view, this explains why witnesses such as P-0954 and Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili showed certain ambiguity when referring to a clash at PK9, and why other witnesses were unable to provide further details on such a clash, while still recalling that there had been a confrontation. In this regard, the Chamber notes the presence of the Sangaris at PK9 at that time, as well as of other international forces such as the Chadian and Congolese FOMAC,⁸¹³⁸ and the role of the Sangaris in interposing between the groups.

3322. Once Mr Yekatom's elements reached the Bangui-Mbaïki road, they passed through the villages of Samba and Sekia. Notably, P-1839 testified that certain elements passed through Samba before reaching Sekia on the same day they left Yamwara.⁸¹³⁹ She specified that they stopped in the village of Samba on their way to Sekia, and the soldiers of the group, who had weapons, took 'measures to protect' the rest of the elements who did not have weapons, 'just machetes, knives, pieces of wood', because the Seleka were still in the area.⁸¹⁴⁰ She also indicated that Mr Yekatom was with the group that day, and went behind Alkanto.⁸¹⁴¹

3323. Further, P-1858 mentioned that Mr Yekatom's elements went to Sekia on their way to Mbaïki.⁸¹⁴² Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili also mentioned that the group passed by Samba and Sekia, that after 10 January 2014, they took control of the axis to Mbaïki, and that the next place on the way to Mbaïki was Sekia.⁸¹⁴³

3324. Witnesses also indicated that once they arrived in Sekia, the group divided into at least two or three sub-groups. P-1339 testified that the elements in Sekia divided up into 'two camps', one of them remaining in Sekia together with Mr Yekatom and the other one going to Mbaïki

⁸¹³⁹ P-1839: T-170, p. 43, lines 17-25. The Chamber notes that later in her testimony, P-1839 confirmed that she lived in Samba for a period of time 'in a house in which she had a room' and that there was also a house for Mr Yekatom, as illustrated in a sketch she made (see P-1839: T-172, p. 56, lines 6-22 referring to Sketch, CAR-OTP-2066-1465). The Chamber considers that this does not contradict her evidence that the group walked from Samba to Sekia on the same day they left Yamwara because there is evidence to the effect that Mr Yekatom was not with his group all the time as it advanced towards Mbaïki. Indeed, as set out in paragraphs 3379-3382, 3527 below, Mr Yekatom moved from one location to the other. Moreover, the Chamber notes that according to P-1558, who spent time with Mr Yekatom on the days after Djotodia's resignation, Mr Yekatom had a property in Samba where his mother lived (see P-1558 Statement, CAR-OTP-2105-0195-R01, at 0204, para. 47).

with Ouandjio.⁸¹⁴⁴ P-1858 indicated that once Mr Yekatom and his elements left Yamwara, some elements went on the route to Mbaïki and ‘mostly to a village called S[ekia]’ while others, led by Ouandjio, went to Boda.⁸¹⁴⁵

3325. The evidence discussed below shows that once the elements reached Sekia, they took over this village and, as they continued their advance, also took control of the villages of Ndangala, Bimon, Kapou, Bossongo, Pissa and eventually Mbaïki. The Chamber notes that this evidence was provided by an overwhelming number of witnesses, including insider witnesses, some of which were part of Mr Yekatom’s group, as well as local authorities and inhabitants of the affected towns and villages.

3326. P-1839 testified that the ‘major places’ occupied by the elements under Mr Yekatom’s command were PK9, Bimon, Pissa and Mbaïki.⁸¹⁴⁶ They also had elements in Sekia, Mbata and Kapou, and recruited elements in Batalimo and Mongoumba.⁸¹⁴⁷ When asked, P-1839 confirmed that there were elements under Mr Yekatom’s command in all of these locations.⁸¹⁴⁸

3327. P-1839 further confirmed that the Anti-Balaka took control of Pissa ‘without weapons’, meaning there were no clashes in Pissa.⁸¹⁴⁹ P-1786 specified that there were no clashes in Pissa because the Seleka had already left by the time Mr Yekatom’s group arrived there.⁸¹⁵⁰

3328. P-0954 stated that after Djotodia’s resignation, Mr Yekatom was in control of ‘around half of B[imbo] I’ and Lobaye, including Mbaïki, Pissa, Boda, Kapou, Ndangala, Mongoumba, Sekia and Zila.⁸¹⁵¹

3331. The mayor of Mbaïki, Raymond Mongbandi, indicated that Mr Yekatom took control of the entire area from PK9 to the outskirts of Boda, including the towns surrounding Mbaïki.⁸¹⁵⁴ As for Mbaïki, the witness indicated that Mr Yekatom was ‘briefly’ in control of the town until he was not allowed to enter Mbaïki anymore following Djido Saleh’s killing.⁸¹⁵⁵ According to him, Mr Yekatom was in control of Pissa, Lesse, Mbata, Moboma, Bogogoganza, Nola, Ndagala, Sekia, Bimon, Kapou and Bossongo, and Anti-Balaka elements in these locations said they were working for ‘Rambo’, describing him as their boss.⁸¹⁵⁶

3332. The mayor of Pissa, Roger Okoa-Penguia, indicated that Mr Yekatom controlled the route of 107 kilometres between Bangui and Mbaïki, and had men in Pissa, Sekia, Boda, Centrapalm, Mbata, Batalimo, Palmex, Palme d’Or and PK9, where the Anti-Balaka took over the Seleka bases.⁸¹⁵⁷

3333. Gérard Ouambou recorded Mr Yekatom’s elements in Sekia, Kapou and Pissa in the days and weeks that followed Djotodia’s resignation.⁸¹⁵⁸ He indicated that from Sekia,

Mr Yekatom and his elements left for Pissa and that in 2014 they controlled the whole zone from PK9 to Mbaïki.⁸¹⁵⁹

3334. Lastly, P-1974 indicated that Mr Yekatom's area of control and influence in 2014 and 2015 included the route of Bangui, PK9, Sekia, Bossongo, Pissa and Mbaïki; the route of Pissa, Mbata, Bouchia, Batalimo and Moungoumba; as well as the villages situated south of Mbaïki in the Bale-Loke area.⁸¹⁶⁰ According to P-1974, he learnt this through frequent missions to these locations.⁸¹⁶¹

3335. The Chamber notes that as conceded by both the Prosecution⁸¹⁶² and the Yekatom Defence,⁸¹⁶³ Mr Yekatom's group progressed along the PK9-Mbaïki axis without finding any resistance from the Seleka, who fled the towns and villages on the axis before the group's arrival, retreating towards Mbaïki. In this regard, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili stated that they took over the villages on their way to Mbaïki without fighting because when Djotodia stepped down, the Seleka 'began fleeing of their own volition'.⁸¹⁶⁴ P-2353 also stated that 'R[ambo] advanced as the Seleka moved out'.⁸¹⁶⁵ P-1666 testified that the Seleka regrouped in the centre of Mbaïki and were no longer present in the places from where the Muslims were coming.⁸¹⁶⁶ Several witnesses, including P-1786,⁸¹⁶⁷ Roger Okoa-Penguia,⁸¹⁶⁸ P-2353⁸¹⁶⁹ and P-1666,⁸¹⁷⁰ specifically indicated that the Seleka left Pissa by the time Mr Yekatom's elements arrived. As discussed in detail further down, the Chamber is of the view that the Seleka retreated due to the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the axis, which also caused the Muslim population of the area to flee first to Mbaïki and eventually to Chad and other locations of the CAR.⁸¹⁷¹

2. Elements under Mr Yekatom's control present along the axis

Mr Yekatom was the undisputed leader of the Anti-Balaka group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, which comprised at least 1,000 elements at the time.

3336. Regarding the number of elements who were part of Mr Yekatom's group in its advance towards Mbaïki, the Chamber received evidence on the approximate size of the group from witnesses in a position to make informed estimates.

3337. Notably, P-1839 testified that there were more than a thousand Anti-Balaka elements on the Mbaïki road and that 'after that the numbers went up'.⁸¹⁷² She also indicated that in 2014, there was a list with the names of the elements on the Mbaïki road, including those who left from Yamwara and those who joined the group in Mbaïki, for the purposes of DDR, which comprised almost 3,000 names – all of which were provided by Mr Yekatom.⁸¹⁷³ The mayor of Pissa, Roger Okoa-Penguia, stated that Mr Yekatom had 3,000 men in Pissa, Sekia, Boda, Centrapalm, Mbata, Batalimo, Palmex, Palme d'Or and PK9.⁸¹⁷⁴ Mr Yekatom himself told a journalist that he had 3,000 men on the ground.⁸¹⁷⁵

⁸¹⁷² P-1839: T-170, p. 48, line 25 – p. 49, line 3. The Chamber notes that later during her testimony, P-1839 was asked about the following part of her previous statement, related to some lists of elements that the Prosecution investigators had shown to her: 'I see some names here. These are the names of people who had nothing to do with us ever since Yamwara. Because I can see that he included the names of family members, and these people had nothing to do with the Anti-Balaka. And I even entered some names. And, honestly, there weren't a lot of us. There weren't thousands of us, actually. But when we were on the Mbaïki road, from PK9 to Mbaïki, I was given a number of names. These are names of family members, friends, acquaintances to add to the list so as to benefit from the DDR money'. P-1839 was specifically asked whether she could confirm that that is what she said in 2020 about the lists when she was questioned by the Prosecution investigators, and P-1839 confirmed it (see P-1839: T-174, p. 37, line 15 – p. 38, line 15). Following this exchange, P-1839 was asked about specific names included in several lists (see P-1839: T-174, p. 38, line 17 – p. 44, line 20). The Chamber understood the above as P-1839 being asked to confirm her previous statement according to which not all of the names appearing on the lists would have been Anti-Balaka members – which she confirmed –, and is of the view that this is how P-1839 understood the question as well. Therefore, for the number of Anti-Balaka elements on the Mbaïki road, the Chamber will consider the evidence P-1839 provided when directly and specifically asked about it during her testimony (in particular, when P-1839 was asked 'do you recall how many [...] Anti-Balaka elements were on the Mbaïki road?', to which she responded '[o]n the Mbaïki road we were more than a thousand. And after that the numbers went up').

⁸¹⁷⁴ P-2084 Statement, CAR-OTP-2094-0968-R02, at 0983, para. 77. The Chamber notes that Mbata and Batalimo are not on the PK9-Mbaïki axis, but are located in the Lobaye prefecture.

⁸¹⁷⁵ See Video, CAR-OTP-2055-2610, at approximately 00:07:54-00:08:35; Translation, CAR-OTP-2122-2271, at 2280, lines 229-46. The Chamber notes that the metadata of the video is not available. At the same time, it notes that in one of the clips included in the video, the journalist indicates that the gendarmes have no choice but to work with the Anti-Balaka despite having been designated enemies of the peace at the beginning of February by Catherine Samba-Panza, the new Central African president. The journalist also mentions that Rombhot and his men settled 'ici',

3339.Further, the following evidence, while not mentioning the total number of elements in Mr Yekatom's group, refers to the number of elements under his command in a given location along the axis. In the Chamber's view, this can give an approximate indication of Mr Yekatom's group's dimension.

3340.In particular, video footage shows Rodrigue Momokama telling a journalist, at a time before Djotodia's resignation, that they had to deploy almost 100 elements to PK9, towards the other road leading to Mbaïki.⁸¹⁷⁷ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili testified that there were '[d]ozens' of elements 'per post' and indicated that in Kapou or PK9 there could have been 20, 25 or several hundreds of elements.⁸¹⁷⁸ In fact, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili stated that when he became deputy ComZone of Mbaïki, he and the ComZone had around 80 to 90 people under their command.⁸¹⁷⁹ He later testified that as deputy ComZone of Mbaïki, he referring to PK9, in the peak of the crisis, six weeks ago (see Video, CAR-OTP-2055-2610, at approximately 00:02:12-00:03:02; Translation, CAR-OTP-2122-2271, at 2276, lines 80-95). The Chamber is therefore of the view that while it cannot determine the exact date of the video, it is reasonable to infer that parts of the footage were taken in mid- to end of February 2014. See also P-0801: T-035, p. 69, line 23 – p. 73, line 25 (confirming that he recognised Mr Yekatom in the video footage, and indicating that the encounter with Mr Yekatom took place towards the south side of the PK9 bridge and that it occurred before he assumed his duties with the prime minister). In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-0801 was appointed special advisor in charge of the disarmament process on 27 February 2014 (see Decree, CAR-OTP-2004-1180, at 1217).

⁸¹⁷⁶ P-0954 Statement, CAR-OTP-2048-0171-R03, at 0185, para. 80; P-0954: T-166, p. 43, lines 16-20. See also p. 60, lines 19-23. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's assertion that during his testimony, P-0954 was shown the video in which Mr Yekatom refers to having 3,000 men and 'confirm[ed] this figure while providing no further basis for this assertion, instead, referring to his initial statement', in which P-0954 indicated that 'he knew this as his "secretary Mamadou had access to Mr. Yekatom's list of staff"'. The Yekatom Defence contends that P-0954's claim in this regard 'is based on no more than propaganda' (Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Conf-Corr, para. 267). The Chamber, however, notes that the Yekatom Defence disregards the fact that P-0954 was first asked whether he knew how many elements or men were under Mr Yekatom's control in his group at the time they were in PK9, to which he responded that 'at that point of time, he had almost [...] he had around a hundred or some FACA and 3,000 civilian Anti-Balaka' (see P-0954: T-166, p. 43, lines 16-20). It further notes that only later, after being showed the abovementioned video, P-0954 was asked to confirm whether to his recollection or knowledge at the time, Mr Yekatom had 3,000 elements, which he confirmed, indicating that he even mentioned it in his written statement (see P-0954: T-166, p. 60, lines 19-23). Further, considering that P-0954's indication that Mr Yekatom had 3,000 men under his command accords with what Mr Yekatom himself, as well as other individuals, said, the Chamber does not consider his evidence on this point to be purely based on 'propaganda'.

⁸¹⁷⁷ Video, CAR-OTP-2065-3412, at approximately 00:00:27-00:00:36; Translation, CAR-OTP-2125-0470, at 0472, lines 17-18. The Chamber notes its considerations regarding the timing of this video as set out in footnote 8121 above.

⁸¹⁷⁹ P-1647 Statement, CAR-OTP-2050-0654-R02, at 0660, para. 43. The Chamber notes that P-1647 indicated that he became deputy ComZone of Mbaïki when they took over Mbaïki 'around March 2014'. The Chamber notes that and the ComZone Sete had about 40 elements under their control in Mbaïki.⁸¹⁸⁰ In this regard, the Chamber notes the conclusion it reaches further down on the number of elements under Mr Yekatom's command who were in Mbaïki at the time. In particular, it notes that having considered the evidence of several witnesses, including that of Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom and the elements who arrived with him to Mbaïki on 30 January 2014 amounted to at least 25 individuals; and that the total number of elements in Mbaïki in the following days amounted to at least 80 individuals.⁸¹⁸¹

3341. By contrast, Vivien Beina testified that when he asked Mr Yekatom about telling some NGOs that he had 3,000 men as recorded in the video mentioned above, Mr Yekatom said to him that it was 'strategic', to impress 'the enemy'.⁸¹⁸² The witness was unable to provide an estimation but testified that 'the number was less than 3,000'.⁸¹⁸³ Vivien Beina also testified, when shown a list of elements, that some people were included in these lists even if they were not part of the movement to be rewarded as part of the disarmament process.⁸¹⁸⁴ Likewise, the Chamber recalls that P-1839 confirmed her previous statement that the lists that were shown to her during her interview included some 'names of family members, friends, acquaintances [...] so as to benefit from the DDR money'.⁸¹⁸⁵

3342. From the above, the Chamber is unable to conclude by which degree Mr Yekatom might have inflated the number of his elements along the PK9-Mbaïki axis when preparing lists of elements for the disarmament process, or when speaking to journalists or NGOs – if he did so at all. Indeed, taking Mr Yekatom's affirmation on his own group's size together with the fact that Vivien Beina was unable to provide any estimate of the group's size, merely stating that it was 'less than' 3,000, is insufficient to lead the Chamber to any conclusion in this regard. Rather, and bearing in mind the other evidence before it, set out above, including from individuals who were in a position to make informed estimates, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis comprised at least 1,000 elements.

the witness erred in the timing as the evidence in the case clearly indicates that Mr Yekatom's group entered Mbaïki on 30 January 2014, but considers this a minor detail in any event.

3343. Furthermore, the Chamber notes that when asked whether after Djotodia's resignation there were elements who said that they were Anti-Balaka but were not part of Mr Yekatom's group in Lobaye, Vivien Beina agreed and indicated that 'there were subgroups, armed groups that were non-identified who came from the bush or from the forest to carry out exactions', and that it was 'very frequent'.⁸¹⁸⁶ The Chamber, however, notes that it reached its above conclusion taking into account the evidence mostly provided by Anti-Balaka elements, including members close to Mr Yekatom and his group, whom it would expect to be able to discern between members of their own movement and unidentified armed groups coming from the bush or the forest to commit exactions. The Chamber, therefore, does not consider that this circumstance has any bearing on its conclusion regarding the number of elements in Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.

3344. The evidence further shows that Mr Yekatom was the undisputed leader of the group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.

3345. P-1839 testified that Mr Yekatom was the leader of the elements on the Mbaïki road and described him as 'the person who had the greatest influence in the group'.⁸¹⁸⁷ P-1839 indicated that the chiefs 'complied with what he said'.⁸¹⁸⁸

3346. P-1786 explained that 'R[ombhot] was the chef for everyone' at Yamwara, Bimbo and Mbaïki, and that he did not see anyone giving him orders.⁸¹⁸⁹ P-1786 further stated that while Cœur de Lion, as well as Habib Beina and Aristide Beina, could stand up to 'R[ombhot]', he did not remember any of them, or anyone, ever doing so.⁸¹⁹⁰ P-1786 further stated that he would not have survived if he had disobeyed him.⁸¹⁹¹

3347. Likewise, P-1858 indicated that Mr Yekatom was the chief of his group.⁸¹⁹² The witness stated that he had the impression that people, including Mr Yekatom's elements, even FACA members, were afraid of Mr Yekatom, and that 'his orders were obeyed without question'.⁸¹⁹³ When specifically asked how he knew that Mr Yekatom was not afraid of Kamezolai despite the latter being 'his senior and older', P-1858 explained that Mr Yekatom was 'a warlord' and a chief and, as such, he did not want anybody else to give orders to his group.⁸¹⁹⁴ He testified that a consequence of an element not obeying Mr Yekatom would be that he would hit or kill that element.⁸¹⁹⁵

3348. The above is illustrated by an incident in which Mr Yekatom killed two of his aides-de-camp and shot at another element of his group. In particular, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili indicated that on 24 April 2014, at PK9, he witnessed a disagreement between other elements from his group and a former FACA captain regarding the theft of his goats, and decided to intervene to calm things down.⁸¹⁹⁶ Mr Yekatom approached the group with some of his men; he carried an AK47 in firing position and shot at them.⁸¹⁹⁷ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili was hit in the upper thigh and fell to the ground.⁸¹⁹⁸ Mr Yekatom ordered his men to take him to the hospital.⁸¹⁹⁹ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili was hospitalised for two to three weeks.⁸²⁰⁰ The other two elements, Seda and Fadal, were also brought to the hospital.⁸²⁰¹ Seda, a soldier dressed in military uniform, died two or three days later, while Fadal, who wore civilian clothing, was already dead by the time he was taken to the hospital.⁸²⁰² The witness explained that after this incident, he was no longer involved with the Anti-Balaka.⁸²⁰³ Mr Yekatom never apologised to him and avoided him since then.⁸²⁰⁴ The witness did not complain to the

gendarmerie because he was afraid that Mr Yekatom would ‘finish [him] off’ as he knew that Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili had witnessed the killing of Seda and Fadal.⁸²⁰⁵

3349. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence’s submission that according to both Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili and Vivien Beina, ‘the single alleged “Seda incident”’ concerned an attempt by Habib Beina to return farm animals looted by ‘RFACPP members’, which resulted in these members threatening Mr Yekatom and thereafter having a ‘duel’ with him.⁸²⁰⁶ The Yekatom Defence thus portrays this incident as a ‘duel’ between two equal parties where misbehaved elements provoked Mr Yekatom and got injured.⁸²⁰⁷ The Chamber is of the view that regardless of the misbehaviour of the elements, the incident’s relevance lies in that it neatly reflects that as the leader of his group, Mr Yekatom had authority to sanction the elements under his command, and did so by injuring or even killing those who dared to disobey or otherwise challenge him. In the Chamber’s view, incidents such as this one served Mr Yekatom to assert his power within the group and send a message to the rest of the elements.⁸²⁰⁸

⁸²⁰⁷ The Chamber notes that P-0888 explained that ‘they’ (the soldiers involved in the incident) refused to follow Habib Beina’s directives to return the stolen ‘ram’ – directives Mr Yekatom transmitted to Habib Beina –, beat up Habib Beina’s driver, and called Mr Yekatom on the phone to insult him and tell him that he should come to settle everything on that day (see P-0888: T-120, p. 47, line 17 – p. 49, line 8). P-0888 also explained that Mr Yekatom said that since they had stolen, refused to admit it, wanted to challenge him, and since they were all soldiers, they would ‘have to put an end to this matter’; thereafter, Mr Yekatom, Habib Beina and the group arrived in PK9 by foot, anticipating that ‘they’ waited for a vehicle, and Mr Yekatom shot at the three elements, which P-0888 described as ‘almost a duel’ (see P-0888: T-120, p. 49, lines 9-25). When the Presiding Judge asked whether it would be fair to say that there had been an exchange of bullets between two groups, P-0888 clarified that they all belonged to ‘the same group of Rambo’ and that since they were soldiers, they always had their weapons with them (see P-0888: T-120, p. 50, line 10 – p. 51, line 13). The Chamber is therefore of the view that neither P-0888 nor the Presiding Judge described or understood the incident to be the result of a duel between two parties, contrary to the Yekatom Defence’s suggestions. It further notes that this accords with P-1647’s account, according to which Mr Yekatom approached them with some of his men, he carried an AK47 in firing position and shot at them (see P-1647 Statement, CAR-OTP-2050-0654-R02, at 0662, para. 53).

⁸²⁰⁸ See e.g. P-1786 Statement, CAR-OTP-2058-0200-R03, at 0209, paras 49-52. The Chamber notes that P-1786 stated that after returning from Boda, where Cœur de Lion was killed, ‘R[ombhot]’ sent his people to look for him but he refused to go with them because he was suspicious, he thought ‘R[ombhot]’ could just kill him like he had killed Seda and ‘Fada’. The Chamber also notes the Yekatom Defence’s arguments that witnesses who provided evidence about this incident were not present when it occurred, relied on third hand accounts which did not provide all the details and/or otherwise remained anonymous, and provided objectively incorrect facts concerning basic details (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 323). The Chamber considers, however, that the accounts of these witnesses support fundamental aspects of the accounts of both P-1647 and P-0888 (see e.g. P-1839: T-171, p. 79, lines 2-23, who stated that ‘Rombhot’ fatally shot Seda and another person of the group; P-1786

3350. Several other witnesses gave evidence about Mr Yekatom's incontestable leadership over the elements deployed on the PK9-Mbaïki axis.

3351. Brice Emotion Namsio, the former spokesperson of the Anti-Balaka, indicated that Mr Yekatom was the commander of the Anti-Balaka 'of the south' and the person who controlled Lobaye.⁸²⁰⁹

3352. Likewise, P-0884, a prominent member of the Anti-Balaka national coordination, testified that Mr Yekatom controlled the road all the way to Mbaïki.⁸²¹⁰ Another Anti-Balaka member, P-2232, who worked closely with Maxime Mokom at the time, testified that Mr Yekatom, 'Rambo', controlled the Mbaïki area and coordinated the operations in that sector.⁸²¹¹

3353. Further, the Chamber notes that when talking to a journalist, Mr Yekatom introduced himself as 'caporal-chef Yekatom Rambo Alfred, chef of the Anti-Balaka movement of the south', and said that he created the Anti-Balaka movement 'to chase out these mercenaries [the Seleka] who came to destroy [their] country'.⁸²¹²

Further, noting the Yekatom Defence's submission that the incident took place after the 'charged period', the Chamber recalls that facts falling outside of the temporal scope of the charges may be relied upon to prove facts and circumstances described in the charges (Decision on Motions on the Scope of the Charges and the Scope of the Evidence at Trial, 29 October 2020, ICC-01/14-01/18-703-Conf (public redacted version notified on 2 November 2020), ICC-01/14-01/18-703-Red), para. 51).

Habib Beina to bury the element who had been shot.⁸²¹⁴ P-1839 specified that on the following day, Momokama confirmed that they had followed Mr Yekatom's instructions and buried the 'young guy' – who at that time was still alive.⁸²¹⁵ P-1839 also testified about a 'boy' who was captured and questioned in a house close to Sekia when Mr Yekatom's group was in Sekia, and 'executed' following Mr Yekatom's instructions.⁸²¹⁶ In addition, P-1839 testified that Alkanto captured and tied up a Christian soldier at the toll gate of the Sekia roadblock, and thereafter killed him following Mr Yekatom's instructions.⁸²¹⁷ According to P-1839, Alkanto 'couldn't do things alone, he had to have the permission of his chief', Mr Yekatom.⁸²¹⁸

there.⁸²²³ Likewise, P-2353 stated that when Mr Yekatom was not in Mbaïki, Cœur de Lion was ‘in charge’.⁸²²⁴

3356. Accordingly, and in light of the evidence above, the Chamber rejects the Yekatom Defence’s submissions that even if it accepted that Ouandjio was assigned the title of ‘deputy’, there is no probative evidence that this resulted in a de facto hierarchical relationship between Mr Yekatom and Ouandjio.⁸²²⁵

3357. Moreover, the Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence seems to make contradictory arguments when asserting that Mr Yekatom could not be the leader of any group or movement because of his FACA title, which he used to publicly introduce himself, while at the same time suggesting that Cœur de Lion’s title as ‘deputy’ – and the fact that those around him perceived him as such – cannot even be considered as an indication of the role he performed.⁸²²⁶ Following this argumentation would mean for the Chamber to rely on a formal title and rank to assess someone’s role without looking at the factual circumstances, but not to rely on a, even if less, formal title while looking at the factual circumstances. In the view of the Chamber, in its factual analysis one cannot be divided from the other. Contrarily to the Yekatom Defence’s position, the Chamber considers highly relevant that the elements of Mr Yekatom’s group consistently testified to Cœur de Lion being the ‘deputy’. This is regardless of the purported formality of the title ‘deputy’ or whether military and non-military members understood it differently. In both formal and informal sense, military or civilian, it conveys the same and unambiguous directional flow of authority.

3358. In relation to the Yekatom Defence’s submissions concerning P-1786, the Chamber notes that P-1786 stated that despite the fact that Cœur de Lion was Mr Yekatom’s deputy, they did not always get along; Cœur de Lion kept his distance from Mr Yekatom, he did not like that Mr Yekatom did not fight in the front lines with them and thought that he kept money from the Seleka.⁸²²⁷ P-1786 also stated that Mr Yekatom was close to Momokama and Habib Beina.⁸²²⁸ The Chamber is of the view that the fact that Mr Yekatom had a smoother or close personal relationship with other elements of his group does not detract from the fact that Cœur de Lion was under Mr Yekatom's command.

3359. P-1839 and Vivien Beina indicated that Habib Beina replaced Cœur de Lion as Mr Yekatom's deputy after his death.⁸²²⁹ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili confirmed this, stating that after Cœur de Lion had died in combat in Boda (shortly after taking over Mbaïki),⁸²³⁰ Mr Yekatom appointed Habib Beina as his new deputy.⁸²³¹ P-0954 stated that Habib Beina attended a meeting as the deputy of Mr Yekatom around August 2014, months after Cœur de Lion's death.⁸²³²

3. Locations of checkpoints and bases on the axis

Mr Yekatom's group took over checkpoints at PK9, Sekia, Bimon, Bossongo and Pissa in their advance towards Mbaïki. Mr Yekatom and his elements also set up new bases at PK9 and Sekia.

3360. Several witnesses, including Roger Okoa-Penguia and Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba, explained that the checkpoints along the PK9-Mbaïki axis were established prior to the Seleka's and the Anti-Balaka's arrival in Lobaye.⁸²³³ These witnesses indicated that the checkpoints were controlled by state forces which, upon the Seleka's arrival in the area, left.⁸²³⁴

3361. The evidence outlined below also shows that thereafter, as Mr Yekatom's group advanced along the axis and took over its villages, the Seleka fled and Mr Yekatom's group also took over the checkpoints located in these villages. The evidence also indicates that in addition to taking over the checkpoints in PK9 and Sekia, Mr Yekatom's group established permanent bases in these two locations.⁸²³⁵

3362. Indeed, several witnesses, including P-1839, Vivien Beina and P-0954, indicated that Mr Yekatom's group established a base at PK9.⁸²³⁶ P-0954 explained that this base was located 'after you crossed the bridge', in a compound known as Pissmiss.⁸²³⁷ P-1193 and Vivien Beina, who referred to this base as the 'PK9 Bridge Base, P[issmiss] base', also indicated that the base was located after crossing the PK9 bridge, on the way to Zila.⁸²³⁸ Likewise, P-1839 confirmed that if someone left Sekia and headed towards Bangui, they would find Pissmiss before crossing the bridge.⁸²³⁹

3363. According to P-1839, Habib Beina and Rodrigue Momokama were posted at the PK9 base and were the chiefs there.⁸²⁴⁰ P-1839 indicated that they issued orders to the elements 'to collect money from traders and traffic through the sector'.⁸²⁴¹

3364. Vivien Beina specified that Habib Beina was the chief of this base and lived there until he moved to Zila.⁸²⁴² He also explained that Habib Beina led the group that faced the Seleka at PK9 and that he, the witness, asked him not to let the elements cross the bridge and enter into the neighborhood to avoid exactions being committed, with which Mr Yekatom agreed, as ‘our relatives live in that area’.⁸²⁴³

3365. In this same location, Mr Yekatom’s group took over a checkpoint. P-0954 indicated that the Anti-Balaka had a permanent checkpoint at PK9.⁸²⁴⁴ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili⁸²⁴⁵ and P-1858⁸²⁴⁶ equally mentioned this. The Chamber notes that Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili indicated that the PK9 checkpoint was ‘just opposite’ the Pissmiss compound.⁸²⁴⁷ In a similar vein, P-0954 indicated that there was a checkpoint on the other side of the PK9 bridge, ‘au niveau de Pissmiss’.⁸²⁴⁸ It further notes that P-1839 made a sketch of the PK9 bridge and surroundings, indicating the exact locations of the compound or ‘villa’ Pissmiss and the checkpoint where the elements were positioned.⁸²⁴⁹

3366. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence’s assertions that there were ‘two distinct, independently-operating checkpoints at PK9, on either side of the bridge’, with ‘RFACPP members’ stationed on the west side and elements of P-0954’s group stationed on the east side – ‘where a gendarmerie post was located and where MISCA elements were also present’.⁸²⁵⁰ In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-0954 stated that he was based at the Ngulanga base, close to the PK9 bridge, and that from there he controlled his area, which he described in detail.⁸²⁵¹ He specified that ‘they’ controlled this area after Djotodia’s resignation.⁸²⁵² He also indicated that ‘they’ were at Ngulanga until 10 January, after which ‘they’ set up their base at another place, on ‘the little street called Gambi’.⁸²⁵³ He confirmed that the gendarmerie and the Burundian soldiers at the PK9 barrier were situated at the level of his checkpoint.⁸²⁵⁴ At the same time, he denied having had a checkpoint at the PK9 bridge.⁸²⁵⁵ Thus, having assessed P-0954's evidence in its entirety, and in the absence of any other indication, the Chamber cannot conclude that P-0954 took over a checkpoint at the PK9 bridge.

3367. The evidence demonstrates that after setting up a base and a checkpoint at PK9, Mr Yekatom's group established another base in Sekia. According to P-1839 and Vivien Beina, this was the 'big' or 'main' base where most of Mr Yekatom's elements were billeted.⁸²⁵⁶ P-1839 specified that the base was located behind a church that was situated a few metres to the left of a customs checkpoint when approaching it from Bangui.⁸²⁵⁷ The Chamber further notes that Gérard Ouambou recorded in a video footage, as he himself explained, Mr Yekatom's elements based in Sekia.⁸²⁵⁸

3368. In addition to the base, Mr Yekatom's group took over the checkpoints in Sekia. P-1839 explained that the group set up two roadblocks to check the vehicles passing through and ensure the security of the Anti-Balaka base.⁸²⁵⁹ P-1839 also referred to another roadblock, under control of the state and then occupied by the Seleka, to which 'the chiefs of each section [went] to collect money'.⁸²⁶⁰ Witnesses P-0954, P-1858 and P-1974 similarly testified that the Anti-Balaka controlled the checkpoints in Sekia.⁸²⁶¹

3369. In particular, P-1974 explained that in August 2014, he managed to arrange an appointment with Mr Yekatom and travelled to Pissa to meet him.⁸²⁶² On their way to Pissa, they passed through 'Anti-Balaka checkpoints at PK9, S[ekia] and P[issa]'.⁸²⁶³

3370. Witness P-1823 identified ‘the barrier at Sekia’ in a video footage shown to him, which he passed through on his way to Mbaïki from Bangui.⁸²⁶⁴

3371. The evidence shows that Mr Yekatom’s elements also took under their control checkpoints in Bimon, Bossongo and Pissa.

3373. Vivien Beina confirmed seeing Mr Yekatom’s elements posted at several locations on the Mbaïki road, including PK9, Sekia, ‘Ndagala’, Bimon and Mbaïki.⁸²⁶⁷

3374. The Chamber notes that D29-5016 indicated that there was no Anti-Balaka group in Bossongo and that they were in ‘C[entrapalm]’.⁸²⁶⁸ The Chamber notes that Roger Okoa-Penguia confirmed, when asked, that Centrapalm, a company that processed palm oil, was located in Bossongo.⁸²⁶⁹ It also recalls that Roger Okoa-Penguia confirmed that there were two checkpoints in Bossongo.⁸²⁷⁰ The witness explained that before 2013, armed gendarmes were deployed at a checkpoint located ‘in front of the road that leads to the Centrapalm [...]’ to protect Centrapalm from thefts.⁸²⁷¹ Asked about a second checkpoint inside Bossongo, Roger Okoa-Penguia stated there were mobile checkpoints organised at specific times of the year.⁸²⁷² He also confirmed that a gendarmerie brigade in Bossongo provided security to Centrapalm.⁸²⁷³ The Chamber also recalls that the witness confirmed that the Anti-Balaka took over these checkpoints.⁸²⁷⁴ In a similar vein, P-1786 and Brice Emotion Namsio indicated that Mr Yekatom had elements at Centrapalm.⁸²⁷⁵ Raymond Mongbandi also mentioned that Mr Yekatom had been stationed at Centrapalm before the Seleka left Mbaïki.⁸²⁷⁶ Likewise, Brice Emotion Namsio testified that at some point in time Mr Yekatom ‘went to base himself’ in Centrapalm, controlling ‘all that area’.⁸²⁷⁷ In light of the evidence above, which indicates that Mr Yekatom’s elements controlled Bossongo and its checkpoints, the Chamber disregards this part of D29-5016’s evidence.

3375. Raymond Mongbandi, the mayor of Mbaïki, explained that in early February, the Seleka unexpectedly left Pissa overnight, leaving the town hall empty.⁸²⁷⁸ The Seleka group that had been based in Pissa until that point moved to Mbaïki.⁸²⁷⁹ Shortly thereafter, the Anti-Balaka moved to Pissa, where Mr Yekatom was in command of its base.⁸²⁸⁰ According to the witness, Mr Yekatom was based in Pissa at this time.⁸²⁸¹

3376. P-1823, a Muslim who travelled from Bangui to Mbaïki as further outlined below,⁸²⁸² also described passing through the Pissa roadblock. He testified that Pissa is a crossroad and its barrier or roadblock a strategic point, just like the roadblocks at PK9 and Mbaïki.⁸²⁸³

⁸²⁷⁶ P-1838 Statement, CAR-OTP-2100-0252-R05, at 0264, para. 66. The Chamber notes that Raymond Mongbandi indicated that Mr Yekatom was based at Centrapalm ‘before Djotodia’ resigned and the Seleka left M[baïki], but considers that the witness’s reference to the period before Djotodia’s resignation is a mistake considering the contrary evidence indicating that Mr Yekatom was based at Yamwara until Djotodia’s resignation, as discussed above. See also CAR Panel Final Report 2015, CAR-OTP-2023-0032, at 0079-80, para. 240 (indicating that Mr Yekatom’s forces had been replaced by the gendarmerie at Centrapalm by late August 2015).

3378.P-0954 also indicated that Rodrigue Momokama and Habib Beina were the heads of the checkpoints at PK9, Sekia, Pissa and Mbaïki.⁸²⁸⁶ He further stated that Mr Yekatom controlled the area on the road to Mbaïki with the checkpoints thereon.⁸²⁸⁷

3379.Witnesses indicated that Mr Yekatom was not permanently based at a particular location during this time. Instead, he moved from one village (and checkpoint) to the other, patrolling the area and inspecting the elements under his command.

3380.Indeed, P-1858 stated that Mr Yekatom moved around and was not permanently in any of the Anti-Balaka bases, but stayed at his houses in ‘K[alangoe]’, Bossongo, ‘P[alm d’Or]’ and Pissa.⁸²⁸⁸ P-1666 similarly indicated that when the Anti-Balaka were in Mbaïki, Mr Yekatom was not based there, but rather travelled in the area.⁸²⁸⁹

3381.Raymond Mongbandi detailed that Mr Yekatom patrolled the checkpoints on his red motorbike, stopping on each one so that his elements could report to him and he, in turn, could collect the money they had gathered.⁸²⁹⁰ P-1974 learned through frequent missions to this area that Mr Yekatom visited villages on the Mbaïki to Boda route but that he did not spend much time there, leaving the area under the command of one of his ‘[l]ieutenant[s]’.⁸²⁹¹

3382.According to P-1839, Mr Yekatom knew of the progression of his elements throughout the PK9-Mbaïki axis by telephone, and once a locality was taken, he would go on the ground to see it.⁸²⁹²

The Chamber notes the evidence of Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba who stated that he saw Mr Yekatom always in a white pick-up truck with elements, but also indicated that he did not know if Mr Yekatom travelled around on a motorbike (see D29-5012: T-294, p. 78, lines 5-11), and does not find this to undermine the evidence of Raymond Mongbandi.

By taking over these checkpoints, Mr Yekatom and his group aimed at searching and identifying Muslims in the area and raising money to finance the group and its needs. Mr Yekatom's group was armed.

3383. The Chamber takes note of the Yekatom Defence's arguments that the ultimate goal of Mr Yekatom's group on the PK9-Mbaïki axis was to chase out the Seleka and secure the area. The Chamber finds that these arguments, addressed below in detail, are without merit. Rather, in the face of overwhelming evidence, also discussed below, the Chamber is of the view that Mr Yekatom and his group took over the checkpoints on the PK9-Mbaïki axis with the aims of identifying Muslims and financing the group and its needs.

3384. Turning to the Yekatom Defence's arguments, the Chamber notes its submission that the 'RFACPP' first emerged and progressed on the PK9-Mbaïki axis to secure positions previously occupied by the Seleka to prevent their return, and in the total absence of functional public authority in Lobaye.⁸²⁹³ The Yekatom Defence argues that in this context, the 'RFACPP' assumed responsibility of pre-existing checkpoints in Pissa and Sekia, as well as in PK9.⁸²⁹⁴ It also submits that the 'RFACPP' encouraged gendarmes and water and forestry ministry personnel to return to service along the axis, and frequently collaborated with international forces and with the local authorities.⁸²⁹⁵

3385. The Chamber notes that Roger Okoa-Penguia confirmed that Mr Yekatom progressed along the axis and deployed his elements with the purpose of pushing the Seleka elements out of Lobaye and to ensure that they would not return to the region.⁸²⁹⁶ In fact, he described Mr Yekatom as being 'instrumental in driving out the Seleka'.⁸²⁹⁷ Further, Roger Okoa-Penguia explained that when Catherine Samba-Panza arrived, the soldiers, police officers and gendarmes officially resumed their functions and the order was given to the Anti-Balaka elements to leave all the checkpoints from PK9 to Mbaïki, which they did.⁸²⁹⁸

3386. The Chamber further notes the evidence on the interactions of Mr Yekatom and his group in some instances with the CAR authorities and the international forces.

3387. For instance, video footage shows Henri Wanzet-Linguissara, the general director of the gendarmerie at the time, greeting Mr Yekatom and his elements at PK9, and explaining that there was ‘collaboration’ because the gendarmerie used to be unaware of what was happening on the other side of the barrier, while the men around him – identified in the video as Anti-Balaka – intercepted stolen goods and ‘faux Centrafricains’ and handed them to the gendarmerie.⁸²⁹⁹

3388. After being showed this extract of the video footage during his testimony, Alfred Legrand Ngaya indicated being in agreement with the Yekatom Defence’s propositions that Mr Yekatom and his people wanted to collaborate and support the gendarmerie and that the CAR security forces were practically non-existent at the time.⁸³⁰⁰ Likewise, after being shown this same extract, Brice Emotion Namsio confirmed that the cooperation between Mr Yekatom and other Anti-Balaka and the gendarmerie to ensure security started from the outset of the government of Catherine Samba-Panza.⁸³⁰¹

3389. Further, Guerrino Perin testified that MISCA asked ‘Rambo’ to help them bring order in the zone or region, and that he heard that MISCA gave him fuel to carry out missions with this purpose.⁸³⁰²

The Chamber further notes that P-0876 testified, when shown this video, that he believed that this encounter was planned by the prime minister’s office since the person receiving the director-general of the gendarmerie was advisor to the prime minister for DDR, although P-0876 was not directly informed about the organisation of the encounter (see P-0876: T-087-ENG, p. 11, line 9 – p. 12, line 22; T-087-FRA, p. 12, line 2 – p. 14, line 14; T-089, p. 9, lines 4-21).

3390. Moreover, in a letter Mr Yekatom addressed to the minister of national defence dated 21 April 2014, he described a number of missions he carried out in Lobaye at the time, including missions to Boboua and Bokoma on 11 April 2014, Boda, Bossongo Café and Pissa.⁸³⁰³

3391. Lastly, P-1839 confirmed that at some point, the gendarmes went back to their duty stations in collaboration with the elements who were at the PK9 checkpoint.⁸³⁰⁴ P-1839 further testified that at some point, Mr Yekatom did his best for people to resume their duties from PK9 to Sekia, calling upon these people to get back to duty, ‘but in collaboration with his elements’,⁸³⁰⁵ meaning people ‘from the state’ were there, but ‘people from Mr Yekatom’s side were also along with them’.⁸³⁰⁶

3392. The Chamber also notes the discussions on Mr Yekatom’s interactions with authorities present in Mbaïki in the context of his group’s arrival in the town as well as its stay there.⁸³⁰⁷

3393. In relation to all of the above instances of ‘cooperation’ between Mr Yekatom and the authorities, including him allowing the gendarmes and national staff to go back to some of their duty stations, the Chamber first notes that they took place after Mr Yekatom had gained effective control of the PK9-Mbaïki axis and following Catherine Samba-Panza’s election as president of the CAR transitional government on 20 January 2014.⁸³⁰⁸ It also notes that some of those ‘cooperation’ efforts, including the missions described by Mr Yekatom in his letter, occurred after a significant proportion of the Muslim civilian population along the axis had to flee their towns and villages and subsequently flee Mbaïki.⁸³⁰⁹

3394. Secondly, it notes that while the above evidence indicates that Mr Yekatom allowed the gendarmerie and the national staff to go back to their stations in the PK9 and Sekia checkpoints, that same evidence shows that Mr Yekatom did not give them back any effective power. In the words of the former general director of the gendarmerie in the context of the encounter at the PK9 bridge,⁸³¹⁰ whatever happened after crossing the PK9 barrier was under the Anti-Balaka's competence. It further notes that while these authorities were allowed to go back to the PK9 and Sekia checkpoints, they did so alongside Anti-Balaka elements posted there, who were mostly armed FACA members dressed in military uniform.⁸³¹¹ The Chamber considers that there is a nuanced but relevant difference between allowing the authorities to be physically present in their duty stations and handing them over effective responsibility for the checkpoints, as argued by the Yekatom Defence.⁸³¹² It is also the Chamber's view that this does not equate to the Anti-Balaka leaving all checkpoints, as Roger Okoa-Penguia described.

3395. Specifically with regard to Guerrino Perin's evidence above, the Chamber notes that the witness's source of information is unclear and that it contradicts Raymond Mongbandi's evidence, who testified that he did not hear that MISCA had asked Mr Yekatom to patrol the regions to re-establish public order.⁸³¹³ The Chamber, recalling the witness's unique position as Mbaïki's mayor at the time, considers his evidence more reliable on this point.

3396. The Yekatom Defence further argues that the objective of the presence of the 'RFACPP' in the checkpoints was 'to free the Bimbo road so that the population could circulate freely'.⁸³¹⁴ In line with this argument, Vivien Beina testified that at a certain point in time, Mr Yekatom made clear that Muslims could continue their activities on the PK9-Mbaïki axis without any problems. In particular, the witness explained that a young Muslim who lived in Kilometre 5 falsified his ID card to move around and find food.⁸³¹⁵ The Anti-Balaka identified him as a Muslim but Mr Yekatom allowed him to circulate freely on the axis.⁸³¹⁶ According to Vivien Beina, 'from that moment onwards '[Muslims] could cross the bridge of PK9 to go to Mbaïki and they could resume their commercial activities on that axis'.⁸³¹⁷

3397. Having assessed the entirety of the evidence, as outlined above and below – including, in particular, P-1823’s below account –, the Chamber considers that the above arguments concerning Mr Yekatom’s purported aim to ‘liberate’ the PK9-Mbaïki road are without merit. On the contrary, the Chamber is convinced that Mr Yekatom instrumentalised the checkpoints in the villages along the axis to search and identify Muslims. In this regard, it recalls the unambiguous evidence of P-1839, who said that at the time they were on the Mbaïki road, ‘the chiefs’ – Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion, Alkanto – instructed them to kill all the Muslims in the area they were occupying.⁸³¹⁸

3398. The Chamber notes that P-1823 provided a detailed account of his experience passing through the PK9 checkpoint. After Michel Djotodia’s resignation, P-1823 travelled from Bangui to Mbaïki on a commercial truck which the Anti-Balaka stopped at the PK9 bridge.⁸³¹⁹ According to P-1823, there were many Anti-Balaka at the roadblock, wearing gris-gris, carrying weapons such as machetes and Kalashnikovs, some of them dressed with a mixture of civilian clothes and military uniforms.⁸³²⁰ They were ‘searching vehicles systematically to identify Muslims’.⁸³²¹ P-1823 disguised the prayer mark on his forehead to avoid being recognised as a Muslim, since ‘everybody thought that anyone who was a Muslim was a Seleka’.⁸³²² P-1823 stated that he needed to take these precautions because his life was at risk.⁸³²³

were no Muslims on the truck except for P-1823 who was not recognised as such.⁸³²⁷ The Anti-Balaka asked the passengers for money, which the passengers gave them, and thereafter let them go.⁸³²⁸

3400. P-1823 indicated that the truck passed through nine roadblocks on their way to Mbaïki, all of which were controlled by the Anti-Balaka because at that time ‘the whole Lobaye was under control of the Anti-Balaka’.⁸³²⁹ P-1823 knew some of the Anti-Balaka at these roadblocks by sight from previous interactions, but did not know their names.⁸³³⁰ These other roadblocks were situated in locations such as Bimon, Pissa and Mbaïki.⁸³³¹ The Anti-Balaka at these roadblocks let them go after giving them money for coffee.⁸³³² In P-1823’s view, they were not searched at the other roadblocks because the elements knew that ‘their boss, Yekatom’ had ‘already taken care of business’ and believed that there were no Muslims in the vehicle.⁸³³³

3401. The Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence disputes P-1823’s account, which it considers ‘manifestly unreliable’, in particular as regards the timing of the incident and his alleged recognition of the individuals involved.⁸³³⁴ However, for the reasons detailed below, the Chamber is unconvinced by its arguments.

3402. As regards the timing, the Chamber notes that P-1823 stated that after the Bangui Attack, he went to Petevo in the 6th arrondissement and stayed in Bangui ‘for almost a month’ because it was not safe to travel at the time.⁸³³⁵ During his testimony, he explained that he returned to Mbaïki after Michel Djotodia’s resignation because before, ‘Mbaïki had been taken over by the Seleka, and these are not people you can collaborate with’.⁸³³⁶ He further explained that after Michel Djotodia’s resignation, he could not stay in Bangui ‘doing nothing’, so he ‘got up [his] courage and took the risk of returning, but taking a lot of precautions at the same time’.⁸³³⁷ P-1823 also confirmed having attended a reconciliation meeting in Petevo during which an imam was attacked, and which the Yekatom Defence counsel suggested took place on 13 December 2013.⁸³³⁸ P-1823 indicated that after the incident in Petevo, he left Bangui ‘after a few days’ as he could not have spent ‘the new year’ in Bangui, he had to leave to join his family.⁸³³⁹

3403. The Chamber notes that while P-1823 provided a clear and concise answer when explaining his departure to Mbaïki after Michel Djotodia’s resignation, he seemed more hesitant when the Yekatom Defence counsel repeatedly asked him to confirm that he left Bangui in a matter of days after the Petevo incident.⁸³⁴⁰ It also notes that when asked whether the 13 December 2013 date refreshed his memory, P-1823 responded that with everything they had gone through since 2013, it was difficult for him to sum up those memories.⁸³⁴¹ Further, the Chamber notes that when asked whether he spent New Year’s in Mbaïki, P-1823 seemed to make reference to not wanting to stay in Bangui in ‘the new year’ rather than not spending New Year’s in Bangui.⁸³⁴² In light of this, the Chamber gives more weight to the witness’s affirmation that he left Bangui after Michel Djotodia’s resignation.

3404. In relation to P-1823’s prior knowledge of Mr Yekatom, the Chamber notes that he stated that when he saw Mr Yekatom at the barricade, he recognised him from before as he used to live in Kina neighbourhood, and that he knew Mr Yekatom though the latter did not know him.⁸³⁴³ In the Chamber’s view, this is not contradictory with his testimony according to which up until the event at the barricade, he had not personally known or met Mr Yekatom and had also not been aware that he was the leader of an Anti-Balaka group.⁸³⁴⁴ Likewise, the Chamber does not find this inconsistent with his testimony that he had seen Mr Yekatom in Mbaïki when Mr Yekatom went to see his relatives, and had been ‘introduced’ to him – an introduction which the witness clarified consisted in being told from a distance who that person was.⁸³⁴⁵

3406. P-2419 explained that the Anti-Balaka at the Sekia ‘base’ would stop passing vehicles and search them and, ‘[i]f they found a Muslim in the vehicle, they would beat and harm them’.⁸³⁵² P-2419 heard of a man from Bimon who had converted to Islam that he was arrested and beaten by the Anti-Balaka.⁸³⁵³

⁸³⁴⁵ P-1823: T-183, p. 75, line 23 – p. 77, line 7. The Chamber notes, in particular, P-1823’s following explanations: ‘I was managing the social aspect of the town, so when somebody arrives, I am told, “This Is X” or “This is Y.” And that’s it. But there was no friendship or any relationship between him and I that would mean I would approach him. I was just presented [...] he was just presented as being either a policemen [sic] or a gendarme or a FACA’; ‘I did not meet him. That’s what I said. I did not meet him. But he was introduced to me. Meeting someone is going to him and exchanging and talking. But from a distance, being told, “This is Mr X.” That’s it. I did not meet him.’

3408. Gérard Ouambou indicated, when asked if Muslims could pass through the checkpoints without paying, that there were no Muslims that would take this route because they were all in Mbaïki and no Muslim dared to take that route anyway because ‘[s]’il se faisait prendre, il aurait été tué, soit par l’Anti-Balaka, soit par la population’ (‘had they been caught, they would have been killed, either by the Anti-Balaka or by the population’).⁸³⁵⁸ In the witness’s view, even if Mr Yekatom said not to hurt Muslims, ‘sortir serait tent[er] le diable’ (‘going out would be like tempting the devil’).⁸³⁵⁹

3409. P-0954 described it as follows: ‘To pass these checkpoints, God had to be with you, really. Otherwise, you could be killed. So you had to be really careful. They were there to check the vehicles, to control the motorbikes, the people, and also to find out what equipment there was in the various vehicles, and whether it was a vehicle of the Muslims or the positions of the Muslims or whether the Muslims were passing through or finding out who was passing through in order to aid their position, to betray their position. These were all the points that checkpoints were looking for’.⁸³⁶⁰ The Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence challenges this part of P-0954’s evidence,⁸³⁶¹ amongst others, but considers that this witness’s unique position at the time, together with his closeness to Mr Yekatom’s group and knowledge of the area, makes his evidence particularly relevant. In the Chamber’s view, the fact that he used strong language to describe that situation in particular does not make this part of his evidence less reliable or credible. The Chamber also notes that in any event, his description accords with the other evidence outlined above.

3410. Significantly, P-1962 stated that Mr Yekatom's deputy, Cœur de Lion, had chased away the Muslims from PK9 to Mbaïki and along the road to Boda, that he wanted to chase out the Muslims that were still left in Boda, and that he did not hide the fact that he wanted to chase the Muslims out of the CAR and to their 'country of origin'.⁸³⁶²

3411. Moreover, the evidence also shows that the Anti-Balaka used the checkpoints on the PK9-Mbaïki axis to raise money to finance the group and its needs.

3412. In this context, the Chamber notes P-1839's description of the role and activities of the treasurer of Mr Yekatom's group during this time. In particular, P-1839 testified that the day after their arrival in Sekia, an element was assigned as treasurer and, as such, Mr Yekatom ordered this element 'to collect the money from the roadblocks'.⁸³⁶³ In the beginning, Mr Yekatom drove the treasurer to the roadblocks with his car, then the treasurer went by public transport; initially, it was every day and later every other day.⁸³⁶⁴ The treasurer collected money at the roadblocks of PK9, Sekia and Bimon gathered from the people crossing the road, and also vehicles, motorbikes and large trucks.⁸³⁶⁵ Mr Yekatom used this money if he needed to buy something and would sometimes direct to whom the treasurer had to give the collected money to.⁸³⁶⁶ According to P-1839, the treasurer saved the rest of the money in a bag, which she kept with her when sleeping.⁸³⁶⁷ When asked whether Mr Yekatom checked how the treasurer collected the money and what was done with it, P-1839 said that Mr Yekatom 'checked everything'.⁸³⁶⁸ She confirmed that the treasurer was with Mr Yekatom most of the time when the money was collected at checkpoints.⁸³⁶⁹

3413. Another insider witness, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, explained how their group was financed by the checkpoints at PK9, Sekia, Pissa and Mbaïki: ‘Everyone, who wanted to go through the checkpoints, paid some money for the A[nti]-B[alaka]. Some paid hundreds of CFA, some thousands. [...] The money that was taken at the checkpoints was taken to the ComZone, who would consult with his deputy in order to allocate the money for different needs, including food, medical treatment, fuel and transport. Every zone raised its money from the roadblocks.’⁸³⁷⁰

3414. P-0954 also stated that at his checkpoints on the road to Mbaïki, Mr Yekatom ‘would extort money’, and further indicated that ‘[t]he men at the checkpoints questioned the people, searched them and took their possession’.⁸³⁷¹

3415. Roger Okoa-Penguia indicated that people were asked to pay small amounts of money at the checkpoints, which were manned by the Anti-Balaka from January 2014 onwards, generally by FACA elements as ‘there was big money involved’.⁸³⁷² This suggests, contrary to the Yekatom Defence’s suggestion, that the money collected at the checkpoints amounted to more than ‘small amounts to pay for [the elements’] coffee’.⁸³⁷³

3416. Raymond Mongbandi stated that at the barriers in Sekia and Pissa, one had to pay the Anti-Balaka to pass through.⁸³⁷⁴

4. The flight of Muslims from locations along the PK9-Mbaïki axis

A significant proportion of the Muslim civilian population fled their towns and villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis due to and in fear of the advance of Mr Yekatom’s group along the axis.

3417. The evidence outlined below demonstrates that Muslim civilians living in towns and villages along and around the PK9-Mbaïki axis fled out of fear of attacks by the Anti-Balaka. The Chamber notes in this regard that the evidence includes a considerable amount of information on Muslim civilians leaving locations within the Lobaye prefecture, but not along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.⁸³⁷⁵ This particular information is relevant only for the purposes of the general context. At the same time, this information is also relevant in relation to Muslim civilians fleeing from Mbaïki to Chad and other locations in the CAR. The evidence below reflects what witnesses described in this general context.

3418. For instance, P-2389 stated that Muslims fled to Mbaïki from villages on the road from Bangui to Mbaïki and around Mbaïki because they feared that the Anti-Balaka were going to kill them; his friends from those villages told him so.⁸³⁷⁶ Regarding his hometown, Pissa, he stated that its Muslim inhabitants heard about ‘the Anti-Balaka attacks’ on the radio and television and through telephone contact with friends and family.⁸³⁷⁷ In fear of being attacked, the Muslims of Pissa, as well as Muslims from the surrounding villages who had gathered in Pissa, fled to Mbaïki.⁸³⁷⁸ This occurred around the time when ‘R[ombhot] and the Anti-Balaka’ were at the PK9 bridge.⁸³⁷⁹

3419.P-1666 testified that the fact that the Anti-Balaka started to attack civilians caused panic, and that events such as those in Boyali and Bouali where people were killed ‘led to a kind of psychosis’ which in turn led to the Muslims from the various communes in Mbaïki gathering together in the centre of Mbaïki.⁸³⁸⁰ P-1666 specified that Muslims began arriving to Mbaïki after Djotodia resigned.⁸³⁸¹

3420.P-2041 stated that Muslims mainly from the villages on the road from Bangui to Mbaïki and surrounding Mbaïki fled to Mbaïki because ‘they were running away from death at the hands of the Anti-Balaka’.⁸³⁸²

3421.P-2354 stated that Muslims started to flee to Mbaïki from villages along the main road and in the bush ‘out of fear of being killed by the Anti-Balaka’, who were ‘everywhere in the bush’.⁸³⁸³ He indicated that he personally drove Muslims from Pissa and Sabe to Mbaïki after they called him to tell him that they feared for their lives.⁸³⁸⁴ At the time, there were still Seleka elements in Mbaïki and Pissa.⁸³⁸⁵

3422.P-2353 provided a list of the villages from where Muslims fled to Mbaïki ‘fearing Anti[-]Balaka violence’.⁸³⁸⁶ Similarly to P-2354, he stated that after hearing on the phone that

Muslims in the small villages between Mbaïki and Bangui felt unsafe and feared for their lives at the hands of the Anti-Balaka, he drove Muslims and their goods from Bagandou, Bokoko and Bouchia to Mbaïki.⁸³⁸⁷ At the time, the Seleka were still in Mbaïki.⁸³⁸⁸

3423. Further, the evidence shows that Muslim civilians decided to flee their towns and villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis after hearing that Mr Yekatom's group advanced along the axis towards Mbaïki, and as the Seleka were retreating towards Mbaïki.

3424. P-2389, a Muslim inhabitant of Pissa, explained that he heard from various truck drivers travelling from Bangui that 'the Anti-Balaka were coming to P[issa]'.⁸³⁸⁹ Around that time, the Christian friends of his children told them that they would come back and take over their house and property.⁸³⁹⁰ P-2389 realised that the situation was 'serious' when he then heard that 'R[ombhot]' was five kilometres away from Pissa.⁸³⁹¹ The Christian youth in Pissa said that the Anti-Balaka were going to attack Pissa and kill all the Muslims, and despite the youth promising him that nothing would happen to him and that he could stay as a son of the village, this 'added to the fear that was building up'.⁸³⁹² At the same time, they were hearing that the Anti-Balaka had killed two individuals in the village of Sakoulou, whose bodies he saw when they were brought to Pissa, as well as two Muslims in Bangui-Bouchia.⁸³⁹³

3425. P-2389 further explained that on 27 January 2014, his family, scared when they saw the other Muslims leaving, also fled to Mbaïki.⁸³⁹⁴ That same evening, and believing that the Anti-Balaka would kill him if he did not leave Pissa, P-2389 also fled to Mbaïki, on his motorbike.⁸³⁹⁵ According to the witness, he was one of the last Muslims to leave Pissa.⁸³⁹⁶

P-2389 heard that on the day following his arrival in Mbaïki, ‘R[ombhot] and his men’ arrived in Pissa.⁸³⁹⁷

3426.P-2419, a Muslim inhabitant of Bimon, explained that two weeks before Michel Djotodia’s resignation, the Chadian embassy sent vehicles to Bimon to ‘evacuate’ the ‘Chadian’ Muslims, many of whom were born in the CAR and were ‘Central African themselves’.⁸³⁹⁸ These people told the witness that they had heard some youth saying that ‘the Chadians would be targeted because they had helped the Seleka’ and were fleeing because ‘they feared that there would be an Anti-Balaka attack against them’.⁸³⁹⁹ Some individuals of Fulata ethnicity who were also Muslims left with the ‘Chadians’, but 29 Fulata then returned to Bimon.⁸⁴⁰⁰ Thereafter, P-2419 was threatened by some villagers and saw ‘two Catholics’ breaking into the Bimon mosque.⁸⁴⁰¹

3427.P-2419 further explained that on the evening of the Saturday following Michel Djotodia’s resignation, the local youths of the village rose against the Seleka and after hearing a young Christian saying that ‘[a]ll Arabs are the same’, he decided to hide.⁸⁴⁰² From his hiding place, he saw how the local youth set alight the mosque, and looted and destroyed houses of Muslims.⁸⁴⁰³ P-2419 then hid in the house of his brother-in-law, a Christian; on the following morning, he saw through a window how Mr Yekatom arrived in Bimon with ‘his men’ and parked their vehicles in P-2419’s brother-in-law’s courtyard, and thereafter left, leaving some of the men that had come in the vehicles behind.⁸⁴⁰⁴ On the night of Mr Yekatom’s

The Chamber also notes that P-2419 described seeing Mr Yekatom, whom he had seen many times before, walking with two men whom he later introduced as Alkanto and Cœur de Lion and surrounded by about 15 Anti-Balaka on foot (see P-2419 Statement, CAR-OTP-2112-0036-R03, at 0050-51, paras 75-82, 87); seeing Mr Yekatom introducing himself as ‘chief of the Anti-Balaka’ and saying ‘[p]eople should not be afraid when they see the Anti-Balaka, I am their chief’ (see at 0051-arrival, P-2419 fled to the bush near the village of États-Unis, where he met the 29 Fulata who had returned to Bimon.⁸⁴⁰⁵ He described that life was difficult in the bush, they slept outdoors, there was not enough to eat, and he did not have any news about his family.⁸⁴⁰⁶ While in the bush, P-2419 heard that the Anti-Balaka in Bimon searched the houses one by one looking for Muslims as well as people's mobile phones looking for Muslims' phone numbers.⁸⁴⁰⁷ After two weeks in the bush, he walked to Bangui with one of the Fulata, accompanied by a local Christian from Bimon, pushing a 'pousse-pousse' with firewood as disguise, since this work is not usually done by Muslims.⁸⁴⁰⁸ On the way to Bangui, they passed Anti-Balaka barricades at Ndangala, Yamboro, Sekia Ngyabourou and Samba, with their cart being searched at each barricade and them being asked to pay 100 francs at the Sekia barrier.⁸⁴⁰⁹ P-2419 thought they arrived at the Central Mosque in PK5 on 27 January 2014.⁸⁴¹⁰ Once there, one of the local Christians told him that the Anti-Balaka had been informed of the place where the Fulata had been hiding in the bush but that 'Rambo' had stopped them from killing the Fulata because some of them were his 'cousins'.⁸⁴¹¹

3428. The Chamber notes that while P-2419 initially hid due to the threats and aggressiveness of the local youth, he was forced to continue hiding as a consequence of the arrival of Mr Yekatom's group in Bimon. The Chamber further notes that in fact, P-2419 had to find a

The Chamber notes that the witness referred to 'Rambo' in his written statement and his testimony, but that it is clear from the context that this is a reference to Mr Yekatom.

The Chamber notes that P-2419, in his statement, indicated that the Anti-Balaka asked them to pay 100 CFA at each barrier and that the FACA also asked them to pay 100 CFA at the PK9 bridge (see P-2419 Statement, CAR-OTP-2112-0036-R03, at 0058, para. 124). However, the witness clarified in oral testimony that they paid 100 CFA at the Sekia barricade, and nothing at the other barricades (see T-177, p. 5, line 20 – p. 6, line 2). The Chamber further notes that P-2419 indicated that at the Sekia barrier, he saw one of the youngsters who participated in the attack of Bimon and later joined Mr Yekatom's group (see P-2419 Statement, CAR-OTP-2112-0036-R03, at 0058, para. 123).

safer hiding place, the bush, upon the Anti-Balaka's arrival in Bimon; and after hearing that they were looking for Muslims, he fled to Bangui, disguising himself as a non-Muslim. The Chamber therefore considers that P-2419 ultimately fled his village due to the arrival of Mr Yekatom's group thereto.

3429. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that following an incident in Mbata around the time of Djotodia's resignation in which the Seleka killed six people, 'the local militia' killed a Muslim and some houses were burnt and destroyed, Seleka colonel Anour helped the Muslims in Mbata move to Mbaïki.⁸⁴¹² He explained that the Muslims feared an Anti-Balaka attack after the Bangui Attack; they noticed that after 5 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka movement was gaining momentum as more people joined their ranks.⁸⁴¹³ He also explained that Muslims felt 'unprotected' because there were no Seleka in Mbata at the time, so they followed colonel Anour's suggestion to join other Muslims in Mbaïki, 'where they would be protected by the Seleka'.⁸⁴¹⁴ While Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo did not specify a timeframe for the departure of Muslims from Mbata to Mbaïki, the Chamber considers that the details of his account regarding the Seleka's intervention, similar to those of P-2354,⁸⁴¹⁵ allow it to reasonably conclude that it occurred at the time when, and because, Mr Yekatom's group advanced along the axis.

3430. Diakité Aboubakar stated that after 'the Anti-Balaka' killed a Muslim father and a son, and wounded a pregnant woman and her baby, in the area of Pissa, fear increased in the surrounding villages, rumours spread that 'the Anti-Balaka' who killed the two men were going to attack one village after the other, and the Seleka 'evacuated' the Muslims to Mbaïki.⁸⁴¹⁶ The witness also stated that he believed that the Seleka 'helped' because they knew that their president had lost power and they were leaving so they wanted to protect the Muslims in the villages from being killed by bringing them to Mbaïki.⁸⁴¹⁷ Diakité Aboubakar indicated that they heard that the crimes were being committed by 'the elements of

R[ambo]’.⁸⁴¹⁸ At the same time, he specified that he heard of ‘R[ambo]’ for the first time on 5 December 2013, and that he also heard that he and his elements were based at PK9.⁸⁴¹⁹ Further, the witness stated that he had worried about what would happen when the Anti-Balaka arrived in Mbaïki, feared that they would kill their wives and children and ‘be left at God’s mercy’; and also feared that even if they ‘escaped from the city alive’, their mosques, property and livestock would be destroyed.⁸⁴²⁰

3431. The Chamber notes that Diakité Aboubakar indicated that the Seleka ‘evacuated’ the Muslims to Mbaïki following the Bangui-Bouchia incident, but at the same time indicated that he heard that Imam Mattar of Bagandou was killed ‘during this period’⁸⁴²¹ – when in fact, according to P-2041, the imam of Bagandou was killed at the end of January 2014.⁸⁴²² The Chamber considers that this timeframe, January 2014, is consistent with the timing of Mr Yekatom’s group’s advance towards Mbaïki – to which Diakité Aboubakar also referred when he expressed being worried at the time for what would happen ‘when the Anti-Balaka arrived to Mbaïki’ – and with the Seleka’s ‘evacuation’ of Muslims to Mbaïki – which the witness believed was taking place because ‘their president had lost power and they were leaving so they wanted to protect the Muslims in the villages from being killed by bringing them to Mbaïki’.⁸⁴²³

3432. Regarding P-2354 and P-2353, both of whom helped to transport Muslims from villages such as Pissa and Bagandou to Mbaïki, the Chamber notes that while they also did not provide any timeframe, they indicated that the Seleka were ‘still’ in Mbaïki (and also ‘still’ in Pissa, in P-2354’s case). In the Chamber’s view, this indication, in combination with other details of their evidence as outlined below, suggests that they helped Muslims flee to Mbaïki after Djotodia’s resignation and after Mr Yekatom’s group initiated its advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.

3433. In relation to P-2353,⁸⁴²⁴ the Chamber notes that while he initially stated that he first made a trip to Bagandou to take Muslims to Mbaïki on 29 December 2013,⁸⁴²⁵ he later testified that the last trip he made was to Bagandou and that it took place on the evening that the Seleka left Mbaïki⁸⁴²⁶ – which, according to the Chamber’s finding below, occurred on 29 January 2014.⁸⁴²⁷ Therefore, according to his testimony, P-2353 would have made the trip to Bagandou on 29 January 2014, when indeed the Seleka were still in Mbaïki.⁸⁴²⁸ Further, P-2353 indicated that at the time, all the Muslims left Bagandou except for some farmers and an imam who was killed by ‘young people acting [...] as Anti-Balaka’.⁸⁴²⁹ The Chamber notes that this timeframe is consistent with P-2041’s evidence according to which Imam Matar of Bagandou was killed by ‘the youth of B[agandou]’ on 25 January 2014, when the Anti-Balaka had not yet arrived in the village.⁸⁴³⁰

3434. Further, the Chamber notes that P-2353 indicated that people felt safer in Mbaïki because of the Seleka’s presence and that as long as the Seleka remained in Mbaïki, the Anti-Balaka stayed away.⁸⁴³¹ In the Chamber’s view, this suggests that the Anti-Balaka were already active in the area, but had not yet reached Mbaïki. Significantly, P-2353 added that ‘[a]fter D[jotodia] resigned, the number of people fleeing the villages increased’.⁸⁴³²

3435. Regarding P-2354, he stated that people left their villages out of fear of being killed by the Anti-Balaka, who were ‘everywhere in the bush’ according to the rumours brought by the Muslims who fled their villages and made their way to Mbaïki.⁸⁴³³ He also stated that the Seleka encouraged Muslims to gather in the centre of Mbaïki so that they could protect them better than if they would stay far away in the bush.⁸⁴³⁴ Considering the above evidence that indicates that the Seleka retreated towards Mbaïki after Djotodia's resignation and around the time that Mr Yekatom's group advanced along the PK9-Mbaïki axis,⁸⁴³⁵ the Chamber is satisfied that the fleeing of Muslims referred to by P-2354 can also be situated around that time.

⁸⁴²⁴ The Chamber notes that while P-2353 provided evidence about the fleeing of Muslims from villages that are not along the axis but in Lobaye, such as Bagandou, his evidence is relevant in terms of the timing of certain events, including the killing of the imam of Bagandou and the overall departure of Muslims to Mbaïki.

⁸⁴²⁸ See paragraph 3462 below. In this regard, the Chamber notes that the evidence indicates that the Seleka left Mbaïki on the night of 29 January 2014, before Mr Yekatom’s group arrived in Mbaïki on 30 January 2014.

3436. The Chamber is indeed of the view that the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis caused the retreat of the Seleka from the area. In this regard, the Chamber notes that as discussed further below, the Seleka based in Mbaïki in fact left the town the night prior to the Anti-Balaka's arrival thereto.⁸⁴³⁶ The Chamber further considers that this is also how Muslim residents of the villages and towns along the axis perceived these movements – as Mr Yekatom's group progressively advanced along the axis, the Seleka retreated and assisted the Muslim civilian population to move to Mbaïki, where the Seleka were 'still' present and could protect them from the Anti-Balaka.⁸⁴³⁷

3437. In this regard, the Chamber takes note of the evidence pointing to the Seleka encouraging the Muslim civilian population to move to Mbaïki or assisting them with the transport,⁸⁴³⁸ and is satisfied, in light of the evidence outlined in the present section, that they would have fled regardless of the assistance provided by the Seleka.

3438. The Chamber notes that Muslims fled leaving their houses and other possessions behind.⁸⁴³⁹
Subsequently, some of these houses were occupied or destroyed.⁸⁴⁴⁰

3439. Turning to the Yekatom Defence's arguments, the Chamber takes note of its assertion that 'Muslims left the axis due to coercive circumstances that were not created or contributed to by the RFACPP', arguing that (i) the Bangui-Bouchia incident that set in motion the progressive 'exodus' of Muslims from towns and villages along and near the axis cannot be attributed to Mr Yekatom nor to the 'RFACPP';⁸⁴⁴¹ (ii) Muslims' departure from the axis was caused by 'the interrelated factors of the withdrawal of the Seleka and the outbreak of mass anti-Muslim violence';⁸⁴⁴² (iii) plans to evacuate Muslims from Lobaye were in motion prior to the arrival of 'the RFACPP' in Mbaïki;⁸⁴⁴³ and (iv) the advance of 'the RFACPP' was not a factor in the departure of Muslims from towns and villages along the axis.⁸⁴⁴⁴

3440. First, the Chamber indeed notes that the killing of two men in Bangui-Bouchia in October 2013 occurred months before Mr Yekatom's group advanced along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.⁸⁴⁴⁵

⁸⁴⁴⁰ See e.g. D29-5013: T-286, p. 44, lines 13-20 (testifying that the houses of the Muslims she saw in PK5, who were displaced from Mbaïki, were occupied); D29-5012: T-294, p. 42, line 24 – p. 44, line 24 (testifying that after the Muslims left Mbaïki, their houses were occupied by the non-Muslims, which were 'local people, people from Mbaïki', and that there were instances in which Muslims themselves entrusted their houses to non-Muslims to protect them, in the hope that they would return one day); P-2353 Statement, CAR-OTP-2100-0226-R03, at 0238, para. 64, at 0239, para. 70 (stating that his properties in Mbaïki, from where he fled in fear of the Anti-Balaka, were completely destroyed, although he was told that '[n]ot very many houses were broken into and destroyed in M[baïki]'). ⁸⁴⁴⁵ Report, CAR-D29-0005-0497, at 0499.

3441. Second, the Chamber notes that even if some witnesses relate the movement of Muslims from along the axis also to the events in Bangui-Bouchia, their evidence includes further details which allow to date such movement more specifically.⁸⁴⁴⁶ P-1666, for instance, testified that people from the various communes began to travel to Mbaïki after the events concerning ‘Aba Zakaria and Mahamat’ (referring to the Bangui-Bouchia incident), over the course of seven to 10 days,⁸⁴⁴⁷ but at the same time indicated that Muslims began moving, going to Mbaïki, after Michel Djotodia resigned.⁸⁴⁴⁸ Bearing in mind that placing this movement generally ‘after’ the Bangui-Bouchia incident does not indicate that it was immediately thereafter, the Chamber considers of import the witness’s specification as to when Muslims moving from the communes began arriving to Mbaïki.

3442. Third, and relatedly, the Chamber notes that the fact that witnesses mentioned incidents such as the one in Bangui-Bouchia and described how these fuelled their fear does not detract from their evidence that they fled their villages due to Mr Yekatom’s group becoming active in the area and progressively advancing along the axis, towards their villages. As outlined above, this is the case of P-2389 and his family, who fled to Mbaïki at the end of January 2014 after hearing that Mr Yekatom was five kilometres away from their village, Pissa. It is also the case of P-2354, who drove Muslims from Pissa to Mbaïki around that time. Likewise, P-2419 hid in the bush and later fled to Bangui after seeing how Mr Yekatom’s group arrived and took over Bimon.⁸⁴⁴⁹

3443. Fourth, regarding the Yekatom Defence’s suggestion that two interrelated factors, notably the withdrawal of the Seleka and ‘the outbreak of mass anti-Muslim violence’, exclusively explain the Muslims’ departure from the axis,⁸⁴⁵⁰ the Chamber considers that the fact that some Muslim inhabitants along the axis could have fled due to these factors does not detract from the fact that other Muslim inhabitants fled due to the advance of Mr Yekatom’s group along the axis. In fact, considering the evidence outlined above, the Chamber is of the view

⁸⁴⁴⁸ P-1666: T-231, p. 23, lines 11-16.

⁸⁴⁵⁰ Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 495.

that a significant proportion of the Muslim civilian population along the axis fled to Mbaïki due to this advance.

3444. Accordingly, and in light of the above conclusion, the Chamber considers that the Yekatom Defence's further submission that the 'RFACPP's advance was not a factor in the departure of Muslims from towns and villages along the axis' is without merit.⁸⁴⁵¹ Regarding its related submission that evidence indicating the contrary 'arose from an objectively unfounded belief that the RFACPP would target Muslims that remained',⁸⁴⁵² the Chamber recalls P-1839's evidence that at the time of the group's presence on the Mbaïki road, Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto instructed the elements to kill all the Muslims in the area.⁸⁴⁵³ The Chamber further recalls its discussion of the way in which Anti-Balaka groups, including that of Mr Yekatom, pursued and implemented its core objective of removing Michel Djotodia and the Seleka from power, which equated the Muslim civilian population in general, especially in western CAR, with the Seleka and thus perceived this population as their enemy.⁸⁴⁵⁴ The Chamber also refers to its findings on the acts perpetrated by Mr Yekatom's elements in Mbaïki, including the harassing and threats made to the Muslim civilian population⁸⁴⁵⁵ and Djido Saleh's killing.⁸⁴⁵⁶ Likewise, in relation to the Yekatom Defence's submission that 'Muslims' fear of the RFACPP appears to have been rooted in their mistaken belief that the RFACPP and the "anti-balaka" [...] were one and the same',⁸⁴⁵⁷ the Chamber recalls its findings concerning the relation of Mr Yekatom's group with the Anti-Balaka movement.⁸⁴⁵⁸

3445. Lastly, the Chamber also considers without merit the Yekatom Defence's arguments that '[p]lans to evacuate Muslims from Lobaye were in motion prior to the arrival of the RFACPP in Mbaïki'.⁸⁴⁵⁹ As discussed in detail further below, the evidence shows that the decision to remove the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki was taken at the Mbaïki meeting on 30

January 2014 and while there were initial enquiries and discussions in advance, these occurred in any event after Mr Yekatom's group initiated its advance along the axis.⁸⁴⁶⁰

At least 1,000 Muslim civilians who fled from locations along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and in the Lobaye prefecture went to Mbaïki, substantially increasing the Muslim population of the town. Muslims in Mbaïki at the time were living in difficulty, under conditions of overcrowding, hunger and fear of death from the Anti-Balaka.

3446. The Chamber recalls its finding that due to the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïxi axis, a significant proportion of the Muslim civilian population fled their towns and villages along the axis.⁸⁴⁶¹ The Chamber further recalls the information received on Muslim civilians leaving locations within the Lobaye prefecture, but not along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.⁸⁴⁶²

3447. Raymond Mongbandi stated that Muslims fleeing to Mbaïki 'were numerous running into thousands' and 'might have doubled the number of Muslims [already living] in Mbaïki'.⁸⁴⁶³ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo indicated that he believed there was anything between 500 to thousands of Muslims from other areas which were added to the population of Muslims already residing in Mbaïki at the time.⁸⁴⁶⁴ P-2389 stated that at least 500 Muslims moved to Mbaïki at that time.⁸⁴⁶⁵ P-2041 estimated that around 2,000 Muslims fled from the neighbouring villages to Mbaïki.⁸⁴⁶⁶ D29-5013 testified that at least 3,000 Muslims fled to Mbaïki to find refuge.⁸⁴⁶⁷ Guerrino Perin testified that 'over a thousand' Muslims fled to Mbaïki.⁸⁴⁶⁸ P-2354 stated that while he did not know the number of refugees in Mbaïki, 'there were many, more than a thousand'.⁸⁴⁶⁹ P-1666 provided a number far beyond these estimations, indicating that he estimated that 15,000 or 16,000 Muslims from Mbaïki's commune fled to Mbaïki over the course of seven to 10 days.⁸⁴⁷⁰

3449. Several witnesses described the living conditions of the Muslim community in Mbaïki as being very difficult at the time.⁸⁴⁷³

⁸⁴⁷² See also Press Article, CAR-OTP-2117-0687, at 0687 (indicating that on 6 February, more than 2,500 Muslims of Mbaïki embarked on Chadian military trucks to be 'evacuated'); Press Article, CAR-OTP-2001-4422, at 4422 (referring to the fact that between 4 and 12 February 2014, thousands of Muslims chased out of their villages and sheltered in Mbaïki, left the town). The Chamber notes the Ngaïssona Defence's observations regarding reliability and authenticity of CAR-OTP-2117-0687 (see Annex A to Defence Response to "Prosecution's Fifteenth submission of miscellaneous items of evidence via the "bar table"" ICC-01/14-01/18-2058, 7 September 2023, ICC-01/14-01/18-2084-Conf-AnxA, pp. 20-22, 24). In the view of the Chamber, its use of this item is limited to underscore its finding based on other evidence available. While the information from the article as such has not been verified with the author, it was considered merely in the context of additional evidence. Furthermore, while the URL may not be entirely visible to thereby verify the information, the Chamber notes that according to the JEM code, as well as the submission of the Prosecution (see Annex to Prosecution's Fifteenth submission of miscellaneous items of evidence via the "bar table", 25 August 2023, ICC-01/14-01/18-2058-Conf-Anx, p. 15), the document was provided by an individual who used to be on the Prosecution's witness list, and who appears to be the author of this article. The Chamber also notes the Yekatom Defence's opposition to the submission of CAR-OTP-2001-4422 on the basis of prejudice outweighing its probative value (see Annex A to Yekatom Defence Response to 'Prosecution's Eleventh Application for the Submission of Open-source Evidence from the Bar Table', 21 August 2023, ICC-01/14-01/18-2037-Conf-AnxA, pp. 11-12). In this regard, the Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence's arguments mainly concerned the content of this article in relation to the killing of Djido Saleh. As in the current context, the Chamber merely considered the information regarding the situation in Mbaïki in the context of other information, and the Chamber is of the view that no prejudice arises in this regard.

3450. According to P-2353, Muslims arrived in Mbaïki with ‘nothing on them’.⁸⁴⁷⁴ In this context, the Chamber recalls that Muslims had to flee leaving their possessions behind.⁸⁴⁷⁵ Muslims arriving to Mbaïki mainly stayed in the neighborhoods of Yerima and Baguirmi, which were predominantly Muslim.⁸⁴⁷⁶ Witnesses indicated that within these neighborhoods, some Muslims were hosted by Muslim family or friends,⁸⁴⁷⁷ while others had to sleep on house porches,⁸⁴⁷⁸ under trees⁸⁴⁷⁹ or at the Baguirmi mosque.⁸⁴⁸⁰ Raymond Mongbandi reported that Muslims coming from ‘the B[oda] area’ went to the MISCA base, located at the coffee cooperative behind the prefect’s office in Mbaïki.⁸⁴⁸¹

3451. According to Raymond Mongbandi, there was ‘little food’ in Mbaïki.⁸⁴⁸² P-2389 stated that ‘[a]s the number of Muslims in Mbaïki started to increase it became more difficult to get food’.⁸⁴⁸³ P-2353 indicated that they could ‘barely eat’ in Mbaïki.⁸⁴⁸⁴ Diakité Aboubakar provided the following detailed account:

⁸⁴⁸³ P-2389 Statement, CAR-OTP-2104-0033-R03, at 0041, para. 45. The Chamber notes that D29-5013 testified that Muslims in Mbaïki ‘were able to eat because they were traders so they did have something to eat and they used the young people who they paid in order to buy foodstuffs for them, vegetables, [etc.]’, and also responded, when asked whether there were food problems, that Muslims ‘were able to manage this’ (see D29-5013: T-286, p. 31, lines 3-19). The Chamber, however, notes that according to the information provided by D29-5013, she was not based in Mbaïki and only went there three or four times in January and February 2014. It therefore considers that other witnesses, such as those living in Mbaïki at the time, can provide a more accurate picture of the living conditions, and will thus not take into consideration this part of D29-5013’s testimony.

⁸⁴⁸⁴ P-2353: T-161, p. 23, lines 1-12. The Chamber notes that witnesses highlighted the help provided by both the Muslim and non-Muslim communities and, in particular, by Guerrino Perin, who provided the displaced Muslims with milk, flour, oil, sugar, rice or soap (see e.g. P-1838 Statement, CAR-OTP-2100-0252-R05, at 0263-64, para. 61; P-2041: T-229, p. 81, line 24 – p. 82, line 4; P-2353 Statement, CAR-OTP-2100-0226-R03, at 0234, para. 46, at 0237, para. 60; P-2353: T-161, p. 22, line 20 – p. 23, line 12; P-2354 Statement, CAR-OTP-2105-0991-R03, at 0999-1000, paras 46-47). The Chamber also notes that Guerrino Perin clarified that he did not provide this help directly, but through Caritas (see D29-5015: T-254, p. 52, lines 11-13).

When the evacuees arrived in M[baïki], prices of everything went high. There was not enough meat for the people. There was a general shortage of food including vegetables like coco, aubergines, peanuts, manioc etc. Some of the evacuees had brought food but that was all finished. The reserve in the city was all depleted. By the time they left the city, there was nothing left. Life was very difficult. They must have remained in M[baïki] for about two weeks before the trucks came and took them. At this time, the women were even scared to go to the market because the Anti-Balaka were walking around armed with knives and machetes. We had never seen anything like this.⁸⁴⁸⁵

3452. According to P-2353 and P-2354, there were health problems because the hospitals and health centres were not working.⁸⁴⁸⁶ P-2354 specified that except for matrons, there were no doctors or nurses available.⁸⁴⁸⁷

3453. Several witnesses described the atmosphere in Mbaïki as one of hunger and fear. In particular, Raymond Mongbandi reported that '[t]he refugees were constantly worried, fearing an Anti-Balaka attack with them as the target for retribution and they were unhappy as they felt they were being forced out and into Chad'.⁸⁴⁸⁸ In the same vein, P-2353 testified that 'it was hunger and the death threat that weighed on the populations. When you are hungry, when you've got nothing to eat and you've got the death threats as well, life becomes terrible'.⁸⁴⁸⁹

5. Arrival of Mr Yekatom's group to Mbaïki

Mr Yekatom and elements under his control entered Mbaïki on 30 January 2014. That day, a meeting was held at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki, with Mr Yekatom and members of his group, representatives of the Mbaïki civilian and religious authorities, international organisations and NGOs, as well as the Sangaris. At the meeting, the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki, which was a foregone conclusion at that point, was decided. After the meeting finished, Mr Yekatom addressed the crowds outside of the meeting location and subsequently at Mbaïki's bus station, where he delivered 'peace messages' similar to those he had expressed at the meeting. The presence of the Sangaris and other international actors in Mbaïki at that time compelled Mr Yekatom to bring this 'peace message' to Mbaïki and prevented attacks of his group against the Muslim civilian population. After the meeting, the prefect and other individuals contacted the authorities to arrange the convoy that would transport the Muslim civilian population out of Mbaïki.

3454. The Chamber recalls that before the arrival of Mr Yekatom's group to Pissa, the Seleka left the village,⁸⁴⁹⁰ and further recalls in this context that the Seleka retreated from the area due to the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.⁸⁴⁹¹ The evidence indicates that once Mr Yekatom and his group had settled in Pissa, contacts were established, including with individuals from Mbaïki, with a view to discussing Mr Yekatom and his group setting up also in Mbaïki.

3455. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, prefect of the Lobaye prefecture at the time, testified that the Seleka leaders in Mbaïki told him that Mr Yekatom contacted them, telling them to leave Mbaïki so that the Anti-Balaka could take control of the town.⁸⁴⁹² Following this first conversation, the Seleka leaders contacted Mr Yekatom and passed the phone to the witness.⁸⁴⁹³ Mr Yekatom introduced himself as 'the person in charge of the Anti-Balaka in the area' and told the witness that he wanted to go to Mbaïki to meet the Seleka leaders⁸⁴⁹⁴ to negotiate the departure of the Seleka.⁸⁴⁹⁵ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo told Mr Yekatom that it would not be possible for him and the Anti-Balaka to come to Mbaïki unless the witness met with them before, to which Mr Yekatom agreed.⁸⁴⁹⁶ After obtaining the agreement of the Seleka leaders in Mbaïki, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo went to Pissa together with priest 'A[ntarez]' and a pastor to meet the Anti-Balaka.⁸⁴⁹⁷

In oral testimony, P-1813 specified that Mr Yekatom introduced himself as 'the person in charge of the Anti-Balaka south of Bangui', area which the witness understood to be 'the region of Bimbo, in the direction of the prefecture of Lobaye' (see P-1813: T-180, p. 9, lines 2-22).

See also P-1838 Statement, CAR-OTP-2100-0252-R05, at 0264, para. 66 (stating that prefect Kouroupe-Owe went to Pissa to persuade Mr Yekatom not to attack Mbaïki, but to negotiate instead); D29-5012: T-295, p. 5, line 18 – p. 6, line 4 (indicating that the interreligious platform approached Colonel Anour to discuss their initiative, and after he agreed, they went to see Mr Yekatom in Pissa).

3456. Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba testified that he first contacted Mr Yekatom proposing to hold a meeting in Pissa, which Mr Yekatom accepted.⁸⁴⁹⁸ The witness and the members of the interreligious platform, whose mission was to bring peace and social cohesion in Mbaïki, considered it ‘absolutely necessary’ to contact Mr Yekatom.⁸⁴⁹⁹ Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba referred to the ‘climate of fear and worry’ in Mbaïki related to the general context in the CAR, including incidents occurring in neighbouring villages, and the fact that the Seleka were in Mbaïki and the Anti-Balaka in Pissa, less than 30 minutes away.⁸⁵⁰⁰ The witness testified he contacted Mr Yekatom because he received information that the person responsible for the Anti-Balaka group in Pissa was Mr Yekatom.⁸⁵⁰¹ Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba went to Pissa with the prefect ‘Mr Alexandre’, and two pastors.⁸⁵⁰²

3457. The Chamber notes that despite the disparities in the accounts of how the meeting with Mr Yekatom in Pissa was arranged, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo and Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba agreed on the fundamental fact that, after Mr Yekatom accepted, they met him in Pissa together with one or two pastors from Mbaïki.

3458. Both witnesses indicated that they waited for Mr Yekatom at the Anti-Balaka base or barrier in Pissa.⁸⁵⁰³ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo said some of the elements threatened them verbally.⁸⁵⁰⁴ Some minutes later, Mr Yekatom and his ‘assistants’, including Cœur de Lion, arrived at the barrier in two Toyota pick-up trucks, holding Kalashnikovs, some wearing civilian clothes and others military attire.⁸⁵⁰⁵ Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba indicated that he had not seen Mr Yekatom before but that when he arrived at the Anti-Balaka base, he knew it was him because ‘when the leader is present, you can feel it and [they] understood that it was him'.⁸⁵⁰⁶ Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba indicated that the elements wore military clothes and carried Kalashnikovs.⁸⁵⁰⁷

3459. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo and Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba indicated that they held the meeting with Mr Yekatom inside a church in Pissa.⁸⁵⁰⁸ According to Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, Mr Yekatom said that he wanted the Seleka to leave Mbaïki without any damage, 'upon mutual consent'.⁸⁵⁰⁹ Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba recalled that Mr Yekatom introduced himself as a member of the FACA and said that he and his men were not there to attack or clash with the civilian Muslims, but that the movement was against Djotodia and the Seleka.⁸⁵¹⁰ Mr Yekatom agreed to have a meeting with the Seleka in Mbaïki and, thereafter, the delegation returned to Mbaïki and informed the Seleka leaders, who accepted to have the meeting.⁸⁵¹¹

3460. D29-5013 described the preface to the meeting which was eventually held at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki, as further outlined below, differently. According to D29-5013, after learning that the Sangaris were in Mbaïki to 'observe' rather than to protect the civilian population, the NGO for which she worked, DRC, through UNHCR, 'initiated' the meeting in Mbaïki so that the authorities could find a way to 'better protect everybody'.⁸⁵¹² At the same time, she specified that her NGO did not want to take the lead in organising this meeting for safety reasons.⁸⁵¹³ Roger Okoa-Penguia similarly indicated that D29-5013 had contacted Mr Yekatom, 'the prefecture in Mbaïki', 'Bishop Guerino' and 'everybody in Mbaïki' to hold a meeting and find a solution for the Muslims in the town.⁸⁵¹⁴ In a speech

See D29-5015: T-254, p. 41, line 5 – p. 42, line 20 (confirming that 'the prefect to Pissa' and 'Abbot Antarese' met Mr Yekatom in Pissa and agreed on having a meeting in Mbaïki). See also P-1838: T-215, p. 24, lines 12-18 (indicating that the Lobaye prefect sent him a memo since he was the mayor of Mbaïki and the meeting was going to be held at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki, as well as to Mr Yekatom).

The Chamber notes that Guerrino Perin was also referred to or known as the 'Bishop of Mbaïki', 'Bishop Rhino' or 'Rhino' (see e.g. P-1813 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2069-0035-R02, at 0043, para. 52).

he gave on 12 February 2014, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo further mentioned that there had been ‘an attempt at reconciliation’ between the Seleka and the Anti-Balaka ‘prepared hand in hand by the HCR, the DRC[,] [...] the inter-religious platform and the préfet’, which was transformed into ‘a security meeting’ on 30 January 2014.⁸⁵¹⁵

3461. The Chamber does not consider the above evidence to be mutually exclusive. The evidence by Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo and Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba is clear on their meeting with Mr Yekatom in Pissa to arrange a meeting with the Seleka still present in Mbaïki. That D29-5013 similarly reached out with a view to organising such a meeting which then included further international stakeholders does not distract from this evidence. Importantly, and as further discussed below, a meeting at the St Jeanne d’Arc Church in Mbaïki did take place, albeit not involving the Seleka.

3462. During the night of the day before the meeting was supposed to take place, the Seleka groups based in Mbaïki left the town.⁸⁵¹⁶

3463. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom’s negotiations with Seleka colonel Anour led to the peaceful withdrawal of the latter’s forces from Mbaïki by the end of January 2014.⁸⁵¹⁷ The Chamber considers that the evidence pointed to in this regard is inapt to reach this conclusion. While Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo described hearing from Seleka elements

⁸⁵¹⁶ P-1813 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2069-0035-R02, at 0042-43, para. 49 (stating that at midnight of the day before they were supposed to hold the meeting, the Seleka called him to say they were leaving Mbaïki); D29-5012: T-293, p. 41, lines 12-18, p. 45, line 15 – p. 46, line 6 (indicating that the Seleka left Mbaïki one night, before 30 January 2014); D29-5015: T-254, p. 36, lines 10-24, p. 42, lines 6-20; T-255, p. 38, line 20 – p. 39, line 5 (testifying that the Seleka were supposed to attend the meeting but ‘the day before [they] were supposed to have a meeting, they left’). The Chamber notes in this regard that (i) P-1813 testified that one night the Seleka called him to say that they were leaving and moving to another place following their superior’s instructions; (ii) Guerrino Perin testified that Colonel Anour called his deputy ‘Abbot Antarese’ and informed him that the Seleka were leaving; and (iii) Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba testified that they learned the Seleka left one night because two or three Central African Seleka elements who refused to leave sought refuge at the cathedral the same night. The Chamber does not consider that Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba not mentioning being called by Colonel Anour discredits, as such, the evidence of Guerrino Perin or, in turn, the reliability of the testimony of Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba. The fact remains that the Seleka left Mbaïki on the night of 29 January 2014. The Chamber further notes the evidence of P-2353, who, while stating that the Seleka left ‘shortly’ after Michel Djotodia had resigned, also said that the Seleka left at night, without warning, and that the Anti-Balaka arrived the next morning (see P-2353 Statement, CAR-OTP-2100-0226-R03, at 0234, para. 47). P-1666 similarly testified that the Seleka left ‘one day or two days’ before the Anti-Balaka arrived in Mbaïki (see P-1666: T-230, p. 58, line 21 – p. 59, line 2).

that Mr Yekatom had reached out to them and told them to leave Mbaïki, as discussed above, and Guerrino Perin suggested that there was good will between ‘the Seleka, Adam’ and Mr Yekatom to avoid inter-communal violence,⁸⁵¹⁸ the evidence available does not indicate that the Seleka in Mbaïki left because of any exchanges with Mr Yekatom. Guerrino Perin himself said as much when indicating that while the Seleka had agreed to have a meeting, they received orders ‘from elsewhere’ to depart and regroup in the north,⁸⁵¹⁹ as did Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo.⁸⁵²⁰

3464. According to the speech made by Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo on 12 February 2014, the Sangaris arrived in Mbaïki the day before the Seleka fled the town.⁸⁵²¹ Diakité Aboubakar confirmed that the Sangaris arrived in Mbaïki before the Anti-Balaka’s arrival.⁸⁵²² According to Guerrino Perin, the Sangaris set up their base at the primary school of Mbaïki.⁸⁵²³

3465. P-1839 confirmed that Mr Yekatom, ‘in the middle of the road’, before they reached Mbaïki, explained to his elements that they were going to Mbaïki ‘to have an exchange with our Muslim brothers who are over there’.⁸⁵²⁴

3466. On 30 January 2014, Mr Yekatom and elements under his control entered Mbaïki.⁸⁵²⁵

⁸⁵²⁰ P-1813 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2069-0035-R02, at 0042-43, para. 49. Further, the Chamber recalls its finding that the advance of Mr Yekatom’s group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis caused the retreat of the Seleka from the area (see paragraph 3436 above).

⁸⁵²¹ Video, CAR-OTP-2023-1636, at approximately 00:12:00-00:12:20; Translation, CAR-OTP-00002254, at 0005, lines 111-116 (in particular, during the speech given by Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo in the framework of the visit made by Catherine Samba-Panza and the French minister of justice at that time to Mbaïki, the witness said that the Sangaris forces had conveniently arrived on the day before the Seleka retreated from the town of Mbaïki). See also P-1813: T-182, p. 29, lines 15-25.

⁸⁵²⁵ P-2041 Statement, CAR-OTP-2104-0003-R02, at 0011, para. 50. The Chamber also notes the evidence of P-2389, who indicated that he left Pissa and travelled to Mbaïki on 27 January 2014, and that the Anti-Balaka arrived in Mbaïki approximately four days after he left Pissa (see P-2389 Statement, CAR-OTP-2104-0033-R03, at 0040-41, paras 41-44, at 0043, para. 54).

3468. The Chamber notes that Diakité Aboubakar indicated that Mr Yekatom's elements arrived in Mbaïki before Mr Yekatom,⁸⁵³⁰ and that the meeting at the Mbaïki church was held the day after Mr Yekatom's arrival in the town.⁸⁵³¹ The Chamber does not consider the witness's evidence on this particular point to be reliable, in light of the evidence outlined above on the timing of the Seleka's departure from Mbaïki as well as the arrival of Mr Yekatom and elements of his group for purposes of the meeting at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church, as also discussed in further detail below. Further, the Chamber does not consider the evidence of P-1666 to be discrepant on this point. On the contrary, his evidence together with that of P-1839 and P-2354 indicates that on the following day or days to Mr Yekatom's arrival in Mbaïki together with some of his elements, more elements of his group reached Mbaïki.

3469. Regarding the number of elements who arrived in Mbaïki, the Chamber notes that some witnesses seemed to distinguish between those who first arrived with Mr Yekatom to attend the meeting, and those who arrived subsequently to the meeting. Other witnesses seemed to refer to elements who thereafter stayed in Mbaïki and were based there.

3470. Notably, P-1839 confirmed that less than a hundred Anti-Balaka elements went to Mbaïki together with Mr Yekatom on that first day.⁸⁵³² Raymond Mongbandi stated that Mr ⁸⁵³¹ P-1595: T-106, p. 7, lines 10-13. The witness also stated that the Anti-Balaka arrived in Mbaïki two days after the Seleka left (see P-1595 Statement, CAR-OTP-2104-0274-R02, at 0283, para. 49).

Yekatom arrived in Mbaïki accompanied by many Anti-Balaka elements, including Cœur de Lion, ‘to install his about 50 to 100 elements in Mbaïki’.⁸⁵³³ P-2041 estimated that on 30 January 2014, at least 2,000 Anti-Balaka entered Mbaïki.⁸⁵³⁴ P-1666 testified that on the first day, about 100 to 200 Anti-Balaka elements entered Mbaïki, that this number ‘slowly but surely’ grew in the following days, and that by the time he left Mbaïki, he estimated that they amounted to almost 1,000 elements, including ‘the young people from the locality who joined their ranks’.⁸⁵³⁵ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili stated that when he became deputy ComZone of Mbaïki, he and the ComZone had around 80 to 90 people under their command.⁸⁵³⁶ He later testified that he and the ComZone Sete had about 40 elements under their control in Mbaïki.⁸⁵³⁷ Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba estimated that there were between 25 and 30 Anti-Balaka elements in Mbaïki on the day of the meeting; and further indicated that it is possible that ‘other people came to join Mr Yekatom’s elements’ but that he did not believe there had been 1,000 elements present in Mbaïki at any time.⁸⁵³⁸

3471. The Chamber notes that Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba’s estimate seems to accord with the evidence provided by the other witnesses, with the exception of the evidence of P-2041, to which the Chamber gives little weight in light of its marked discrepancy with the rest of the estimates provided. Accordingly, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom and the elements who arrived with him to Mbaïki on 30 January 2014 amounted to at least 25 individuals. Further, the Chamber concludes that the total number of elements in Mbaïki in the following days amounted to at least 80 individuals.

3472. Various witnesses described how the non-Muslim population welcomed the arrival of Mr Yekatom’s group to Mbaïki by applauding them and throwing flowers and branches at them.⁸⁵³⁹ Some women gave Mr Yekatom and his elements a traditional welcome by spreading on the road the ‘pagnes’ they wore around their waist so that they could walk on them.⁸⁵⁴⁰ According to P-2041, the ‘Christian’ population chanted ‘Muslims where are you? R[ombhot] is coming’ to honour ‘Rombhot’.⁸⁵⁴¹

3473. In contrast, Diakité Aboubakar explained that the Muslim community did not go out to welcome ‘Rambo’ because he was known for one thing, ‘killing people’.⁸⁵⁴² P-1666 testified that no Muslim cheered when the Anti-Balaka entered because of what had happened in Bangui and Boali.⁸⁵⁴³

3474. Several witnesses mentioned that the Anti-Balaka arrived in two vehicles.⁸⁵⁴⁴ P-1839 testified that Mr Yekatom was in one of these vehicles, a Hilux pickup, together with the element ‘Cube Maggi’, the journalist Gérard Ouambou and herself.⁸⁵⁴⁵ Mr Yekatom sat in the front, ‘Cube Maggi’ sat behind him, she sat behind in the middle and Gérard Ouambou

The Chamber notes that P-2389 provided slightly different evidence, indicating that he first saw the Anti-Balaka arriving in Mbaïki and that they stopped at the St Jeanne d’Arc Church (see P-2389 Statement, CAR-OTP-2104-0033-R03, at 0043, para. 54; P-2389: T-238, p. 6, line 22 – p. 7, line 18); and that later, or on the next day, he saw the Anti-Balaka arriving to the centre of Mbaïki with two vehicles, at which point he saw the Christians welcoming and applauding them (see P-2389 Statement, CAR-OTP-2104-0033-R03, at 0043, para. 56; P-2389: T-238, p. 30, line 16 – p. 31, line 19). In light of the abundant evidence indicating that part of the population welcomed Mr Yekatom and his elements when they first arrived in Mbaïki prior to the meeting, the Chamber will not take into consideration this part of P-2389’s evidence.

sat behind the driver.⁸⁵⁴⁶ According to some witnesses, other elements arrived in motorbikes and some walked.⁸⁵⁴⁷

3476. Thereafter, the vehicles driven by the Anti-Balaka approached the St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki, close to the training centre of the diocese where the meeting was going to take place.⁸⁵⁵⁴ According to Roger Okoa-Penguia, the vehicles stopped 'at the level of the Sangaris', 'Alfred' got out of the vehicle with his aide-de-camp, the Sangaris elements told them to lay down their weapons and enter the hall, after which 'he entered into the hall with his aide-de-camp'.⁸⁵⁵⁵ Mr Yekatom, together with some of his elements, including Habib Beina and Cœur de Lion, entered the building while the rest of the elements remained

The Chamber notes that witnesses seemed to indistinctly refer to the St Jeanne d'Arc Church and the training centre next to the church as the meeting location. As it is clear from the witnesses' evidence that they spoke of the same meeting at one location, the Chamber considers this to be of no consequence for its assessment (for a description of the location of both the church and centre, see D29-5015: T-254, p. 11, lines 1-12).

According to the evidence, all those who held positions of responsibility in Mbaïki attended the meeting, representing their respective sectors or communities.⁸⁵⁵⁹ This included, inter alia, the prefect of Lobaye;⁸⁵⁶⁰ the sub-prefect;⁸⁵⁶¹ the mayor of Mbaïki;⁸⁵⁶² the second deputy of the mayor of Mbaïki, Djido Saleh;⁸⁵⁶³ the imams of the Central Mosque of the

The Chamber notes that P-1666 initially testified that Cœur de Lion was present at the meeting (see P-1666: T-230, p. 47, line 22 – p. 48, line 5), but later said that he was not (see T-230, p. 67, line 16 – p. 68, line 1).

⁸⁵⁵⁷ P-1666: T-230, p. 48, lines 6-8, 14-15; D29-5015: T-254, p. 44, lines 21-23.

⁸⁵⁵⁸ P-1666: T-230, p. 48, lines 9-12. The Chamber notes that P-1666 also testified that Mr Yekatom had an automatic pistol on him. Indeed, a firearm in a holster which Mr Yekatom can be seen wearing on his left thigh is visible in Photograph, CAR-D29-0010-0183, which shows Mr Yekatom talking to the crowd outside the meeting location. However, it also notes that P-2084 indicated that Mr Yekatom and his aide-de-camp were told by the Sangaris to lay down their weapons before entering the meeting location (see P-2084: T-233, p. 11, lines 2-5). In the photographs taken during the meeting, Mr Yekatom does not appear to have any visible arms on him, although the holster is still visible on his thigh (see e.g. Photographs, CAR-D29-0010-0165; CAR-D29-0010-0166; CAR-D29-0010-0167; CAR-D29-0010-0170; CAR-D29-0010-0173). See also P-1558 Statement, CAR-OTP-2105-0195-R01, at 0200-01, para. 29 (indicating that at the meeting, nobody was armed because the Sangaris provided security); D29-5012: T-293, p. 69, lines 16-18 (indicating that one or two Sangaris elements were posted at the entrance, trying to keep an eye on things to make sure that people did not gain access with weapons or with anything that might disturb the proper unfolding of the event). In light of this evidence, the Chamber disregards D29-5013’s testimony according to which Mr Yekatom arrived without a weapon to the meeting (see D29-5013: T-286, p. 34, line 22 – p. 35, line 5).

Charlotte’;⁸⁵⁷⁸ a representative of UNHCR;⁸⁵⁷⁹ and a representative of DRC.⁸⁵⁸⁰ The commander of the gendarmerie,⁸⁵⁸¹ a MISCA colonel,⁸⁵⁸² and members of the Sangaris⁸⁵⁸³ were also present.

3478. In addition, and as already indicated above, Mr Yekatom attended the meeting together with his aides-de-camp, including Cœur de Lion.⁸⁵⁸⁴

3479. The Chamber heard the testimony of eight individuals who participated in the meeting: Raymond Mongbandi, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, P-2041, Diakité Aboubakar, P-1666, Guerrino Perin, D29-5013 and Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba. Based on their evidence, as well as the notes taken during the meeting by P-2041 (the ‘Notes’),⁸⁵⁸⁵ the Chamber concludes that it unfolded as described below.

3480. According to P-1666, the main aim of the meeting was to avoid a confrontation between the Anti-Balaka and the Muslim community,⁸⁵⁸⁶ and the heads of the neighbourhoods asked to avoid ‘any bloodbath in the town of Mbaïki’, that ‘the Muslims [could] move around freely in the town’ and that ‘the other members of the population could live together peacefully’.⁸⁵⁸⁷ Guerrino Perin described the goal of the meeting in similar terms.⁸⁵⁸⁸ This is supported by the Notes, according to which the priority subject matter of the meeting was security and, in particular, (a) security in Lobaye, (b) free circulation of people and their goods, and (c) the protection of persons.⁸⁵⁸⁹

The Chamber notes that P-1666 testified that Cœur de Lion did not attend the meeting (see P-1666: T-230, p. 67, line 16 – p. 68, line 1), and P-2041 stated that Cœur de Lion did not enter the ‘cathedral’ (see P-2041 Statement, CAR-OTP-2104-0003-R02, at 0012, para. 53). However, the Chamber puts little weight on this aspect of their evidence as it contradicts abundant and more reliable evidence indicating the contrary.

3481. During his intervention, Mr Yekatom introduced himself as ‘corporal of the FACA’⁸⁵⁹⁰ and indicated that he was not an Anti-Balaka.⁸⁵⁹¹ The Chamber notes in this regard the Yekatom Defence’s arguments that Mr Yekatom ‘would routinely present himself by his FACA title, Caporal Chef’, including at the meeting in Mbaïki and ‘private meetings’, which would reflect that he did not perceive himself as ‘the overarching and sole leader of the FRACPPP’.⁸⁵⁹² The Chamber first notes that this is an inaccurate statement, as there is video material showing Mr Yekatom introducing himself as ‘caporal-chef Yekatom Rambo Alfred, chef of the Anti-Balaka movement of the south’.⁸⁵⁹³ Second, and regardless of how Mr Yekatom publicly introduced himself in certain settings, the Chamber recalls that witnesses unambiguously identified him as the leader of the Anti-Balaka group on the PK9-Mbaïki axis.⁸⁵⁹⁴ Third, and specifically with regard to the Mbaïki meeting, it notes that witnesses indicated that they had contact with him prior to and for the purposes of preparing the meeting in his role as leader of the Anti-Balaka in the area.⁸⁵⁹⁵ Fourth, the Chamber notes that regardless of how he introduced himself that day, Mr Yekatom's statements at the meeting, which are subsequently discussed, could have only been made by a leader and a representative of the Anti-Balaka with the sufficient authority to speak and make commitments on its behalf.

3482. Several witnesses indicated that Mr Yekatom said that he did not have a problem with Muslims, only with Djotodia, and that he had not given orders to harm Muslims.⁸⁵⁹⁶ Some witnesses also pointed out that Mr Yekatom told them that he wanted to secure peace and order in Mbaïki.⁸⁵⁹⁷ In this regard, Raymond Mongbandi testified that Mr Yekatom mentioned that the Anti-Balaka's role was not to kill but 'to secure the country'.⁸⁵⁹⁸ Further, P-1666 testified that Mr Yekatom assured that he was not there to kill anybody, to fight the Muslims, destroy mosques or loot, but to fight the Seleka.⁸⁵⁹⁹

3483. P-2041 confirmed, when asked, that Mr Yekatom said that without the gendarmerie and the police, the country could not have peace⁸⁶⁰⁰ and that the aim of the meeting was to organise the protection of the Muslim and Christian populations.⁸⁶⁰¹

3484. According to the Notes, other people intervened in the meeting, including the mayor of Mbaïki, the president of the Islamic community, the 'chef de quartier Pissa', the president that 'the people responsible for this group who were called the Anti-Balaka, who were in Pissa, [...] that the person responsible for them, or the person in charge, was Mr Yekatom, Mr Rambo'). See further D29-5015: T-255, p. 44, line 11 – p. 45, line 4 (providing the following explanation when asked about Mr Yekatom's introduction at the meeting: 'The mere fact that we invited him shows that in one way or another we knew that he could represent the Anti-Balaka, the self-proclaimed defence that were against, just like the Seleka [...] I understood that he could represent the side against the Seleka [...] And the mere fact that he mustn't come to Mbaïki presupposed that I saw him because of what I had heard, that he could represent, he had a certain degree of authority representing the Anti-Balaka').

of the Muslim youth, the ‘préfet de la ville de Mbaïki’,⁸⁶⁰² the vice president of the Muslim youth, the representative of UNHCR, and Guerrino Perin.⁸⁶⁰³

3485. In this regard, P-2041 confirmed recalling that the president of the Muslim youth said that they had all grown up together in Mbaïki, were one big family, and ‘that if today you get up and get hold of machetes and knives against us, that is not a good thing’ – nobody answered.⁸⁶⁰⁴

3486. According to P-2041, ‘Bishop Rino’ told Mr Yekatom that the Seleka caused insecurity in Mbaïki, that this insecurity persisted despite the Seleka’s departure, and that he, Mr Yekatom, was responsible for that situation.⁸⁶⁰⁵ P-2041 further explained that Guerrino Perin told Mr Yekatom that despite him saying that he was not an Anti-Balaka, the Anti-Balaka elements who were ‘destroying the mosques and doing bad things’ followed him and acted under his orders.⁸⁶⁰⁶ According to P-2041, Guerrino Perin then warned Mr Yekatom that he might face justice in the CAR or before the International Criminal Court.⁸⁶⁰⁷ A reference to this warning is included in the Notes taken during the meeting.⁸⁶⁰⁸

3487. Guerrino Perin denied during his testimony the proposition that he had warned Mr Yekatom that ‘what he was going to do one day was going to take him to the ICC’, that his behaviour would bring him to trial or that he and his elements could not continue to harm the population.⁸⁶⁰⁹ When specifically asked about the warning recorded in the Notes, Guerrino Perin testified that he did not remember having said that and that he did not think he ever made a warning to Mr Yekatom.⁸⁶¹⁰

⁸⁶⁰² The Chamber considers this to be a reference to Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, the prefect of Lobaye at the time. As explained by Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, no prefect of Mbaïki existed, as prefects exist in prefectures and Lobaye is the prefecture, and he was the prefect of Lobaye residing in Mbaïki (see P-1813: T-180, p. 58, lines 11-19).

3488. Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba was also asked whether Guerrino Perin had made any warnings to Mr Yekatom. He responded that he did not remember and that, in fact, he did not hear Guerrino Perin ‘addressing the meeting and warning anyone at all’.⁸⁶¹¹

3489. The Chamber is mindful that no other witnesses mentioned Guerrino Perin’s warning to Mr Yekatom, as well as of the evidence of Guerrino Perin and Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba on this point as outlined above. Nonetheless, the Chamber considers P-2041’s testimony reliable on this aspect, and notes that his evidence is supported by the Notes taken contemporaneously during the meeting in question. Accordingly, the Chamber relies on his evidence regarding Guerrino Perin’s warning to Mr Yekatom in the terms described.

3490. According to Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo and D29-5013, they both asked Mr Yekatom to protect the Muslim population. In particular, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo indicated that he felt that there was a high risk that the Anti-Balaka would attack the Muslim population and therefore asked Mr Yekatom to ensure the Muslim population that they would not be harmed.⁸⁶¹² Likewise, D29-5013 testified that she asked Mr Yekatom to make his elements available to protect the Muslims in Mbaïki before their departure, and that Mr Yekatom accepted her request by designating Cœur de Lion for this task.⁸⁶¹³

3491. In this regard, the Chamber notes that several witnesses indicated that the removal of Muslims from Mbaïki was decided at the meeting. Their evidence, as well as the evidence outlined further below,⁸⁶¹⁴ shows that at this point, their removal from Mbaïki was a foregone conclusion. Notably, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that one of the issues they discussed at the meeting was ‘the movement of the Chadian Muslim community’.⁸⁶¹⁵ He later clearly indicated that the decision to take them out of Mbaïki ‘was taken and discussed during the meeting in St Jeanne d'Arc' and on that occasion only.⁸⁶¹⁶ Roger Okoa-Penguia stated that '[a] decision was taken to have the Muslims leave for their security, to avoid a blood bath, to avoid the Muslims being killed by the Anti-Balaka'.⁸⁶¹⁷ Diakité Aboubakar confirmed that the departure of Muslims to Chad was discussed at the meeting and that he specifically recalled the prefect and Imam Langaba talking about it.⁸⁶¹⁸ D29-5013 further indicated that part of 'their' request during the meeting was that when the convoy moved on, everybody guaranteed their safety until they left the Lobaye zone.⁸⁶¹⁹ She also indicated the 'conclusion' of the meeting was that 'the Muslim communities would be able to leave the place without any acts of violence or abuse'.⁸⁶²⁰ Further, the Notes include a reference to 'notre sorti de [Mbaïki] pour [aller] au Tchad le 06/02/2014'.⁸⁶²¹

The witness further stated that he called Mr Yekatom to ensure security in Mbaïki and to avoid disorder as there would be confrontations in light of the Seleka, who wanted to be seen as the protector of the Muslims, having left, and many people ‘improvising being Anti-Balaka’ (see P-1813: T-180, p. 16, lines 3-11, p. 25, lines 4-12; T-182, p. 27, lines 22-25).

3492. The evidence also indicates that while the decision to remove the Muslim community from Mbaïki was taken at the meeting, informal enquiries and discussions on the dislocation took place beforehand. In particular, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that the Chadian Muslim community in Mbaïki felt threatened and prior to the Anti-Balaka's arrival in Mbaïki spoke with the Chadian authorities 'to see if there was a way they could be evacuated'.⁸⁶²² Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo also stated that prior to the Mbaïki meeting, the representatives of the Malian Muslim community also told him that they would leave with the Chadian Muslims if the latter were being 'evacuated'.⁸⁶²³ Moreover, a witness testified that in the context of the preparations of the meeting, an individual involved in these preparations went to see Mr Yekatom 'to negotiate' and ask him whether he could agree 'to some kind of solution for the Muslims in Mbaïki', further indicating that this individual was successful in their mission, namely, 'to ensure the release of the Muslims'.⁸⁶²⁴ In the Chamber's view, this shows that D29-5013 discussed with Mr Yekatom the possibility of moving Muslims out of Mbaïki before the meeting. This would explain D29-5013's indication, when asked whether the decision to 'evacuate' Muslims had been taken before the meeting, that that was her understanding because when ‘they’ spoke to ‘them’, ‘they’ all said that it was preferable and necessary for their security to leave.⁸⁶²⁵

3493. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence’s reference to P-2354,⁸⁶²⁶ who stated that he thought he first heard about ‘a plan to evacuate all the Muslims’ from Mbaïki in December 2013.⁸⁶²⁷ Noting that P-2354 did not seem certain about what he heard and that he was unable to provide any other detail when asked about it,⁸⁶²⁸ and bearing in mind the evidence outlined above, the Chamber gives little weight to this part of his evidence.

3494. The evidence shows that after the meeting, the prefect and other individuals contacted the authorities to arrange the convoy that would transport the Muslim community out of Mbaïki. Indeed, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo testified that he, the bishop and the DRC and HCR representatives were given the mission of contacting ‘the highest authorities in Bangui’ so that some of the vehicles that had come from Chad could be sent ‘to get the Muslims out of Mbaïki, the Muslims who were being threatened’.⁸⁶²⁹ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo mentioned that the delegate of the Chadian Muslim community was responsible for contacting the ambassador or the representative of the Chadian state who was in Bangui with the same purpose.⁸⁶³⁰ Raymond Mongbandi stated that the prefect and the bishop travelled to Bangui to inform the head of state, who then informed the Chadian head of state, who then made arrangements to ‘evacuate’ the Muslims from Mbaïki.⁸⁶³¹

3495. The Chamber observes that Raymond Mongbandi’s evidence is consistent with the overall evidence on this subject. Raymond Mongbandi stated that the decision to ‘evacuate’ Muslims from Mbaïki was made after the meeting,⁸⁶³² but also that the decision to ‘evacuate’ was ‘basically the fruit of this meeting’.⁸⁶³³ He also referred to a meeting in which the Muslims learnt about the decision to ‘evacuate’, when ‘[t]he Seleka were still present in Mbaïki’, and which was ‘an open invitation for the Anti-Balaka to attend and agree not to harm Muslims’.⁸⁶³⁴ In the Chamber’s view, the witness seemed to be referring to the 30 January 2014 meeting in Mbaïki despite confusing some details. Further, when asked during his testimony, Raymond Mongbandi referred to one meeting in which ‘the Anti-Balaka’ were present ‘that had to do with cohabitation between the two communities in Mbaïki’ – which the Chamber considers makes reference to the meeting held in Mbaïki on 30 January 2014 –; and another one related to the ‘evacuation’ of Muslims to Chad, held in a ‘discreet way’, which concerned the local authorities and the administration’ and which ‘the Anti-Balaka did not attend’.⁸⁶³⁵ In the Chamber’s view, the description of this second ‘meeting’ corresponds to the arrangements made by the authorities after the meeting held in Mbaïki on 30 January 2014 to secure the convoy.

3496. The Chamber considers that the steps taken to discuss logistical arrangements of the convoy in the immediate aftermath of the meeting are a further indication that the removal of Muslims from Mbaïki was determined at the meeting.

3497. In addition to the discussions on the fate of the Muslims in Mbaïki at the meeting, according to several witnesses, Mr Yekatom was asked to repeat what he had said in the meeting in front of the population.⁸⁶³⁶

The Chamber also notes that Raymond Mongbandi stated that the Seleka left Mbaïki on 10 January 2014 and that the meeting occurred in December 2013. The Chamber considers these mistakes on the dates of the events of minor relevance.

The Chamber notes that the witnesses are not aligned on who asked Mr Yekatom to repeat his statement, but considers the question of who asked Mr Yekatom to do so of no import in the current context.

3498. After a reception with drinks inside the church,⁸⁶³⁷ Mr Yekatom went outside and addressed the crowd.⁸⁶³⁸ According to D29-5013, many young people, including minors, were waiting outside for Mr Yekatom, and were ‘extremely agitated’ and ‘really angry’.⁸⁶³⁹ In D29-5013’s view, they regarded Mr Yekatom as ‘someone who could help them defend themselves’, they wanted ‘to participate in the defence of their community by being together with Mr Yekatom’.⁸⁶⁴⁰ Similarly, Guerrino Perin explained that the people outside expected Mr Yekatom to avenge the Seleka harassment and thought that ‘he was there to do something against the Muslims’.⁸⁶⁴¹ In Guerrino Perin’s words, they thought that ‘in Yekatom they would find a leader against the Muslims’.⁸⁶⁴²

3499. P-1839 described Mr Yekatom’s speech as a ‘peace message’ so that Christians and Muslims could be together and not discriminate each other.⁸⁶⁴³ Several witnesses indicated that Mr Yekatom told the crowd not to harm Muslims. In particular, according to Guerrino Perin, Mr Yekatom said, ‘if a youth attacks a Muslim, I will kill him. If another Muslim attacks yet another, [...] I will kill him’.⁸⁶⁴⁴ In a similar vein, P-1666 testified that Mr Yekatom told the crowd that he was not there to kill the Muslims, asked his elements not to touch the Muslims, and said that any element that attacked a Muslim would be killed immediately.⁸⁶⁴⁵ Gérard Ouambou indicated that Mr Yekatom told them that anyone who killed a Muslim civilian would have a problem with him.⁸⁶⁴⁶

3500. According to D29-5013, Mr Yekatom told the young people who were waiting outside that they were too young, that their place was either in the fields with their parents or in school, and that he needed professionals.⁸⁶⁴⁷

3501. The impression of some of those who witnessed the scene was that the youth was disappointed with Mr Yekatom's words.⁸⁶⁴⁸ Diakité Aboubakar stated that they noticed that the Anti-Balaka were generally not happy about the meeting and right after Mr Yekatom's speech, they started saying, 'We do not agree with what Rambo is saying, he has to leave us to do what we were doing'.⁸⁶⁴⁹ When specifically asked whether he heard this, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo indicated that he indeed heard those comments, and also heard accusations that he had paid Mr Yekatom to make such a speech and that Mr Yekatom had accepted the money from the Muslim community 'to take a step back'.⁸⁶⁵⁰ When asked the same question, P-2041 indicated that he did not hear what they said, but he saw people making gestures to Mr Yekatom indicating that they were not in agreement with him.⁸⁶⁵¹ P-2041 provided a detailed account of what happened when the Muslims who attended the meeting intended to leave the place of the meeting. According to this witness, while Mr Yekatom's elements wearing FACA uniforms remained inside the vehicles, 'many other Anti-Balaka' surrounding the perimeter alongside the road, whom he described as 'the young people in civvies with hunting rifles and knives and arrows', approached and threatened the Muslim delegation by pointing their firearms at them.⁸⁶⁵² A Sangaris officer asked Mr Yekatom to order the young people to withdraw and Mr Yekatom signed to them, after which they backed off, allowing the Muslims who had attended the meeting to leave in their cars.⁸⁶⁵³ When specifically asked about these youngsters, P-2041 confirmed that he considered them to be part of the local young people who, after learning that the Anti-Balaka had arrived in Mbaïki, had mobilised to join their ranks.⁸⁶⁵⁴

3502. The evidence shows that thereafter, Mr Yekatom went to Mbaïki's bus station and delivered a similar speech to the crowd gathered there.⁸⁶⁵⁵

3503. According to Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, Mr Yekatom spoke 'barely for one minute', 'very "dryly"' and using 'a commanding tone', which made people think that the Muslim community had paid him to give that speech.⁸⁶⁵⁶ Raymond Mongbandi indicated that the crowd, which included Muslims, non-Muslims and Anti-Balaka elements, seemed happy and applauded Mr Yekatom's speech, though he also thought it was difficult for Muslims to accept what Mr Yekatom said and that maybe they applauded 'out of fear'.⁸⁶⁵⁷

3504. The Chamber heard the testimony of witnesses whose impressions of Mr Yekatom's statements at the meeting and speeches thereafter outside differed widely.

3505. Some witnesses, including P-1666, Guerrino Perin, Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba and P-2354, found Mr Yekatom's message reassuring and considered that it brought peace to Mbaïki.

3506. P-1666 indicated that after the meeting and Mr Yekatom's statements, 'things calmed down quite considerably' and they felt 'relieved to a degree'.⁸⁶⁵⁸ In his view, if Mr Yekatom had not given those statements, 'it is quite sure that there would have been a very tricky conflict'.⁸⁶⁵⁹ In this regard, P-1666 pointed out that thereafter, they did not experience any attacks in the neighbourhoods where Muslims lived.⁸⁶⁶⁰

3507. Guerrino Perin testified that Mr Yekatom's words made him view him as 'a consequential figure' who 'didn't say one thing here and something completely different elsewhere'.⁸⁶⁶¹

3508.P-2354 indicated that after hearing Mr Yekatom's speech about not harming Muslims, he felt reassured as did other members of the Muslim population.⁸⁶⁶²

3509.Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba considered that Mr Yekatom's speech at the meeting brought everyone together.⁸⁶⁶³ In fact, the witness testified that Mr Yekatom became a sort of 'partner' for the inter-religious platform of Mbaïki because he shared their objectives.⁸⁶⁶⁴

3510.Other witnesses, such as Raymond Mongbandi and Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, expressed doubts regarding Mr Yekatom's sincerity and pointed to their persisting fears despite the speeches and promises he made.

3511.Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that at the time of the meeting, he felt that there was a high risk that the Anti-Balaka would attack the Muslim population and asked Mr Yekatom to ensure that they would not be harmed.⁸⁶⁶⁵

3512.Raymond Mongbandi stated that he did not believe Mr Yekatom and considered his words that he wanted to act peacefully to be 'hollow' because 'he acted differently, such as at Bangui-Buchia'.⁸⁶⁶⁶

3513.In fact, several witnesses shared the view that the only reason why Mr Yekatom and his group did not attack the Muslim population in Mbaïki was because of the presence of the Sangaris and other international forces.

3514.P-1666, while feeling reassured by Mr Yekatom's words, also indicated that if the Anti-Balaka did not attack, it was because their leader had instructed them in this regard, because 'he' made a commitment during the meeting, and because the FOMAC and the Sangaris forces were present, all of which ensured that no attack occurred.⁸⁶⁶⁷

⁸⁶⁶⁷ P-1666: T-232, p. 42, lines 13-22.

3515.P-2389 felt that Mr Yekatom and the Anti-Balaka could not attack them ‘only because of the presence of the S[angaris]’ and opined that if the Sangaris had not been in Mbaïki, the Anti-Balaka would have attacked and killed Muslims in Mbaïki.⁸⁶⁶⁸

3516.Relatedly, one of Mr Yekatom’s former elements, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, stated that when the group arrived in Mbaïki, ‘[t]he only obstacle to take the town was the French Army’ and that ‘the French Army’ instructed Mr Yekatom’s group ‘not to harass people and not to pillage or to create disorder’.⁸⁶⁶⁹

3517.P-1666 testified that Eric from the Sangaris asked ‘the Anti-Balaka leader’ not to walk around Mbaïki town with weapons, after which the Anti-Balaka retreated with their weapons to the abattoir.⁸⁶⁷⁰

3518.The Chamber further recalls P-2041’s detailed explanation of how the Sangaris asked Mr Yekatom to order the youngsters surrounding the church on the day of the meeting to stop harassing the Muslim delegation that wanted to leave the place.⁸⁶⁷¹

3519.The evidence outlined above shows that the presence of Sangaris forces and other international actors in Mbaïki at that time compelled Mr Yekatom to bring a peace message to Mbaïki and prevented his group from attacking the Muslim population. The role played by the Sangaris forces in Mbaïki was not limited to being physically present in the town, but also included the concrete orders and interventions described above, such as instructing Mr Yekatom and his group not to harass people and not to walk around with weapons. While the Sangaris forces later left Mbaïki to intervene in Boda,⁸⁶⁷² as already discussed above, the decision to remove the Muslim civilians inhabiting Mbaïki had already been decided at the St Jeanne d’Arc Church meeting.⁸⁶⁷³ Indeed, at the time at which Mr Yekatom pledged securing order in Mbaïki and not harming its Muslim inhabitants, he was aware that these same inhabitants would leave not long thereafter.

3520. The Chamber notes Raymond Mongbandi's views on what could have happened should the 'evacuation' not have taken place: 'The Muslims could only accept evacuation, if not they risked being overwhelmed by the Anti-Balaka and slaughtered'.⁸⁶⁷⁴ It notes that Raymond Mongbandi elaborated on this point further during his testimony: '[...] this decision was taken because there was a total breach of trust. The authorities understood that the Anti-Balaka couldn't keep up their promises, there was a doubt. So this is why it was important to evacuate the Muslims. Tension was rife and it would have been very dangerous. If we hadn't proceeded to evacuat[e] the Muslims, there would have been a lot of deaths. Thank God that the procedure was adopted and this actually saved a good chunk of the Muslim population and reduced casualties'.⁸⁶⁷⁵

3521. The Chamber is thus convinced that with the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki, after which very few Muslim civilians remained in Mbaïki,⁸⁶⁷⁶ Mr Yekatom achieved his goal of chasing out the Seleka, which necessarily included Muslim civilians. In this regard, the Chamber recalls P-1839's evidence that at the time of the group's presence on the Mbaïki road, Mr Yekatom instructed the elements to kill all the Muslims in the area.⁸⁶⁷⁷ The Chamber further recalls its discussion of the way in which Anti-Balaka groups, including that of Mr Yekatom, pursued and implemented its core objective of removing Michel Djotodia and the Seleka from power, which equated the Muslim civilian population in general, especially in western CAR, with the Seleka and thus perceived this population as their enemy.⁸⁶⁷⁸

3522. Furthermore, several witnesses mentioned that Mr Yekatom's elements asked certain Muslim inhabitants of Mbaïki for money and/or that some of these inhabitants offered the elements money.

According to P-2041, the Muslims hoped that by paying the Anti-Balaka, the latter would not attack them, as ‘a form of insurance’.⁸⁶⁸⁰ P-2041 did not participate in the contributions, but he heard from the president of the youth that the contributions were made by the traders and coordinated by the former mayor of Mbata.⁸⁶⁸¹ P-2041 testified that a person who handed over the money to ‘Rombhot’ told the witness that ‘Rombhot’ said that there would not be a problem, there would not be any attacks.⁸⁶⁸²

3524. P-1666 testified about a first encounter with Cœur de Lion in which certain individuals from the Mbaïki Muslim community handed over to Cœur de Lion the money collected among the Muslim traders.⁸⁶⁸³ Cœur de Lion told these individuals that ‘after Rambo he was the boss and was in control’, gave them his telephone number and told them to call him if ‘any uncontrolled element’ threatened or abused civilians so that he could intervene.⁸⁶⁸⁴ Because ‘the boss’ was not there when the first collection took place, a second collection was carried out when Mr Yekatom arrived and the abovementioned individuals handed him over 100,000 CFA.⁸⁶⁸⁵ Mr Yekatom gave them ‘reassurances’, explained to them why he had taken up arms and that he carried out patrols between Bangui, Pissa and PK9, and that they should cooperate with his deputy in the field if there were any problems.⁸⁶⁸⁶

3525. P-2354 appears to have accompanied P-1666 to this encounter.⁸⁶⁸⁷ P-2354 also testified that Mr Yekatom said that he was not Anti-Balaka but a FACA member, that he did not have any issues with Muslims, and that he was going back to Bangui but that they should call him if they threatened them.⁸⁶⁸⁸

The Chamber notes that P-2354’s account of the encounter with Mr Yekatom has some slight differences with that of P-1666, but considers that they are minor and do not undermine the reliability of their evidence (e.g. P-2354 stated that they gave Mr Yekatom 150,000 CFA). The Chamber also notes that according to P-2354, they told Mr Yekatom that they were not Seleka and that they hoped that he ‘would look upon [them] favourably’ and not harm them.

⁸⁶⁸⁸ P-2354: T-210, p. 17, lines 4-12, p. 20, lines 1-16.

3526. P-2353 knew of an encounter with Mr Yekatom at which the witness presented himself as a trader, thanked him for what he had said at the church, and gave him 50,000 CFA ‘for his petrol so that he could continue his patrols to protect us’.⁸⁶⁸⁹ According to P-2353, ‘R[ambo]’ said that he was not there to hurt people, but to protect civilians, and that P-2353 should call him about any instance where he was harassed or threatened.⁸⁶⁹⁰ P-2353 stated that he did not know if ‘Rambo’ was sincere and that he did not completely trust what he said, as he was a ‘military man and the leader of the Anti Balaka’.⁸⁶⁹¹

3527. Witnesses indicated that after giving the speech at the bus station, Mr Yekatom left Mbaïki.⁸⁶⁹² Witnesses also indicated that Mr Yekatom did not live in Mbaïki, but ‘constantly moved around the area’ in his vehicle to control the elements under his command.⁸⁶⁹³

3528. Witnesses also indicated that Mr Yekatom left Cœur de Lion in charge of Mbaïki.⁸⁶⁹⁴ According to P-1666, Cœur de Lion said in an encounter after the meeting that ‘after Rambo he was the boss and was in control’ of Mbaïki.⁸⁶⁹⁵ P-1666 also testified that during a meeting with Cœur de Lion, he heard Cœur de Lion talking to Mr Yekatom on the phone and calling him ‘kotazo’, meaning chief or authority.⁸⁶⁹⁶

3529. Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili stated that the group under Mr Yekatom’s control with which the witness entered Mbaïki was based ‘next to the Mayor’s office’.⁸⁶⁹⁷

⁸⁶⁹² P-1839: T-174, p. 68, lines 9-11 (testifying that she did not know whether the situation in Mbaïki was calmer after Mr Yekatom gave his speech because ‘after [their] mission in Mbaïki’, they left); P-2389: T-238, p. 31, line 21 – p. 32, line 1 (confirming, when asked, that he was told that Mr Yekatom left Mbaïki after the meeting).

3530. Diakité Aboubakar indicated that, on the day of their arrival, he saw the Anti-Balaka settling in three bases in Mbaïki: the first base was at Baguirmi, the second at Maison de Jeunesse and the third at Socatel.⁸⁶⁹⁸ He further stated that while passing by one of the bases, he saw a tall man with ‘rastaman longs cheveux tressés’ which he believed was Cœur de Lion.⁸⁶⁹⁹ P-1786, confirmed, when asked, that the Anti-Balaka were based at the town hall, the tax office, and Socatel.⁸⁷⁰⁰ Raymond Mongbandi indicated that the Anti-Balaka took control of Mbaïki’s city hall and occupied all the offices, including his office, where he later had several meetings with Cœur de Lion.⁸⁷⁰¹ P-1666 testified that the Anti-Balaka in Mbaïki were based at Socatel and at the town hall, and that one week later, when the ‘French army’ asked them to ‘liberate’ the town hall, they settled at the ‘abattoir’.⁸⁷⁰² The Chamber notes that while witnesses do not seem to agree on the number and location of the bases, it can conclude that Mr Yekatom’s group settled in at least one base in Mbaïki.

3531. P-2041 stated that the Anti-Balaka also set up barriers in Mbaïki to prevent Muslims from leaving and entering Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁰³ Diakité Aboubakar specified that upon their arrival in Mbaïki, the Anti-Balaka took over the checkpoints used by the authorities to check the movement of vehicles and people and to ask for money ‘in the same way that the Seleka had done before them’, and from then on the Muslims ‘felt like that they had become prisoners in their own city and did not dare to leave the city out of fear of being killed’.⁸⁷⁰⁴

3532. Guerrino Perin testified that he did not know whether the Anti-Balaka were billeted in Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁰⁵ D29-5013 testified that she did not believe Mr Yekatom’s elements had a base in Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁰⁶ She also testified that Mr Yekatom did not have elements in Mbaïki, which is why she personally asked Mr Yekatom to designate one person. According to D29-5013, Mr Yekatom left only one person, Cœur de Lion, ‘in charge of the town’.⁸⁷⁰⁷ The Chamber notes that D29-5013 also indicated that she was not based in Mbaïki, and went back ‘two or three times’ between the time of the meeting and the Muslims’ departure from Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁰⁸ Further noting the evidence to the contrary, as set out above, the Chamber does not rely on this part of D29-5013’s testimony.

Mr Yekatom’s group settled in at least one base in Mbaïki. During this time, elements of Mr Yekatom’s group threatened and harassed Muslim civilians in Mbaïki, telling them to leave the area. Both Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion knew that elements of the group committed acts of violence in Mbaïki. Efforts and measures to prevent these acts were taken only after the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki had been decided and/or carried out. The Anti-Balaka also attacked a gendarme patrol in Mbaïki which was there to protect the population, taking the patrol’s weapons and the service car that they were using.

3533. The Chamber heard numerous witnesses who described the threats made to the Muslims in Mbaïki, and the harassment they were subjected to, following the arrival of Mr Yekatom’s group in the town.

3535. This is the case of Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, who explained that after the abuses committed by the Seleka, deemed ‘the protectors of the Muslims’, and following their departure from Mbaïki and the arrival of the Anti-Balaka, the ‘indigenous population’ were up in arms against the Chadian community.⁸⁷⁰⁹ They assumed that the Anti-Balaka would enable them ‘to wreak revenge upon the Muslim population because their protectors were no longer there’.⁸⁷¹⁰ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo explained that ‘independently of the Anti-Balaka’, many individuals ‘amongst the indigenous population’ wanted to attack the Muslims and loot their possessions.⁸⁷¹¹ The witness stated that ‘a lot of young people were interested in this, [...] they invented themselves as Anti-Balaka’, and got close to the Anti-Balaka ‘to come to an agreement and to harm the Muslim community’.⁸⁷¹² He also testified that the Anti-Balaka in Mbaïki were FACA and ‘young people who had set themselves up as Balakas and had integrated that group of Balakas against the Muslims’.⁸⁷¹³

3536. With regard to his statement that Mr Yekatom and his elements committed ‘a number of crimes’, harassed and threatened people, and looted their possessions,⁸⁷¹⁴ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo testified that there were some of Mr Yekatom’s elements in different places, such as in Boda, who threatened and attacked the population, but there were also young people ‘who were passing themselves off as elements of the accused, while they were not’, acting under Mr Yekatom’s name although they had no mandate from him.⁸⁷¹⁵

3537. In a similar vein, P-2354 explained that some local Christian youths who called themselves Anti-Balaka issued verbal threats against Muslims and tried to provoke them, telling them things like ‘you Arabs you will see what will happen to you, we will kill you’.⁸⁷¹⁶

3538. Likewise, D29-5013 testified that the young people of Mbaïki wanted to fight the Muslims and that the Christian population said that they had to leave.⁸⁷¹⁷ She also testified that people in Mbaïki feared for their security not because of the Anti-Balaka’s advance but because ‘the young people, the self-defence groups’ took up arms to take vengeance as soon as the Seleka left, driving out all the Muslims.⁸⁷¹⁸ She also indicated, when asked, that she saw young people making threatening gestures to Muslims in Mbaïki.⁸⁷¹⁹

3539. The Chamber notes that P-1666 and P-2041 described an incident in which two Muslims from Bagandou tried to enter Mbaïki and were apprehended and tied up by the Anti-Balaka in one of the Mbaïki checkpoints.⁸⁷²⁰ According to P-1666, Cœur de Lion questioned them and he did not believe one of the men who told him that he was not a Muslim; Cœur de Lion asked the man about the thing on his forehead and told the man that it was ‘something to do with praying’ that meant that he was a Muslim.⁸⁷²¹ P-2041 and P-1666 indicated that eventually Cœur de Lion accepted to release them with the intervention of P-1666, who went to secure their release accompanied by the Sangaris.⁸⁷²²

3540. In relation to this incident, P-1666 indicated that Muslims could not move freely around and within Mbaïki because they were confined in a perimeter and were afraid of the Anti-Balaka.⁸⁷²³ Likewise, P-2041 stated that the Anti-Balaka set up additional checkpoints in Mbaïki to prevent Muslims from entering or leaving the town.⁸⁷²⁴

3541. Further, the Chamber notes that other witnesses pointed out that elements of Mr Yekatom’s group, as well as local youngsters, threatened local Muslims.

3542. Specifically, P-1839 described the threats made by an Anti-Balaka element belonging to Mr Yekatom’s group, in Mr Yekatom’s presence, on the day of their arrival in Mbaïki. P-1839 explained that after the meeting at the St Jeanne d’Arc Church, while Mr Yekatom, herself

The Chamber notes in this regard that the location of the additional ‘Anti-Balaka barriers’ marked by P-2041 (see P-2041 Statement, CAR-OTP-2104-0003-R02, at 0013, para. 58; Map (annotated by P-2041), CAR-OTP-2104-0020-R01) appears to be the same as the location marked by P-1577 to indicate where he met an Anti-Balaka group at the entrance to Mbaïki in the afternoon of 4 February 2014 (see Satellite image (annotated by P-1577), CAR-OTP-2088-0734; footnote 8726 below).

As for the timing of the incident, the Chamber notes that P-1666 indicated that it happened after Michel Djotodia resigned, ‘somewhere between the 15th and the end of January’ (see P-1666: T-231, p. 16, lines 16-20).

and another element, ‘Cube Maggi’, were driving around Mbaïki, she saw how Cube Maggi threatened the Muslims who were on the roadside and sitting on their terraces.⁸⁷²⁵ ‘Cube Maggi’ threatened them with a hand gesture, waving his finger back and forth, while saying something along the lines of ‘[w]e’ll finish with you’ with his window open.⁸⁷²⁶ P-1839 also indicated that Mr Yekatom did not say anything to ‘Cube Maggi’, did not tell him off for doing so.⁸⁷²⁷

3543. The threat described by P-1839 is similar to those mentioned by P-2389. P-2389 indicated that as the Anti-Balaka vehicles entered Mbaïki that day and drove by the town, the elements inside them pointed to the Muslims, including to him, and threatened them by making gestures with their fingers across their throats ‘suggesting that they [were] going to cut [their] throats’.⁸⁷²⁸ P-2389 stated that in that moment, he feared for his life and that of his family.⁸⁷²⁹ The elements continued to threaten Muslims when they went out of their vehicles, saying that they would do ‘bad things’ to them when the night fell.⁸⁷³⁰ An Anti-Balaka member whom P-2389 recognised because they had been at school together got angry when P-2389 called him by his name and said, ‘elder brother the relationship is over’.⁸⁷³¹

3544. P-2389 also indicated that when the Anti-Balaka arrived, some local Christians changed their attitude, supported the Anti-Balaka and joined them.⁸⁷³² P-2041 similarly stated that immediately after the Anti-Balaka’s arrival, the behaviour of the local Christian youth towards Muslims became threatening.⁸⁷³³ In particular, and according to P-2041, these local

The Chamber notes in this regard also the evidence of P-1577, who travelled to Mbaïki, coming from Boda, on 4 February 2014, and encountered a group on the entrance to Mbaïki who identified themselves as Anti-Balaka; they were ‘very aggressive, very regimented and extremely heavily armed’, and warned him not to take any photographs, after which he spent the night with the French peacekeepers in Mbaïki before continuing to Bangui the following day (see P-1577 First Statement, CAR-OTP-2081-0769-R01, at 0812; P-1577 Second Statement, CAR-OTP-2088-0717-R01, at 0722; P-1577: T-027, p. 83, line 3 – p. 84, line 4; T-028, p. 73, lines 11-25; Satellite image (annotated by P-1577), CAR-OTP-2088-0734).

youngsters armed themselves with machetes, mixed with the Anti-Balaka and moved around the neighborhoods on foot together with the Anti-Balaka elements.⁸⁷³⁴

3546. P-2389 also stated that at the time, he felt that Mr Yekatom and the Anti-Balaka could not attack them ‘only because of the presence of the S[angaris]’, and believed that without their presence, the Anti-Balaka would have attacked and killed the Muslims in Mbaïki.⁸⁷³⁸

3547. Diakit  Aboubakar testified that after the Mbaïki meeting and the speeches given by Mr Yekatom, there was peace and calm in the town, except for ‘a few incidents’ that were not serious.⁸⁷³⁹ He testified that during the week that elapsed between the departure of the Muslims of Chadian origin and that of ‘the Central African Muslims and West Africans’, they cohabited with the Anti-Balaka and while there were no attacks, there were threats.⁸⁷⁴⁰ At the same time, Diakit  Aboubakar also stated that the Anti-Balaka circulated around the town making threats, and that he heard them insulting and threatening Muslims, using the term ‘boubtiala’ (meaning ‘stupid’ in Sango) and saying that ‘[i]f you continue to stay, we are going to kill you’.⁸⁷⁴¹

3548. Similarly to P-2389’s and Diakit  Aboubakar’s evidence, P-1666 testified that the Anti-Balaka threatened the Muslim population in Mbaïki walking around the town armed with machetes and telling Muslims that they would kill them.⁸⁷⁴² According to the witness, they would take the Muslims' possessions forcibly, and sometimes demand 10,000 CFA.⁸⁷⁴³ P-1666 also indicated that Muslims stayed in their compounds and could not move around freely because there were 'uncontrolled elements everywhere who attacked Muslims'.⁸⁷⁴⁴ Further, he testified that Muslims in Mbaïki were not afraid of the local people but of the Anti-Balaka who had arrived 'from everywhere' to Mbaïki and had started to loot and steal.⁸⁷⁴⁵

3550. P-2354 stated that he saw the Anti-Balaka elements that had arrived with Mr Yekatom in the town walking around with AK47s and machetes and while he was passing, they would say 'You Muslims, wait, you will see'.⁸⁷⁵¹ P-2354 took this to mean that they were prepared to kill them, a verbal life threat, and was very scared because he had his wife and children with him in Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁵² Towards the end of January 2014, the Anti-Balaka that had accompanied Mr Yekatom said such things as, ‘We will kill you Muslims, we will cut your throats, and we will eat you’.⁸⁷⁵³ While Mr Yekatom was in Bangui when that happened, he did not do anything about those that issued the threats.⁸⁷⁵⁴

3551. The aforementioned evidence shows that while members of the non-Muslim local population may have threatened members of the Muslim population, elements of Mr Yekatom’s group also threatened the Muslim population.

3552. Further, the Chamber heard evidence related to Mr Yekatom’s and Cœur de Lion’s interactions with the Muslim population⁸⁷⁵⁵ as well as with the authorities in Mbaïki to maintain order in the town and prevent the commission of atrocities. In this regard, the Yekatom Defence argues that the efforts of the ‘RFACPP’ to restore order and security along the axis continued in the form of ‘frequent collaboration’ with international and local authorities.⁸⁷⁵⁶

3553. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo indicated that Mr Yekatom would meet with MISCA/MINUSCA in Mbaïki to discuss reported incidents of ‘misbehaviour of the Anti-Balaka’, both before and some time after the death of Djido Saleh.⁸⁷⁵⁷ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo testified that some of the elements who committed abuses such as threats, ‘verbal attacks’, ‘acts of violence’ and pillaging were ‘among the accused’s group in different places’, but that there were also young people ‘who were passing themselves off as elements of the accused, while they were not'.⁸⁷⁵⁸ The witness recalled that at least on one occasion, Mr Yekatom brought to the MISCA compound individuals who had reportedly conducted acts of violence in a given locality and who, according to the witness, were acting on their own and not on behalf of Mr Yekatom.⁸⁷⁵⁹ He also confirmed recalling an incident described in a document, stating that Mr Yekatom brought a number of people and weapons back from a mission and to the residency of the prefect.⁸⁷⁶⁰ The document suggests that, 'according to Alfred Rombo', the aim of this mission was to disarm 'these fake militia that disturb the rural population', and assist MISCA to ensure free circulation of people and goods in the Lobaye and Ombella-M'Poko prefectures.⁸⁷⁶¹ The Chamber notes in this regard that Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that the population that was being disturbed was not Muslim as in the peripheral locations, only members of the 'indigenous population' were present.⁸⁷⁶²

3554. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo testified that he participated in several meetings, together with the MINUSCA, the municipality, the security forces and Mr Yekatom to draw the latter's attention on 'some of his elements who had conducted acts of violence at a number of locations in the locality, whether it be Mbaïki centre or in some of the communes'.⁸⁷⁶³

3555. Raymond Mongbandi categorically denied the question of whether Mr Yekatom worked with MISCA to ensure safety in Lobaye.⁸⁷⁶⁴ He acknowledged, however, that Mr Yekatom attended meetings which MISCA also attended.⁸⁷⁶⁵ When asked, Raymond Mongbandi also denied hearing that MISCA asked Mr Yekatom to patrol the regions to re-establish public order, indicating that they only saw each other once in St Jeanne d'Arc to talk about restoring

From the metadata, the Chamber is unable to discern who this document initially originated from, under which circumstances it was prepared, or which specific sources it is based on.

peace.⁸⁷⁶⁶ When asked about a handwritten note, the witness indicated that the authorities ‘wanted the Anti-Balaka to stop their hostilities and contribute to the restoration of peace in the country and in the town’, which is why the Anti-Balaka laid down their weapons.⁸⁷⁶⁷ However, the witness did not recall the incident described in the note nor having participated in a ceremony of handing over weapons.⁸⁷⁶⁸ When shown a document related to the discharge of the weapons by MISCA to the gendarmerie as mentioned in the note, Raymond Mongbandi indicated that while it certainly showed ‘a certain degree of collaboration’, what he saw happening in the field was different.⁸⁷⁶⁹

3556. Moreover, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili explained that in his role as deputy ComZone of Mbaïki, which he became after their return from Boda, he had to identify ‘fake A[nti-Balaka] who infiltrated the group and conducted offences’, and ‘protect the people against them’.⁸⁷⁷⁰ In oral testimony, Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili confirmed, when asked, that part of his duty in Mr Yekatom’s group was to assist the gendarmerie and ‘act as kind of force d’ordre’.⁸⁷⁷¹ He also indicated, when asked, that he recalled the incident described in the Ndeke Luka report.⁸⁷⁷²

3557. Lastly, Diakité Aboubakar indicated that after some Anti-Balaka elements threatened him at the mosque while he was praying and broke the mosque’s signpost, other elements chased them away, telling them that they had not listened to Mr Yekatom’s statement.⁸⁷⁷³ From that day, the witness gave these other Anti-Balaka elements money for coffee, and one of them told the imam that he was not there to harm him.⁸⁷⁷⁴

3558. The Chamber notes that it transpires from the evidence given by P-1666, P-2353 and P-2354 that Mr Yekatom, as well as Cœur de Lion, knew that elements of the group committed acts of violence in Mbaïki. Indeed, Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion gave these Muslim traders their phone numbers so that they could inform them of such acts and one of them, P-1666, contacted Cœur de Lion. The aforementioned evidence also shows Mr Yekatom's efforts to control these elements, not only by providing his phone number but also by meeting the MISCA/MINUSCA when it reported incidents of 'misbehaviour by the Anti-Balaka', and by asking the ComZone and deputy ComZone of Mbaïki to identify 'fake Anti-Balaka'.

3559. At the same time, however, the Chamber is mindful that the efforts and measures described above took place after the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki had been decided and/or carried out. The evidence outlined above can only be assessed considering this context. This is the case of the identification and disarming of 'fake Anti-Balaka'. Indeed, the Chamber observes that the event in which Mr Yekatom disarmed 'fake Anti-Balaka' took place in April 2014, that is, more than one month after the Muslims were removed from Mbaïki. Also the other evidence discussed above suggests that events such as the handing over of weapons, or Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili being tasked with identifying 'fake Anti-Balaka' in Mbaïki, took place after the Muslim civilian population was removed from Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁷⁵ In relation to Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili's task, the Chamber in any event notes that it did not hear any concrete evidence on specific measures taken by the witness in Mbaïki to fulfill his duty to identify 'fake Anti-Balaka'.

3560. Moreover, the Chamber notes that despite the meetings Mr Yekatom attended, Raymond Mongbandi indicated that Mr Yekatom did not cooperate with MISCA/MINUSCA to ensure security in Mbaïki. In this regard, the Chamber recalls Raymond Mongbandi's unique and relevant position at the time as mayor of Mbaïki.

3561. Further, the Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion offered their phone numbers in the context of receiving payment by the Muslim traders who, according to P-2354, asked to be treated favourably in return.

3562. In this context, the Chamber also notes P-0974's evidence, according to which he went to Mbaïki when other Anti-Balaka were already there, and while there, a French captain asked to meet with the Anti-Balaka leader to ensure nothing would happen to the Muslims and to allow the Chadians to ‘evacuate’ them.⁸⁷⁷⁶ P-0974 went to the meeting with Cœur de Lion where they were told by the French captain that he did not want weapons in town and not to harm the Muslims, which, according to P-0974, was a warning to them.⁸⁷⁷⁷

3563. In any event, the Chamber considers that the alleged efforts or measures displayed by Mr Yekatom were clearly insufficient because members of his group continued to threaten and harass the Muslim civilian population, irrespective of whether members of the local population also issued threats. The violence the Anti-Balaka exerted on Muslim civilians did not end as a consequence of the measures Mr Yekatom implemented but because the Muslims were removed from Mbaïki and transported elsewhere.

3564. In addition to the above, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that he gave the gendarmerie in Mbaïki his own ‘service car’ so that they could patrol the area at night to protect the local population, and that one night a group of Anti-Balaka attacked them while patrolling, taking their weapons and the ‘service car’.⁸⁷⁷⁸ Similarly, P-2041 stated that approximately four days after the Anti-Balaka arrived in Mbaïki, they took the vehicle of the gendarmerie company commander and drove towards Bangui.⁸⁷⁷⁹

6. Dislocation of Muslims from Mbaïki

On 6 February 2014, Chadian forces transported a first group of Muslim civilians from Mbaïki to Chad and other locations in the CAR. These Muslim civilians had to leave their belongings behind. They left Mbaïki in fear of the Anti-Balaka and, in particular, due to the arrival of Mr Yekatom’s group to Mbaïki. The total number of Muslims removed from Mbaïki at the time amounted to at least 3,000. As a result of this dislocation, very few Muslim civilians remained in Mbaïki. The living conditions in the refugee camps in Chad were extremely difficult.

3565. On 6 February 2014, Chadian forces arrived in Mbaïki to transport the Muslim population out of Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁸⁰ Their dislocation was caused by the arrival of Mr Yekatom's group to Mbaïki after advancing along the axis and had been decided at the meeting of 30 January 2014.⁸⁷⁸¹ The affected individuals included inhabitants of Mbaïki as well as inhabitants of surrounding towns and villages in Lobaye who had sought refuge in Mbaïki town in the previous weeks.⁸⁷⁸² This included Muslims who fled from localities along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, as well as from other locations in Lobaye.

3566. The trucks arrived in Mbaïki early in the morning and left the town once Muslims had boarded the trucks, that same morning.⁸⁷⁸³ The dislocation was therefore completed within the day.

3567. P-2389 stated that he saw 20 big military green trucks arriving to Mbaïki that morning, and that he estimated that each truck could take around 80 people.⁸⁷⁸⁴ Roger Okoa-Penguia stated that 61 trucks were needed to get out 'thousands of Muslims' from Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁸⁵ Diakité Aboubakar stated that there must have been about 30 big trucks to 'evacuate' 'the Chadians'.⁸⁷⁸⁶ P-2041 mentioned ten wheeled military trucks, and estimated that more than a hundred people were loaded on each truck.⁸⁷⁸⁷ He also testified that 2,000 Muslims left the town of Mbaïki that day.⁸⁷⁸⁸ P-2354 referred in his statement to a 'convoy of 8 trucks' that went from Mbaïki to Bangui, while he indicated later that a total of 16 trucks were used to ‘evacuate’ everyone.⁸⁷⁸⁹ D29-5013 indicated that there were 17 large trucks and more than 3,000 people who wanted to leave Mbaïki.⁸⁷⁹⁰

3569. P-2389 and P-2041 indicated that women and children in these trucks were more numerous than men.⁸⁷⁹⁴

3570. According to P-2041, the Congolese MISCA forces as well as Anti-Balaka elements were present when the vehicles from Chad arrived to ‘evacuate’ them, but not Mr Yekatom, who the witness heard had left for Bangui the night before.⁸⁷⁹⁵ When asked, P-2041 specified that he identified the Anti-Balaka as such because they were armed with arrows, bows and machetes.⁸⁷⁹⁶ P-2354 indicated that the Anti-Balaka fled into the bush when the trucks arrived.⁸⁷⁹⁷ Both P-2041 and P-2389 indicated that the Sangaris were not present at the time because they were in Boda.⁸⁷⁹⁸

3571. Some of the individuals who were removed from Mbaïki that day, as well as others who watched the scene, described the departure of Muslims from Mbaïki as a difficult and emotional situation.

3572. P-2041 and P-2353 stated that the Chadian soldiers forced people onto the trucks.⁸⁷⁹⁹ P-2353 claimed that they beat some of them with batons, including an imam.⁸⁸⁰⁰ P-2353 and P-2354 claimed that the Chadian soldiers treated them harshly as they tried to leave the town as quickly as possible.⁸⁸⁰¹

3573. According to P-2389 and P-2353, some families were separated in different trucks.⁸⁸⁰² Several witnesses indicated that people were upset and cried as they climbed into the trucks.⁸⁸⁰³ Diakité Aboubakar stated that Christians gathered around the trucks and some of them cried.⁸⁸⁰⁴ Diakité Aboubakar indicated that other people said bad things to the Muslims as they boarded and left, celebrating their departure, saying things like ‘now go back to your country. We don’t need you’ and ‘boubatjala’ (meaning ‘stupid’ in Sango), but that the people who were sad about the departure told them to stop saying such things.⁸⁸⁰⁵

3574. Various witnesses indicated that people were not allowed to get into the trucks with their possessions, which they had to leave behind.⁸⁸⁰⁶ P-2353 and P-2041 indicated that the

Chadian soldiers threw people's belongings on the ground.⁸⁸⁰⁷ P-2353 claimed that the fact that they were not allowed to bring their luggage with them added to their distress.⁸⁸⁰⁸ P-1823 stated that those who wanted to leave Mbaïki had to leave all their possessions, but 'the most essential thing was to save yourself, save your skin'.⁸⁸⁰⁹ P-2041 said that while some people managed to take a bag with them, most could only take what they were wearing at the time.⁸⁸¹⁰

3575. P-1666 described how he felt that day:

When I left Mbaïki it was extremely difficult. I had tears in my eyes. The Christians came, they took our hands. They cried, we cried. It was very moving. We didn't expect this departure. We didn't think that one day we would leave from this town. You must remember, we invested a lot. We built a lot up and all of a sudden we had to abandon everything and leave. It was really with great sadness because we were forced to abandon everything which we had shared as we grew up, so there was a lot of sadness. It was difficult. It was very hard to bear.⁸⁸¹¹

3576. The evidence indicates that in addition to the trucks of the Chadian forces, the convoy that left Mbaïki that day also included private vehicles. Diakité Aboubakar and D29-5013 indicated that some Muslims of Chadian origin provided their vehicles to transport people.⁸⁸¹² P-2353 stated that he carried people, as well as the family luggage and possessions, in his three vehicles and followed the Chadian truck on which his family had left for Bangui.⁸⁸¹³ According to P-2353, he used one of the vehicles to transport 40 people, as well as his family luggage and possessions.⁸⁸¹⁴ He also stated that he followed the Chadian convoy with his vehicles while his family travelled in one of the Chadian trucks.⁸⁸¹⁵ Similarly, P-1666 testified that he and his 'brothers and sisters' used their own vehicles to R02, at 0044, para. 59. The Chamber does not consider this conclusion to be discredited by the evidence of Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba, who stated that before leaving, some Muslims sold their possessions (see D29-5012: T-294, p. 51, line 24 – p. 52, line 12). Even if this was the case, the Muslims in question were not able to leave with their belongings.

drive to Kilometre 5 with the Chadian convoy.⁸⁸¹⁶ P-2354 also indicated that he joined the convoy in his pickup with his wives and children.⁸⁸¹⁷

3577. Regarding the possessions that people could not load on the trucks and take with them, P-2389 indicated that they were mostly taken by those who stayed behind.⁸⁸¹⁸ Other witnesses, including Raymond Mongbandi, Roger Okoa-Penguia, P-2354 and D29-5013, similarly testified to this.⁸⁸¹⁹

3578. With respect to the houses and shops owned by those who left, including from localities along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, some witnesses indicated that they were occupied, with or without the owners' consent, while other witnesses claimed that they were destroyed. Guerrino Perin testified that some Muslim houses were occupied by people who no longer had their own house.⁸⁸²⁰ Raymond Mongbandi specified that he saw Mr Yekatom accompany his elements around Mbaïki and install them in the abandoned houses of the Muslims.⁸⁸²¹ Roger Okoa-Penguia stated that the local population and the Anti-Balaka elements entered the houses abandoned by the Muslims and 'helped themselves to what they found'.⁸⁸²² P-1666 confirmed his previous statement that Christians from certain neighbourhoods of Bangui settled in the houses and shops of the Muslims in Mbaïki and did not want the Muslims to return to Mbaïki.⁸⁸²³

3579. Raymond Mongbandi also indicated that he knew that arrangements were made so that those who stayed could take care of some of the houses.⁸⁸²⁴ The witness indicated that these houses were protected and ‘stayed intact’, and denied that any houses were destroyed.⁸⁸²⁵ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo similarly stated that some Muslims left their properties under the care of their neighbours or designated locals.⁸⁸²⁶ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo indicated that they tried to ensure that the population did not destroy the Muslim houses and that he believed that no house was destroyed.⁸⁸²⁷

3580. P-2389 stated that the person he had asked to look after his house in Pissa told him that he was chased away by the Anti-Balaka, who moved into the house, and that they wanted to destroy his second house but were prevented from doing so by the local population.⁸⁸²⁸ Three or four days after arriving to Mbaïki, P-2389 also heard from a friend that the Anti-Balaka destroyed the mosque in the Arab neighbourhood in Pissa.⁸⁸²⁹

3581. Contrary to the above evidence, Diakité Aboubakar stated that once the Muslims of Chadian origin were ‘evacuated’ from Mbaïki, their homes were destroyed by the Anti-Balaka.⁸⁸³⁰ P-2353 testified that his properties in Mbaïki, including his house and coffee factory, were pillaged and destroyed after he fled the town.⁸⁸³¹ When asked, he indicated that he heard that it was the Anti-Balaka, and argued that it could not have been any other group because the Anti-Balaka were the only ones who ruled and operated in Mbaïki at the time.⁸⁸³² He also indicated that his three shops were being used by other people.⁸⁸³³

3582. The Chamber also notes that some witnesses mentioned that mosques in Mbaïki were attacked and/or damaged after the Muslims’ departure from Mbaïki. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo specifically stated that one mosque was attacked by thieves from Bangui and surrounding areas, and that the metal sheets of the roof of another mosque had been stripped off, and that he did not think it was done by the Anti-Balaka.⁸⁸³⁴ P-0475 testified that all mosques were destroyed.⁸⁸³⁵ Diakité Aboubakar stated that following the ‘evacuation’ of the Muslims of Chadian origin from Mbaïki, the Anti-Balaka destroyed all the mosques.⁸⁸³⁶ He further indicated that one month before giving his statement in March 2019, he had been in Mbaïki with Guerrino Perin and had taken pictures of the destroyed mosque.⁸⁸³⁷ Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba testified that after the Muslims left Mbaïki, the two mosques ‘were not destroyed’ but windows and doors were removed and the mosques ‘were not in very good condition’.⁸⁸³⁸ D29-5013 asserted that no mosque in Mbaïki was destroyed, but did not explain how she knew this.⁸⁸³⁹ On the basis of the above, the Chamber considers that the mosques in Mbaïki were in the least damaged, but it is unable to conclude by whom.

3583. Once the boarding of the people into the trucks was completed, the convoy initiated its journey towards Bangui. Several witnesses mentioned that on their way to Bangui, the trucks passed through Anti-Balaka barriers.⁸⁸⁴⁰

3584. P-2353 described an encounter with Mr Yekatom ‘at about S[amba], near to PK9’. In particular, P-2353 indicated that Mr Yekatom, who was driving his pick-up with some elements, stopped him and told him that he should not go into exile, that he should stay in Bangui until he could return to Mbaïki in a few days when the situation went back to normal.⁸⁸⁴¹ Mr Yekatom also told him that he knew what it was like to be in exile and that this is why he did not want them to go into exile.⁸⁸⁴²

3585. P-2353 further explained that at the PK9 barrier, a ‘mix’ of Anti-Balaka elements and ‘street bandits’ threatened them verbally in the presence of gendarmes who did not intervene, but that they were allowed to pass through thanks to the Burundian MISCA, who escorted his vehicle to PK5.⁸⁸⁴³ P-2353 stated that he was certain they would have been killed in front of the gendarmes if the Burundian MISCA had not been there.⁸⁸⁴⁴

3586. P-2041, P-2389 and P-2354 provided detailed accounts of their journey to Chad. They explained that once the trucks reached Bangui, they stopped at the airport.⁸⁸⁴⁵ According to P-2354, some people took a flight from the airport to Chad while others continued travelling with the convoy towards Chad.⁸⁸⁴⁶ P-2354 also indicated that he joined the convoy with his pickup because he feared an attack by the Anti-Balaka.⁸⁸⁴⁷

3587. P-2041 and P-2389 stated that on their way to Chad, the Anti-Balaka attacked the convoy.⁸⁸⁴⁸ P-2041 believed it was the Anti-Balaka because there were many of them and they had automatic firearms.⁸⁸⁴⁹ P-2389 stated that the driver told them that it was the Anti-Balaka who were shooting at them with automatic gunfire from the trees.⁸⁸⁵⁰ Both witnesses indicated that the Chadian soldiers shot back and that the convoy was able to continue without anyone injured.⁸⁸⁵¹

3588. According to P-2041 and P-2389, the travel conditions were very difficult and they were not given any food or water during the journey.⁸⁸⁵²

3589. P-2389 explained that once they reached Chad, they were first placed in a military camp.⁸⁸⁵³ The next day, he registered his family with UNHCR and they stayed in a refugee site, but the conditions were bad and he decided to register them with 'the Chadian central government table where returnees were registered' although he had no family links to Chad.⁸⁸⁵⁴ The returnee site was better as 'they received aid from the Arab countries'.⁸⁸⁵⁵

3590. P-2041 explained that upon arriving to Chad, he continued directly to Moundou and rented a house for his family because he did not want to stay at one of the refugee sites as he feared for the safety of his family and especially for his older daughters.⁸⁸⁵⁶ In Chad, he met people from other areas such as Bouca, Nola and Carnot who were fleeing after being attacked by the Anti-Balaka or because they feared an attack by the Anti-Balaka in which they would be killed.⁸⁸⁵⁷

3591. The Chamber notes that the Muslim civilians who were forced to leave Mbaïki and were dislocated to Chad had to go to refugee camps in Chad, like P-2389 and his family, unless they had relatives in the country and could live with them, or had the means to rent a house, like P-2041.

3592. As for the refugee camps in which these individuals stayed in Chad, several witnesses described their living conditions as poor and extremely difficult.

3593. P-2389 explained that one refugee camp had no toilets and they had to build latrines.⁸⁸⁵⁸ There was a school in one of the camps, but the conditions for the children to learn were not 'viable'.⁸⁸⁵⁹

3594.P-2389 described the impact of leaving the CAR for him and his family as ‘very negative’ because they lost everything, they slept in difficult conditions and his children had problems accessing health care.⁸⁸⁶⁰ They spent several years in these refugee camps and at the time of P-2389’s testimony in June 2023, some of his children were still living in a refugee camp.⁸⁸⁶¹

3595.The vast majority of witnesses, including insider witnesses and Muslim civilians who were removed from Mbaïki, explained to the Chamber that the Muslim population fled Mbaïki because they were afraid of the Anti-Balaka and believed that they would be killed if they stayed.

3596.Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili, who was the deputy ComZone in Mbaïki at the time, testified that it was the presence of the Anti-Balaka in Mbaïki that scared Muslims and made them leave.⁸⁸⁶² According to this witness, Muslims in Mbaïki heard about the Anti-Balaka from Bossangoa killing Muslim civilians on their way from Bossangoa to Bangui and thought that the same thing would happen in Mbaïki.⁸⁸⁶³ He also indicated that comments made by some elements, such as ‘when we [find] Muslims, we kill them’, and the name Anti-Balaka, scared people.⁸⁸⁶⁴

3597.P-1839 testified that despite Mr Yekatom’s peace speeches, Muslims in Mbaïki did not feel safe and therefore asked the people of the UN of Chadian origin to get them out of the area.⁸⁸⁶⁵

3598.P-1666 testified that once the Anti-Balaka arrived in Mbaïki, there was too much insecurity which, together with ‘false propaganda [...] circulated by politicians’, made the Muslim population in Mbaïki anxious and incited them to leave.⁸⁸⁶⁶

The Chamber notes that while Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili said that these comments were made by ‘the children’, he also made reference to a video previously shown to him in which he recognised two elements talking about killing Muslims (see P-1647: T-194, p. 61, lines 16-17 referring to p. 46, line 4 – p. 51, line 3; Video, CAR-OTP-2065-3172).

3599. Raymond Mongbandi stated that Muslims heard what happened in Bangui-Bouchia and in other areas and felt very vulnerable once the Seleka based in Mbaïki had left.⁸⁸⁶⁷ Therefore, they accepted the decision to leave because they had no choice ‘other than to stay and risk losing everything including their lives’.⁸⁸⁶⁸ He specifically pointed out that the threat came from the Anti-Balaka, not the non-Muslim population.⁸⁸⁶⁹

3600. P-2389 also testified that while he was not happy to leave Mbaïki and did not want to go to Chad, he feared for their lives if they stayed.⁸⁸⁷⁰

3601. Likewise, P-2041 stated that he and his family had no choice but to leave Mbaïki because they feared that they would otherwise be killed by the Anti-Balaka or their supporters, as had later on happened to Djido Saleh.⁸⁸⁷¹ P-2041 further explained that they had heard about what had happened in Bangui and in different towns in the northern part of the country, and they were very frightened.⁸⁸⁷²

3602. P-2353 stated that there was no security for the Muslim community in Mbaïki and that despite Mr Yekatom’s words, ‘the threats and gestures of the Anti-Balaka did nothing to make them feel safe’.⁸⁸⁷³ The witness also stated that if Muslims had not left Mbaïki, he is convinced that they would have been killed by the Anti-Balaka, despite what Mr Yekatom said.⁸⁸⁷⁴ P-2353 testified that he was forced to leave Mbaïki, and that this was a choice between life and death.⁸⁸⁷⁵

3603. P-2354 stated that they were forced to flee Mbaïki because they feared that they would be killed by the Anti-Balaka if they stayed, as had happened to ‘D[jido], A[ba Zakaria] and the others’.⁸⁸⁷⁶

3604.P-1823 described that even though he was a Central African, not a Chadian, he and others discussed the necessity for everybody to go to Chad because it was an opportunity to take refuge and since ‘[p]eople had no willingness to stay because it was going to cost you your life if you stayed’.⁸⁸⁷⁷

3605.In contrast to the above, Vivien Beina testified that Muslims were not ‘chased away’ from Mbaïki, but rather fled the town voluntarily because of the ‘hostilities’. He also seemed to suggest that the reason they fled was because Chad, being aware of the acts perpetrated by Chadian soldiers would have repercussions, considered it necessary to ‘evacuate’ the Muslims and therefore sent trucks of the Chadian army from N’Djamena to Lobaye.⁸⁸⁷⁸

3606.Moreover, D29-5013 explained that the Muslims gathered in Mbaïki because they wanted to leave together, they had decided to do so and it was ‘their way of seeing things’.⁸⁸⁷⁹ The witness seemed to suggest that Muslims left Mbaïki voluntarily and for reasons not directly connected to the Anti-Balaka. Yet, D29-5013 also indicated that ‘young people’ in Mbaïki wanted to fight the Muslims and the Christian population made comments such as ‘they have to leave’.⁸⁸⁸⁰

3607.Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili claimed that the Anti-Balaka cohabited with the Muslims in Mbaïki ‘without any problems’ but that they were scared ‘just because of [their] presence’ and asked to be ‘evacuated’.⁸⁸⁸¹

3608.The Chamber, however, considers that there is overwhelming evidence, set out above, which demonstrates that Muslims fled Mbaïki because they were afraid of the Anti-Balaka. These fears were not unfounded or based on the mere presence of the Anti-Balaka in the town. In this regard, the Chamber recalls its findings above that elements belonging to Mr Yekatom’s group, as well as local youngsters, threatened and harassed the Muslim civilian population of Mbaïki – the former as soon as they arrived in the town.⁸⁸⁸² From that moment onwards, Muslims in Mbaïki were not able to move around freely and their living conditions worsened by the day. As described by various witnesses, Muslims felt that they had no choice but to leave Mbaïki as they believed that the Anti-Balaka would kill them if they stayed any longer.

3609. Accordingly, the Chamber puts no weight on the claims that Muslims left Mbaïki because an ‘evacuation’ had been arranged in advance, or because Muslims ‘wanted’ to leave regardless of the Anti-Balaka. The Chamber reiterates that even if Muslims agreed or requested to be removed from Mbaïki, they did so because they felt that their lives were in danger as long as they stayed in Mbaïki. In the Chamber’s view, this reflects that there was a genuine lack of choice on their part.

Thereafter, the Congolese MISCA transported a second group of Muslims out of Mbaïki to Bangui and other locations.

3610. Several witnesses indicated that after the Chadian forces transported the first group of Muslims out of Mbaïki, the Congolese MISCA arrived in Mbaïki and transported a second group of Muslims out of the town.

3611. P-2041 testified, when asked, that while the Muslims who had come to Mbaïki from the neighbouring area to seek refuge were ‘evacuated’ on the same day, a smaller number of Muslims were ‘evacuated’ by the MINUSCA.⁸⁸⁸³

3612. P-1666 confirmed, when asked, that after the ‘evacuation’ of the first group of Muslims from Mbaïki, ‘the Malian community’ remained in the town until they were ‘evacuated’, after which ‘[t]he only person who remained was the mayor and his family’.⁸⁸⁸⁴

3613. Diakité Aboubakar provided further details. In particular, he explained that the Chadian forces left ‘the Muslim West Africans’ behind because he had not been informed on time about the ‘evacuation’ of ‘the Chadians’ and they were therefore not ready to move.⁸⁸⁸⁵ He stated that he was caught by surprise when he saw ‘a Chadian vehicle with a big gun arriving in the city’, and later confirmed with a Chadian merchant delegate that they would be

‘evacuated’ that day.⁸⁸⁸⁶ He also testified that ‘the Central African Muslims’ and ‘the West Africans’ stayed in Mbaïki town for a week more.⁸⁸⁸⁷ During this time, they cohabited with the Anti-Balaka, and while the Anti-Balaka did not attack or kill any Muslims, there were threats.⁸⁸⁸⁸ In this respect, the Chamber recalls the incident Diakit  Aboubakar mentioned, which happened during his period, in which some Anti-Balaka elements surrounded the mosque in which he was praying alone and told him to leave.⁸⁸⁸⁹

3614. When asked whether the Muslims who were to be ‘evacuated’ had lived in the CAR for a long time, Diakit  Aboubakar indicated that they had lived for a long time in the town of Mbaïki, they were born and married in Mbaïki, and had had children in the town of Mbaïki.⁸⁸⁹⁰

3615. Diakit  Aboubakar and the ‘chef de quartier’ initiated the arrangements of this dislocation, asking the MISCA contingent of Congo Brazzaville to help them reach Bangui ‘since all the Arabs had left and [they] were afraid that [they] would be killed’.⁸⁸⁹¹ At the request of a MISCA colonel, the witness made a list of 103 individuals who wanted to ‘get out of M[baïki]’.⁸⁸⁹² One week after the ‘evacuation’ of the Muslims of Chadian origin, the Congolese MISCA ‘evacuated’ them in two groups, first women, children and some men, and then the rest, including Diakit  Aboubakar.⁸⁸⁹³ The witness indicated that the MISCA convoy was made up of three vehicles, with the trucks in the front and in the back carrying the military and the one in the middle carrying the evacuees.⁸⁸⁹⁴

3616. Diakit  Aboubakar described how Christians escorted him from his house to the truck, helped them board their items in the truck, and some of them were sad and cried as they watched them leave.⁸⁸⁹⁵ The Anti-Balaka also watched them.⁸⁸⁹⁶ During his testimony, he added that other inhabitants were ‘very happy’ to see them leave.⁸⁸⁹⁷

⁸⁸⁹⁰ P-1595: T-106, p. 13, lines 4-15. The Chamber notes that the preface to the question mentioned Muslims from surrounding villages who fled to Mbaïki and were evacuated from there, but that the ultimate question was more general in asking whether Muslims who were going to be evacuated were people who lived in the CAR for a long time. The witness clearly understood this to refer to the Mbaïki Muslim population.

3617. Diakité Aboubakar stated that they passed through at least twenty Anti-Balaka roadblocks on their way to Mbaïki but that they were not disturbed because the convoy was led by a heavily armed MISCA Land Cruiser.⁸⁸⁹⁸ When they arrived at PK9, about 20 MISCA Land Cruisers joined the convoy and escorted them to the Congolese MISCA camp, before being taken to the Central Mosque in Bangui.⁸⁸⁹⁹

3618. Similarly, Diakité Aboubakar indicated that ‘the Chadians’ and ‘West African Muslims’ left Mbaïki because they were afraid of being killed by the Anti-Balaka.⁸⁹⁰⁰ The witness said they really were frightened and even though one Anti-Balaka element told them to stay, he replied that they were too scared to stay in Mbaïki and that they would only return when peace returned.⁸⁹⁰¹

3619. The Chamber notes that P-1666 testified that he met some of the Muslims of Malian origin who were removed from Mbaïki and brought to Bangui and that they explained to him what had happened.⁸⁹⁰² In particular, P-1666 confirmed, when asked, that he had previously stated that 48 hours after the departure of the Muslims of Chadian origin, the Muslims of Malian origin called the Malian embassy in Bangui because they were afraid.⁸⁹⁰³ He also confirmed that the Malian embassy asked the Congolese MISCA contingent to escort these Muslims to Bangui.⁸⁹⁰⁴ According to P-1666, some of these Muslims were ‘evacuated’ to Mali, while others remained in Bangui.⁸⁹⁰⁵

3620. Further, the Chamber notes that Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo explained that at the time, ‘Muslims from Chad’ were targeted more than ‘Muslims from Mali and Nigeria’.⁸⁹⁰⁶ He believed that this was ‘a continuation of the conflict with the Chadian elements of MISCA in Bangui’, whom were deemed to protect more those from their community while neglecting Christians.⁸⁹⁰⁷ The witness further stated that for this reason, ‘the Chadian Muslim community’ in Mbaïki felt threatened and prior to the arrival of ‘the Anti-Balaka’ had spoken with the Chadian authorities about their potential ‘evacuation’.⁸⁹⁰⁸ He also stated that prior to the 30 January meeting, the representatives of the Muslim community from Mali had also told him that they would leave with the ‘Chadian Muslims’ if the latter were ‘evacuated’.⁸⁹⁰⁹

3621. Antareze-de-Neve Madongagba summarised the situation such that:

[...] those Muslims who left, indeed, they thought of Mbaïki and the surrounding villages, they thought of those places as their territory, [...] the place they were from. [...] there were Muslims who were asking some non-Muslims to keep an eye on their houses, so they entrusted their houses to some non-Muslim individuals. If someone says ‘Could you keep an eye on my house?’ that means that there is a hope that one day they will return.⁸⁹¹⁰

3622. The Chamber received evidence on the impact that this dislocation and resultant implications had on the individuals concerned.

3623. For example, Diakité Aboubakar stated that when visiting Mbaïki in early 2019, there were very few Muslims in Mbaïki, who had left Mbaïki for a few days during the events and then returned because their Christian mothers were originally from Mbaïki.⁸⁹¹¹ He added that some Chadians returned to Mbaïki and engaged in their trading and businesses.⁸⁹¹²

3624.P-2353 said during his interview in 2019 that he wanted to return to his village in Mbaïki when the situation permitted, but did not see that happening any time soon.⁸⁹¹³ During his testimony, P-2353 expanded as follows:

I sought refuge in a foreign country and everything happened during my absence. My house, my shop, all my property was pillaged and destroyed. Even my coffee machine was taken away. [...] ever since I got here, I'm scared to go back to Mbaïki. I'm stuck in Bangui. I'm scared. I was born in a city and I really strive to contribute to the city. I ran a business and everything was annihilated and it is extremely sad. And this is why I don't even have the courage to go to Mbaïki and this is why I stayed on in Bangui.⁸⁹¹⁴

If you have your own house and you're driven out of your house and someone takes all your possessions, what can you do? You can only be sad. Once we got to Chad, we got there because it was war. There was a war going on in our country. Once we got there, our children lived under the trees. But those children were not born under the trees. We spent three months there. And three months later, it was very difficult there, so we had to leave that place and move onward.⁸⁹¹⁵

It's a very painful impact and on several levels. I was a shopkeeper and I had employees. And today I've lost everything, just about everything. I've got nothing. All the fruit of my investment is gone. [...] my wives are just about managing to meet their needs. My children are all scattered and it's very difficult to meet their needs. [...] But after these events, I've lost everything. I've lost everything. The little ones with me, I manage to send them to school, but the children who are slightly elder in age have left school, have dropped out. I don't know how they're going to fend for themselves tomorrow. The second problem is I do not have a home. [...] Sometimes I have problems in paying my rent. [...] I've got financial problems, and I really am struggling to meet the needs of my family.⁸⁹¹⁶

3625.P-2354 testified that leaving Mbaïki had a great impact: they had been there for 20 or 30 years, had traded there, had property, had goods in their shops and cafés, and had to leave everything behind.⁸⁹¹⁷ Returning to Mbaïki was 'not on the cards' for him because while he would return to the country with his children if there is peace, this was not the case for him at the time of his testimony.⁸⁹¹⁸ P-2354 estimated the value of his belongings which he had to leave behind at approximately 45 million CFA.⁸⁹¹⁹

3626.P-1823 described that the crisis had an impact on him and his family, he had to leave everything behind, his health was affected, and ‘it pushed me into a different dimension because I kept on thinking about everything I had lost’.⁸⁹²⁰ He also thought that many Muslims who used to live in Mbaïki lost their lives because they were used to life in the forest in Lobaye, and when they left for Chad, they could not resist the temperature and life was different.⁸⁹²¹

3627.P-2041 testified that leaving their homes, they had a lot of difficulties: they had to abandon their homes, abandon their jobs to go to a foreign place where it was also extremely difficult to find housing, so the situation was extremely difficult.⁸⁹²² At the time of his testimony in May 2023, his family was still in Chad, while he worked in Bangui to be able to send them money.⁸⁹²³ According to P-2041, his life has deteriorated greatly, he does not have the stability he had.⁸⁹²⁴

7. The killing of Djido Saleh

Following the removal of Muslim civilians out of Mbaïki, Djido Saleh, the second deputy mayor of Mbaïki, and his family, were among the very few remaining Muslims in Mbaïki. Prior to his killing, elements of Mr Yekatom’s group threatened Djido Saleh. There is no indication that Anti-Balaka elements demanded money from Djido Saleh.

3630. Raymond Mongbandi testified that Saleh believed that his mayor's badge would protect him against violence and that this is why he decided to stay.⁸⁹²⁶ According to the witness, members of the community, including religious authorities, asked Saleh to get into one of the vehicles transporting Muslims out of Mbaïki, but he refused.⁸⁹²⁷

3631. P-2041 similarly testified that as he was in a vehicle that had joined the convoy to leave Mbaïki, he saw Saleh and had a brief conversation with him in which Saleh told him that he was not going to 'budge' and that nothing was going to happen.⁸⁹²⁸

3632. Likewise, Diakité Aboubakar stated that he 'pleaded' with Saleh on several occasions to leave Mbaïki and warned him that he would otherwise get killed.⁸⁹²⁹

3633. Raymond Mongbandi also stated that the MISCA, the prefect, the deputy prefect and himself worried about Saleh's situation and feared for his safety at the hands of the Anti-Balaka.⁸⁹³⁰ The witness indicated that about three days before Saleh was killed, he and the first deputy mayor went to see Saleh and offered to take him to the MINUSCA site, but he refused.⁸⁹³¹

The Chamber notes that Raymond Mongbandi testified that some Muslims 'whose mother was Central African' remained in Mbaïki, including the one he managed to secure later for Djido Saleh's burial to ensure it complied with Muslim rites (see P-1838: T-215, p. 37, lines 10-14; T-216, p. 24, line 22 – p. 25, line 6). See also UNSG Report, CAR-OTP-2001-0409, at 0411, para. 11 (where the UN Secretary-General reported a radical change in the ethnic and religious demography of the CAR following the flight of many Muslims mostly to Cameroon and Chad, referring to towns which once had been multi-confessional as having been emptied of their Muslim communities, including Mbaïki). The Chamber refers to its considerations of this report above (see footnote 4111 above).

The Chamber notes that witnesses often seem to refer to the acronyms of international forces operating in the CAR across the relevant period interchangeably and irrespective of which force may in fact have been active at any particular time. It appears that the 'Mission internationale de soutien à la Centrafrique sous conduite africaine' (MISCA) started replacing the previously deployed assistance in July 2013, whereas the 'Mission multidimensionnelle intégrée de stabilisation des Nations unies en République centrafricaine' (MINUSCA) started operating in September 2014 (see Resolution

According to the witness, the Anti-Balaka occupied a house close to Saleh's house to surveil his activities, and both the witness and the MISCA colonel told Saleh that he was in danger and that he should leave his house, but Saleh refused to do so, arguing that he 'feared nothing' and that there was 'no risk weighing on him'.⁸⁹³²

3634. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that before Saleh's killing, he learnt from individuals in the community that Saleh 'was going to be targeted by the Anti-Balaka'.⁸⁹³³ The witness advised Saleh to leave Mbaïki 'as it was known that he had dealings with the Seleka and would give his vehicle for them to use'.⁸⁹³⁴

3635. D29-5013 testified that she was aware that Saleh had been threatened and that she considered that he had taken 'high risks' by staying in Mbaïki despite the departure of all the people of Muslim faith.⁸⁹³⁵ She herself had advised him to leave.⁸⁹³⁶

3636. Moreover, the Chamber notes that according to an Amnesty International report, whose delegates met with Saleh in February 2014, Saleh 'insisted that he and his family were born in the Central African Republic and had no reason to flee'.⁸⁹³⁷ The report also indicates that Saleh 'had received assurances from international forces including the Sangaris that they

Given the deployment of various international or internationalised forces in the CAR over prolonged periods, the Chamber considers this confusion of terms to be understandable and will refer to the acronyms as they were used in witnesses' testimonies, with the understanding that this may not necessarily accurately refer to the force in fact operating at the respective time.

⁸⁹³⁷ AI Report, CAR-OTP-2001-2707, at 2728. The Chamber notes the Ngaïssona Defence's observations specifically on the lack of probative value of this item (see Annex 1 to Defence Response to the Prosecution's "Request for the Submission of Evidence from the Bar Table regarding the Prevalence of Sexual and Gender Based Violence", 11 February 2022, ICC-01/14-01/18-1278-Conf-Anx1, pp. 45-46). In this regard, the Chamber considers that it evaluated this report in the context of other information on the record and did not rely on it solely for purposes of making a factual finding. Importantly, the Chamber did not rely on this report in a way which would, as suggested by the Ngaïssona Defence, 'impugn on the chamber's role to determine the existence, nature and scope of the crimes based on the evidenc[e] elicited by witnesses', but rather in the context of its holistic evaluation of all evidence before it.

would protect him, and that Mbaïki would be an example of reconciliation for the rest of the country'.⁸⁹³⁸ Likewise, an article dated 13 February 2014 quoted Saleh's statements that he was a Muslim, that he, his mother, wife and children had been born in the CAR, that he had promised to work for his country when he had assumed his functions five years ago and that he had made a commitment before God.⁸⁹³⁹

3637. Saleh himself formulated it as follows:

[...] ça nous fait peur, ça nous fait peur... ça nous fait peur parce que mais on est dans le risqué total, dans un risque total. Bon, comme nous sommes des responsables, exemple moi, je suis le 2^e adjoint au maire, je suis en une fondation, je suis... fondation de ce pays. Que j'aïlle où ? Aller où ? Non. Je ne peux pas, je suis dans mon pays et... je suis Musulman, je suis Musulman. Et donc... j'appelle à la... aux communautés internationales, il faut protéger, protéger les Musulmans et protéger les Chrétiens sans distinguer. C'est-à-dire [...] fatigué de cette guerre que nous ne savons pas là où il [...] vient.⁸⁹⁴⁰

3638. The Chamber also notes that Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo and Raymond Mongbandi discussed Saleh's involvement with the Seleka. In particular, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that it was known that Saleh 'had dealings with the Seleka and would give his vehicle for them to use', and that he heard that he was part of a group of Seleka from Mbaïki that went to Bangui-Bouchia after the killings there 'to wreak revenge'.⁸⁹⁴¹ Raymond Mongbandi indicated that when the Seleka were in Mbaïki, they forced Saleh to use his vehicle to move possessions looted from the population from Mbaïki to Bangui.⁸⁹⁴² He also stated that Saleh took part in the reprisal against Christians in Bangui-Bouchia and that he talked to Saleh about this, telling him that he was 'a public figure[,] a member of the local administration' and should not have taken part in ‘such reprisal actions’.⁸⁹⁴³ Moreover, Raymond Mongbandi mentioned an incident which took place after Saleh went to see the Seleka following their arrival in Pissa in order to mediate, and promised some elements to bring them a sheep.⁸⁹⁴⁴ These elements considered that it took Saleh too long to bring the sheep and attacked him beating him up ‘very violently’.⁸⁹⁴⁵ P-2353 also mentioned an incident in which Saleh was unable to pay a tax levied by the Seleka and was detained, with his brother paying 200,000 CFA before he was released.⁸⁹⁴⁶

3639. The Chamber notes that while the above evidence could suggest that Saleh participated in the reprisal acts committed by the Seleka in Bangui-Bouchia, it also indicates that the Seleka forced him to collaborate with the group and mistreated him. Accordingly, and on the basis of the evidence before it, the Chamber cannot conclude that Saleh was a member of, or otherwise affiliated with, the Seleka at the time of his death.⁸⁹⁴⁷

3640. In addition, besides witnesses expressing concern for Saleh’s and his family’s safety, as set out above, Raymond Mongbandi provided a detailed account of an incident involving Mr Yekatom’s elements and Saleh which occurred prior to his killing. According to Raymond Mongbandi, shortly after the Anti-Balaka arrived in Mbaïki, Cœur de Lion summoned Saleh to a meeting, where Saleh was interrogated.⁸⁹⁴⁸ After hearing about an argument between Saleh and the Anti-Balaka, the witness rushed to his office in the town hall, which the Anti-Balaka had occupied, and introduced himself to Cœur de Lion as the mayor of Mbaïki, told him to address him instead of Saleh, and told Saleh to go home.⁸⁹⁴⁹ According to Raymond Mongbandi, the Anti-Balaka ‘were making life difficult’ for Saleh.⁸⁹⁵⁰ He described Saleh’s interrogation as ‘rather rough’ and ‘a kind of intimidation’ which he attributed to the fact that Saleh was the only Muslim left in Mbaïki.⁸⁹⁵¹ Raymond Mongbandi confirmed, when asked, that at the meeting he had the impression that the Anti-Balaka wanted to kill Saleh.⁸⁹⁵²

3642. The Chamber further recalls that around this time, shortly after the departure of Muslims from Mbaïki, Catherine Samba-Panza visited Mbaïki together with the French minister of defence Le Drian, holding a speech in which she called on the Anti-Balaka in general to stop the violence.⁸⁹⁵⁷

On 28 February 2014, a group of individuals attacked Djido Saleh's house while he and his family were inside. Djido Saleh's family fled. As Djido Saleh tried to flee, the group of individuals pursued him and threw stones at him. Djido Saleh tried to defend himself with a bow and at least one arrow. The group of individuals, which included at least three elements of Mr Yekatom's group, one of them being Honorine Gbafalo, killed him as he tried to reach the gendarmerie. Honorine Gbafalo cut off his genitals. Other individuals beat him and cut parts of his body, including one of his ears and his neck, partly severing his head. These individuals targeted Djido Saleh on the basis that he was a Muslim. Following the death of Djido Saleh, Mr Yekatom told Raymond Mongbandi that the killing was 'an accident' and that he would pay for the burial, which he never did. As a direct consequence of the killing, MISCA ordered Mr Yekatom and his elements to leave Mbaïki, which they immediately did.

3643. The Chamber heard the account of several witnesses who described how a number of individuals attacked and killed Saleh, and thereafter mistreated his body by beating him and cutting parts of his body, including his genitals, one of his ears and his neck, partly severing his head, as he laid on the ground. The Chamber relied on these accounts, as well as on other evidence discussed during the trial, particularly a video footage showing how Saleh's body was mistreated after his killing,⁸⁹⁵⁸ for the findings set out below.

3644. On 28 February 2014, a group of individuals attacked Saleh's house while he and his family were inside.⁸⁹⁵⁹ As Saleh tried to flee and reach the gendarmerie to seek shelter, the individuals pursued him, threw stones at him and killed him.⁸⁹⁶⁰ Saleh tried to defend himself with a bow and at least one arrow.⁸⁹⁶¹

3645. P-1666 testified that on a Friday morning, he called Saleh who told him that he had received threats and was being attacked at that moment, saying, ‘I’m being attacked. I’m being threatened’.⁸⁹⁶² P-1666 could hear the sound of hostile people, after which someone apparently took the phone away from Saleh.⁸⁹⁶³ Subsequently, P-1666 called someone who was in the neighbourhood with Saleh, who told him that a group of people had attacked Djido and accused him of sheltering some people.⁸⁹⁶⁴ Another person confirmed this to P-1666, stating that they were about to bury him, while Saleh’s family had been taken to a safe place.⁸⁹⁶⁵

The Chamber also notes the evidence of Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, who confirmed that Saleh called him, telling him that he had heard there was a group of people going towards his domicile (see P-1813: T-182, p. 58, lines 19-24).

behind.⁸⁹⁶⁷ After being dragged, Saleh's body was left on the ground, partly undressed, only with shorts on.⁸⁹⁶⁸ One individual approached Saleh and appeared to make cuts on his chest with a knife.⁸⁹⁶⁹ Another individual approached Saleh, put down his shorts, and cut off his genitals with a knife, after which this individual quickly ran away from the scene while other individuals cheered.⁸⁹⁷⁰ At the same time, an individual appeared to cut Saleh's neck using a machete and a knife, partly cutting off his head with the help of other individuals.⁸⁹⁷¹ Several men surrounded the body, beating it with their weapons.⁸⁹⁷² Subsequently, an individual cut off one of Saleh's ears.⁸⁹⁷³ Some individuals also put their feet on Saleh's body parts and/or approached their weapons to the body, pretending to further harm it.⁸⁹⁷⁴

3648. In the meantime, Saleh's family was able to escape. According to Diakit  Aboubakar and Guerrino Perin, a man brought Saleh's wife and their children to the 'mission' right after the killing.⁸⁹⁸² Guerrino Perin explained that he gave them shelter, and asked MISCA the following day to pick them up at the 'mission' and take them to Bangui.⁸⁹⁸³ Raymond Mongbandi also indicated that Saleh's wife and 'under-age child' were put in a safe place and subsequently 'evacuated' to Bangui.⁸⁹⁸⁴

3649. The Chamber will now assess the evidence on the perpetrators of Saleh's killing and the subsequent mistreatment of Saleh's body.

3650. P-1339 testified that Honorine Mbafolo spoke to him about Saleh's killing and confessed her involvement. In particular, P-1339 explained that after neighbours had pointed out that a Muslim called 'Dido' was hiding in a house, and when this person went out for prayer, 'Mbafolo Honorine', on her own accord, took two elements with her, they went to the house, and beat and killed the man.⁸⁹⁸⁵ Honorine Mbafolo then cut off 'Dido's' sex.⁸⁹⁸⁶ When P-

The Chamber notes that some details of the account are included in the French version of the transcript but not in the English version. Bearing in mind that the witness testified in Sango, and that French was therefore the initial interpretation language, the Chamber has relied on the French version of the transcript in this instance. The Chamber further notes that P-1339 seemed unclear in his evidence on the location of the killing (see in particular T-154-FRA, p. 7, lines 24-27). In light of the unclarity on the specific location he tried to describe, and considering the other evidence available on this point, the Chamber will not rely on this aspect of P-1339's evidence.

⁸⁹⁸⁶ P-1339: T-154-ENG, p. 5, lines 22-23, p. 9, lines 1-9; T-154-FRA, p. 6, lines 12-13. See also T-156, p. 31, line 23 – p. 32, line 5 (confirming that Mbafolo Honorine removed Djido Saleh's sex and indicating that she was 'very delighted to do so').

1339 spoke with Honorine Mbafolo, who was positioned at a checkpoint to raise money for sustenance,⁸⁹⁸⁷ and who still had blood on her hands when returning, he asked her why she had done it and she responded that the Seleka had taken her ‘moto’, computer, and what she had put in her mind to do, what she had decided on doing, could not be erased.⁸⁹⁸⁸ P-1339 further explained that after Honorine removed Saleh’s sex, which she was ‘very delighted to do’, the MINUSCA was forced to ‘react and shoot at them’.⁸⁹⁸⁹ MINUSCA started shooting at the fleeing elements, and also those based at Socatel, including P-1339, were shot at, so they fled.⁸⁹⁹⁰ MINUSCA also dismantled the checkpoints, and when P-1339 asked an element called Ngombé and another whose name he could not recall why they left without asking their opinion leading to MINUSCA shooting at them, they made clear to him that the only person they had to answer to was their chief.⁸⁹⁹¹ According to the explanations P-1339 was given, the three of them – Honorine Mbafolo, chief Ngombé and a third element – were involved in killing Saleh.⁸⁹⁹² P-1339 confirmed that Honorine Mbafolo was a member of ‘the group’ at the time of Saleh’s killing and indicated that she was one of the women who joined ‘them’ in the bush.⁸⁹⁹³ Ngombé was a military, chief of section 4, and P-1339 did not ask him any questions for fear of him getting angry with P-1339, who was just a civilian, and he also said to P-1339 that it was not P-1339 who commanded him.⁸⁹⁹⁴

The Chamber also notes the evidence of Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo in this regard, who stated that he heard that MISCA followed the young people who were massed at the Balaka base between the town hall and Socatel, towards the ‘maison des jeunes’, and some fled and others dispersed into the neighbourhoods (see P-1813: T-182, p. 61, lines 8-11). Antareze-De-Neve Madongagba similarly mentioned that at the time of Saleh’s killing, elements of Mr Yekatom’s group were based ‘more towards the Socatel building’ (see D29-5012: T-295, p. 36, line 1 – p. 38, line 4).

3651. Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili testified that there was a ‘misunderstanding’ between Saleh and ‘one of our people’, and that after hearing noises, he went ‘there’ and saw the body.⁸⁹⁹⁵ He specified that only one Anti-Balaka element, ‘Mama Tia Godobe’ – whose name he stated to be Honorine Mbafolo –,⁸⁹⁹⁶ took part in the killing, and that those who ‘brought it about’ were ‘a crowd of civilians’, people from Mbaïki.⁸⁹⁹⁷ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili also indicated that their leader Sete punished ‘Mama Tia Godobe’.⁸⁹⁹⁸ When asked about her punishment, the witness indicated that she was ‘handed over to the gendarmerie and they did the rest’.⁸⁹⁹⁹ The witness further explained that after Saleh’s killing, he discussed with Sete the information he received from people, and it was up to Sete to report to Mr Yekatom.⁹⁰⁰⁰

3652. P-1786 explained that he was in Mbaïki when he heard that Saleh had started attacking some people close to his house, after which the population of Mbaïki got upset and lapidated him with pebbles and stones.⁹⁰⁰¹ He indicated that Saleh was not attacked with sticks or machetes and that it was not the Anti-Balaka who killed him but ‘the youth of Mbaïki’.⁹⁰⁰² Upon hearing about it, the witness asked his soldiers not to get close to the place of the incident ‘so that the Anti-Balaka [were] not accused of being the perpetrators of this murder’.⁹⁰⁰³ P-

⁸⁹⁹⁵ P-1647: T-194, p. 63, lines 10-14. The Chamber notes that the English version of the transcript refers to ‘the bodies’ seen by the witness, while the French version, which the Chamber considers the accurate one in this instance, refers to ‘le cadavre’, in singular (see T-194-FRA, p. 63, line 9).

⁹⁰⁰¹ P-1786: T-197, p. 87, line 23 – p. 88, line 5.

⁹⁰⁰³ P-1786: T-197, p. 88, lines 16-18.

1786 indicated that the ‘youth of Mbaïki’ told him about the killing.⁹⁰⁰⁴ He confirmed knowing Honorine Gbafolo and her nickname ‘Mama Tia Godobe’, and that she was in Mbaïki at the time, but that he did not know whether she was involved in Saleh’s killing.⁹⁰⁰⁵

3653. The Chamber notes that the three insider witnesses who provided evidence about Saleh’s killing differ in their accounts of who committed the killing. The Chamber finds P-1786’s account the least reliable one. First, according to P-1786, he heard that Saleh started attacking some people close to his house before he was attacked. Yet none of the other witnesses mentioned this. On the contrary, and as set out above, the evidence indicates that Saleh was in his house with his family when he was suddenly attacked by a number of individuals, at which point he tried to defend himself.⁹⁰⁰⁶ Second, P-1786 expressly indicated that Saleh was not attacked with sticks or machetes, which contradicts the video footage showing individuals beating Saleh with axes, machetes, sticks and knives.⁹⁰⁰⁷ Third, P-1786 was not present during this incident and heard about it from others.

3655. Specifically with regard to Honorine Gbafolo, the Chamber notes that the video footage of the mistreatment of Saleh’s body shows, as described above, an individual approaching the body, cutting off Saleh's genitals with a knife and quickly running away from the scene while other individuals cheered.⁹⁰⁰⁹ This individual, whose face in that particular scene is not visible,⁹⁰¹⁰ appears again later in the video, and is clearly a woman.⁹⁰¹¹ Some individuals in the video footage itself mention that a woman cut off the genitals of the body lying on the ground.⁹⁰¹² This same individual can also be seen in the video footage as one of the persons dragging Saleh's body,⁹⁰¹³ as well as putting her foot on Saleh's head, which was partly severed.⁹⁰¹⁴

3656. Further, P-1339 identified Honorine Gbafolo in another video and confirmed, when asked, that she was the one who removed Saleh's sex and killed him together with two other Anti-Balaka members.⁹⁰¹⁵ This video is the footage filmed by Gérard Ouambou when travelling with Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis⁹⁰¹⁶ and, in the Chamber's view, shows the same individual who can be seen in the video footage of Saleh's mistreatment as dragging and cutting off his genitals.

⁹⁰⁰⁹ Video, CAR-OTP-2059-0384, at approximately 00:02:20-00:02:40.

⁹⁰¹⁰ The Chamber notes that the translation of the video footage indicates that '[u]n homme baisse le short du gisant, coupe le sexe, puis chute sur le sol en voulant s'éloigner', referring to a man (see Translation, CAR-OTP-2118-5633, at 5637, lines 85-87). (Translation from French to English by the Registry) 'A man pulls down the lying figure's shorts, cuts off his penis, then falls to the ground while trying to move away'. The Chamber considers this to be the translator's assumption, that, in any event, has no bearing on its determination.

Further, the Chamber notes that some minutes later, an individual mentioned that '[c]'est cette maman-ci qui a coupé le pénis', after which someone said '[b]onjour', followed by another individual who ordered not to mention any person ('[n]on, on ne cite personne') (see Video, CAR-OTP-2059-0384, at approximately 00:11:35-00:11:55; Translation, CAR-OTP-2118-5633, at 5643, lines 300-302). (Translation from French to English by the Registry) 'This is the lady who cut off his penis'; 'Hello'; 'No, we don't mention anyone's name'. The Chamber considers this to further support the conclusion that the woman who cut Saleh's genitals was present when the video was recorded.

the killing, and that he himself later buried Saleh's body.⁹⁰¹⁸ Further, Raymond Mongbandi testified that when he buried Saleh, 'his penis and his testicles were not there', and that according to the information he received, the perpetrator was an Anti-Balaka woman who was based in Pissa and under the authority of 'Mr Rambo'.⁹⁰¹⁹ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo similarly heard from his 'informants' that a 'military lady' – there not being many female soldiers – cut off Saleh's penis and put it in his mouth.⁹⁰²⁰ Likewise, P-1666 testified that the person who handed him over the video of the mistreatment of Saleh's body told him that the woman appearing on the video was an Anti-Balaka element in 'the Rambo movement' who 'cut off the genitals of the mayor'.⁹⁰²¹

3658. The Yekatom Defence argues that there is no reliable evidence to suggest that 'RFACPP' members were involved in the killing of Djido Saleh since (i) hearsay evidence that 'Anti-Balaka' were responsible does not support the Prosecution's case; (ii) P-1339's evidence on the killing is 'manifestly unsafe'; (iii) Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili's evidence on Honorine Mbafolo's participation is unclear; and (iv) she was in any event not an 'RFACPP' member under Mr Yekatom's authority.⁹⁰²² The Yekatom Defence submits that, instead, Djido Saleh was killed by a 'mob' of locals from Mbaïki who harboured hostility towards him for his collaboration with the Seleka.⁹⁰²³

3659. The Chamber considers that the evidence of P-1339 and Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili unequivocally point to Honorine Gbafolo as one of the perpetrators of Saleh's killing. Likewise, their evidence together with that of Raymond Mongbandi and the video footage demonstrate that she cut off Saleh's genitals after his killing. The Chamber further notes the evidence of Raymond Mongbandi discussed below regarding his encounter with Mr

Yekatom after Saleh's killing.⁹⁰²⁴ In this regard, the Chamber notes that the evidence clearly indicates that Honorine Gbafolo was an element in Mr Yekatom's group.⁹⁰²⁵

3660. As regards other individuals involved in Saleh's killing and the subsequent mistreatment of his body, the Chamber notes that while Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo initially stated that he heard that Anti-Balaka elements killed Saleh,⁹⁰²⁶ he later specified that the Anti-Balaka who took Saleh from his domicile and executed him were 'the group of young people, indigenous people' helped by '[Anti-]Balaka who had come from Bangui or Pissa'.⁹⁰²⁷ He further explained that some wore military uniforms while others were dressed in civilian clothes, and that '[t]here were a low number of them compared to the group of young indigenous people who accompanied them'.⁹⁰²⁸ He testified that he had 'informants' who gave him the information as the events took place, and that one or two of these informants followed 'the group'.⁹⁰²⁹ Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo also confirmed that Saleh called him when he heard that a group of people was going towards his house, and that he told Saleh that he had warned him and advised him to leave.⁹⁰³⁰

3661. Diakité Aboubakar stated that on a Friday morning when he was in Bangui, a relative who was still living in Mbaïki called him and told him that there was a rumour that the Anti-Balaka were preparing to attack Saleh that day.⁹⁰³¹ She called him later that day and told him that Saleh had been attacked and that she had witnessed the attack 'to the end'.⁹⁰³² She told him that the Anti-Balaka attacked Saleh when he was in his house with all of his family, and that he tried to flee to the MISCA compound.⁹⁰³³ Later in his testimony, Diakité Aboubakar indicated that he was told that it was 'the residents largely of Mbaïki' who attacked Saleh's

compound, that there were also ‘some Anti-Balaka amongst them’, and that their aim was to pillage and take Saleh’s possessions.⁹⁰³⁴

3662.P-1823 indicated that on a Friday when ‘they’ were in front of the Central Mosque, Hassan Gary, a trader from Mali who had stayed in Mbaïki under the protection of the MINUSCA from the RDC and whose home was close to Saleh’s house, called ‘them’ and told ‘them’ that Saleh had been killed by ‘Anti-Balaka led by C[obo]’, later confirming that he referred to Victor Cobo, and including Prince Mondounga.⁹⁰³⁵ According to P-1823, the individual who called ‘them’ told ‘them’ that this happened on 2 March 2014 and that he had witnessed the incident himself.⁹⁰³⁶

3663.P-2353 explained that on the day of Saleh’s killing, he was no longer in Mbaïki but learnt that the Anti-Balaka had killed him.⁹⁰³⁷ He believed that the Anti-Balaka killed Saleh because they were the ones who controlled and ruled over the town, they threatened people with death and that made Muslims flee, except for Saleh, who remained in Mbaïki and was therefore killed by the Anti-Balaka.⁹⁰³⁸

3664.Raymond Mongbandi stated that Mr Yekatom’s elements killed Saleh according to the accounts he received.⁹⁰³⁹ When specifically asked about his sources of information, Raymond Mongbandi testified that it was the Anti-Balaka who killed Saleh because there was a conflict between two groups, ‘it could only be them’, and he was the target because he was the only Muslim left in town.⁹⁰⁴⁰ Raymond Mongbandi did not witness the killing, and when he heard what happened and returned to Mbaïki, he saw ‘a lot of MISCA activity, hunting for Anti-Balaka responsible for the killing’.⁹⁰⁴¹

The Chamber notes that P-1823 confirmed that Prince Mondounga is ‘the grandson of Madam Mondounga, the former adviser to the Mbaïki mayor’ and recognised him in a photograph shown to him during his testimony (see P-1823: T-183, p. 72, lines 2-7 referring to Photograph, CAR-D29-0010-0012).

⁹⁰⁴¹ P-1838 Statement, CAR-OTP-2100-0252-R05, at 0271, para. 102.

3665.P-2354 stated that he learned through Facebook that Saleh was killed by ‘R[ambo]’s Anti-Balaka’ in front of the company commander.⁹⁰⁴² P-2354 recognised Saleh in the images his son showed him on Facebook, as well as some of the youngsters from Mbaïki, whose names the witness did not know.⁹⁰⁴³

3666.Guerrino Perin believed that Saleh was trying to alert the prefect because there were ‘Anti-Balaka louts around’.⁹⁰⁴⁴ However, he did not think Mr Yekatom organised it because ‘the Anti-Balaka officials’ had kept their word.⁹⁰⁴⁵ According to Guerrino Perin, the ‘others’ who killed Saleh were ‘people who wouldn’t listen to anyone at all, who had their plans in their head’, and who ‘wanted to wreak revenge’.⁹⁰⁴⁶ Guerrino Perin was not present when Saleh was killed.⁹⁰⁴⁷

3667.The Chamber notes that, with the exception of Raymond Mongbandi and Guerrino Perin, none of the above witnesses were present in Mbaïki on the day of Saleh’s killing. However, Raymond Mongbandi and Guerrino Perin did not witness the killing. It also notes that Raymond Mongbandi and P-2353 indicated that Anti-Balaka elements killed Saleh based on their assumption that it could not have been any other group. The Chamber, therefore, puts little weight on this part of their evidence. As for Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo’s and Diakité Aboubakar’s accounts, it notes that both witnesses were in touch with people who witnessed the killing and who informed them almost immediately. Importantly, it notes that both Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo and Diakité Aboubakar indicated that according to their informants, Saleh was attacked by a mixture of local people from Mbaïki and Anti-Balaka elements. Guerrino Perin also seemed to refer to both the Anti-Balaka and ‘others’ looking for revenge as those responsible for Saleh’s killing. The Chamber further notes that P-2354 stated that he recognised ‘some of the youngsters from Mbaïki’ in a film clip, whose names he did not know. Regarding P-1823’s account, the Chamber notes that the witness’s source told him that he had witnessed the killing of Saleh by the Anti-Balaka.

3669. Taking into account all of the above, the Chamber concludes that Saleh was killed by a group of individuals which included at least three elements from Mr Yekatom's group, one of them being Honorine Gbafolo. The Chamber has further considered in this context the evidence indicating that Saleh had already received threats by the Anti-Balaka before his death and, in particular, Raymond Mongbandi's account according to which Mr Yekatom's elements, including his deputy Cœur de Lion, interrogated Saleh prior to his death – an interrogation which Raymond Mongbandi considered 'rather rough' and 'a kind of intimidation' which made the witness think that the Anti-Balaka wanted to kill Saleh.⁹⁰⁵¹

3670. In relation to the threats Saleh received, the Chamber is of the view that even if some of these threats were based on Saleh's alleged cooperation with the Seleka,⁹⁰⁵² which, according to the Yekatom Defence, would have fuelled the 'mob's' anger in his regard,⁹⁰⁵³ this does not distract from the conclusion that at the time he was attacked while in his house, Saleh was not engaged in any hostile activities, that he was one of the very few remaining Muslims in Mbaïki, and that the comments in the video showing the mistreatment of Saleh's body leave no doubt that he was killed because he was a Muslim. In this regard, the Chamber notes that once they killed Saleh, the perpetrators not only mistreated his body by beating it and cutting several parts of it but also by displaying a particularly cruel and humiliating behaviour towards Saleh which included partly undressing him, insulting and making fun of him, discussing ways in which to further harm him (including burning his body and eating his flesh), putting their feet on different parts of his body, approaching it with their weapons, pretending to further harm him and boasting about these acts.⁹⁰⁵⁴

3671. Raymond Mongbandi stated that Saleh's family – his wife and child – could not attend Saleh's burial, which he organised 'because the situation was very risky' considering the wife was Muslim and '[i]f the Anti-Balaka took note of her presence, she could have been executed'.⁹⁰⁵⁵ Raymond Mongbandi testified that after his killing, Saleh's body was put at the funeral site; he then managed to find a Muslim who could administer the funeral rites in accordance with Muslim tradition, after which Red Cross officials brought a bag and the body was buried – all this without the participation of Saleh's family.⁹⁰⁵⁶ The witness mentioned that in addition to the Red Cross, the accountant and the secretary-general of the town hall provided assistance, as well 'the Mbaïki youth', who under the supervision of the MISCA dug up a grave, and the MISCA itself, which escorted them to the cemetery, 'this really allow[ing] Djido's burial'.⁹⁰⁵⁷

3672. The Chamber further notes that when asked about the impact that Saleh's death had on him, Raymond Mongbandi indicated that '[w]hat really caused an impact on [him] was the fact that a human being was decapitated', which he described as 'a horrible act'.⁹⁰⁵⁸

3673. Furthermore, Raymond Mongbandi explained how Mr Yekatom came to see him the day after the killing and told him that it had been ‘an accident’.⁹⁰⁵⁹ According to Raymond Mongbandi, Mr Yekatom did not give any explanation for the death, offered to assist with the expenses of Saleh’s burial and told him after receiving a phone call that he had to go to see the MISCA colonel at the crossroads.⁹⁰⁶⁰ The witness also explained that he saw ‘them’ (referring to Mr Yekatom and the MISCA colonel) discussing and that the MISCA colonel ordered Mr Yekatom and all his men to leave Mbaïki, after which they all left immediately for Pissa.⁹⁰⁶¹ Raymond Mongbandi indicated that despite Mr Yekatom’s promise to provide logistics for the burial, they did not complete their discussions and Mr Yekatom never paid for Saleh’s burial.⁹⁰⁶²

3674. In relation to the first part of Raymond Mongbandi’s evidence, the Chamber considers that while Mr Yekatom’s statement, in itself, does not show that his elements were involved in the killing of Saleh, it does, combined with Mr Yekatom’s offer to cover the funeral expenses, indicate that Mr Yekatom assumed a degree of responsibility for the killing.

3675. Furthermore, the Chamber recalls that Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili explained that after Saleh’s killing, he discussed with his leader Sete the information he received from people, and that it was up to Sete to report to Mr Yekatom, because Sete was the superior in this situation and in turn subordinate to Mr Yekatom.⁹⁰⁶³ Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili also indicated that Sete punished Honorine Mbafolo.⁹⁰⁶⁴ When asked about her punishment, he indicated that she was ‘handed over to the gendarmerie and they did the rest’.⁹⁰⁶⁵ He did not know about a meeting that Mr Yekatom attended in the beginning of March to discuss, among other things, Saleh's killing.⁹⁰⁶⁶

3676. P-1339 indicated that when Saleh was killed, Mr Yekatom was not in Mbaïki but 'a lieutenant named Setay' was.⁹⁰⁶⁷ The witness confirmed, when asked, that Mr Yekatom was still the chief of the Anti-Balaka at the time.⁹⁰⁶⁸ P-1339 did not know whether Mr Yekatom met with MINUSCA to discuss Saleh's killing.⁹⁰⁶⁹ Further, he indicated that Honorine Mbafolo was not punished, sanctioned or admonished, but 'some did tell her that she was a strong woman'.⁹⁰⁷⁰ According to P-1339, she stayed in the group after the incident and remained until the DDR process, in which she participated.⁹⁰⁷¹ P-1339 also indicated, when asked, that Mr Yekatom knew Honorine Mbafolo 'very well' and everyone in the Anti-Balaka knew her and her nickname, mother of the 'Godobé' or mother of the street children.⁹⁰⁷²

3677. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo was shown a video of an interview with him at the relevant time in which he stated that the culprits of Saleh's killing had been identified and arrested, but released again as there was no capacity at the gendarmerie to hold them.⁹⁰⁷³ Being asked about his own statement, the witness claimed having doubts about this account and not recalling that the perpetrators of the killing were arrested and then released due to a lack of suitable premises to hold them.⁹⁰⁷⁴

3678. On the basis of the above, the Chamber is unable to conclude whether the perpetrators of Saleh's killing, including Honorine Mbafolo, were in fact sanctioned for their actions.

3679. In the aftermath of the killing and as a direct consequence of it, MISCA requested Mr Yekatom and his elements to leave Mbaïki.

3681. Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo stated that after the Anti-Balaka group in Mbaïki killed Saleh, the head of MISCA in the area went to the witness's house and told him that they had chased away the Anti-Balaka.⁹⁰⁷⁹ The witness saw Mr Yekatom again when he came to Mbaïki, but they did not speak about the killing.⁹⁰⁸⁰ He also did not recall, when asked during his interview, what he and Mr Yekatom discussed on the phone conversations that, according to CDR, they had on 28 February and 1 March 2014.⁹⁰⁸¹ He knew that MISCA and the gendarmerie were supposed to conduct an investigation on the incident, but did not know what happened to the people responsible for the killing.⁹⁰⁸² Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo believed that MISCA or Mr Yekatom's elements contacted Mr Yekatom to inform him about the killing.⁹⁰⁸³ The witness also stated that at some point in time, MISCA was asked to arrest

Mr Yekatom but instead of doing so, they contacted him and asked to speak to him.⁹⁰⁸⁴ Having been read information according to which he would have participated in a meeting with MISCA, gendarmerie and Mr Yekatom on 2 March 2014 at which Mr Yekatom would have said that he knew the person responsible for Djido Saleh's killing and having sanctioned him,⁹⁰⁸⁵ the witness stated not recalling such occasion.⁹⁰⁸⁶ While he did not recall precisely this meeting, he testified that they met on several occasions, including MINUSCA, municipality, defence and security forces, and Mr Yekatom, 'for him to be able to catch the attention of some of his elements who had conducted acts of violence at a number of locations in the locality'.⁹⁰⁸⁷

3682. The Yekatom Defence argues that Raymond Mongbandi made an 'unfounded and conclusory link' between MISCA taking control of the Mbaïki roundabout after Saleh's killing, and the 'expulsion' of Mr Yekatom.⁹⁰⁸⁸ The Chamber does not share this reading of Raymond Mongbandi's evidence. Rather, it is clear from the information he provided that the encounter between Mr Yekatom and MISCA took place shortly after Saleh's killing. Further, the Chamber recalls the evidence provided by P-1339 and Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo according to which MISCA, in the immediate context of Saleh's killing, chased away not only the individuals in the direct vicinity of the location at which Saleh was killed and his body mistreated, but also elements of Mr Yekatom's group based at Socatel at that time.⁹⁰⁸⁹ Even if the encounter between Mr Yekatom and MISCA coincided with MISCA taking full control of the town, as suggested by the Yekatom Defence, this does not negate the Chamber's conclusion that MISCA asked Mr Yekatom and his elements to leave Mbaïki as a direct consequence of Saleh's killing.⁹⁰⁹⁰

⁹⁰⁹⁰ The Chamber notes in this regard that the Yekatom Defence seems to also imply that the fact that the 'Anti-Balaka' were to be re-grouped in a 'safe place' is contradictory with the idea that they would have been 'expelled' from Mbaïki (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 546 referring to Note, CAR-D29-0002-

F. Recruitment of children under the age of 15 into the Anti-Balaka and their use

3683. Mr Yekatom is charged with conscription and/or enlistment of children under the age of 15 in his group at various locations, including Boeïng, Sekia, Pissa, and Batalimo, and the assignment of various tasks to them, such as participating in hostilities, including during the Bangui Attack, between ‘at least December 2013 and August 2014’.⁹⁰⁹¹

3684. The Prosecution submits that children under the age of 15 years were present in Mr Yekatom’s group from at least December 2013 through August 2014 and were recruited ‘in line with the Anti-Balaka’s widespread and well documented practice’.⁹⁰⁹² It relies, inter alia, on P-2476’s alleged experience in Mr Yekatom’s group as a former ‘child soldier’ and on witnesses who claimed to have seen other children at Yamwara and along the PK9-Mbaïki axis during the relevant period.⁹⁰⁹³ Further, it relies, inter alia, on Mr Yekatom’s interactions with the alleged ‘child soldiers’, his attendance in the ESF ceremony in August 2014, and on meetings with P-2018 to establish his intent.⁹⁰⁹⁴

3685. The Yekatom Defence submits that there were no children under the age of 15 in Mr Yekatom’s group.⁹⁰⁹⁵ It submits that evidence on the potential presence of children under the age of 15 years is unreliable as to their age and membership in Mr Yekatom’s group.⁹⁰⁹⁶ The Yekatom Defence makes extensive submissions concerning the fraudulent nature of the ESF programme, arguing that the persons registered in this programme were not under 15 years of age, and that therefore, the Chamber cannot rely on information related to ESF to enter conclusions under this count.⁹⁰⁹⁷

0080). The Chamber disagrees with this reading, as the document clearly states that regrouping the ‘Anti-balaka dans un lieu sûr’ was one of the factors discussed – in addition to support of MISCA and re-formation of defence and security forces – with a view to facilitating ‘la libre circulation des personnes et leurs biens’. Rather than contradicting the idea of an ‘expulsion’ of Mr Yekatom’s elements from Mbaïki, this makes clear that regrouping the elements in one place was considered a factor which would contribute to ensuring free circulation of people and goods. Also bearing in mind its general considerations regarding this item (see footnote 9002 above), the Chamber therefore does not find this to undermine its conclusion.

3686. As set out below, the Chamber by majority, Judge Chung dissenting, finds that the Prosecution presented no reliable evidence showing the presence of children under the age of 15 within Mr Yekatom's group during the period relevant to the charges.

3687. To recall, the Chamber heard four alleged former 'child soldiers' (P-2475, P-2476, V45-0001 and V45-0002), two ESF functionaries (P-2018 and P-1974), three government officials (P-2082, Roger Okoa-Pengua, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo), and one expert witness on the matter (Mirjam de Bruijn). The Chamber also heard one of the members of the Anti-Balaka national coordination, Alfred Legrand Ngaya, who attended one of the ceremonies organised by ESF in August 2014. The Chamber also received documentary evidence in the form of UN and NGO reports and media coverage regarding the presence of children within the Anti-Balaka generally.

3688. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution does not rely on P-2475, V45-0001, and V45-0002 in its Closing Brief for purposes of its submissions concerning Count 29, or otherwise. The Chamber further notes that the CLRV1 made detailed submissions on the credibility of V45-0001 and V45-0002, arguing that Mr Yekatom bears criminal responsibility under Count 29.⁹⁰⁹⁸

3691. In its assessment below, the Chamber first addresses the evidence concerning the presence of children under the age of 15 in Mr Yekatom's group at the various locations mentioned in the Confirmation Decision. The Chamber then assesses the evidence concerning the ESF programme before turning to Mr Yekatom's purported actions in relation to it.

1. Presence of children at bases in Bangui

3692. In respect of Bangui, the Chamber assessed the evidence concerning the presence of children at Yamwara⁹¹⁰⁰ and at Gbangba base,⁹¹⁰¹ both of which were under Mr Yekatom's control in December 2013 and finds that it received no reliable evidence showing the presence of children under the age of 15 years at either of these two locations.

3693. As regards Gbangba, the Chamber recalls that it found P-2475, who talked about the presence of children at the Gbangba base, wholly unreliable.⁹¹⁰² The Chamber further notes that P-1339, an Anti-Balaka ComZone who was with Mr Yekatom in Gbangba, explained that there were 'no children' in the group and that he meant combatants when describing an incident with 'children' going out to get food and getting punished.⁹¹⁰³ The Prosecution did not present any other evidence on the presence of children under the age of 15 in respect of this location.

a photograph on his identity card.⁹¹¹⁰ P-1839 did not know Bougie Noire's functions,⁹¹¹¹ and had heard from other elements that he had already killed someone and had already cut a young man's head.⁹¹¹² Importantly, P-1839 did not know his true age, but he was certainly not 'of age', meaning that he was not yet 18 years old.⁹¹¹³ P-1839, who was 17 or 18 at the time, thought that she was a lot older than Bougie Noire.⁹¹¹⁴ P-1839 estimated that Bougie Noire was 11 or 12 years old,⁹¹¹⁵ noting that he was the 'smallest' of the two 'children' who were with Rombhot.⁹¹¹⁶ P-1339 also spoke of an element called Bougie Noire but did not provide any estimates as to his age.⁹¹¹⁷ The Chamber has also received Bougie Noire's identity card, indicating that he was born in 1996,⁹¹¹⁸ and therefore, would have been over 16 years at the time.

3696. Having considered the evidence in its totality, specifically his identification card, the Chamber finds that Bougie Noire was not under 15 years old at the relevant time.

3697. P-1716 described seeing children at Yamwara,⁹¹¹⁹ recalling a boy who was with him and who 'wanted to do certain things to him, who wanted to attack him'.⁹¹²⁰ P-1716 also said generally that 'the children' had machetes in their hands, were wearing gris-gris, bearing weapons, and beating up the people who were there just any way they wanted, they did anything they wanted to do.⁹¹²¹ In respect of the boy that was with him, P-1716 said that he was ‘about 12 years of age’, estimate he based on saying that he ‘saw him’ and he was ‘still very small’.⁹¹²² P-1716 did not have any further information on who this person was, or his age. Having regard to this, the Chamber is unable to conclude who P-1716 may be referring to and whether this person was indeed under 15 years of age. The Chamber finds P-1716’s assessment of this boy’s ‘small’ stature and his estimate about his age insufficient to conclude that there was a boy under 15 years of age at Yamwara.

3698. In addition to the above, the Prosecution relies on a documentary to show presence of children under the age of 15 in Mr Yekatom’s group.⁹¹²³ It contains an exchange between a reporter and an alleged female ‘child soldier’ who stayed in Mr Yekatom’s group ‘in Bangui’ and ‘in the bush’ for about two years.⁹¹²⁴ The Chamber has received no information on how the filmmakers selected the person to be interviewed and how they assessed this person’s membership within Mr Yekatom’s group. The Chamber was unable to independently test the claims made therein by the alleged ‘child soldier’. The Prosecution has not presented any evidence to show whether an alleged ‘child soldier’ by the same name as the person in the documentary was ever present in Mr Yekatom’s group. Accordingly, the Chamber does not rely on this video for purposes of its determinations regarding Count 29.

3699. Further with a view to assessing whether children under the age of 15 may have been present in Mr Yekatom’s group in Bangui, the Chamber has also considered evidence suggesting that children under the age of 15 years may have participated in the Bangui Attack. On the evidence as further outlined below, the Chamber finds that this evidence in fact does not refer to children under the age of 15 in Mr Yekatom’s group.

3700. P-2232, who was not in Mr Yekatom’s group during the Bangui Attack,⁹¹²⁵ said that he saw children in the Anti-Balaka group that participated in this attack. Asked to estimate the ages of these children, P-2232 provided his estimates from physically observing the children, saying that some were younger than 15 years, even 12 years, further stating that the ‘OCHA’ visited the coordination to count the children and provide them with training and orientation.⁹¹²⁶ P-2232, asked if he saw them participating in battle, said that he was close to the battlefield and saw children carrying jerrycans of water for the combatants who were at the front, more involved in carrying supplies, he did not see them carrying weapons and participating in the fighting in his sector, but maybe that happened in ‘other sectors’.⁹¹²⁷ P-2232 said that he did not himself see that children who participated in the fighting were killed but said that maybe some were killed in ‘other sectors’.⁹¹²⁸

3701. The Chamber further notes the testimony of P-0884 who referred to the presence of children generally in Anti-Balaka groups engaged in fighting. P-0884 said that in certain groups coming from Bossangoa, for instance, there were young children – around 13, 15, 17 years –, and he did not know how those children joined those groups.⁹¹²⁹ P-0884 said that a lot of other people saw such children in those groups, orphans whose parents had been killed joined these groups.⁹¹³⁰

3702. Having regard to the above, the Chamber cannot conclude that there were children under the age of 15 years in Mr Yekatom’s group in Bangui. Importantly, the Chamber recalls that it has found P-2475 wholly unreliable. The Chamber has not received any other evidence in respect of the allegation that children under the age of 15 were mobilised to directly participate in hostilities under Mr Yekatom’s command, including in the Bangui Attack.

2. Presence of children on the PK9-Mbaïki axis

3703. In respect of the locations on the PK9-Mbaïki axis, the Chamber has assessed the presence of children at Pissa, Sekia, and Mbaïki. The Chamber finds that there is no reliable evidence that there were children under the age of 15 years in Mr Yekatom’s group in Pissa, Batalimo, and Sekia. For the same reasons, the Chamber finds by majority, Judge Chung dissenting, that there were no children under the age of 15 years in Mbaïki. Judge Chung considers that P-2476 was a member of Mr Yekatom's group in Mbaïki and was 14 years old at the time.

3704. The Prosecution, relying on P-2476, P-1839, Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo, P-1974, P-2018, P-2082, Guerrino Perin, Alfred Legrand Ngaya and Roger Okoa-Penguia, submits that there were children under the age of 15 in Mr Yekatom's group in these locations.⁹¹³¹ The Yekatom Defence argues generally that determining age based on physical appearance is unreliable in this case and submits that these witnesses did not provide reliable estimates as to ages or memberships of children alleged to be in Mr Yekatom's group.⁹¹³²

3705. Having regard to the witnesses who claimed to have generally seen children at checkpoints in Sekia and Pissa, the Chamber finds that their estimates as to these children's ages were based on their own observations. These witnesses did not have any other information to offer that could have assisted the Chamber in objectively assessing these observations or estimates.

3706. Based on his own assessment of their physical assessment at the time, P-1974 saw six children who may have been under 15 years old at an Anti-Balaka roadblock in Sekia and about seven children at the Pissa checkpoints whose ages he estimated to be between 9-15 years.⁹¹³³ P-2018 said that he saw children at Anti-Balaka roadblocks in Pissa,⁹¹³⁴ however, he was unable to reliably ascertain their age during this visit.⁹¹³⁵

The Chamber finds that his claim that there were '50' children at the Pissa roundabout does not comport with the rest of the evidence herein from other witnesses who observed the presence of children in Pissa. In any event, the Chamber has little indication of the actual ages of these children that P-2018 saw, given its views on the ESF programme. See paragraphs 616-621 above.

⁹¹³⁵ P-2018 thought these children might have been within the age range of 14-16 years, basing this on the fact that these were the same 'children' that later on participated in the ESF programme where they self-reported their age (see P-2018: T-222, p. 25, lines 4-14, p. 26, lines 9 – p. 27, line 4; T-223, p. 43, line 24 – p. 44, line 23).

age on his own assessments as a father and a grandfather.⁹¹³⁶ The witness seemed unable from his observations to distinguish between alleged ‘child soldiers’, or children abandoned or orphaned because of the crisis who were following the Anti-Balaka in their advance to Mbaïki.⁹¹³⁷ Roger Okoa-Penguia also had information from P-2018 about children in the Anti-Balaka in Lobaye but did not have information as to their ages.⁹¹³⁸

3708. When Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo passed by Anti-Balaka posts at Sekia and Pissa several times in around January-February 2014, he saw often fewer than 10 ‘young boys’ which he estimated in his statement to be ‘from 10 years old’, while thinking in court that they were ‘younger than 18 years’.⁹¹³⁹ The witness estimated this based on his observations, and did not speak with them.⁹¹⁴⁰ The witness did not recognise any of them in any of the photographs in the ESF Final Report.⁹¹⁴¹

3709. Guerrino Perin, the bishop of Mbaïki at the relevant time, saw children at checkpoints in Mbaïki, and said that he could not say how old they were, stating that, normally, they were ‘young people’, the ‘youth’.⁹¹⁴² Guerrino Perin said that people who were commanding checkpoints, Anti-Balaka or otherwise, would send ‘children’ to carry out the manual work of lifting up the wood of the barrier; these children who were running around were 10 or 12 years and they were there in the villages.⁹¹⁴³

3710. The Chamber notes the Prosecution arguments concerning the reading of Guerrino Perin’s evidence. In particular, it argues that the term ‘child soldier’ varied between witnesses and

P-1813 was also asked about the military attire and whether that were worn by the young boys or the Anti-Balaka. He said that some of the children might have been lucky enough to get hold of clothing that looked military but he could not say if these were specifically military clothing or something that could be bought in the market; nonetheless, he saw some wearing either a top or a bottom that was of military colour. P-1813, asked if these military-like uniform fit them, said that he did not see anyone wearing an oversized outfit, these outfits fit them. ⁹¹⁴³ D29-5015: T-256, p. 17, line 4 – p. 18, line 1. Guerrino Perin commented on Report, CAR-OTP-2054-1403, at 1406 in which the clergy, including Guerrino Perin, appear to be condemning the practice of child soldiers. Guerrino Perin said that he was aware that, in certain places, certain militia were recruiting children to become soldiers, but this was not the case of the checkpoints (see D29-5015: T-256, p. 18, line 9 – p. 20, line 13).

was not necessarily aligned with the legal criteria and Guerrino Perin was one such example because he said that there were no ‘child soldiers’ enlisted in Lobaye, and yet talked about the children being present at roadblocks carrying out various tasks.⁹¹⁴⁴

3712. P-1839, who was travelling between roadblocks at PK9, Sekia, Bimon⁹¹⁴⁸ a lot more frequently than the other witnesses mentioned above, and specifically for the purposes of collecting money at these roadblocks, when asked whether she recalled seeing ‘child soldiers’, recalled seeing two children on the PK9-Mbaïki route.⁹¹⁴⁹ P-1839 identified them as Stephane Modeste Ozoui⁹¹⁵⁰ and ‘Tangani’, who were in Samba,⁹¹⁵¹ along the PK9-Mbaïki route.⁹¹⁵²

3713. The Chamber notes that the Prosecution has made no submissions as to the respective ages of these two individuals. The Yekatom Defence argues that Ozoui was 17 years old at the time and submits that Mr Yekatom was treating him and Tangani ‘as his own children’ and they did not have any role within his group.⁹¹⁵³

3714. As regards their ages, P-1839 said that ‘they’ had not reached the age of majority at the time, and when she was there, she was older than them, she did not think that they were 17 years old,⁹¹⁵⁴ and estimated Modeste Ozoui to be 16 years old.⁹¹⁵⁵ In relation to the ‘Tangani’, P-1839 said that other elements from the group did not talk about Tangani’s age.⁹¹⁵⁶ P-1839 said that these two children did not have ‘any function’, they were at the house, and if there were some tasks, they were sent to run errands.⁹¹⁵⁷ P-1839 did not know if these children had received military training.⁹¹⁵⁸ P-1839 said that they were ‘next to Rambo’, which was to say that they had enough food and they slept well and were well looked after.⁹¹⁵⁹ P-1839 said that they were treated by the Anti-Balaka as if they were their ‘own children’.⁹¹⁶⁰

3715. Based on this evidence, the Chamber cannot conclude that the two children which P-1839 spoke about were indeed children under the age of 15 years.

3716. Having regard to the above, the Chamber concludes that there may have been children generally present at checkpoints and roadblocks along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, including some under the age of 15 years. However, based on what is before it, the Chamber cannot conclude that these were indeed children under the age of 15 that had been enlisted or conscripted as members of Mr Yekatom’s group or were otherwise directly associated with that group’s activities. All witnesses discussed above provided their own impressions about the ages of these children. These estimates were not sufficient for the Chamber to conclude beyond reasonable doubt that these children were indeed children under the ages of 15 years. In addition to this, there was further no reliable indication that these children were members of, or otherwise had a role in, Mr Yekatom’s group.

3717. The Chamber now turns to P-2476’s evidence about his experience in Mr Yekatom’s group in Mbaïki.

3718. Having regard to its conclusions concerning P-2476's credibility, the Chamber by majority, Judge Chung dissenting, cannot conclude that P-2476 was enlisted in Mr Yekatom's group in Mbaïki. On this basis, the Chamber by majority, Judge Chung dissenting, cannot conclude that there were any children under the age of 15 in Mr Yekatom's group in Mbaïki.

3719. The Chamber recalls Judge Chung's appreciation of the Yekatom Defence's challenges to P-2476's credibility. In particular, Judge Chung considers that P-2476's account was credible when the latter described his recruitment into Mr Yekatom's group at Mbaïki by Cœur de Lion, spending at least one week there.

3721. Judge Chung, having regard to P-2476's evidence, considers that P-2476 was assigned several tasks at the Mbaïki base, including guarding the base, buying provisions, and cooking for the elements,⁹¹⁶¹ not leaving the base.⁹¹⁶² P-2476 said that they stayed behind at the base when Cœur de Lion left for combat.⁹¹⁶³ P-2476, asked who gave them the instructions to guard the base, testified that it was those that were stationed at the Mbaïki base; he did not know their names but could identify them.⁹¹⁶⁴ P-2476 said that he never took part in fighting himself, he did not have to carry anything for the elements or work at any of the barriers.⁹¹⁶⁵ P-2476 said that he was not given a firearm; he had a large kitchen knife to defend himself and the base.⁹¹⁶⁶ P-2476 said that he and the other children took the knives that were at the base after Anti-Balaka left to Sekia.⁹¹⁶⁷ P-2476 said that if they saw neighbours or inhabitants of the village come near the base to see what was happening, they would ask them to leave; there was absolutely nothing in the base to be seen; they would not hurt them.⁹¹⁶⁸

3722. Judge Chung notes that P-2018 recalled P-2476 as a ‘small child’ in the group.⁹¹⁶⁹ Judge Chung further notes that P-2018 was forthcoming in that he did not recall P-2476’s role within Mr Yekatom’s group.⁹¹⁷⁰ P-2018, reminded that he had stated in his statement that ‘Kevin Mbomassa’ had been allocated the role of a ‘commissionaire’ to run errands for the group, said that he had lost the verification sheets that contained the different roles that these children played.⁹¹⁷¹ P-2018 said that it was the children themselves who stated what role they played in the group, which enabled them to include them.⁹¹⁷²

3723. Judge Chung notes that P-1974, the head of ESF, when asked about P-2476, was similarly forthcoming and said that ‘[m]y mother has family linked with Mrs Ossama, who is the mother of the father of [P-2476]’.⁹¹⁷³ P-1974 described how, according to him, P-2476 came to participate in the ESF programme. P-1974 said that ‘Kevin Bomassa’ lived in Bangui with his father, joined the movement and found himself ‘in Pissa’; P-2476 was then taken to Mbaïki as part of the ESF programme, and then taken to his foster family before being reunited with the ‘real’ family.⁹¹⁷⁴ P-1974 said that he could not explain under which conditions ‘Kevin Bomassa’ separated with his father in Bangui and found himself in Pissa; but he joined the ESF programme and was brought to Mbaïki; they could not remove him from the ESF programme whilst it was ‘en route’ because the child had already entered into the programme and they did not want to breach his rights at that particular point.⁹¹⁷⁵ P-1974 did not recall which foster family ‘Kevin Bomassa’ went to, but maintained that he was later reunited with his family in Bangui.⁹¹⁷⁶

3724. In Judge Chung’s view, both P-1974 and P-2018 confirmed P-2476’s membership within the Anti-Balaka. Judge Chung notes that P-2018 did not mention where P-2476 was based and P-1974 thought that P-2476 ‘ended up in Pissa’.⁹¹⁷⁷ Judge Chung recalls that P-2476 said that he met Cœur de Lion in Mbaïki and stayed at the base there,⁹¹⁷⁸ and not Pissa. Judge Chung considers this inconsistency between P-1974 and P-2476's account minor and relies on P-2476 as regards the location of the base.

3725. Judge Chung notes that P-2476 recalled there being two other children one or two years younger than him in the group with him in Mbaïki, who were called Gere Kondo and Tchoutchou.⁹¹⁷⁹ Judge Chung notes that P-1974 also provided evidence concerning a child named 'Guerekondo' that he saw at the Mbata checkpoint.⁹¹⁸⁰

3727. In particular, the majority considers that P-2018's testimony about P-2476's participation in the ESF programme throws further into doubt the testimonies of all three witnesses, P-2476, P-2018 and P-1974.

3728. In particular, the majority recalls that P-2018 did not recall whether P-2476 was part of the second phase of the programme with vocational training or went back to his family after the ESF programme,⁹¹⁸¹ and did not recall which host family P-2476 was placed in.⁹¹⁸² P-2018 agreed that it was incumbent upon him to find P-2476's family and that the presence of his name on the ESF List meant that he was seen as non-accompanied because he did not have a family in that locality.⁹¹⁸³ P-2018 further agreed that if P-2476 had family in Mbaïki, he should not have been included in the non-accompanied children's group and, if he had biological relatives of the family in an area, there was no reason for him to go to a host family.⁹¹⁸⁴ P-2018 stated not being able to say anything on the information suggesting that P-2476's family lived in a big family compound next to the ESF offices in Mbaïki.⁹¹⁸⁵

3729. Additionally, in the view of the majority, P-2018's testimony further cannot be relied upon to enter any conclusions about P-2476's role in the Anti-Balaka as he neither recalled what such role may have been,⁹¹⁸⁶ nor confirmed his previous statement that he was a 'commissionaire'.⁹¹⁸⁷

3730. Similarly, in the view of the majority, P-1974's testimony does not show that P-2476 was indeed a member of Mr Yekatom's group, regardless of whether it was in Pissa or Mbaïki. The majority finds that P-1974 had no information about P-2476's presence and role in Mr Yekatom's group. As regards P-2476's participation in the ESF programme, the majority considers that P-1974 and P-2476 had family relations,⁹¹⁸⁸ and P-1974 acknowledged that P-2476 should not have been included in the programme as the latter had family in Mbaïki.⁹¹⁸⁹

3731. Having regard to the above, the Chamber by majority, Judge Chung dissenting, considers that it need not assess the remaining factual allegations by the Prosecution on the alleged mistreatment of the children under the age of 15 within Mr Yekatom's group.

3732. Judge Chung finds P-2476 credible when he described the mistreatment of children at the Mbaïki base. P-2476 described a visit by Mr Yekatom to the Mbaïki base when the latter used violent words and behaviour towards the children there.⁹¹⁹⁰ P-2476 recalled one incident, when Mr Yekatom was not there,⁹¹⁹¹ in which the other children, named Gere Kondo and Tchoutchou were punished and 'badly beaten' for having stolen an item on the instructions of one of the chiefs at the Mbaïki base, whose name he did not know.⁹¹⁹² P-2476 recalled one other incident in which Gere Kondo was beaten by a chief, whose name he did not remember, for having stolen his money.⁹¹⁹³ Accordingly, Judge Chung finds that Mr Yekatom directly verbally abused the children at the Mbaïki base and his subordinates physically assaulted them.

3733. Judge Chung considers P-2476 credible when he said that ‘they’ would give them (‘us’) cigarettes and marijuana to smoke but he refused to do so; they did not force him to do it,⁹¹⁹⁴ while the other two children smoked marijuana.⁹¹⁹⁵

3734. Finally in the respect of presence of children within the Anti-Balaka during the relevant period, the Chamber received as evidence reports from the UN⁹¹⁹⁶ and other organisations.⁹¹⁹⁷ The Chamber notes that they observed children as being generally present

⁹¹⁹⁶ The Report of the UNSG on the situation in the CAR from December 2013 noted that there was widespread recruitment of children by the Anti-Balaka in villages as this movement spread across the CAR (see Report, CAR-OTP-2001-0329, at 0337, para. 42). A report by the UNOCHA from May 2014 stated that UNICEF and its partners confirmed the presence of 53 children (46 boys and 7 girls) aged between 11 and 17 associated with Anti-Balaka groups in Bangui’s PK10 neighbourhood and stated that between January and May 2014, 1,035 children (227 girls and 808 boys) were confirmed within ranks of armed groups in Bangui, Boali, Ngala Fondo, Sibut and Zemio (see Report, CAR-OTP-2001-0782, at 0784). A similar report from October 2014 speaks of 10,000 children associated with armed groups in CAR, stating that between January and September 2014, 2,040 children were demobilised from these armed groups (see Report, CAR-OTP-2127-4064, at 4072). An internal document from the UN-OLA dated December 2013 mentions the presence of ‘armed children of young age’ within an Anti-Balaka camp led by ‘Konaté’ present near the airport (see Report, CAR-OTP-2110-0935, at 0938, paras 11-12). Reports of the UNSG on the situation in CAR from 2013 and 2014 noted that children were recruited by both the Seleka and the Anti-Balaka (see Reports, CAR-OTP-2001-0329, at 0337-38; CAR-OTP-2001-1057, at 1060, 1067). A report of the UNSG on children and armed conflict from May 2014 stated that both the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka coalition systematically recruited and used children, also pointing out that the progressive deterioration of the security environment also led to subsequent re-recruitment of children by other armed groups (see Report, CAR-OTP-2001-0987, at 0995, para. 38). The Final Report of the International Commission of Inquiry on the CAR stated that the commission had reasonable grounds to believe that all parties to the conflict used child soldiers (see Commission of Inquiry Report, CAR-OTP-2001-7017, at 7124, para. 506). The Panel of Experts on the CAR noted being informed about the presence of children in Seleka and Anti-Balaka groups in multiple locations in the CAR (see Report, CAR-OTP-2001-5386, at 5438-39, paras 213-216). See further Accord de cessation des hostilités en RCA, CAR-OTP-2001-3405, at 3407-08, Articles 2 and 5(e), dated July 2014, that prohibited the recruitment and use of child soldiers, and parties to the agreement undertook not to recruit children as combatants, in accordance with the various international agreements.

in the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka within the CAR. The agreements signed at the National Forum of Bangui from 2015 contain language aimed at politico-military groups, including the Anti-Balaka, who undertook to (i) stop all forms of recruitment and use of children, meaning those below 18 years old, in their activities before, during, and after the DDR process; (ii) ensure the immediate identification and separation of children from their respective groups and their handover to competent authorities for reintegration; and (iii) sign concrete action plans to, inter alia, prevent and stop the recruitment and use of children.⁹¹⁹⁸

3735. The Chamber does not rely on these reports or agreements to ascertain whether all or some of the children subject of these reports were indeed under the age of 15 years or members of Mr Yekatom's group during the relevant period. First, the Chamber had no means to meaningfully examine and compare the conclusions in these reports because it had little to no information about the criteria used by their authors in assessing the children's ages and/or purported membership within the Anti-Balaka.⁹¹⁹⁹ Second, these reports generally did not limit themselves exclusively to children who were under the age of 15 years, but considered children to be individuals under the age of 18 years.

3736. The evidence on the record also includes media reports that point to the presence of children under the age of 15 in armed groups in the CAR, including those in the Anti-Balaka.⁹²⁰⁰ However, the Chamber has similar concerns as to their methodology and notes that they did not identify any particular Anti-Balaka group and/or location relevant to the charges against Mr Yekatom.

⁹²⁰⁰ Article, CAR-OTP-2032-0034, at 0034; Article, CAR-OTP-2072-1202, at 1202; Article, CAR-OTP-2075-0664. The Chamber notes that some reports speak of the presence of children in Mr Yekatom's Anti-Balaka group, but appear to be referring to the children that are subject of the factual allegations in this case as they both relate to Mr Yekatom agreeing to release 153 children as part of the ESF programme. The Chamber has not relied on these reports when examining the evidence before it (see Report, CAR-OTP-2075-0584, at 0591 (stating that on 4 August 2014, Mr Yekatom released '153 children' from the ranks of his armed group); Article, CAR-OTP-2074-3252, at 3252 (stating that Mr Yekatom used '153 children' as fighters in his group before handing them over to the UN in August 2014)). It is noted that the figure of '153' appears to be the same figure contained in the agreement alleged to be signed by Mr Yekatom prior to the ESF ceremony on 4 August 2014 (see Agreement, CAR-OTP-2128-1373).

3. Participation in the ESF programme

3737. The Chamber now turns to the ESF programme that was launched in 2014 for children in armed groups in various locations, including in Mbaïki, by ESF under the aegis of the CAR government Ministry of Social Affairs.

3738. The Prosecution relies on Mr Yekatom's attendance at the ESF ceremony to show that 'several of the 153' children that Mr Yekatom demobilised as part of the ESF programme were below 15 years of age and part of his group.⁹²⁰¹

3739. The Yekatom Defence argues, inter alia, that (i) the ESF programme and the related documents are fraudulent;⁹²⁰² (ii) no methodology was followed by ESF when selecting participants for this programme;⁹²⁰³ and (iii) the witnesses who participated in the ESF programme, including P-2476, lied about their experience.⁹²⁰⁴ It submits that Mr Yekatom was aware of the fraudulent nature of the ESF programme and did not know the identity of the children that participated in it.⁹²⁰⁵

3740. The Chamber recalls that it received evidence from the head of ESF (P-1974) as well as the in-charge of its Mbaïki offices (P-2018) on the functioning of ESF as an organisation and on the ESF programme in Pissa and Mbaïki. The Chamber also received evidence from the mayor of Pissa at the relevant time, a representative from the Ministry of Social Affairs, and the prefect of Mbaïki at the relevant time.

3741. The Chamber has had regard to certain operational aspects of the ESF programme to determine its relevance to its assessment concerning the presence in Mr Yekatom's group of children under 15 years of age. In this respect, the Chamber recalls that the ESF mandate, as such, was not limited to issues affecting child soldiers but extended generally to issues concerning vulnerable children.⁹²⁰⁶ Further, the ESF programme extended to all children under the age of 18 years, not making a distinction to those under 15 years.⁹²⁰⁷ It was not designed for children in the technical sense of the Article 5 crimes under the Statute. According to P-2018, the purpose of the training programme was to reach children under the age of 18 years who had been members of the Anti-Balaka in locations including Mbaiki.⁹²⁰⁸ In the view of the Chamber, this, in itself, made it problematic for the Prosecution to rely on it.

3742. The Prosecution argues that even if the programme was aimed at those below 18 years, ‘multiple sources of evidence’ confirm that children below the age of 15 years were among those demobilised from Mr Yekatom’s group.⁹²⁰⁹

3743. This is not what is borne out by the evidence. In this regard, the Chamber recalls its conclusions on the ESF programme, the ESF List, P-2018, and P-1974.⁹²¹⁰ In particular, the Chamber found that the beneficiaries of the programme self-reported their ages and their membership and role in the Anti-Balaka.⁹²¹¹ There was no reliable witness testimony or documents presented about the ages of the children that participated in the ESF programme that could permit a conclusion by the Chamber beyond reasonable doubt.⁹²¹² Importantly, there is no reliable evidence that the ESF beneficiaries were asked questions to ascertain whether they had indeed been members of the Anti-Balaka before their participation in the programme.⁹²¹³

3744. Having regard to the above, while the inclusion of children under 18 years in the ESF programme did not preclude children under 15 years, the Chamber had no means to objectively assess if, and how many, of the beneficiaries were indeed under 15 years old at the relevant time, and then to ascertain which of them had been members in Mr Yekatom’s group. The Chamber found that the issues surrounding the testimony of the ESF functionaries and the ESF List were so grave that it could not rely on any of the names on the ESF List individually or holistically with other evidence to enter any conclusions beyond reasonable doubt.

3745. In this context, the Chamber finds illustrative to point to P-2082's testimony in full. P-2082 confirmed having met the children from the ESF programme when she went to Mbaïki,⁹²¹⁴ and having some group and individual conversations with the children there,⁹²¹⁵ but she did not have the names of the children she spoke to.⁹²¹⁶ P-2082 stated that the age range of the children she spoke to was between 11 and 17, but she could not remember how many of them were under 15, and it was difficult to know their exact ages.⁹²¹⁷ P-2082 recalled there being an older child who claimed to be 17, who said that he had lied about his age because he wanted to get out of the Anti-Balaka and participate in the programme to have food, accommodation, clothes, training.⁹²¹⁸ P-2082 estimated him to be about 24-25 years old and said that the ESF knew this, but let him stay in the programme.⁹²¹⁹

3746. According to P-2082, some of the children reduced their ages because the NGO had told them that they would only take children under 17.⁹²²⁰ Specifically, P-2082 testified that when she reached Mbaïki, she realised that there were about 20 children older than 17, but that she could not, and it was not her job to, identify all the 70 children and estimate their ages.⁹²²¹ While she saw the children in the evening and could not deduce whether they were 15 years old, she noticed in Mbaïki that some of the children were over 17, maybe about 20 years old.⁹²²² P-2082 confirmed that as mother and grandmother, she could tell that some of the children were under 15.⁹²²³

3747. The Chamber also had regard to P-2082's testimony concerning two children that she identified and spoke to herself who may have been under 15 years old. First, P-2082 recalled there being another child who was going to take an exam to enter the first year of high school, but she did not ask his age.⁹²²⁴ Second, the Chamber recalls that P-2082 spoke of having talked to a child under 12 years old during the ESF ceremony.⁹²²⁵ The Prosecution submits that this 12-year-old child was called Elkas Nzala, who appears on the ESF List and photographs.⁹²²⁶

3748. The Chamber notes that P-2082 did observe a child under 12 years of age at the ESF ceremony with whom she spoke and asked his age,⁹²²⁷ and noted that he had the 'voice of a child'.⁹²²⁸ P-2082 seemed unclear whether this child was in fact on the ESF List under the age of 11, or maybe 12.⁹²²⁹ P-2082 seemed to insist that the child was 11 years old but noted that there were only children aged 12 or older on the ESF List.⁹²³⁰ P-2082 did not recognise any names in the ESF List,⁹²³¹ including that of Elkas Nzala.⁹²³²

3749. On this basis, the Chamber considers that P-2082's testimony is insufficient to conclude that this child was indeed part of Mr Yekatom's group. While P-2082 provided some information on her impression of the children's apparent ages based on her own observations at the ESF ceremony,⁹²³³ this, in and of itself, is insufficient to support any conclusions by the Chamber on children under the age of 15. P-2082 did not provide any reliable information about this child's membership in Mr Yekatom's group and therefore, her account was further insufficient to make any conclusions regarding this child's presence in Mr Yekatom's group in Pissa or Mbaïki. Having regard to P-2018's credibility,⁹²³⁴ the Chamber found P-2018's sole assertions about Elkas Nzala unreliable to enter any conclusions in respect of his purported membership in Mr Yekatom's group.

3750. Lastly in this respect, and importantly, the Chamber is convinced that participation of children of whatever age in the ESF programme, as such, in no way showed that they were members within Mr Yekatom's group. The general claims by witnesses who observed children under the age of 15 years participating in the ESF programme or during the ESF ceremony are, in the Chamber's view, wholly insufficient to enter any conclusions as to the presence of children under 15 years in Mr Yekatom's group.

3753. In this regard, the Chamber notes that P-2018 testified about his meetings with Mr Yekatom and his subordinates in the period leading up to the ESF ceremony in August 2014.⁹²³⁶ Having regard to its conclusions on P-2018's credibility, the Chamber considers it unsuitable to conclude that these meetings took place. Even if P-2018 was believable in that these meetings did take place, no conclusions can be drawn as to what was discussed.

3754. The Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom participated in one of the ESF ceremonies dated 4 August 2014 at Pissa town hall, in which he signed the document releasing the children (the ‘Declaration’).⁹²³⁷ The Declaration stated that, as the individual responsible for the ‘Anti-Balaka high command in the South zone’, Mr Yekatom recognises and resolves to liberate ‘153 children’ associated with the ‘movement’; it stated that Mr Yekatom agrees not to enroll ‘child soldiers’ in the future.⁹²³⁸

3755. Representatives of ESF, Mr Yekatom and 60 children attended this ceremony, which was filmed.⁹²³⁹ P-2018, asked what was meant by Mr Yekatom’s statement in the video about an ‘official handover tomorrow’, said that it related to the release of these children and agreed that that was to occur the next day in Pissa.⁹²⁴⁰

3756. P-2018 said that P-1974 interacted with Mr Yekatom prior to the ceremony on 4 August 2014; they were in Pissa and P-1974 and Mr Yekatom left to speak among the two of them about demobilisation.⁹²⁴¹ P-2018 suggested that Mr Yekatom may have been confused as to the nature of the ESF programme and whether the children would receive compensation as a result of their participation in it.⁹²⁴²

3757. P-2082 said that she was concerned that Mr Yekatom would not sign the Declaration and that she was the one who called him to sign it.⁹²⁴³ P-2082 confirmed that it was explained to

Mr Yekatom that if he did not sign the document, the training programme that was planned for children would not take place and there would be no funding.⁹²⁴⁴ P-2082 said that she believed that it was P-1974 who had assured her that Mr Yekatom was in agreement to demobilise the children under 17 years.⁹²⁴⁵ P-2082 said that P-1974 had explained to her that the project was being funded ‘because’ Mr Yekatom had agreed to demobilise the children, she believed that before the entire process, P-1974 and Mr Yekatom had discussed, and that reassured UNICEF and they made the money available.⁹²⁴⁶

3760. The Chamber further notes that Mr Yekatom attended only part of the ceremony on 4 August 2014,⁹²⁵¹ and did not attend⁹²⁵² the launch of the demobilisation project held in Mbaiki on 5 August 2014, attended by Alfred Legrand Ngaya on behalf of the Anti-Balaka national coordination⁹²⁵³ and Alexandre Kouroupe-Awo.⁹²⁵⁴

3761. The Chamber finds that the ambit of the ESF programme extended to children under 18 years and included children that were not members of Mr Yekatom's group. This was observable by those not part of ESF and who attended the ESF ceremony on 4 August 2013. It was a public event and open to all to attend. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's participation in the ESF ceremony on 4 August 2013 does not demonstrate that he knew of, or otherwise accepted, the presence of children under the age of 15 years in his group.

3762. As regards Mr Yekatom's signing of the Declaration, the Chamber notes that it does not mention the ages of the children that he was purportedly releasing. While there is reference to the UNSC resolution 1612, this was insufficient to conclude that Mr Yekatom knew that the Declaration concerned children under 15 years. Indeed, this resolution is not limited to children under 15 years old. Further, the Chamber notes that the Declaration also does not reference any list that may have been prepared as part of this programme, let alone the ESF List prepared by P-2018.

3764. In Judge Chung's view, at least one of the '153 children' mentioned in the Declaration included P-2476, whom he finds credible despite the latter's participation in the ESF programme. Judge Chung further notes that P-2476 recalled Mr Yekatom having visited the Mbaïki base at least once and verbally abused the children present there. Accordingly, Judge Chung considers that Mr Yekatom knew of the presence of children within his group at the Mbaïki base.

3765. Based on the above, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Chung dissenting, finds there to be no evidence on the basis of which findings as to the presence of children under the age of 15, and Mr Yekatom's potential responsibility therefore can be entered.

V. LEGAL FINDINGS

A. Applicable law

1. The crimes charged

i. Contextual elements

a. War crimes

3766. The war crimes charged in this case exclusively concern a non-international armed conflict.⁹²⁵⁵ An armed conflict not of an international character exists when there is protracted armed violence between governmental authorities and organised armed groups or between such groups within a State.⁹²⁵⁶ Such a conflict exceeds situations of internal disturbances and tensions, such as riots, isolated and sporadic acts of violence or other acts of similar nature.⁹²⁵⁷

3767. When evaluating the intensity of the conflict to determine its ‘protracted’ character, chambers consider factors such as: (i) the seriousness and frequency of attacks and armed clashes; (ii) the spread of clashes over territory and the group’s ability to control territory over a period of time; (iii) whether any ceasefire orders had been issued or agreed to; (iv) the type and number of armed forces deployed, including any involvement of the government; (v) the type of weapons used; (vi) whether the situation had attracted the attention of the UN Security Council, or involvement of other international organisations; (vii) whether those fighting considered themselves bound by international humanitarian law; and (viii) the effects of the violence on the civilian population, including the extent to which civilians left the relevant area, the extent of destruction, and the number of persons killed.⁹²⁵⁸ Exercise of control over a part of the territory is not required, though the importance of this factor increases in the absence of active hostilities.⁹²⁵⁹ It is also not required that the violence be continuous and uninterrupted – the Chamber need only find that the violence goes beyond isolated or sporadic acts.⁹²⁶⁰

3768. When evaluating whether an entity qualifies as an ‘organised armed group’, chambers consider factors such as: (i) the existence of a command structure, the existence of headquarters, the issuing of political statements, and the use of official spokespersons; (ii) the military (operational) capacity of the armed group, which may be shown by, for example, the ability to define a unified military strategy, the use of military tactics, the ability to carry out (large scale or coordinated) operations, the control of territory, and having a territorial division into zones of responsibility; (iii) the logistical capacity of the armed group, indicated, among others, by the existence of a supply chain for military equipment, as well as by the group’s ability to move troops around and to recruit and train personnel; (iv) the existence of an internal disciplinary system and the ability to implement international humanitarian law; and (v) the group’s ability to speak with one voice, indicated, for example, by the capacity of the leadership to act on behalf of its members in political negotiations and to conclude agreements, such as cease-fire or peace agreements.⁹²⁶¹

b. Crimes against humanity

acts referred to in paragraph 1 against any civilian population, pursuant to or in furtherance of a State or organizational policy to commit such attack’.

3770. An ‘attack’ in this context means a ‘course of conduct involving the multiple commission of acts referred to in [Article 7(1)]’.⁹²⁶² The requirement that the acts form part of a ‘course of conduct’ indicates that Article 7 is meant to cover a series or overall flow of events, as opposed to a mere aggregate of random or isolated acts.⁹²⁶³ As clarified by the Appeals Chamber, ‘this does not mean that a trial chamber must have regard to the totality of the activities and military operations of a state or organisation’ to establish whether there was a ‘course of conduct’ or that the attack ‘targeted a civilian population’.⁹²⁶⁴ The ‘multiple commission of acts’ sets a quantitative threshold involving a certain number of acts falling within the course of conduct.⁹²⁶⁵

3771. The course of conduct must be ‘directed against any civilian population’, namely a collective, as opposed to individual civilians. The Appeals Chamber has clarified prior jurisprudence that the civilian population must be the ‘primary object’ of the attack⁹²⁶⁶ to the extent that this is not establishing a legal requirement that the main aim or object of the relevant acts was to attack civilians, as ‘[a]n attack directed against a civilian population may also serve other objectives or motives’.⁹²⁶⁷ Rather, this jurisprudence outlines the analysis applicable to determining whether an attack has been directed against a civilian population.⁹²⁶⁸ In essence, the Appeals Chamber found that ‘[t]he question of whether an attack was directed against a civilian population is essentially a factual issue’.⁹²⁶⁹

3772. The presence within a civilian population of individuals who do not fall under the definition of ‘civilians’ does not deprive the population of its civilian character.⁹²⁷⁰ Further, and although the attack must be directed against a civilian population, there is no requirement that the individual victims of crimes be civilians; they need only be ‘persons’ under the Elements of Crimes.⁹²⁷¹ In any case, the Chamber notes that there also must be a sufficient nexus to an attack against a ‘civilian’ population.⁹²⁷²

3773. The ‘course of conduct involving the multiple commission of acts’ must take place ‘pursuant to or in furtherance of a State or organizational policy to commit such attack’ within the meaning of Article 7(2)(a) of the Statute. The Elements of Crimes specify that the “‘policy to commit such attack” requires that the [...] organization actively promote[s] or encourage[s] such an attack against a civilian population’.⁹²⁷³ For purposes of this judgment, only the ‘organisational policy’ prong is relevant.

3774. As regards the ‘organisation’ pursuing the policy, the Chamber adheres to the definition established by Trial Chamber II:

In the Chamber’s view, the connection of the term “organisation” to the very existence of the attack and not to its systematic or widespread nature presupposes that the organisation has sufficient resources, means and capacity to bring about the course of conduct or the operation involving the multiple commission of acts referred to in article 7(2)(a) of the Statute. It therefore suffices that the organisation [has] a set of structures or mechanisms, whatever those may be, that are sufficiently efficient to

Victims are described as ‘person’ or ‘persons’ across all Article 7(1) crimes except for forced pregnancy (refers to ‘women’) and the residual ‘other inhumane acts’ (which only speaks generally of inflicting ‘great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health [...]’). No further status requirement is specified. In contrast, see the elements for the crimes under Article 8(2)(a) of the Statute (specifically requiring that the victim was ‘protected under one or more of the Geneva Conventions of 1949’). ensure the coordination necessary to carry out an attack directed against a civilian population.⁹²⁷⁴

3775. As the terms ‘pursuant to or in furtherance of’ imply, the policy requirement ensures that the multiple acts forming the course of conduct are linked. It ensures that acts which are unrelated or perpetrated by individuals acting randomly on their own are excluded.⁹²⁷⁵

3776. A policy may consist of a pre-established design or plan, but it may also crystallise and develop only as actions are undertaken by the perpetrators.⁹²⁷⁶ The ‘policy’ may be inferred from a variety of factors, such as: (i) a recurrent pattern of violence; (ii) the existence of preparations or collective mobilisation orchestrated and coordinated by the organisation; (iii) the use of public or private resources to further the policy; (iv) the involvement of organisational forces in the commission of crimes; (v) statements, instructions or documentation attributable to the organisation condoning or encouraging the commission of crimes; and (vi) an underlying motivation.⁹²⁷⁷ In principle, a state or organisation committing a systematic attack against a civilian population will satisfy the policy requirement.⁹²⁷⁸

3777. The alternative qualifiers of ‘widespread’ or ‘systematic’ serve to characterise the ‘attack’ itself.

3778. The term ‘widespread’ connotes the large-scale nature of the attack and the number of targeted persons.⁹²⁷⁹ The assessment of whether the attack is widespread is neither exclusively quantitative nor geographical, but must be carried out on the basis of all the relevant facts of the case.⁹²⁸⁰

3779. The term ‘systematic’ reflects the organised nature of the violent acts, referring often to the existence of ‘patterns of crimes’ and the improbability of their random or accidental occurrence.⁹²⁸¹

c. Nexus requirement and perpetrators’ awareness

3780. The war crimes charged in the present case require, as their contextual elements, that the relevant conduct took place in the context of and was associated with an armed conflict not of an international character. The perpetrator’s conduct need not take place as part of hostilities, meaning that the nexus requirement could still be satisfied for crimes temporally or geographically remote from the actual fighting.⁹²⁸² What is required is a sufficiently close link to the hostilities – the Chamber may take into account, amongst other factors, the status of the perpetrator and the victim, whether the act may be said to serve the ultimate goal of a military campaign, and whether the crime is committed as part of, or in the context of, the perpetrator’s official duties.⁹²⁸³

3781. Crimes against humanity must have been committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population.⁹²⁸⁴ When assessing such a nexus, due regard must be given to the characteristics, aims, nature and consequences of the acts concerned.⁹²⁸⁵

3782. These nexus requirements find their subjective equivalent in the requisite knowledge or awareness of the perpetrator.

3783. In the case of a war crime, the perpetrator must have been aware of factual circumstances that established the existence of an armed conflict.

3784. In the case of a crime against humanity, the perpetrator must know that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population. However, it is not necessary that the perpetrator be aware of the precise details of the plan or policy of the State or organisation.⁹²⁸⁶

3785. These nexus and awareness requirements must be met in order to prove any crime against humanity or war crime. All crimes set forth in the next sub-section must have been committed with the required nexus and awareness of the perpetrator.

ii. Specific elements

3786. In the following, the Chamber will set forth the relevant applicable law of the individual crimes with which Alfred Yekatom and Patrice-Edouard Ngaïssona are charged. The crimes are embedded in the context that gives them their international character and differentiates them from ordinary crimes.

3787. Unless otherwise provided in the Statute, the material elements of the crimes must have been committed with ‘intent’ and ‘knowledge’ within the meaning of Article 30 of the Statute.⁹²⁸⁷ As regards the phrase ‘will occur in the ordinary course of events’ in Article 30(2)(b) and (3) of the Statute, this requires virtual certainty that the consequence in question would occur.⁹²⁸⁸ ‘Knowledge’ means awareness that a circumstance exists or a consequence will ⁹²⁸⁶ Elements of Crimes, Introduction to Article 7, para. 2.

⁹²⁸⁷ Article 30 provides: ‘1. Unless otherwise provided, a person shall be criminally responsible and liable for punishment for a crime within the jurisdiction of the Court only if the material elements are committed with intent and knowledge. 2. For the purposes of this article, a person has intent where: (a) In relation to conduct, that person means to engage in the conduct; (b) In relation to a consequence, that person means to cause that consequence or is aware that it will occur in the ordinary course of events. 3. For the purposes of this article, “knowledge” means awareness that a circumstance exists or a consequence will occur in the ordinary course of events. “Know” and “knowingly” shall be construed accordingly’. occur in the ordinary course of events.⁹²⁸⁹ To the extent that any further discussion beyond Article 30's terms is necessary, the Chamber will also discuss the required mental elements below.

- a. Directing attack against the civilian population as such (Article 8(2)(e)(i))

3788. This crime requires two material elements. The first of these is that the perpetrator directed an attack. An 'attack' constitutes any 'acts of violence against the adversary, whether in offence or defence'.⁹²⁹⁰ To 'direct' an attack in this context means that the perpetrator selected the intended target and decided on the attack.⁹²⁹¹ No particular harm to civilians need be caused; the crime is directing the attack as such.⁹²⁹²

3789. The second material element of the crime is that the object of the attack was a civilian population as such or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities. Civilians are persons who are not members of State armed forces or organised armed groups of a party to the conflict.⁹²⁹³ The term 'civilian population' denotes a collective, as opposed to individual civilians.⁹²⁹⁴ The presence within a civilian population of individuals who do not fall under the definition of 'civilians' does not deprive the population of its civilian character.⁹²⁹⁵

3790. The civilian population or individual civilians must have been the primary object of the 'attack'; directing the attack against military objects that affect civilians incidentally does not suffice.⁹²⁹⁶ Efforts to comply with international humanitarian law are relevant in this context, including the principle of distinction between legitimate targets and protected persons or objects and the duty to take precautionary measures.⁹²⁹⁷ Depending on the circumstances, the civilian population can still qualify as the primary object of an attack in a situation where everyone is targeted at a mixed military-civilian position.⁹²⁹⁸

3791. The perpetrator must also have intended the civilian population as such or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities to be the object of the attack.⁹²⁹⁹

b. Murder (Article 7(1)(a) and Article 8(2)(c)(i))

3792. The crime of murder is committed in case a person is killed⁹³⁰⁰ as a result of the perpetrator's act or omission.⁹³⁰¹

3793. For the purpose of murder as a war crime, Article 8(2)(c) of the Statute prescribes that the crime must be committed 'against persons taking no active part in the hostilities, including members of armed forces who have laid down their arms and those placed hors de combat by sickness, wounds, detention or any other cause'.⁹³⁰² Taking an active part in the hostilities is understood as acts of war that by their nature or purpose strike at the personnel and matériel of enemy armed forces.⁹³⁰³ It is not considered taking an active part in the hostilities when persons otherwise protected under international humanitarian law exercise their right to individual self-defence.⁹³⁰⁴

⁹³⁰² Equally, para. 2 of the Elements of Crimes of Article 8(2)(c)(i)-1 of the Statute determines that the 'person or persons were either hors de combat, or were civilians, medical personnel, or religious personnel, taking no active part in the hostilities'.

3794. Lastly, while the Prosecutor must demonstrate, to the extent possible, the location, date and means of killing, he is not required to demonstrate for each killing the identity of the victim or that the corpse of the deceased has been found.⁹³⁰⁵

c. Forcible transfer and deportation (Article 7(1)(d))

3795. The crime of deportation or forcible transfer of the population is committed when the following material elements are fulfilled:

1. The perpetrator deported or forcibly transferred,⁹³⁰⁶ without grounds permitted under international law, one or more persons to another State or location, by expulsion or other coercive acts.
2. Such person or persons were lawfully present in the area from which they were so deported or transferred.

3796. Article 7(2)(d) of the Statute stipulates that deportation or forcible transfer of the population ‘means forced displacement of the persons concerned by expulsion or other coercive acts from the area in which they are lawfully present, without grounds permitted under international law’.

3797. The Elements of Crimes further specify that the term ‘forcibly’ ‘is not restricted to physical force, but may include threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence, duress, detention, psychological oppression or abuse of power against such person or persons or another person, or by taking advantage of a coercive environment’.⁹³⁰⁷

If individual self-defence against prohibited violence were to entail loss of protection against direct attack, this would have the absurd consequence of legitimizing a previously unlawful attack. ⁹³⁰⁶ Footnote 13 of the Elements of Crimes indicates that ‘deported or forcibly transferred’ is interchangeable with ‘forcibly displaced’.

⁹³⁰⁷ Footnote 12 of the Elements of Crimes.

3798. Different types of conduct may amount to ‘expulsion or other coercive acts’ and prompt a person or persons to leave the area where they were lawfully present.⁹³⁰⁸ The act or acts of the perpetrator must have had the effect of deporting or forcibly displacing the person or persons.⁹³⁰⁹

3799. It must be demonstrated that there was a genuine lack of choice on the part of the person or persons forcibly transferred.⁹³¹⁰ While a person or persons may agree, or even request, to be transferred from an area, ‘consent must be real in the sense that it is given voluntarily and as a result of the individual’s free will’.⁹³¹¹ When assessing whether the individuals transferred had a genuine choice, the prevailing situation and atmosphere, and other relevant circumstances, including in particular the victims’ vulnerability, will have to be taken into account.⁹³¹² Assistance by humanitarian agencies, including non-governmental, in facilitating the displacement does not of itself render an otherwise unlawful transfer lawful.⁹³¹³

3800. The forcible transfer must have taken place ‘without grounds permitted under international law’.

3801. The protected interests underlying the prohibition against deportation or forcible transfer include the right of individuals to remain in their homes and communities unhindered.⁹³¹⁴ The requirement of ‘lawful presence’ in an area does not mean that the individuals transferred must have had legal residence there, but also relates to persons who, for whatever reason, have come to live in an area, including internally displaced persons who have established temporary homes in that location.⁹³¹⁵

3802. Finally, the perpetrator needs to be aware of the factual circumstances which establish the lawfulness of the presence in the area of the displaced individuals. As made clear by the Elements of Crimes, the perpetrator need not make any legal evaluation as to the lawfulness of the presence in an area, but need only be aware of the factual circumstances establishing the ‘lawful presence’.⁹³¹⁶

d. Displacement (Article 8(2)(e)(viii))

3803. Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute proscribes ‘[o]rdering the displacement of the civilian population for reasons related to the conflict, unless the security of the civilians involved or imperative military reasons so demand’.

3804. In order for the war crime of displacement to be committed, the following material elements need to be fulfilled:

1. The perpetrator ordered a displacement of a civilian population.
2. Such order was not justified by the security of the civilians involved or by military necessity.
3. The perpetrator was in a position to effect such displacement by giving such order.

3805. In accordance with the Elements of Crimes, an order to displace is required,⁹³¹⁷ and the perpetrator must have been in a position to effect such displacement by giving such order. Such order does not necessarily have to be in writing and may be issued in a variety of means, to be determined on a case-by-case basis.⁹³¹⁸

⁹³¹⁵ Ntaganda Trial Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2359, para. 1069. See also Popović et al. Trial Judgment, IT-05-88-T, para. 900.

3806. The order itself does not need to be made to the civilian population for the crime to be established.⁹³¹⁹ Further, the Chamber agrees with prior jurisprudence that the order may be directed at the actual displacement of a civilian population, but also at an act or omission as a result of which such displacement would occur.⁹³²⁰

3807. In addition, the Chamber is of the view that the question of whether the or a civilian population, in accordance with Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, is affected by the displacement will have to be determined on a case-by-case basis.⁹³²¹

3808. As clarified by the Appeals Chamber, '[n]either the article itself nor the corresponding elements of crimes establish territorial control as a requirement for the war crime of displacement to take place'.⁹³²² The civilian population does not need to be under the perpetrator's power and control in order for the accused to be 'in a position to effect such displacement' by giving an order to displace.⁹³²³ Whether a person is in a position to give effect to an order to displace the civilian population is a question of fact that depends primarily on the position occupied by the accused and [their] duties and responsibilities, including [their] ability to ensure compliance with [their] orders.⁹³²⁴

- e. Directing an attack against a building dedicated to religion (Article 8(2)(e)(iv))

3810. This crime requires that the following material elements be fulfilled:

1. The perpetrator directed an attack.
2. The object of the attack was one or more buildings dedicated to religion, education, art, science or charitable purposes, historic monuments, hospitals or places where the sick and wounded are collected, which were not military objectives.
3. The perpetrator intended such building or buildings dedicated to religion, education, art, science or charitable purposes, historic monuments, hospitals or places where the sick and wounded are collected, which were not military objectives, to be the object of the attack.

3811. Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute only requires the perpetrator to have launched an attack against a protected object and it need not be established that the attack caused any damage or destruction to the object in question.⁹³²⁷

3812. The jurisprudence of the Court is not settled as to when the 'attack' must have occurred. Trial Chamber VIII indicated that the first material element of Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute encompasses 'any acts of violence against protected objects', without making any distinction as to whether the act was carried out in the conduct of hostilities or after the object had fallen under the control of an armed group.⁹³²⁸ Other chambers – notably, Trial Chamber VI and Trial Chamber X – have considered that this war crime did require the attack to take place during the actual conduct of the hostilities.⁹³²⁹

3813. The Chamber further notes that the Appeals Chamber has not settled the law in this regard.

Although the Appeals Chamber upheld Trial Chamber VI's findings with regard to its interpretation of the term 'attack', there was no consensus as to how this term should be defined.⁹³³⁰

3814. In light of the above, and taking into account its findings of fact with regard to the Anti-Balaka attack on the Boeing Mosque, which occurred during ongoing hostilities,⁹³³¹ the Chamber does not consider it necessary to address in this case whether, in order to qualify as a crime under Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute, an 'attack' must be directed during the actual conduct of the hostilities.

f. Torture (Article 7(1)(f) and Article 8(2)(c)(i))

3815. The crime of torture, whether as a crime against humanity or war crime, is committed either by act or omission and has a common material element that '[t]he perpetrator inflicted severe physical or mental pain or suffering upon one or more persons'.⁹³³²

3816. The severity implies an important degree of pain and suffering⁹³³³ and may be met by a single act or by a combination of acts when viewed as a whole.⁹³³⁴ This can be assessed only on a 3817. There are some notable differences between the elements of torture as a crime against humanity versus a war crime.

3818. For torture as a crime against humanity, Article 7(2)(e) of the Statute further requires that ‘[s]uch person or persons were in the custody or under the control of the perpetrator’. Torture as a crime against humanity also requires that the pain or suffering did not arise only from, and was not inherent or incidental to, lawful sanctions.⁹³³⁹

3819. In contrast, for torture as a war crime, the custody/control element is not required. Instead, for the war crime of torture there is an additional mental element specified below. The war crime must also be committed against persons taking no active part in the hostilities, including members of armed forces who have laid down their arms and those placed hors de combat.⁹³⁴⁰

3820. In addition to the mental elements specified in Article 30 of the Statute, the war crime of torture further requires that:

The perpetrator inflicted the pain or suffering for such purposes as: obtaining information or a confession, punishment, intimidation or coercion or for any reason based on discrimination of any kind.

3821. This specific purpose must be part of the motivation behind the conduct but it need not be the ‘predominant or sole purpose’.⁹³⁴¹ No specific purpose need be proven for torture as a crime against humanity.⁹³⁴² For torture as a war crime, the perpetrator must also have been aware of the factual circumstances that established the status of the victim.⁹³⁴³

3822. As concerns the severe pain or suffering required, the perpetrator need not have completed a value judgment as to the severity of the pain inflicted.⁹³⁴⁴

g. Other inhumane acts (Article 7(1)(k))

3823. Alfred Yekatom and Patrice-Edouard Ngaïssona are both charged with the crime of other inhumane acts, within the meaning of Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute. In conformity with the principle of legality, this category of crimes against humanity must be interpreted conservatively and – with due regard to Article 22(2) of the Statute – must not be used to expand uncritically the scope of crimes against humanity.⁹³⁴⁵ Judicial interpretation within Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute must be consistent with the essence of the offence and in a manner which could have been reasonably foreseen.⁹³⁴⁶

3824. The crime of other inhumane acts is committed, either by act or omission, when the following two material elements are fulfilled:

1. The perpetrator inflicted great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health, by means of an inhumane act.
2. Such act was of a character similar to any other act referred to in article 7, paragraph 1, of the Statute.⁹³⁴⁷

3825. The category of ‘other inhumane acts’ serves as ‘residual category’ of crimes against humanity, designed to criminalise an act that does not specifically qualify as any of the other crimes under Article 7(1) of the Statute, based on the understanding that an exhaustive enumeration of inhumane acts is impossible.⁹³⁴⁸

3826. If the act is the same as one of the enumerated acts, with an identical ‘character’ in terms of its nature, harm suffered and protected interests involved, then the second material element

under Article 7(1)(k) is not satisfied.⁹³⁴⁹ In this case, a conviction can be entered for a crime under Article 7(1)(a)-(j), but not for the crime of ‘other inhumane act’ under Article 7(1)(k).⁹³⁵⁰

3827. However, this does not mean that a conviction under Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute can be entered only when the conduct in question, considered in its entirety, falls completely outside any act under Article 7(1)(a)-(j).⁹³⁵¹ Rather, a conviction can be entered also under Article 7(1)(k) when the full scope of the culpable conduct is not reflected by its qualification under the enumerated crime(s) alone.⁹³⁵² The term ‘character’ under the second material element of Article 7(1)(k) refers to the nature and gravity of the act.⁹³⁵³ The Chamber can enter a conviction under Article 7(1)(k) if the perpetrator inflicts great suffering, or serious injury to body or mental or physical health, by means of a course of conduct which, despite comprising also acts falling under one or more of the enumerated crimes, is, in its entirety, not identical, but nonetheless ‘similar’ in character in terms of nature and gravity, to those enumerated crimes.⁹³⁵⁴ An act charged under Article 7(1)(k) must be of a similar nature and gravity as any other act under Article 7(1).⁹³⁵⁵

3828. As Article 7(1)(k) is an ‘open provision’, different types of conduct may amount to other inhumane acts as long as they satisfy the elements of Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute.⁹³⁵⁶ International case-law suggests that serious beatings, subjection to deplorable conditions of detention and requiring persons to witness the beatings or killings of others can constitute other inhumane acts.⁹³⁵⁷

3829. The perpetrator need not make a value judgment as to the ‘inhumane’ character of the act.⁹³⁵⁸

They need only be aware of the factual circumstances that established the character of the inhumane act.⁹³⁵⁹

h. Cruel treatment (Article 8(2)(c)(i))

3830. The crime of cruel treatment requires that the following material elements are fulfilled:

1. The perpetrator inflicted severe physical or mental pain or suffering upon one or more persons.
2. Such person or persons were either hors de combat, or were civilians, medical personnel or religious personnel taking no active part in the hostilities.

3831. Cruel treatment as a war crime requires that the perpetrator afflicts ‘severe’ physical or mental pain or suffering on the victim or victims. The determination of whether a particular conduct amounts to cruel treatment will depend on an assessment of all particular circumstances of a case, taking into account the nature of the acts or omissions concerned, the context in which they took place, their duration or repetition, their consequence on the physical or mental state of the victim, as well as the characteristics of the victim concerned, such as their age, gender or state of health.⁹³⁶⁰ The damage caused to the victim does not need to be permanent or irreversible, but it must have more than temporary or passing effects on the victim. In addition to the above, the perpetrator also needs to be aware of the factual circumstances that established the status of the victim.

i. Imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty (Article 7(1)(e))

3832. For the crime of imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty to be committed, the following material elements need to be fulfilled:

Francis Kirimi Muthaura et al.*, Public Redacted Version Decision on the Confirmation of Charges Pursuant to Article 61\(7\)\(a\) and \(b\) of the Rome Statute, 23 January 2012, ICC-01/09-02/11-382-Red, paras 274-280. 1. The perpetrator imprisoned one or more persons or otherwise severely deprived one or more persons of physical liberty.
2. The gravity of the conduct was such that it was in violation of fundamental rules of international law.

3833. The Chamber considers this provision to proscribe arbitrary imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty, taking place without due process of law.⁹³⁶¹

3834. For the crime of imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty to be committed, the gravity of the conduct must have been ‘such that it was in violation of fundamental rules of international law’, for example in case there is no legal basis to detain a person or the person is denied any procedural rights.⁹³⁶²

3835. As is clear from the Elements of Crimes, it is sufficient for purposes of the provision that one person be detained. The duration or brevity of detention does not, as such, determine whether a deprivation of physical liberty is severe.⁹³⁶³ Rather, whether a deprivation of physical liberty is severe will have to be determined on a case-by-case basis.

3836. Finally, the perpetrator must have been aware of the factual circumstances that established the gravity of the conduct.

j. Persecution (Article 7(1)(h))

i. Material elements (actus reus)

3837. Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute defines persecution as conduct against any identifiable group or collectivity on political, racial, national, ethnic, cultural, religious, gender as defined in paragraph 3,⁹³⁶⁴ or other grounds that are universally recognised as impermissible under international law, in connection with any act referred to in this paragraph or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court.

3838. Article 7(2)(g) of the Statute stipulates that “[p]ersecution” means the intentional and severe deprivation of fundamental rights contrary to international law by reason of the identity of the group or collectivity’.

3839. The crime is committed when the four material elements are fulfilled.

3840. The first of these elements is that the perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law,⁹³⁶⁵ one or more persons of fundamental rights. Not every infringement of human rights is relevant but only a ‘severe deprivation’ of a person’s ‘fundamental rights contrary to international law’ (emphasis added). This may include a variety of rights, such as the right to life, the right to personal liberty, the right not to be held in slavery or servitude, the right not to be subjected to torture or cruel treatment, inhuman or degrading treatment, and the right to private property.⁹³⁶⁶

3841. The second and third elements of the crime of persecution are that the perpetrator targeted such person or persons by reason of the identity of a group or collectivity or targeted the group or collectivity as such, and that such targeting was based on political, racial, national, ethnic, cultural religious, gender as defined in article 7, paragraph 3, of the Statute, or other grounds that are universally recognised as impermissible under international law.⁹³⁶⁷

⁹³⁶⁴ Article 7(3) of the Statute stipulates: ‘For the purpose of this Statute, it is understood that the term “gender” refers to the two sexes, male and female, within the context of society. The term “gender” does not indicate any meaning different from the above’.

3842. The targeted group can be defined both in a positive or a negative manner, meaning that it may be the case that the perpetrator targeted only members of a certain group or collectivity or that the perpetrator targeted individuals for not belonging to a certain group or collectivity.⁹³⁶⁸

3843. In evaluating the alleged status as a protected group, the particular political, social, and cultural context are relevant, as are, in addition to the objective factors relevant to the discriminatory ground alleged, the subjective perception of belonging of both the perpetrator and the victim.⁹³⁶⁹ It is noted, however, that while it must be demonstrated that the perpetrator targeted certain persons, a group, or a collectivity, based on one of the prohibited grounds, it is not required that all victims of the crime of persecution be members, sympathisers, allies of, or in any other way related to, the protected group.⁹³⁷⁰

3844. Fourth, persecution requires that the conduct was committed in connection with any act referred to in article 7, paragraph 1, of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court.⁹³⁷¹

ii. Mental elements (mens rea)

3845. The act of discrimination must be carried out with the requisite intent, i.e. an intent to discriminate against the targeted persons on any of the grounds enumerated in Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute. The perpetrator harms the victim because the perpetrator perceives the victim as belonging to a particular group or collectivity.⁹³⁷² This intent may be inferred from the general behaviour of the perpetrator as well as the circumstances surrounding the commission of the crime.⁹³⁷³

3846. As to the severe deprivation of fundamental human rights required by this crime, the perpetrator need not have completed a value judgment as to the severity of the deprivation inflicted.⁹³⁷⁴

- k. Conscription, enlistment and use of children under the age of fifteen years to participate actively in hostilities (Article 8(2)(e)(vii))

3847. Article 8(2)(e)(vii) of the Statute concerns the crime of conscripting, enlisting and using children under the age of 15 years in hostilities. Conscription or enlistment alone are sufficient and it is therefore not required that a child under 15 years of age who has been conscripted or enlisted also be ‘used’ to participate actively in hostilities.⁹³⁷⁵ The crime is committed when the following two material elements are fulfilled:

1. The perpetrator conscripted or enlisted one or more persons into an armed force or group or used one or more persons to participate actively in hostilities.
2. Such person or persons were under the age of 15 years.

3848. ‘Conscripting’ has been defined as the coercive and ‘enlisting’ as the voluntary integration of children under the age of 15 years into an armed force or group.⁹³⁷⁶ The element of compulsion distinguishes both forms of integration and is established by taking into account ‘whether the force, threat of force or psychological pressure applied was of such a degree and so pervasive, that individuals can be said to have been forced to join the armed force or group’.⁹³⁷⁷ This compulsion must be determined on a case-by-case basis, considering the particular circumstances of the child and the way they were recruited.

3849. As concerns the use of such children, to ‘participate actively in hostilities’ ranges from direct participation in hostilities to other supporting combat-related activities.⁹³⁷⁸ Conversely, activities unrelated to hostilities fall outside of Article 8(2)(e)(vii) of the Statute.⁹³⁷⁹ When assessing whether the role of the child is to be treated as active participation, what matters is a case-by-case assessment of the link between the activity undertaken by the child and the hostilities in which the armed force or group for which they are acting is engaged.⁹³⁸⁰

3850. Conscripting and using children under the age of 15 years is a crime of continuing nature for as long as the children remain in the armed force or group; consequently, it ceases to be committed when the children leave the force or group or reach the age of 15 years, whichever comes first.⁹³⁸¹

3851. In addition to the mental elements specified in Article 30 of the Statute, the perpetrator must know or should have known that such person or persons were under the age of 15 years.⁹³⁸²

1. Destruction of property (Article 8(2)(e)(xii))

3852. Patrice-Edouard Ngaïssona is charged with the crime of destroying property of an adversary as a war crime, within the meaning of Article 8(2)(e)(xii) of the Statute. This provision also governs ‘seizing’ such property, but only destruction of property is relevant in this case.

⁹³⁸² Para. 3 of the Elements of Crimes of Article 8(2)(e)(vii) of the Statute.

3853. The crime of destroying the adversary's property is committed if the following four material elements are fulfilled.⁹³⁸³

3854. First, it is required that the perpetrator destroyed certain property. The property, including movable or immovable, private or public items,⁹³⁸⁴ is 'destroyed', either by act or omission, if it is set ablaze, demolished, pulled down or so badly damaged it is no longer fit for purpose.⁹³⁸⁵

3855. Second, the crime of destruction of property requires that such property was property of an adversary. The property must belong to the 'adversary', namely to individuals or entities considered to be aligned to the opposing party to the conflict adverse or hostile to the perpetrator.⁹³⁸⁶ With regard to the destruction of property belonging to persons who had no stated or apparent allegiance to a party involved in the conflict, the Chamber notes that it may be established that these persons or entities were 'adverse', or considered as such by the perpetrators, for example by showing that they were not aligned to or supportive of the perpetrators' party or its objectives.⁹³⁸⁷

3856. Third, such property must have been protected from that destruction under the international law of armed conflict. The property is protected under international law when it does not constitute 'military objectives', namely 'objects which by their nature, location, purpose or use make an effective contribution to military action and whose total or partial destruction, capture or neutralization, in the circumstances ruling at the time, offers a definite military advantage'.⁹³⁸⁸ Whether or not the action offered a 'military advantage' must be evaluated from the attacker's perspective for each targeted object and 'such advantage must be definite and cannot in any way be indeterminate or potential'.⁹³⁸⁹ As a result, objects of the adversary lose their protection under international law of armed conflict if and for such time as they are 'military objects'.⁹³⁹⁰

3857. Fourth, the perpetrator must have been 'aware of the factual circumstances that established the status of the property'.⁹³⁹¹

3858. Fifth, the crime of destruction of property requires that the destruction was not required by military necessity. This relates to situations where destruction is 'imperatively demanded by the necessities of the conflict'. Such a compelling necessity must be assessed on a case-by-case basis.⁹³⁹²

m. Pillaging (Article 8(2)(e)(v))

3859. The first material element of pillaging is that the perpetrator appropriated certain property.

3860. Article 8(2)(e)(v) of the Statute relates to 'pillaging a town or place'. The pillaging of a town or place comprises all forms of appropriation of property, including appropriation committed by individuals in their own interest and acts of organised or systematic appropriation.⁹³⁹³

3861. While noting that the earlier jurisprudence is not uniform on this point, the Chamber – relying on the absence of any statutory language to this effect – considers that there is no requirement that appropriations must occur on a large scale basis before constituting the crime of pillaging.⁹³⁹⁴

⁹³⁸⁹ Ongwen Trial Judgment, ICC-02/04-01/15-1762-Red, para. 2777; Katanga Trial Judgment, ICC-01/04-01/07-3436-tENG, para. 893.

3863. When the property owner has fled, such appropriations must be assumed to have been without the owner's consent absent any contrary indication.⁹³⁹⁵ This could occur, for example, when items are appropriated from an empty house whose residents have fled.⁹³⁹⁶ The concept of private property and the right to property must be understood as encompassing not only the property of individuals, but also the communal property of the communities. It must also take into consideration the customary law of the community (i.e. practices on possession, titles and registration).⁹³⁹⁷

3864. Appropriations justified by military necessity cannot constitute the crime of pillaging.⁹³⁹⁸ Military necessity requires that the appropriation's use be directed to further the war effort and thus be used for military purposes.⁹³⁹⁹ This is in contrast to appropriations for private or personal use.⁹⁴⁰⁰ The perpetrator must have specifically intended to deprive the owner of the property and to appropriate it for private or personal use.⁹⁴⁰¹ If combatants appropriate property essential to their survival, such as food, this alone does not make the appropriation one of military necessity.⁹⁴⁰²

n. Rape (Article 7(1)(g) and Article 8(2)(e)(vi))

3865. The crime of rape, whether as a crime against humanity or war crime, is committed when the following two material elements are fulfilled:

1. The perpetrator invaded⁹⁴⁰³ the body of a person by conduct resulting in penetration, however slight, of any part of the body of the victim or of the perpetrator with a sexual organ, or of the anal or genital opening of the victim with any object or any other part of the body.
2. The invasion was committed by force, or by threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence, duress, detention, psychological oppression or abuse of power, against such person or another person, or by taking advantage of a coercive environment, or the invasion was committed against a person incapable of giving genuine consent.⁹⁴⁰⁴

3866. The establishment of one of the coercive circumstances or conditions set out in the second element is sufficient for penetration to amount to rape.⁹⁴⁰⁵ It is not necessary to prove the victim's lack of consent⁹⁴⁰⁶ and there is no requirement of resistance on the part of the victim.⁹⁴⁰⁷

3867. Coercive circumstances need not be evidenced by a show of physical force – threats, intimidation, extortion, and other forms of duress which prey on fear or desperation may constitute coercion.⁹⁴⁰⁸ Coercion may be inherent in certain circumstances, such as armed conflict or the military presence of hostile forces amongst the civilian population.⁹⁴⁰⁹ Several factors may contribute to creating a coercive environment, such as the number of people involved in the commission of the crime, or whether the rape is committed during or immediately following a combat situation, or is committed together with other crimes.⁹⁴¹⁰

2. Modes of liability

3868. In the below, the Chamber outlines the applicable law under Articles 25(3)(a) and 25(3)(c) of the Statute, corresponding to the primary modes of liability confirmed by the Pre-Trial Chamber for the respective accused. For reasons set out below, the Chamber considers unnecessary to set out the requirements for the alternative modes of liability charged by the Prosecution and confirmed by the Pre-Trial Chamber.

i. Commission jointly with another or through another (Article 25(3)(a))

3869. An indirect perpetrator controls the person or persons who execute the material elements of the crime by subjugating their will.⁹⁴¹¹ This subjugation of the will is what distinguishes indirect perpetration from ordering, where a lesser degree of influence is required. The crucial element is the perpetrator's control of the action of another person or persons to such a degree that the will of that person becomes irrelevant, such that their action must be attributed to the perpetrator as if it were his or her own.⁹⁴¹² Whether the controlled person is also criminally responsible for the crime is irrelevant.⁹⁴¹³

Peru*, Judgment, 25 November 2006, Series C No. 160, para. 224 ('It has been acknowledged that during domestic and international armed conflicts the confronting parties used sexual violence against women as a means of punishment and repression. The use of state power to breach the rights of women in a domestic conflict, besides affecting them directly, may have the purpose of causing an effect in society through those breaches and send a message or give a lesson').

3870. The subjugation of the will of the person or persons who execute the material elements of the crime may occur in various ways. The use of an organisation is one such way,⁹⁴¹⁴ but this is a factual consideration and not a requirement for establishing this mode of liability.⁹⁴¹⁵ In such a case, while the potential physical perpetrators are interchangeable within the organisation,⁹⁴¹⁶ the criterion of control means that the indirect perpetrator used ‘at least part of the apparatus of power subordinate to him or her, so as to steer it intentionally towards the commission of the crime, without leaving one of the subordinates at liberty to decide whether the crime is to be executed.’⁹⁴¹⁷

3871. In addition, for an indirect perpetrator to be individually criminally responsible, they must satisfy the subjective elements as required by Article 30 of the Statute and any further specific provision.

3872. Joint commission (co-perpetration) is when the execution of the material elements of the crime results from the actions of a plurality of persons.⁹⁴¹⁸ The execution of the material elements of the crime by the co-perpetrators may take place through yet another person or persons, including, as just stated above, through the use of an organisation to control such persons. This mode of liability has been referred to, in the jurisprudence of the Court, as ‘indirect co-perpetration’.⁹⁴¹⁹

of the direct perpetrators.⁹⁴²⁰ The accused, though not required to carry out the criminal conduct directly and personally, must have control over the crime ‘by virtue of his or her essential contribution to it and the resulting power to frustrate its commission’.⁹⁴²¹

3874. There is no requirement to establish the existence of a common plan on the basis of ‘the subsequent concerted action of the co-perpetrators’.⁹⁴²² While such concerted action may be a relevant consideration, it is not, in the absence of direct evidence of the agreement, the only basis on which a chamber may infer the existence of a common plan.⁹⁴²³ Indeed, ‘[t]here is no legal impediment to inferring the common plan from the wider circumstances, including the events on the ground’.⁹⁴²⁴ In case a common plan is executed through persons who function as a tool of the co-perpetrators, the conduct such persons may be a relevant consideration to determine the existence of an alleged common plan.⁹⁴²⁵

3875. In addition, for an indirect co-perpetrator to be individually criminally responsible, they must satisfy the subjective elements as required by Article 30 of the Statute and any further specific provision. In particular, the indirect co-perpetrator must have meant to engage in the conduct which constituted their essential contribution,⁹⁴²⁶ and must have intended the execution of the material elements of the crime or have been aware that the implementation of the agreement between the co-perpetrators would in the ordinary course of events result in execution of the material elements of the crimes.⁹⁴²⁷

ii. Aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting in the commission of the crimes (Article 25(3)(c))

3876. The terms ‘aiding’, ‘abetting’ and ‘otherwise assisting’ under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute can be conceptualised as one single mode of liability.⁹⁴²⁸

3877. In essence, Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute provides for liability if a person provides assistance to the commission of a crime and, in engaging in this conduct, they intend to facilitate the commission of the crime.⁹⁴²⁹

3878. Liability under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute is dependent on the commission or attempted commission of an offence by the principal perpetrator.⁹⁴³⁰

3879. Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute requires ‘that the assistance in the commission (or attempted commission) of the crime be provided for the purposes of facilitating such commission’.⁹⁴³¹ It does so ‘without indicating whether the conduct must have also had an effect on the commission of the offence’.⁹⁴³² The actus reus under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute will certainly be fulfilled ‘when the person’s assistance in the commission of the crime facilitates or furthers the commission of the crime, as the showing of such an effect indicates that the person indeed assisted in its commission’.⁹⁴³³ Whether a conduct amounts to ‘assistance in the commission of the crime’ for purposes of Article 25(3)(c) also without showing of such an effect can only be determined in light of the facts of each case.⁹⁴³⁴ The Chamber concludes that the contribution under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute does not need to meet a specific, minimum, threshold.⁹⁴³⁵

3880. Liability under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute is established in reference to the assistance in the commission or attempted commission of a crime; the provision does not require that an accessory aid, abet or otherwise assist a specific person, whether considered ‘principal perpetrator’, ‘intermediary perpetrator’ or otherwise.⁹⁴³⁶ Psychological assistance can also be rendered to an intermediary rather than directly to the perpetrator as long as it can be established, as a factual matter, that this assisted the commission or attempted commission of a crime or offence.⁹⁴³⁷

3881. Assistance offered after the commission of the crime or offence may also give rise to liability under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.⁹⁴³⁸ If there was a prior offer of assistance or an agreement between the principal perpetrator and the accessory that the latter would lend assistance after the commission of the crime or offence, that conduct can be said to have amounted to assistance in the commission of the crime or offence, because the principal perpetrator committed it, knowing that they would receive assistance in the aftermath.⁹⁴³⁹

3882. Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute provides for a higher subjective element: the aider and abettor must act ‘for the purpose of facilitating the commission of a crime’.⁹⁴⁴⁰ This higher subjective standard relates to the facilitation, not the principal offence.⁹⁴⁴¹ For the aider and abettor to act ‘[f]or the purpose of facilitating the commission [...] of a crime’, the aider and abettor does not [necessarily] have to know all the details of the crime in which they assist; a person may be said to be acting for the purpose of facilitating the commission of a crime even if they do not know all the factual circumstances in which it is committed.⁹⁴⁴²

3883. Further, the aider and abettor must also have had the intent under Article 30 of the Statute with regard to the principal offence, i.e. the aider or abettor must at least be aware that the principal perpetrator’s offence will occur in the ordinary course of events.⁹⁴⁴³

B. Legal characterisation of facts

1.Introduction

3884. After establishing, on the basis of the analysis of the relevant evidence, the facts of the case, the Chamber proceeds to the subsumption of the factual findings within the legal characterisation proposed in the corresponding charges, meaning to the application of the law, as laid out above, to the factual findings and the analysis of each element of each of the crimes charged, including the constituent elements of the accused's criminal responsibility.

3885. The Chamber addresses first the two sets of contextual elements, crimes against humanity and war crimes, of the crimes charged. Thereafter, the Chamber addresses the charges as presented the individual 'set' of facts they respectively relate to: (i) the attack in Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin, on 5 December 2013; (ii) the attack in Bossangoa on 5 December 2013; (iii) the events at Yamwara between on or around 24 December 2013 and on or around 27 December 2013; and (iv) the events along the PK9-Mbaïki axis between on or around 10 January 2014 and on or around 6 February 2014, and on or around 28 February 2014. In each of the sub-sections, the Chamber proceeds again in two steps, addressing first the specific objective elements of each charged crime, and second the individual criminal responsibility of the two accused, as applicable, including the mental elements of the crimes.

3886. The Chamber recalls that the modes of liability for both accused are presented in the alternative. As further explained below, the Chamber accepts the primary alternative stated in the charge for each of the accused, which is responsibility under Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute as indirect perpetrator, or direct or indirect co-perpetrator, as the case may be, in relation to Mr Yekatom, and under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute for aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting in relation to Mr Ngaïssona. The primary alternative being established, the Chamber does not proceed to consider the further subsidiary modes of liability, Article 25(3)(b) and (d) of the Statute, respectively.

notes that there is no provision in the Statute explicitly requiring it to exclude some legal qualifications of facts on the ground that they are in impermissible concurrence with other legal qualifications of the same facts; also, the provisions on sentencing may be considered in themselves adequate to address, in the context of the determination of the sentence to be imposed, those instances in which a person is convicted of more than one crime on the basis of the same conduct.⁹⁴⁴⁵ Nonetheless, the Chamber agrees with the consistent stance of Trial Chambers of the Court that there are certain limitations on the permissibility of concurrence of crimes and consequential cumulative convictions. In particular, it has consistently been held that convictions may be entered cumulatively if the conduct in question violates two distinct provisions of the Statute, each having a ‘materially distinct’ element not contained in the other, i.e. an element which requires proof of a fact not required by the other.⁹⁴⁴⁶

2. Contextual elements

i. Contextual elements of war crimes

3888. At the outset, the Chamber notes that none of the parties dispute the existence of an armed conflict between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka beginning in at least September 2013. The Prosecution submits that by September 2013, the Anti-Balaka had become an organised armed group engaged in a sustained and intense armed conflict against the Seleka in western CAR.⁹⁴⁴⁷ While the Ngaïssona Defence argues that the Anti-Balaka was a ‘myriad of self-defence groups’ growing spontaneously in response to the Seleka violence,⁹⁴⁴⁸ it submits that ‘the Anti-Balaka’, as an entity, was engaged in an armed conflict with the Seleka during the events in Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 and carried out a lawful attack there, consistent with IHL.⁹⁴⁴⁹ Similarly, while the Yekatom Defence disputes that Mr Yekatom’s group was part of the Anti-Balaka, it submits, inter alia, that Mr Yekatom took up arms to defend the population from ‘enemy forces’ with ‘full commitment to his military training and respect for IHL principles’,⁹⁴⁵⁰ and was carrying out a legitimate military operation against the Seleka in Bangui on 5 December 2013.⁹⁴⁵¹

3889. Bearing in mind the above, the Chamber considered apposite to first address the contextual elements of war crimes, followed by those of crimes against humanity, so as to have regard to the circumstances surrounding the armed conflict which existed alongside an organisational policy, discussed below, within the entire context in which the Anti-Balaka emerged and how such policy developed, in light of the Defence’s arguments.

a. Violence between organised armed groups

3890. In its assessment, the Chamber has first noted the events leading to the emergence of both the Seleka and the Anti-Balaka and their respective positioning before the start of armed clashes between them.

3891. The Chamber considered how the Seleka came to take over Bangui in March 2013. The Chamber found that around August 2012, a coalition of armed groups opposing then-President François Bozizé emerged in the CAR under the name of the ‘Seleka’, led by CAR citizens and including elements from Chad and Sudan. Michel Djotodia became the leader of the Seleka.⁹⁴⁵² The Chamber found that starting in late 2012, the Seleka advanced towards Bangui. The Libreville agreement, concluded in January 2013, presented an attempt to end the crisis, leading to a government including representatives of various factions, with François Bozizé remaining president and Nicolas Tiangaye as prime minister, Michel Djotodia as deputy prime minister and minister of defence, and Mr Ngaïssona as minister of youth, sports, arts and culture.⁹⁴⁵³ The Chamber found that, at the same time, the widely reported advance of the Seleka, and violent acts and abuses committed in this context, including against civilians, sparked reactions within the civilian and political sphere: COCORA and COAC were two organisations which were active in mobilising support for François Bozizé in light of the Seleka advance. They erected checkpoints or roadblocks at which passers-by and vehicles were checked, with the objective of identifying Seleka infiltrators and people deemed to be associated with or in support of them, including Muslims. The individuals manning these checkpoints were armed with bladed weapons and, in some cases, with AK-47s.⁹⁴⁵⁴ The Chamber found that the Seleka took control of Bangui on 24 March 2013 and Michel Djotodia proclaimed himself President of the CAR.⁹⁴⁵⁵

3892. The Chamber noted the violence attributed to the Seleka after the takeover. The Chamber found that after the Seleka took control of Bangui on 24 March 2013, they committed violence and abuses in various localities across the CAR, in particular against individuals considered to be associated with François Bozizé, his Gbaya ethnic group, his government's security forces, and non-Muslims. Mr Ngaïssona's properties in Bangui were looted. However, the Muslim civilian population was not entirely spared from this violence.⁹⁴⁵⁶

3893. The Chamber has considered the composition and strength of the Seleka over the course of the year 2013. The Chamber found that the Seleka included fighters in particular from Chad and Sudan. It was led by Central African Muslims. The Chamber found that the number of Seleka elements varied greatly in the course of 2013. While counting several thousand elements at the time of the take-over in March 2013, their numbers grew significantly until the end of that year.⁹⁴⁵⁷

3894. The Chamber considered how the Anti-Balaka emerged as an armed group following the Seleka takeover. The Chamber found that self-defence groups in various localities across the CAR formed or re-activated from previous existence very quickly following the take-over of power by the Seleka in March 2013 and individuals within those groups also obtained amulets or gris-gris.⁹⁴⁵⁸ The Chamber found that these self-defence groups that initially formed in the provinces aimed at defending against the abuses and violence committed by the Seleka, within which framework some considered necessary to remove Michel Djotodia and the Seleka from power.⁹⁴⁵⁹ The Chamber found that while initially having formed separately, these groups started out with a common enemy and increasingly coordinated their activities, thereby essentially forming one movement. It was this movement that came to be known as the Anti-Balaka.⁹⁴⁶⁰ The Chamber found that due to the religious and ethnic commonalities between the Muslims in the CAR and the Seleka, the Anti-Balaka perceived the former as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka. On this basis, as the Anti-Balaka emerged and coalesced in pursuit of its core objective, its elements targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, killing and dislocating them.⁹⁴⁶¹ The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom briefly went to Zongo in 2013 and then started forming a group, over which he assumed control, with Freddy Ouandjio, also known as Cœur de Lion, and Habib Beina, with a view to planning a response to the Seleka violence and removing Michel Djotodia and the Seleka from power.⁹⁴⁶²

they seized from the members of the Seleka after engaging them in hostilities.⁹⁴⁶⁵ The Chamber found that, in the months leading up to the Bangui Attack, Mr Yekatom and his group armed and trained in the bush.⁹⁴⁶⁶

3896. The Chamber considered how the various Anti-Balaka groups began advancing to Bangui and their ability to move troops, source and pull elements to advance with a one unified military strategy. The Chamber found that Maxime Mokom liaised with individuals and groups in Cameroon, Zongo and within the CAR, including his father Bernard Mokom, Mr Yekatom, and groups forming in the provinces, with a view to coordinating the activities and eventual advance onto Bangui.⁹⁴⁶⁷ The Chamber found that the Anti-Balaka groups, which had formed in the provinces and in part gathered together at Gobere, started their advance towards Bangui, with the ultimate objective to attack the capital in order to remove Michel Djotodia from power and oust the Seleka from the CAR.⁹⁴⁶⁸

3897. Having regard to these conclusions, the Chamber finds that the Anti-Balaka were organised for purposes of its determinations under Article 8 of the Statute and had all the relevant bearings to constitute one armed group. This is also shown by the clashes in which the Anti-Balaka were involved, as discussed below, that further demonstrate the Anti-Balaka's operational capacity and the ability to carry out large scale and coordinated attacks in specific locations at specific times.

b. 'Protracted' character of the violence

3898. The Chamber noted how, where, and how often, the various Anti-Balaka groups in the provinces clashed with the Seleka during their advance to Bangui beginning in September 2013. The Chamber found that during their advance towards Bangui, various Anti-Balaka groups started engaging in attacks against the Seleka from September 2013 onwards. Such attacks were not limited to Seleka forces, but included attacking localities with Muslim civilians.⁹⁴⁶⁹ The Chamber found that Anti-Balaka attacks were launched around Bossangoa and in Bouca (Ouham prefecture), in Ndjo, Bossembélé, Boali and Gaga (Ombella-M'Poko prefecture), as well as in Bouar (Nana-Mambéré prefecture). As part of these attacks, Anti-Balaka elements attacked Bossangoa on 17 September 2013.⁹⁴⁷⁰ The Chamber found that throughout the advance and during these attacks, Anti-Balaka groups targeted Muslim civilians.⁹⁴⁷¹

3899. The Chamber found that the advance of the Anti-Balaka groups and hostilities on the way culminated in coordinated attacks in Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.⁹⁴⁷²

3900. Further, the Chamber considered the effects of these clashes on the civilian population. The Chamber found that the Anti-Balaka participating in the Bangui Attack shared the same goal, which was to target Seleka positions in Bangui with a view to 'getting rid of Djotodia' and 'chasing out the Seleka', which included systematic targeting of Muslim civilians.⁹⁴⁷³ Similarly, during the Bossangoa Attack, the Anti-Balaka targeted residential areas, including the Boro neighbourhood, generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood in Bossangoa, with the intention of showing that the Anti-Balaka were attacking not only Bangui but also in the provinces, and to 'free' the town from Seleka and all Muslims, thereby targeting Muslim civilians and drawing no distinction between them and the Seleka.⁹⁴⁷⁴

3901. The Chamber has considered the involvement of Mr Yekatom's group that shows that he was assigned a specific territorial target and a zone of responsibility. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with other Anti-Balaka groups to participate in the Bangui Attack.⁹⁴⁷⁵ The Chamber found that in the early morning of 5 December 2013, Mr Yekatom launched an attack on Boeing, attacking the Boeing Market, the Boeing Mosque, before proceeding to attacking Cattin.⁹⁴⁷⁶ The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's instructions to his elements concerning the attack in Bangui on 5 December 2013 were to fight the Seleka and included targeting sectors where 'Muslims' were to be found.⁹⁴⁷⁷ The Chamber found that after setting up in Yamwara in Bangui for some time, Mr Yekatom's group moved down the PK9-Mbaïki axis following Michel Djotodia's resignation.⁹⁴⁷⁸

3902. The Chamber considered the aftermath of the coordinated attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa and whether the situation attracted the attention of the regional and international community in an attempt to cease hostilities. The Chamber found that on 10 January 2014, Michel Djotodia resigned, leading to the end of his government, following which the Seleka forces started to withdraw from Bangui, in particular towards the north and north-east of the CAR.⁹⁴⁷⁹ The Chamber found that notwithstanding the retreat of the Seleka following the resignation of Michel Djotodia and the setting up of a new transition government in January 2014, the main hostilities between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka which had started in earnest in September 2013 continued largely unabated until the end of February 2014, and continued thereafter, but subsided considerably.⁹⁴⁸⁰ The Chamber found that several attempts to bring about the cessation of hostilities failed, including the 16 June 2014 PARETO mediation agreement, the 23 July 2014 peace agreement signed by the Seleka and the Anti-Balaka in Brazzaville, Republic of the Congo, and the agreement signed in Nairobi in April 2015.⁹⁴⁸¹

3903. In the view of the Chamber, the seriousness and the frequency of the attacks by the Anti-Balaka and their armed clashes with the Seleka and how they took place in several locations over a period of time during the Anti-Balaka advance to Bangui were ample to show that this violence was not isolated or sporadic, and protracted in nature.

3904. Having regard to these conclusions, the Chamber finds that from September 2013 until at least February 2014 there existed an armed conflict not of an international character ongoing in the territory of the CAR between the Seleka and the Anti-Balaka, including Mr Yekatom's group.

⁹⁴⁸⁰ See paragraph 66 above.

3905. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that all of the conduct underlying the charged counts took place in the context of and was associated with the non-international armed conflict as described. Accordingly, the nexus requirement, namely that the conduct took place in the context of and was associated with an armed conflict not of an international character.

3907. On the basis of the above, the Chamber concludes that the contextual elements are satisfied in respect of the war crimes charged under Counts 1, 3, 5, 6, 13, 16, 25, 27, 30, 32, 33, 38 and 41.

ii. Contextual elements of crimes against humanity

3908. For purposes of its determination of whether the contextual elements of the crimes against humanity charged in this case are fulfilled, the Chamber considered a number of factors.

⁹⁴⁸² See paragraphs 55, 73-74.

⁹⁴⁸³ See paragraph 63 above.

a. Recalling of factual findings

3909. The Chamber recalls the background that gave rise to the Anti-Balaka looking at events from August 2012 onwards. The Chamber found that around August 2012, a coalition of armed groups opposing then-President François Bozizé emerged in the CAR under the name of the ‘Seleka’, led by CAR citizens and including elements from Chad and Sudan, with Michel Djotodia as its leader.⁹⁴⁸⁵ The Chamber found that on 24 March 2013, the Seleka took control of Bangui and Michel Djotodia proclaimed himself President of the CAR.⁹⁴⁸⁶ The Chamber found that after the Seleka took control of Bangui on 24 March 2013, they committed violence and abuses in various localities across the CAR, in particular against individuals considered to be associated with François Bozizé, his Gbaya ethnic group, his government’s security forces, and non-Muslims. However, the Muslim civilian population was not entirely spared from this violence.⁹⁴⁸⁷ Mr Ngaïssona’s properties in Bangui were also looted.⁹⁴⁸⁸ The Chamber found that the Seleka included fighters in particular from Chad and Sudan and was led by Central African Muslims. Due to the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and in light of its perceived composition, tensions in particular between Muslim and non-Muslim communities in CAR increased.⁹⁴⁸⁹

3910. The Chamber considered how the various groups forming the Anti-Balaka subsequently emerged. The Chamber found that self-defence groups in various localities across the CAR formed or re-activated from previous existence very quickly following the take-over of power by the Seleka in March 2013 and individuals within those groups also obtained amulets or gris-gris.⁹⁴⁹⁰ The Chamber found that these self-defence groups that initially formed in the provinces aimed at defending against the abuses and violence committed by the Seleka, within which framework some considered necessary to remove Michel Djotodia and the Seleka from power.⁹⁴⁹¹ The Chamber found that while initially having formed separately, these groups started out with a common enemy and increasingly coordinated their activities, thereby essentially forming one movement. It was this movement that came to be known as the Anti-Balaka.⁹⁴⁹²

3911. The Chamber considered how the various Anti-Balaka groups began organising. The Chamber found that certain individuals and local groups converged onto and joined together in Gobere, north-east of Bossangoa.⁹⁴⁹³ In Gobere, civilians and former members of the FACA and PG gathered, and (i) organised into various sub-groups with a leader each; (ii) set up or maintained contacts with groups and individuals in other locations, including Maxime Mokom in Zongo, who was considered to be a coordinator of operations; (iii) organised trainings in weapon handling and combat by FACA members; and (iv) made further plans with a view to descending onto Bangui and removing the Seleka and Michel Djotodia from power.⁹⁴⁹⁴ At the same time, former members of the FACA and PG also in other localities created new or joined pre-existing self-defence groups, organising themselves into military-like structures and assuming or sharing command over them.⁹⁴⁹⁵

3912. The Chamber further considered how the Anti-Balaka's perceptions evolved during this time. The Chamber found that due to the religious and ethnic commonalities between the Muslims in the CAR and the Seleka, the Anti-Balaka perceived the former as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka. On this basis, as the Anti-Balaka emerged and coalesced in pursuit of its core objective, its elements targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, killing and dislocating them.⁹⁴⁹⁶ The Chamber found that the implementation and execution of the Anti-Balaka's core objective was primed by anti-foreign sentiments and inflammatory rhetoric openly expressed by François Bozizé and others, which incited vigilance against those perceived to support the Seleka, in particular Muslim civilians.⁹⁴⁹⁷

3913. The Chamber considered how the various Anti-Balaka groups began coordinating with a common objective. Maxime Mokom liaised with individuals and groups in Cameroon,

Zongo and within the CAR, including his father Bernard Mokom, Mr Yekatom, and groups forming in the provinces, with a view to coordinating the activities and eventual advance onto Bangui.⁹⁴⁹⁸ The Chamber found that the Anti-Balaka groups, which had formed in the provinces and in part gathered together at Gobere, started their advance towards Bangui, with the ultimate objective to attack the capital in order to remove Michel Djotodia from power and oust the Seleka from the CAR.⁹⁴⁹⁹

3914. The Chamber considered how these Anti-Balaka committed crimes in execution of this common objective. The Chamber found that during their advance towards Bangui, various Anti-Balaka groups started engaging in attacks against the Seleka from September 2013 onwards. Such attacks were not limited to Seleka forces, but included attacking localities with Muslim civilians.⁹⁵⁰⁰ The Chamber found that Anti-Balaka attacks were launched around Bossangoa and in Bouca (Ouham prefecture), in Ndjo, Bossembélé, Boali and Gaga (Ombella-M'Poko prefecture), as well as in Bouar (Nana-Mambéré prefecture). As part of these attacks, Anti-Balaka elements attacked Bossangoa on 17 September 2013.⁹⁵⁰¹ The Chamber found that throughout the advance and during these attacks, Anti-Balaka groups targeted Muslim civilians.⁹⁵⁰²

3915. The Chamber considered the level of coordination amongst the various Anti-Balaka groups in advance of the attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa. The Chamber found that these groups going into different localities communicated with each other and individuals abroad, including Maxime Mokom, with a view to coordinating such attacks.⁹⁵⁰³ The Chamber found that the advance of the Anti-Balaka groups and hostilities on the way culminated in coordinated attacks in Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.⁹⁵⁰⁴ As regards the Bangui Attack, the Chamber found that the plan to mount an attack on Bangui existed at least as of 30 November 2013 and the Anti-Balaka elements and groups travelled from the provinces to arrive close to Bangui before 5 December 2013.⁹⁵⁰⁵ During their move from the provinces to Bangui, Anti-Balaka chiefs communicated across their groups, kept and maintained records or lists of elements, armed themselves, and waited at common locations and prepared for an attack on Bangui.⁹⁵⁰⁶

3916. The Chamber considered the common objectives of the attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013. The Chamber found that the Anti-Balaka participating in the Bangui Attack shared the same goal, which was to target Seleka positions in Bangui with a view to ‘getting rid of Djotodia’ and ‘chasing out the Seleka’, which included systematic targeting of Muslim civilians.⁹⁵⁰⁷ Similarly, during the Bossangoa Attack, the Anti-Balaka targeted residential areas, including the Boro neighbourhood, generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood in Bossangoa, with the intention of showing that the Anti-Balaka were attacking not only Bangui but also in the provinces, and to ‘free’ the town from Seleka and all Muslims, thereby targeting Muslim civilians and drawing no distinction between them and the Seleka.⁹⁵⁰⁸

3918. The Chamber considered other commonalities between the Bangui Attack and the Bossangoa Attack. The Chamber found that various Anti-Balaka groups that participated in the Bangui Attack had common leaders, who coordinated their actions and instructed them.⁹⁵¹³ The Chamber found that Anti-Balaka groups that reassembled close to Bangui prior to the Bangui Attack were each assigned a specific target within Bangui and instructed to begin the attack on the respective targets at 05:00 on 5 December 2013.⁹⁵¹⁴ The Chamber found that the Bangui Attack was carried out as planned, resulting in clashes between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka in several locations in Bangui, including Boeing, with the Anti-Balaka beginning to retreat around 10:00 the same day.⁹⁵¹⁵ On the same day and in coordination with the Bangui Attack, the Bossangoa Attack started at approximately 13:00 and lasted until the late afternoon or early evening of the same day.⁹⁵¹⁶

3919. The Chamber considered the common pattern of crimes that were carried out during the Bangui Attack and the Bossangoa Attack. The Chamber found that both attacks led to the commission of crimes against Muslim civilians, including attacking, killings, and enslaving of Muslim civilians, ultimately leading to the Muslim civilians having to leave these areas.⁹⁵¹⁷

3920. The Chamber considered certain events following 5 December 2013. The Chamber found that the radio statement issued by FROCCA on 5 December 2013 in relation to the attack on Bangui referred to the attack as ‘[l]e rétablissement de l’ordre fonctionnel’ and further stated that the Anti-Balaka ‘sont des Centrafricains pour aller libérer leur pays des jougs des djihadistes venus du D[arfour], du T[chad], du S[oudan]’.⁹⁵¹⁸ On 10 January 2014, Michel Djotodia resigned, leading to the end of his government, following which the Seleka forces started to withdraw from Bangui, in particular towards the north and north-east of the CAR.⁹⁵¹⁹ A transitional government was setup with Catherine Samba-Panza elected as new transitional head of state of the CAR on 20 January 2014.⁹⁵²⁰

⁹⁵¹⁸ See paragraph 71 above.

3921. The Chamber considered the further evolution of the Anti-Balaka following 5 December 2013. The Chamber found that with a view to engaging with the transition government and international authorities, the Anti-Balaka structure started being further formalised with the return of Mr Ngaïssona and his appointment as general coordinator.⁹⁵²¹

3922. The Chamber found that the structure of the Anti-Balaka evolved during the period relevant to the charges, and was subject to various leadership tussles, however, it always remained represented towards the national and international authorities as one entity through Mr Ngaïssona.⁹⁵²² The Chamber found that in 2014, Anti-Balaka groups set up bases in different neighbourhoods across Bangui with meetings being held at variable intervals at Mr Ngaïssona's concessions or at the Azimut hotel.⁹⁵²³ The Chamber found that in February 2014, the Anti-Balaka itself estimated counting about 50,000 elements in Bangui and the provinces. The Anti-Balaka coordination also issued identity cards or badges to some of the Anti-Balaka elements.⁹⁵²⁴

3923. The Chamber considered the actions of the Anti-Balaka in early 2014. The Chamber found that the Anti-Balaka continued to target the Muslim civilian population in 2014 across the western CAR prefectures, including in the second half of January and early February 2014 in Ombella-M'Poko (Gaga, Zawa, Yaloké), Ouham-Pendé (Bossemptélé), Nana-Mambéré (Baoro), Mambéré-Kadéï (Guen, Carnot, Berbérati) and Lobaye (Boda).⁹⁵²⁵

b. Existence of an 'attack directed against any civilian population'

3924. The Chamber notes that the Defence takes issue with the nature of the Anti-Balaka as an organisation. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that the Anti-Balaka were not a 'top-down organisation' but a 'myriad of self-defence groups that spontaneously rose out of the Seleka's heinous and continuous crimes against the civilian population following the 24 March coup'.⁹⁵²⁶ It further argues that the emergence of the Anti-Balaka was sporadic and by its very nature, ‘this movement was diffuse[d]’ and ‘often indistinguishable from the general population, and fundamentally elusive due to its constantly fluctuating expansion and evolution’.⁹⁵²⁷ The Ngaïssona Defence argues that it is a ‘fundamentally flawed narrative’ to consider that the Anti-Balaka was ‘a homogenous group’ that would have ‘shared a common objective to violently target “the Muslim civilian population in western CAR”’ resulting in the commission of the charged crimes ‘throughout the entire period of the charges and across the country’.⁹⁵²⁸ Further, the Ngaïssona Defence argues that the Prosecution failed to demonstrate that there was at least ‘a minimal level of coordination among those who control the relevant alleged organisation’.⁹⁵²⁹ It argues that there was a lack of specificity regarding the ‘inner circle’ and insufficient level of coordination within ‘each alleged geographical group’.⁹⁵³⁰ Similarly, the Yekatom Defence argues that the ‘Anti-Balaka’ is a nebulous term,⁹⁵³¹ and that, in any event, Mr Yekatom’s group was not Anti-Balaka.⁹⁵³²

3925. The Chamber notes that the legal framework and the jurisprudence do not provide the contours which an ‘organisation’ must fulfil for purposes of finding an ‘organisational policy’. The Chamber recalls that for the purpose of assessing ‘organisational policy’, it ‘suffices that the organisation has a set of structures or mechanisms, whatever those may be, that are sufficiently efficient to ensure the coordination necessary to carry out an attack directed against a civilian population’.⁹⁵³³ Accordingly, the Chamber considers that there is no requirement, as a matter of law, that an organisation for the purposes of Article 7 of the Statute be homogenous, or otherwise a strictly hierarchical, top-down organisation, as such. Indeed, it may well include a variety of groups, as long as those groups have ‘mechanisms’ sufficiently efficient to ensure ‘coordination’ necessary to carry out the attack within the meaning of the framework.

3926. The Chamber considers that the evolution of the Anti-Balaka clearly shows how some individuals and the local self-defence groups, including Mr Yekatom's group, began organising and developed structures and mechanisms over time and came to be known as the Anti-Balaka. Markers of these structures and mechanisms appeared in (i) having common organisational forces underlying all Anti-Balaka attacks in the form of common leaders, who coordinated their actions and instructed the various Anti-Balaka groups; (ii) the various Anti-Balaka groups communicating with each other during their advance towards Bangui; (iii) the existence of a plan to mount highly coordinated attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 and the preparations undertaken in advance of these attacks; (iv) successfully carrying out coordinated attacks on two separate locations on the same day with the shared goal; and (v) the Anti-Balaka groups continuing to engage in hostilities in early 2014, at least, following the same pattern of conduct underlying the discussed Anti-Balaka attacks in 2013. In this instance, how the various Anti-Balaka organised internally on a granular level, including whether they were strictly hierarchical or homogenous, is immaterial. In the view of the Chamber, the Anti-Balaka had sufficient bearings of an organisation for the purposes of finding an organisational policy within the meaning of Article 7 of the Statute.

3927. The Chamber turns in this context to the Defence arguments concerning the objectives of the Anti-Balaka. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that it was the context of the Seleka violence that 'gave rise to the Anti-Balaka movement' and that it had 'no connection whatsoever to an alleged organizational policy that would have been implemented' by Bozizé's 'alleged inner circle, including Mr N[gaïssona]'.⁹⁵³⁴ The Chamber notes the Ngaïssona Defence argument that as the 'groups evolved', the 'official position of the Anti-Balaka was circulated and was clearly to target the Seleka with the aim of ousting D[jotodia] only'.⁹⁵³⁵ It further argues that the Anti-Balaka shared 'one legitimate objective: ousting the criminal Seleka regime and liberating the CAR population from its oppression, not to attack the Muslim civilian population',⁹⁵³⁶ and that the 'Anti-Balaka groups acted pursuant to legitimate and lawful goals and did not agree to target the Muslim civilian population'.⁹⁵³⁷ It further argues that Bozizé's return was an 'option', rather than an 'objective'.⁹⁵³⁸ The Ngaïssona Defence argues that after the Seleka departed, the Anti-Balaka objective 'was then to take control of an area to avoid violence'.⁹⁵³⁹ It adds that the 'coordination considered the killings of Muslim population unacceptable' and launched 'a reconciliation project across the country between the Muslim and Christian communities to halt and prevent the commission of exactions amongst the civilian population'.⁹⁵⁴⁰

3928. The Chamber notes a similar argument by the Yekatom Defence that Mr Yekatom's group was founded on the 'objective to target the Seleka forces who had committed mass atrocities against the CAR civilian population'.⁹⁵⁴¹ It argues that the core objectives of Mr Yekatom's group were the restoration of security and administrative infrastructures in the CAR, protection of the civilian population, and reinforcement of resources and security measures.⁹⁵⁴² The Chamber also notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that Mr Yekatom's group did not harm the Muslim population during its operations but rather sought to protect them.⁹⁵⁴³

3929. The Chamber recalls that an organisational policy may crystallise and develop also as actions are undertaken by the perpetrators.⁹⁵⁴⁴ In the present case, the Chamber considered that, in order to determine whether the Anti-Balaka carried out an attack, as alleged, it was necessary to have regard to the overall flow of events, beginning well before the Anti-Balaka came to be known as a 'movement', including the evolution of the roles of the various actors, including both the accused.

3930. In the view of the Chamber, while the initial impetus for the self-defence groups to emerge may have been in response to the Seleka violence, over time, the various Anti-Balaka groups joined and coalesced around the objective to oust the Seleka and inflict retributive violence on Muslim civilians. In this respect, the objective – as argued by the Ngaïssona Defence, meaning the ousting the Seleka and liberating the CAR population from its oppression – did not exclude attacking the Muslim civilian population. The Chamber considers immaterial for purposes of its determination the question of whether the aim to remove Michel Djotodia and oust the Seleka from the CAR was legitimate and lawful. What was of significance, and indeed material, was that during their advance to Bangui, various Anti-Balaka groups engaged in attacks against the Seleka from September 2013 onwards and that such attacks included targeting Muslim civilians.

3931. To the extent that the Defence challenge that the organisational policy did not target Muslim civilians, the Chamber notes that, when assessing the Anti-Balaka actions towards Muslim civilians, a clear and distinct pattern of violence is discernible when comparing the various attacks that the Anti-Balaka groups launched in the provinces in September 2013 with the attacks on 5 December 2013 in Bangui and Bossangoa. This pattern is also seen in the advance of Mr Yekatom's group on the PK9-Mbaïki axis, as well as the attacks that took place in 2014, after Mr Ngaïssona became general coordinator of the Anti-Balaka. The Chamber recalls its findings that these attacks followed a pattern with Anti-Balaka groups killing and injuring Muslim civilians, looting and destroying their belongings, and often placing them in enclaved positions under difficult circumstances, eventually leading to many Muslims having to leave the respective areas.⁹⁵⁴⁵

3932. On the basis of the above, the Chamber finds that the acts described as an attack against the civilian population occurred pursuant to a policy to attack the civilian population.

c. Widespread or systematic nature of the attack

3933. Further, based on the temporal and geographic extent of the attack, the Chamber finds that it was widespread within the meaning of Article 7(1) of the Statute. In addition, considering that throughout the period of the charges the Anti-Balaka attacked Muslim civilians whom they perceived as associated with the Seleka and it followed a similar pattern, the Chamber finds that these attacks were also systematic. This included, in particular, Mr Yekatom's group's actions that followed an identical pattern, as part of a coordinated effort, killing and displacing Muslim persons from neighbourhoods in Bangui and then along the PK9-Mbaïki axis. The Chamber considers that the actions of Mr Yekatom and his elements were not random or accidental.

3934. Accordingly, having regard to its conclusion above, the Chamber finds that between September 2013 and December 2014, there was a widespread and systematic attack conducted by the Anti-Balaka, including Mr Yekatom's group, against the Muslim civilian population and those perceived as collectively responsible for, complicit with, or supportive of the Seleka, pursuant to or in furtherance of a criminal policy to primarily target the Muslim population in Bangui and in western CAR prefectures in retribution for Seleka exactions.

d. Nexus requirement and perpetrators' awareness

3935. The crimes charged in relation to the Bangui Attack, the Bossangoa Attack, Yamwara and the PK9-Mbaïki axis under Counts 2, 4, 8, 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 24, 26, 28, 31, 37, 39, 40 and 42, were committed, as discussed below, in the context of specific Anti-Balaka attacks and actions, including by Mr Yekatom's group. Considering that the Anti-Balaka perceived Muslims as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka, and thus targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, the attacks in Bangui and Bossangoa, as well as the actions at Yamwara and along the PK9-Mbaïki axis form part of the attack against the civilian population within the meaning of Article 7 of the Statute as defined in this section. Accordingly, the Chamber finds, in respect of Counts 2, 4, 8, 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 24, 26, 28, 31, 37, 39, 40 and 42, that the conduct was committed as part of the widespread and systematic attack directed against a civilian population, as required by Article 7(1) of the Statute.

3937. The Chamber found that through meetings in Cameroon and communications with individuals in Zongo, in particular Maxime Mokom, who in turned liaised with persons and groups in Bangui and in the provinces, François Bozizé, Mr Ngaïssona, Bernard Mokom and others planned steps to respond to the Seleka violence in the CAR as well as to ensure François Bozizé's return to power, by all means possible, including through armed violence.⁹⁵⁴⁶ During his time outside of the CAR in 2013, Mr Ngaïssona was actively involved in planning steps to respond to the Seleka violence in the CAR and to ensure François Bozizé's return to power by meeting and liaising with François Bozizé, Bernard Mokom and others to discuss strategies and plans, reaching out to individuals within and outside of the CAR with a view to gathering support for their cause, and providing financial assistance to those willing to assist in their activities.⁹⁵⁴⁷

3938. The Chamber found that Maxime Mokom liaised with individuals and groups in Cameroon, Zongo and within the CAR, including his father Bernard Mokom, Mr Yekatom, and groups forming in the provinces, with a view to coordinating the activities and eventual advance onto Bangui.⁹⁵⁴⁸ Around the same time, Mr Yekatom started forming a group, over which he assumed control, with Freddy Ouandjio, also known as Cœur de Lion, and Habib Beina, with a view to planning a response to the Seleka violence and removing Michel Djotodia and the Seleka from power.⁹⁵⁴⁹

3939. The Chamber found that throughout the period relevant to the charges, Mr Yekatom retained and exercised control over an active group of elements which was seen as and understood to be part of the Anti-Balaka. Mr Yekatom was the uncontested leader of this group which first set up at Yamwara in Boeing after 5 December 2013, and moved down the PK9-Mbaïki axis following Michel Djotodia's resignation.⁹⁵⁵⁰ The Chamber further found that from his involvement in coordinating his own group's advance through the provinces towards Bangui for purposes of the attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013, Mr Yekatom knew of the advance of the Anti-Balaka groups through the provinces towards Bangui, including the hostilities, as well as killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians, taking place in this context.⁹⁵⁵¹ Mr Yekatom knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁵⁵² In addition to this, the Chamber recalls that, before the Bangui Attack, Mr Yekatom instructed his elements to target sectors where ‘Muslims’ were to be found.⁹⁵⁵³ He also instructed his elements on the night before the Bangui Attack to target Seleka positions along the Boeing-Cattin-PK5 direction, which encompassed attacking the Muslims traders at the Boeing Market.⁹⁵⁵⁴ The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom’s instructions were understood by the elements to accept that Muslim civilians would be killed as a result of the fighting based on his elements not having been trained or instructed to apply the principle of distinction during combat and bearing strong anti-Muslim sentiment and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka.⁹⁵⁵⁵

3940. In respect of the Bangui Attack, the Chamber found that the killings of Hassan and the three unnamed Muslim men in Boeing and Cattin, as well as the dislocation of Muslims from Boeing and Cattin took place during Mr Yekatom’s group’s attack there on 5 December 2013. These crimes were identical in pattern to the crimes committed by the Anti-Balaka in the provinces prior to the Bangui Attack. The same holds true for Mr Yekatom’s group’s advance to PK9-Mbaïki axis.

3941. As regards the Yamwara Incident, in particular, the Chamber notes that it took place approximately three weeks after the Bangui Attack after Mr Yekatom’s group had established a base at Yamwara and involved targeting what Mr Yekatom’s elements perceived to be Muslim civilians resulting in the death of one of the group members. The Chamber recalls that all seven persons captured during this incident were civilian. Mr Yekatom’s elements considered them ‘Muslim’ by associating the three women in the group as related to the Seleka.⁹⁵⁵⁶ They considered Saint Cyr a ‘Goula’ for not being able to speak the concerned dialect during his interrogation at Yamwara,⁹⁵⁵⁷ and found a ‘Seleka card’ on him during a search at the checkpoint.⁹⁵⁵⁸ Mr Yekatom’s elements used the expression ‘peeling the papaya’ at the checkpoint during his capture at the checkpoint, which other elements from Mr Yekatom’s group have been known to use in relation to captives suspected of being Seleka.⁹⁵⁵⁹ These facts, taken together, show that the seven persons were perceived as Muslims and subjected to retributive violence, consistent with the Anti-Balaka policy. Mr Yekatom was aware that all seven persons were civilian at the time of their capture and that his elements mistreated all seven of them, killing one.

3942. Having regard to this, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom knew or intended the conduct to be part of the widespread and systematic attack by the Anti-Balaka directed against the Muslim civilian population.

3943. As regards Mr Ngaïssona, the Chamber found that he provided financial contributions and engaged in activities pertaining to the organisation and coordination of groups for the purpose of facilitating the commission of criminal acts targeting the Muslim population.⁹⁵⁶⁰ After Michel Djotodia’s resignation on 10 January 2014 and immediately upon his return to Bangui on 14 January 2014, Mr Ngaïssona became the general coordinator of the Anti-Balaka. As such, Mr Ngaïssona represented the entirety of the Anti-Balaka towards the CAR transition government and international authorities.⁹⁵⁶¹ Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide financial assistance to the Anti-Balaka and actively engaged in formalising the structure of the Anti-Balaka.⁹⁵⁶² The Chamber found that the structure of the Anti-Balaka evolved during the period relevant to the charges, and was subject to various leadership tussles. However, it always remained represented towards the national and international authorities as one entity through Mr Ngaïssona.⁹⁵⁶³

3944. The Chamber found that Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the advance of the groups towards Bangui as well as of the hostilities during this advance, including the killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians from around Bossangoa and in Bouca (Ouham prefecture), in Ndjo, Bossembélé, Boali and Gaga (Ombella-M'Poko prefecture), as well as in Bouar (Nana-Mambéré prefecture).⁹⁵⁶⁴ Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka, and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR.⁹⁵⁶⁵ 3945. Having regard to this, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona knew or intended the conduct to be part of the widespread and systematic attack by the Anti-Balaka directed against the Muslim civilian population.

3946. Accordingly, the Chamber concludes that the contextual elements are satisfied in respect of the crimes against humanity charged under Counts 2, 4, 8, 11, 12, 14, 15, 17, 24, 26, 28, 31, 37, 39, 40 and 42.

iii. Concurrence of analogous crimes against humanity and war crimes

3947. Several underlying crimes are charged in the present case as both crimes against humanity under Article 7 of the Statute and as war crimes under Article 8 of the Statute. This concerns murder as a crime against humanity under Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute and as a war crime under Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Counts 2-3, 15-16, 26-27 and 31-32); forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity under Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute and displacement as a war crime under Article 8(2)(e)(vii) of the Statute (Counts 4-5, 24-25 and 37-38); torture as a crime against humanity under Article 7(1)(f) of the Statute and as a war crime under Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Counts 12-13); and rape as a crime against humanity under Article 7(1)(g) of the Statute and as a war crime under Article 8(2)(e)(vi) of the Statute (Counts 40-41).

3948. The Chamber considers that the contextual elements of crimes against humanity on the one and war crimes on the other require proof of facts not required by the other.⁹⁵⁶⁶ Further, the contextual elements of crimes in the jurisdiction of the Court are not neutral as concerns the qualitative legal evaluation of the charged conduct. The statutory contextual elements of crimes distinguish crimes within the material jurisdiction of the Court from ordinary crimes falling outside such jurisdiction. Beyond that, these elements, considered individually, encapsulate distinct interests protected by the corresponding incriminating provisions under the Statute, reflecting partly different forms of criminality and thereby complementing in the protected interests the incrimination of individual ‘specific’ crimes. In these circumstances, neither of these two sets of crimes can be said to be subsumed or consumed in any way by the other. On this basis, the Chamber finds that concurrence of analogous crimes against humanity and war crimes is permissible.⁹⁵⁶⁷

i. Crimes committed in the context of the attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin (Counts 1 to 6, 8)

a. Crimes committed

i. Attack against the civilian population as such as a war crime (Count 1)

3949. Under Count 1, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with the war crime of directing an attack against the civilian population as such, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(i) of the Statute, in Bangui, including Cattin and the Boeing Market, starting on 5 December 2013, on the basis of the conduct pertaining to Counts 2 to 6 and 8.

Recalling of factual findings

3950. The Chamber found Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with other Anti-Balaka groups to participate in the Bangui Attack.⁹⁵⁶⁸ In the afternoon of 4 December 2013, Mr Yekatom chose some of his elements and instructed them to move towards Bangui and the same day, the group arrived in Projet, situated near the M'Poko airport in Bangui.⁹⁵⁶⁹ Mr Yekatom's instructions to his elements concerning the attack on 5 December 2013 were to fight the Seleka and included targeting sectors where 'Muslims' were to be found. Mr Yekatom's instructions were understood by the elements to accept that Muslim civilians would be killed as a result of the fighting based on his elements not having been trained or instructed to apply the principle of distinction during combat and bearing strong anti-Muslim sentiment and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka.⁹⁵⁷⁰ On the night of 4 December 2013, Mr Yekatom and some of his elements visited the Boeing Market to assess its precise geographical location and conduct reconnaissance.⁹⁵⁷¹ Mr Yekatom instructed his elements to target Seleka positions along the Boeing-Cattin-PK5 direction and these instructions encompassed attacking the Muslims traders at the Boeing Market before moving along the route to PK5.⁹⁵⁷²

3951. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's group attacked the Boeing Market during their advance towards PK5 following Mr Yekatom's orders.⁹⁵⁷³ In the early morning of 5 December 2013, Mr Yekatom launched the attack on Boeing by firing an automatic pistol in the air when his group reached the market in Boeing.⁹⁵⁷⁴ The armed elements in front continued and advanced together and fired at the Muslim traders who were present there.⁹⁵⁷⁵ During this time, Mr Yekatom's elements shot in all directions. Those that were inside the shops fled.⁹⁵⁷⁶ Following Mr Yekatom's instructions, Mr Yekatom's elements attacked the mosque in Boeing, which was the main mosque serving the communities of both Boeing and Cattin, by firing a ‘rocket’ at it. Mr Yekatom’s elements also torched the mosque in Boeing with gasoline.⁹⁵⁷⁷ Following the attack on the market and the mosque in Boeing, elements of Mr Yekatom’s group moved on to attack Cattin, where they clashed with the Seleka.⁹⁵⁷⁸

‘Directing an attack’

3952. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence’s arguments that the second element of this crime is not met given that the attack by Mr Yekatom’s group on Boeing and Cattin concerned a military objective.

3953. On the facts, the Yekatom Defence argues that Mr Yekatom’s group’s attack had a military objective and, in support, makes submissions on the target of the attack, the status of the victims, and the nature of the attack.⁹⁵⁷⁹ The Yekatom Defence argues that the Prosecution did not establish that the ‘primary object’ of the alleged attack on Boeing and Cattin was the civilian population as a whole or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities.⁹⁵⁸⁰ It argues that Mr Yekatom’s group targeted ‘bases of notorious Seleka Chiefs based in, and along the road to Cattin, and that counter-attacks were launched by the Seleka in the same vicinity’.⁹⁵⁸¹ As regards the status of the victims, the Yekatom Defence argues that the evidence raises reasonable doubt that the alleged victims were armed Seleka combatants and/or civilians actively participating in the hostilities.⁹⁵⁸² The Yekatom Defence argues that the alleged victims did not benefit from the protection under Article 8(2)(e)(i) and were legitimate military targets.⁹⁵⁸³ The Yekatom Defence submits that the traders at the Boeing Market were armed and actively participating in hostilities and had joined the Seleka in March 2013, instead of being merely civilians who had picked up arms in self-defence, and that they were ‘fully embedded within the enemy force’ by December 2013.⁹⁵⁸⁴

3954. On the law, the Yekatom Defence's argues that the second element of this war crime is not met where the attack is 'directed against a military objective and civilians are incidentally affected'.⁹⁵⁸⁵ It further argues, in the abstract that, even an indiscriminate attack with a military objective, in violation of the principle of proportionality, does not constitute an attack against the civilian population.⁹⁵⁸⁶ As regards the nature of the attack, the Yekatom Defence argues that Mr Yekatom's attack was not 'so indiscriminate so as to establish or allow for the inference that the actual object of the attack was the civilian population and not a military objective'.⁹⁵⁸⁷ In support of this, it argues that it was a 'limited military attack', specifically that it was limited in means, methods, geographical scope, number of elements involved, ammunition and weapons.⁹⁵⁸⁸

3955. The Chamber recalls, at the outset, that a civilian population need not be the sole and exclusive target of an attack.⁹⁵⁸⁹ Within the meaning of this crime, members of armed forces and any other legitimate combatant may be present in a civilian population. The presence within the civilian population of individuals who do not fit within the definition of civilians does not deprive the entire population of its civilian character.⁹⁵⁹⁰ For this reason, even if the Yekatom Defence's arguments are to be believed on the fact that there were Seleka bases 'in, and along the road to Cattin' or that the alleged victims were armed Seleka combatants, this did not deprive the civilian population of Boeing and Cattin of its civilian character as such.

3956. Furthermore, this crime may be established even if an operation targeted a legitimate military objective, when it can be shown that the primary object of the attack was the civilian population or individual civilians.⁹⁵⁹¹ The Chamber further recalls that military objectives are limited to those objects which by their nature, location, purpose, or use make an effective contribution to military action and whose partial or total destruction, capture, or neutralisation, in the circumstances ruling at the time, offers a definite military advantage.⁹⁵⁹²

3957. Considering the nature of the targets comprising this attack, in particular, a market, a mosque, and unarmed civilians, the Chamber finds that these were not legitimate military targets. The Chamber recalls that it has considered the Yekatom Defence's arguments concerning the links between the Muslim traders at the Boeing Market and the Seleka and could not conclude that such links meant that they were affiliated with the Seleka at the time of the Bangui Attack, let alone 'embedded' within them. There is further no indication in the facts that the Boeing Market or the Boeing Mosque otherwise served any military purpose. Therefore, the argument that these civilian deaths were, in fact, 'incidental civilian casualties' is moot.

Object of the attack

3958. The Chamber further considers that the indiscriminate nature of an attack may be one of the factors to enter a positive finding that such attack was intended to target the civilian population.⁹⁵⁹³ Even granting the Yekatom Defence's suggestion that Mr Yekatom's group conducted a 'limited military attack' on Boeing and Cattin in the morning of 5 December 2013, there is no indication, either in the evidence or in the Yekatom Defence's arguments, that Mr Yekatom and/or his elements took any measures to remove civilians, to the maximum extent feasible from the vicinity of such military objectives.

3959. In the view of the Chamber, Mr Yekatom's conduct, including his presence in the group that attacked Boeing and Cattin, together with his instructions before the attack, clearly show that his group's attack meant to target the Muslim civilian population of Boeing and Cattin. In the view of the Chamber, it was clear to his elements that the primary aim of the attack was not a military target or persons actively participating in hostilities.⁹⁵⁹⁴ Further, and in light of this, the Chamber need not engage with the abstract argument that even an indiscriminate attack, in violation of the principle of proportionality, does not constitute an attack against the civilian population.⁹⁵⁹⁵

3960. Having regard to these conclusions, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom and his elements directed an intentional attack against the civilian population, as such, in Boeing and Cattin. Mr Yekatom's participation and execution of the attack was such that, by its nature, it could only have been undertaken intentionally. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the first, second, and third element of the war crime of attacking civilians, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator directed an intentional attack against a civilian population as such or individual civilians not taking direct part in hostilities, are met.

ii. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 2 and 3)

3961. Under Counts 2 and 3, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with murder as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute, and murder as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute of five to 13 persons, including Hassan Mahamat, at the Boeing market, four Muslim persons in Cattin, and Nina Pascal at the Boeing market, in the context of the attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin, on 5 December 2013.

Recalling of factual findings

3962. The Chamber found that elements in Mr Yekatom's group killed Hassan Mahamat in the morning of 5 December 2013 during the attack on the Boeing Market. Hassan personally interacted with certain Seleka officials prior to 5 December 2013 in his role as delegate of the male Muslim traders at the Boeing Market.⁹⁵⁹⁶ Hassan had at least one weapon in his shop with which he fired in self-defence during the attack of 5 December 2013 carried out by Mr Yekatom's elements.⁹⁵⁹⁷ Further, Mr Yekatom's elements killed two unnamed Muslim traders at the Boeing Market during this attack. Boeing Market traders and the Seleka personally interacted with each other at the Boeing Market and were seen by others as associating with each other.⁹⁵⁹⁸ There is no indication that any of the two unnamed Muslim traders were armed during the attack or otherwise engaged in combat at the time of their death.⁹⁵⁹⁹ During the attack on Cattin, elements of Mr Yekatom's group killed at least one Muslim man, who was not armed, nor engaged in combat, at the time of his death. The elements targeted this Muslim man on the basis that he was an 'Arab' and the victim eventually succumbed to the injuries inflicted on him.⁹⁶⁰⁰

Killing of one or more persons

3963. In respect of the unnamed Muslim man in Cattin, the Yekatom Defence argues that the Prosecution has not established that the death of this person was the only reasonable conclusion.⁹⁶⁰¹ The Yekatom Defence doubts that this person 'actually died', given that P-1528 was unable to identify the person or describe the extent of the injuries.⁹⁶⁰² It argues that P-1528's evidence was 'entirely circumstantial and weak' and no other evidence was available to corroborate it.⁹⁶⁰³ It adds that, in this instance, the 'importance of the identity of the unnamed man' is 'elevated' by virtue of P-1528's account.⁹⁶⁰⁴ The Yekatom Defence further argues that the Prosecution has not established that this killing was a result of the acts and omissions of Mr Yekatom,⁹⁶⁰⁵ and that it should have to identify the perpetrator where it is a 'material fact'.⁹⁶⁰⁶

is that the victim died.⁹⁶⁰⁸ The Chamber recalls that the dead body of the victim need not be recovered in order to establish the fact of death.⁹⁶⁰⁹ Further, the Chamber considers that, as a matter of law, it was not necessary to identify the specific perpetrator(s) within Mr Yekatom's group, who were responsible for this killing,⁹⁶¹⁰ as long as it was otherwise satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that it was Mr Yekatom's elements who killed this unnamed Muslim man in Cattin. Mr Yekatom's specific conduct in relation to this killing is discussed further below. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference in the circumstances discussed above is that Mr Yekatom's elements participating in the Bangui Attack killed this Muslim man in Cattin.

3965. On this basis, in respect of the first element of murder as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute, and of murder as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator killed one or more persons, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met in respect of Mr Yekatom's elements, who were participating in the Bangui Attack, killing Hassan Mahamat, two unnamed Muslim traders at the Boeing Market, and one unnamed Muslim man in Cattin on 5 December 2013.

Status of the persons killed

3966. The Chamber now turns to the status of the victims at the relevant time.

3967. The Chamber recalls the Yekatom Defence's arguments concerning the status of the victims at the Boeing Market. The Yekatom Defence argues that the evidence raises reasonable doubt that the alleged victims were armed Seleka combatants and/or civilians actively participating in the hostilities.⁹⁶¹¹ The Yekatom Defence argues that the alleged victims did not benefit from the protection under Article 8(2)(e)(i) and were legitimate military targets.⁹⁶¹² The Yekatom Defence submits that the traders at the Boeing Market were armed and actively participating in hostilities and had joined the Seleka in March 2013, instead of being merely civilians who had picked up arms in self-defence, and that they were ‘fully embedded within the enemy force’ by December 2013.⁹⁶¹³ As regards the unnamed Muslim man in Cattin, the Yekatom Defence argues that his civilian status cannot be presumed given the context in which the alleged killings took place, and it must be established that the victim was a civilian taking no active part in the hostilities.⁹⁶¹⁴

3968. In determining whether these victims were taking an active part in hostilities before their death, the Chamber must have regard to the relevant facts and specific situation of the victims at the relevant time, including the location of the killings, whether the victims were carrying weapons, and the clothing, age and gender.⁹⁶¹⁵

3969. As regards Hassan, one of the named Muslim traders at the Boeing Market, the Chamber finds that he was a civilian at the time of his death and therefore had a protected status under international humanitarian law, which he did not lose during the attack on the Boeing Market. The Chamber recalls that in order for a civilian to lose such protection, it is required that their acts have a belligerent nexus, meaning they were specifically designed to directly cause the required threshold of harm in support of a party to an armed conflict and to the detriment of another.⁹⁶¹⁶

defence, the Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom launched the attack on Boeing by firing an automatic pistol in the air when his group reached the Boeing Market, following which the armed elements continued and advanced.⁹⁶¹⁸ No matter how many elements Mr Yekatom's group was composed of at the time,⁹⁶¹⁹ the Chamber considers that Hassan's firing, faced with a sizeable group of attackers, was well within the parameters of a proportionate self-defence.

3971. Accordingly, in respect of the distinct elements of murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, that the person be either hors de combat, or a civilian, medical personnel, or religious personnel taking no active part in the hostilities, and that perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established this status, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met in respect of each victim.

iii. Forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity and displacement as a war crime (Counts 4 and 5)

3972. Under Counts 4 and 5, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, and displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, for the dislocation of nearly all Muslim persons residing in Boeing and Cattin to PK5, a predominantly Muslim neighbourhood in Bangui, other parts of the CAR or neighbouring countries, starting from 5 December 2013 in the context of the attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin, on 5 December 2013.

Recalling of factual findings

Seleka.⁹⁶²¹ From 5 December 2013 onwards, Muslims of Boeing and Cattin, including Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, fled to PK5 in Bangui, while some others fled to other parts of the CAR, in the context of the attack by Mr Yekatom's group on Boeing and Cattin.⁹⁶²² With the influx of Muslims fleeing the Bangui Attack, PK5 became overcrowded, practically uninhabitable, and unsafe. As a result, some Muslims, including Salehou Ndiaye and P-2682, then fled to neighbouring countries fearing for their safety.⁹⁶²³

Perpetrator deported or forcibly transferred one or more persons to another State or location, by expulsion or other coercive acts

3974. The Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence raises arguments challenging the causality of the events and whether they can be attributed to Mr Yekatom's acts. The Yekatom Defence argues that the alleged displacement of Muslim persons from Boeing and Cattin is not attributable to Mr Yekatom as there is no link between his conduct and the resulting effect of forcing the victims to leave, and submits that the evidence establishes that the Muslim population 'would have dislocated' for 'several reasons' unrelated to Mr Yekatom.⁹⁶²⁴ The Chamber additionally notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that the local civilian population created self-defence groups committing violence against the Muslim population in retaliation and the false rumours of imminent attacks that 'intensif[ied] a climate of fear and paranoia among the Muslim population'.⁹⁶²⁵

3975. The Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom's launching of the attack on Boeing and Cattin and how his elements carried out the attack, leading to the attack on the Boeing Mosque and the killing of Muslim civilians in Boeing and Cattin, created an environment where it was physically, materially, and psychologically unsafe for Muslim persons there, forcing them to leave and flee Boeing and Cattin. The Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom's launching of the attack on Boeing and Cattin, the establishment of his base in Yamwara, and the continued presence of the Anti-Balaka in Bangui meant that these Muslims from Boeing and Cattin, who were in PK5 at the time, could not return to their homes.

3976. As regards the requirement that the crime must take place ‘by expulsion or other coercive acts’, the Chamber recalls that forcible transfer and deportation are ‘open-conduct’ crimes in that the perpetrator may commit several different acts that may qualify.⁹⁶²⁶ In assessing this element in respect of both forcible transfer and deportation in the present case, the Chamber recalls that the term ‘forcibly’ is not restricted to physical force, but may include inter alia threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence.⁹⁶²⁷ The Chamber finds that both forcible transfer and deportation, as noted above, took place as a result of the fear of violence that was set in motion by Mr Yekatom’s launching of an attack on Boeing and Cattin and the crimes committed there by his elements. In the view of the Chamber, the Muslim persons fleeing Boeing and Cattin had no genuine choice in leaving to PK5, other parts of the CAR, or to the neighbouring countries. The Chamber recalls in this regard that there must be a genuine lack of choice on the part of the person or persons forcibly transferred, and that the prevailing situation and atmosphere, and other relevant circumstances, including in particular the victims’ vulnerability, has to be taken into account when assessing whether the individuals transferred indeed had a genuine choice.⁹⁶²⁸ In the view of the Chamber, Muslim persons in Boeing and Cattin would not have wished to flee, absent the attack by Mr Yekatom’s group and their presence there, as part of the larger Bangui Attack.⁹⁶²⁹ The Chamber considers that even if other factors contributed to the fear of violence, the existence of such factors added to the context, but are inapt by and of themselves to impact the Chamber’s conclusion that Muslim persons in Boeing and Cattin would not have fled absent the attack by Mr Yekatom’s group and their presence.

3977. The Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom’s acts amounted to ‘coercive acts’ pursuant to the first element of deportation or forcible transfer as a crime against humanity. The Chamber has considered not necessary to engage with the Yekatom Defence's argument that the Prosecution did not establish that Mr Yekatom took advantage of a coercive environment.⁹⁶³⁰

3978. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the requirement of forcible transfer is met in respect of the movement of a majority of Muslim persons fleeing Boeing and Cattin from 5 December 2013 onwards to PK5 and other parts of the CAR, in the context of the attack by Mr Yekatom's elements on 5 December 2013 on Boeing and Cattin. The Chamber finds that the requirement of deportation is met in respect of the movement of these Muslim persons, who further fled from PK5 to neighbouring countries. Thus, the Chamber finds that the first requirement of forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator forcibly transferred or deported, without grounds permitted under international law, one or more persons to another State or location, by expulsion or other coercive acts, is met.

Lawful presence

3979. The Chamber has further considered that there is no evidence on the record, nor any arguments advanced by the parties, indicating that the Muslims living in Boeing and Cattin at the time were not lawfully present there. Accordingly, and recalling that Muslim persons were present and living in Boeing and Cattin at the time of the Bangui Attack, the Chamber finds that the second requirement of element of forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, namely that such person or persons were lawfully present in the area from which they were so deported or transferred, is met.

'Without grounds' and 'not justified'

3980. Specifically as regards the requirement, under Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, that the transfer or deportation took place 'without grounds permitted under international law', and the requirement under Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute that the displacement was 'not justified by the security of the civilians involved or by military necessity'. In addition to the factual findings above, the Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom's group attacked Boeing and Cattin

with the express instructions to target sectors where ‘Muslims’ were to be found.⁹⁶³¹ Mr Yekatom’s instructions were understood by the elements to accept that Muslim civilians would be killed as a result of the fighting based on his elements not having been trained or instructed to apply the principle of distinction during combat and bearing strong anti-Muslim sentiment and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka.⁹⁶³²

3981. The Chamber has further considered that there is no indication in the evidence on the record that the displacement of the Muslim civilian population from Boeing and Cattin was justified by their security or military necessity.

3982. In light of the above, and absent any contrary indication on the facts, the Chamber does not consider that the transfer and displacement of Muslim civilians from Boeing and Cattin to PK5, and to Chad thereafter, had grounds permitted under international law, or otherwise was justified by the security of these civilians or military necessity. The Chamber thus finds that these requirements for forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, as well as for displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, are also met.

Order to displace

3983. The Chamber now turns to the distinct requirements of displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator ordered a displacement of a civilian population.

3984. The Yekatom Defence refers to the Ntaganda jurisprudence and argues that the military operations undertaken on 5 December 2013 were ‘legitimate in that they were directed against military targets and complied with the principles of distinction and proportionality’ and that its objective ‘also served to protect the civilian population from the continued atrocities committed by the Seleka forces’.⁹⁶³³ The Yekatom Defence argues that neither aspect of the Ntaganda jurisprudence is fulfilled in the present case. As regards the first aspect requiring an express order, the Yekatom Defence argues that Mr Yekatom did not

issue any orders to displace the civilian population in relation to the attack on 5 December 2013.⁹⁶³⁴ It further argues that the use of the term ‘ordered’ in the first element of displacement as a war crime was deliberate and its objective was to implicate the individual giving the order of displacement and not someone who simply carries out the displacement.⁹⁶³⁵ It submits that the Ntaganda jurisprudence should be read keeping in mind the charges in the present case as framed against Mr Yekatom, which include ordering as a mode of liability pursuant to Article 25(3)(b) of the Statute.⁹⁶³⁶ Reading the charges in the present case together with the Ntaganda jurisprudence, it argues that an order based on an act or omission as a result of which displacement would occur would be ‘rendered meaningless’ as it ‘effectively creates a Russian doll effect’.⁹⁶³⁷ It asserts that ‘only [...] orders to displace a civilian population’ are ‘the correct application’ of this element of the crime.⁹⁶³⁸ As regards the second aspect concerning ‘an act or omission as a result of which such displacement would occur’, the Yekatom Defence argues that it must still be established that the order had a direct effect on the commission of the crime and that Mr Yekatom was aware of this ‘i.e. the occurrence would be virtually certain’.⁹⁶³⁹

3985. As regards the requirement of an ‘order’, the Chamber considers that conduct alone can constitute an order.⁹⁶⁴⁰ This is consistent with the Ntaganda jurisprudence that states that an order within the meaning of this crime itself needs only to instruct another person in any form to (i) displace a civilian population; or (ii) perform an act or omission as a result of which such displacement would occur.⁹⁶⁴¹

The Chamber considers that these provisions must be read as a prohibition of displacing the civilian population in non-international armed conflicts.

3987. The Chamber also considers that while modes of liability are a lens through which to assess the conduct of an accused, they offer limited support on what meaning to give to the elements of a crime. In any event, the requirements of an 'order' both as an element of this war crime and as a mode of liability can be fulfilled by conduct not including an express order, as such. The Chamber recalls that, in the present case, the charges against Mr Yekatom include liability for commission under Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute or, in the alternative, by ordering the commission under Article 25(3)(b) of the Statute. In the view of the Chamber, the charges in the present case, as framed, provide no normative guidance on how the material elements of the war crime of displacement must be interpreted. In this respect, the Chamber is not assisted by the Yekatom Defence's arguments and cannot determine the theoretical implications of a 'Russian doll effect' in the abstract.

3988. Further, the Chamber is satisfied that there is a direct link between Mr Yekatom's act of launching an attack on Boeing in the context of the present case and the displacement of the Muslim civilian population from Boeing and Cattin. The Chamber further considers that, in the present case, Mr Yekatom's conduct need not have been the sole reason why the Muslim civilian population fled. This is because the Chamber is otherwise satisfied that had it not been for the attack launched by Mr Yekatom and his group at Boeing and Cattin, the concerned Muslim civilian population would not have displaced. As noted in its evidentiary analysis as well as in its conclusions on Count 4,⁹⁶⁴² while there may have been other factors that compounded or added to the reasons for displacement, they did not sever the link between Mr Yekatom's acts and the displacement.

3989. The Chamber is of the view that Mr Yekatom's specific and express instructions before the Bangui Attack of targeting sectors where 'Muslims' were to be found, seen together with the Chamber's findings on the attack on Boeing and Cattin, during which Mr Yekatom's elements targeted Muslim civilians drawing no distinction between them and the Seleka, establish conclusively the existence of an 'order' within the meaning of this crime. The Chamber considers that by attacking Boeing and Cattin under these premises, Mr Yekatom's elements were ordered to perform an act as a result of which the displacement of the Muslim civilian population from these locations would necessarily occur.

Position to effect such displacement by giving such order

3990. In respect of the third element of displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator was in a position to effect such displacement by giving such order, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met by virtue of Mr Yekatom's position as the chief of the group that carried out the attack on Boeing and Cattin as well as the one providing the instructions on what to target during this attack. The Chamber considers that attacking areas while armed, Mr Yekatom's group was in a position to cause the dislocation of Muslim civilians from their homes. Further, and while noting that the war crime of displacement does not require for displacement as such to actually occur,⁹⁶⁴³ the Chamber considers that it was Mr Yekatom's group's actions when attacking Boeing and Cattin, specifically Muslim civilians, that led to the displacement of the Muslim civilian population from those areas to PK5 and later to neighbouring countries.

iv. Directing an attack against a building dedicated to religion as a war crime (Count 6)

3991. Under Count 6, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with the war crime of an attack against a building dedicated to religion, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute, for the destruction of the Boeing Mosque by 20 December 2013 at the latest.

Recalling of factual findings

3992. On 5 December 2013, and following Mr Yekatom's instructions, Mr Yekatom's elements attacked the Boeing Mosque by firing a rocket at it. Mr Yekatom's elements also torched the Boeing Mosque with gasoline. On the same day and in the days that followed, the local population took it apart.⁹⁶⁴⁴

'Directing an attack'

3993. The Yekatom Defence argues that the Prosecution has not established that there was an attack for the purpose of the first element of this war crime.⁹⁶⁴⁵ The Yekatom Defence submits that its position is 'focused on the fact that the destruction of the mosque is not attributable to Mr Yekatom', noting that the 'several direct eyewitness accounts' have pointed out that the mosque was dismantled by the civilian population.⁹⁶⁴⁶ The Yekatom Defence argues that by failing to demonstrate that Mr Yekatom's group was involved in the destruction of the Boeing Mosque, the Prosecution has failed to prove beyond reasonable doubt that Mr Yekatom directed an attack targeting it.⁹⁶⁴⁷ In support, the Yekatom Defence draws attention to the definition of the term 'attack', which, it argues, means 'acts of violence against the adversary, whether in offence or in defence' and refers to 'the use of armed force to carry out a military operation during the course of an armed conflict'.⁹⁶⁴⁸

⁹⁶⁴⁴ See paragraph 78 above.

3994. The Chamber recalls that, as a matter of law, the elements of the war crime of an attack against a building dedicated to religion do not require any damage or destruction to the object in question, meaning there is no outcome requirement. For the purpose of this war crime, it was sufficient that Mr Yekatom's elements 'directed an attack'. Subsequent taking apart or otherwise 'dismant[ling]' of the Boeing Mosque, as argued by the Yekatom Defence, is immaterial to the Chamber's legal conclusions on the charged crime. This is also supported by the Ntaganda Trial Judgment which noted that the elements of this war crime only require the perpetrator to have 'launched an attack against a protected object and it need not be established that the attack caused any damage or destruction to the object in question'.⁹⁶⁴⁹

3995. Accordingly, the Chamber considers that firing a rocket at the mosque during the conduct of hostilities is sufficient to constitute 'directing an attack' at the protected object.

3996. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the first element of the war crime of attacking protected objects, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator directed an attack, is met.

Protected object

3997. Further, at the time of the events, Boeing Mosque was serving the Muslim communities of Boeing and Cattin and served no military objective at the time of the attack. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the second element of the war crime of attacking protected objects, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute, namely that the object of the attack was one or more buildings dedicated to religion, which were not military objectives, is met.

See also Al Mahdi Trial Judgment, ICC-01/12-01/15-171, para. 16 noting that the jurisprudence of the ICTY in this regard was of 'limited guidance given that, in contrast to the Statute, its applicable law does not govern "attacks" against cultural objects but rather punishes their "destruction or wilful damage"' and referring to ICTY, Trial Chamber II, Prosecutor v. Pavle Strugar, Judgment, 31 January 2005, IT-01-42-T, para. 308 (interpreting the ICTY Statute as requiring actual damage or destruction to the cultural property in relation to Article 3(d) of the ICTY Statute, criminalising 'seizure of, destruction or wilful damage done to institutions dedicated to religion, charity and education, the arts and sciences, historic monuments and works of art and science').

v. Persecution as a crime against humanity (Count 8)

3998. Under Count 8, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with the crime of persecution as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, for the severe deprivation of the fundamental rights of persons in Bangui, including Cattin and Boeing, by targeting them on the basis of political, ethnic, and/or religious grounds by virtue of the conduct pertaining to Counts 1 to 6.

Recalling of factual findings

3999. In addition to the findings recalled by the Chamber in respect of Counts 1 to 7, the Chamber further recalls that it found that Mr Yekatom knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁶⁵⁰

Perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law, one or more persons of fundamental rights

4000. As regards the crime forming part of the Bangui Attack, the Yekatom Defence reiterates that this attack concerned ‘a military operation targeting armed combatants and legitimate military targets’.⁹⁶⁵¹ It adds that Counts 6, 26, and 27 would be ‘exception if proven’ and would constitute two discrete incidents and would not establish ‘any alleged pattern of crimes which targeted the Muslim population’.⁹⁶⁵²

4001. In respect of these arguments, the Chamber recalls its findings concerning the Yekatom Defence’s arguments that this attack concerned a legitimate military operation.⁹⁶⁵³ The Chamber also recalls its findings that Mr Yekatom’s group participated in the Bangui Attack pursuant to the Anti-Balaka policy to target the Muslim civilian population.⁹⁶⁵⁴ In light of this, the Chamber considers that there is no additional requirement in law that incidents underlying persecution otherwise fulfil any distinct pattern of crimes to fall within the definition of this crime.

4002. In respect of the first element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law, one or more persons of fundamental rights, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met. Specifically, the Chamber considers that Hassan Mahamat, two unnamed Muslim traders at the Boeing Market, and one unnamed Muslim man in Cattin were deprived of their right to life.⁹⁶⁵⁵ Further, Muslim persons in Boeing and Cattin had to flee following the attack by Mr Yekatom's elements and were deprived of their right to liberty and security of person, right to liberty of movement, right against arbitrary or unlawful interference with their family, and home, right to property.⁹⁶⁵⁶ In respect of the attack on the Boeing Mosque, Muslim civilians were deprived of the right to freedom of religion and the right not to be denied the right to practice their own religion in community with other members of their group.⁹⁶⁵⁷

Targeted by reason of identity of a group or collectivity, or group or collectivity targeted as such

4003. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's arguments concerning persecution that the Prosecution has failed to establish that the crimes discriminatorily targeted the Muslim population.⁹⁶⁵⁸

4004. The Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom's elements targeted Muslim persons by reason of their perceived religious commonalities with the Seleka, and therefore on religious grounds. In particular, Mr Yekatom's instructed his elements to target Seleka positions along the Boeing-Cattin-PK5 direction and these instructions encompassed attacking the Muslim traders at the Boeing Market.⁹⁶⁵⁹ Mr Yekatom's elements attacked the Boeing Mosque that served the Muslim communities of Boeing and Cattin.⁹⁶⁶⁰ Mr Yekatom's elements further targeted the Muslim man in Cattin on the basis that he was an 'Arab'.⁹⁶⁶¹

4005. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the requirements are met in respect of the second and third element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator targeted such person or persons by reason of the identity of a group or collectivity or targeted the group or collectivity as such and such targeting was based on political, racial, national, ethnic, cultural, religious, gender as defined in article 7, paragraph 3, of the Statute, or other grounds that are universally recognised as impermissible under international law.

Committed in connection with any act referred to in Article 7(1) of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court

4006. In respect of the fourth element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the conduct was committed in connection with any act referred to in Article 7, paragraph 1, of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met by virtue of the conduct of Mr Yekatom's elements satisfying the requirements of the crimes against humanity of murder, forcible transfer, and deportation, and war crimes of attack against civilian population as such, directing an attack against protected objects, and displacement, as found above.

b. Individual criminal responsibility

i. Mr Yekatom

4007. The Chamber now turns to Mr Yekatom's responsibility under Counts 1 to 6 and 8. Mr Yekatom is alleged to have committed the aforementioned crimes 'jointly with' or 'through' others under Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute.

⁹⁶⁶⁰ See paragraph 78 above.

Control over the crimes or control of person(s) who execute the material elements of the crime

4008. The Chamber recalls that the crimes charged under Counts 1 to 6 and 8 were committed by Mr Yekatom and his elements during their attack on Boeing and Cattin, as part of a coordinated attack on Bangui on 5 December 2013.

4009. The Chamber recalls that, in 2013, Mr Yekatom formed a group, including Cœur de Lion and Habib Beina, over which he assumed control with a view to planning a response to the Seleka violence and removing Djotodia and the Seleka from power.⁹⁶⁶²

4010. On 5 December 2013, Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with other Anti-Balaka groups to participate in the Bangui Attack.⁹⁶⁶³ The movement of Mr Yekatom's group in the bush, when superimposed onto those from other groups who proceeded towards Bangui along the same time frame, shows that this coordination had begun well before November 2013.⁹⁶⁶⁴ In the months leading up to this attack, Mr Yekatom and his group armed and trained in the bush.⁹⁶⁶⁵ In the afternoon of 4 December 2013, Mr Yekatom chose some of his elements and instructed them to move towards Bangui.⁹⁶⁶⁶ Mr Yekatom's instructions to his elements concerning the attack on 5 December 2013 were to fight the Seleka and included targeting sectors where Muslims are to be found.⁹⁶⁶⁷ Mr Yekatom's instructions were understood by the elements to accept that Muslim civilians would be killed as a result of the fighting based on his elements not having been trained or instructed to apply the principle of distinction during combat and bearing strong anti-Muslim sentiment and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka.⁹⁶⁶⁸ On the night of 4 December 2013, Mr Yekatom and some of his elements conducted reconnaissance and visited the Boeing Market to assess its precise geographical location and conduct reconnaissance.⁹⁶⁶⁹ The same night, Mr Yekatom instructed his elements to target Seleka positions along the Boeing-Cattin-PK5 direction and this included attacking the Muslims traders at the Boeing Market before moving along the route to PK5.⁹⁶⁷⁰ On 5 December 2013, Mr Yekatom was himself present in the group that arrived at the Boeing Market and launched the attack on Boeing by firing his automatic pistol in the air.⁹⁶⁷¹ It was on his instructions that his elements carried out the attack on the Boeing Market and the Boeing Mosque during their advance towards PK5.⁹⁶⁷²

4011. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's group was seen as and understood to be part of the Anti-Balaka.⁹⁶⁷³ Accordingly, the Chamber considers that the Anti-Balaka could rely on him to execute the Anti-Balaka policy to target Muslim civilians.

4013. In relation to Counts 1, 4, 5 and 8, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's responsibility underlying these counts is best captured as a direct perpetrator for having founded his group and himself launching and carrying out the attack, as a chief of his group and an armed participant in it. In arriving at this conclusion, the Chamber has considered that parts of the attack launched by Mr Yekatom were not committed directly by him but indirectly through other elements in his group. This included Alkanto who shot the 'rocket' at the Boeing Mosque and Cœur de Lion and Habib Beina, who shot at the Muslim traders at the Boeing Market, and unnamed elements who killed the Muslim man in Cattin. However, in the view of the Chamber, the mode of responsibility of indirectly committing through others does not fully or meaningfully capture the entirety of Mr Yekatom's conduct underlying these counts. Particularly, in respect of Counts 4 and 5, the Chamber considers that it was the entirety of

⁹⁶⁷³ See paragraph 63 above.

Mr Yekatom's conduct, as discussed above, that created the conditions, including an environment of fear of violence, as a result of which the Muslims in Boeing and Cattin fled.

Mental elements

4014. As regards Mr Yekatom's mens rea, the Chamber first recalls its factual findings above.⁹⁶⁷⁴

4015. The Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom's conduct in the context of the Bangui Attack was such that it can only have been intentional. Further, and on this basis, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom (i) intended to carry out an attack against the Muslim civilian population of Boeing and Cattin;⁹⁶⁷⁵ (ii) intended his elements to murder Muslim traders at the Boeing Market, including Hassan Mahamat and two unnamed Muslim traders; (iii) knew that his elements would kill Muslim civilians in Cattin; (iv) knew that his elements would attack the Boeing Mosque; and (v) knew that the launching of his attack and the instructions to his elements would cause the Muslims from Boeing and Cattin to flee.

4016. The Chamber further considered that Mr Yekatom knew that his act of launching an attack on Boeing, his own participation in the attack, his instructions to target 'all sectors' where Muslims are to be found, and his instructions to his elements on the eve of the Bangui Attack would create the conditions forcing a majority of Muslims in Boeing and Cattin to leave. The Chamber finds no merit in the Yekatom Defence's argument that the Prosecution did not 'lead any evidence which would depict Mr Yekatom undertaking acts which threaten or intimidate the Muslim population in a manner calculated to force the population to leave Boeing or Cattin'.⁹⁶⁷⁶ Having to show that the accused's acts were 'calculated to force the population to leave' introduces an additional mental requirement that does not exist in the elements of the crime. In the view of the Chamber, it is sufficient that Mr Yekatom knew his act to cause the Muslim persons to flee.

4017. Turning to the specific knowledge requirements concerning the charged crimes, the Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom and his elements knew that Muslim traders would be present on the morning of 5 December 2013 given the reconnaissance that Mr Yekatom and his elements conducted on the night of 4 December 2013. Mr Yekatom, as a FACA member, knew that unarmed Muslim traders at the Boeing Market enjoyed civilian protection. Mr Yekatom's elements, including P-1339, knew that Hassan Mahamat, a Muslim trader bearing a weapon at the time of the attack, was firing in self-defence. Mr Yekatom and his elements must have known that Hassan was employing necessary and proportionate force in self-defence.

4018. The perpetrator need only be aware of the factual circumstances that established the victim's status. In this context, the Chamber recalls that international humanitarian law explicitly provides for situations where there is doubt as to a person's civilian status: in case of doubt whether a person is a civilian, that person shall be considered to be civilian.⁹⁶⁷⁷ Mr Yekatom and his elements must have been aware that they should operate on this basis. Even if entertaining the possibility that Mr Yekatom and his elements may have held the suspicion or an inaccurate assumption that all or some Muslim traders at the Boeing Market were Seleka, such a possibility, suspicion or assumption of the perpetrator does not change the status of the victims at the time of the attack, nor the applicable law.

4019. As regards the unnamed Muslim man in Cattin, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom and his elements must have known that Muslims were living in Cattin before and at the time of the Bangui Attack. Mr Yekatom knew that his elements would target Muslim civilians during the attack on Bangui, given his instructions to his elements prior thereto. Mr Yekatom knew that, just before attacking Cattin, his elements had targeted Muslim civilians and a building dedicated to Muslim religion.

4020. In light of the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom and his elements were aware of the factual circumstances that established the civilian status of all the four Muslim men that Mr Yekatom's elements killed. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the third element of murder as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute is met.

4021. Second, the Chambers considers that Mr Yekatom and his elements must have known that Muslims were living in Boeing and Cattin before and at the time of the Bangui Attack and when he launched the attack on 5 December 2013, and that their presence was lawful. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom and his elements were aware of the factual circumstances that established the lawfulness of the presence of Muslims in Boeing and Cattin.

4022. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the third element of deportation or forcible transfer as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, namely that perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established the lawfulness of such presence, is met.

4023. Third, the Chamber recalls Mr Yekatom's instructions concerning the attack on 5 December 2013 included targeting sectors where 'Muslims' were to be found. Mr Yekatom's elements were aware that they were attacking a religious building and that it did not serve any military objective. Taking these two facts together, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's elements intended Boeing Mosque to be the object of the attack. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the requirement is met in respect of the third element of the war crime of attacking protected objects, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator intended such building dedicated to religion to be the object of the attack.

4024. In addition to the above, the Chamber recalls its findings that Mr Yekatom knew that his elements perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁶⁷⁸ On this basis, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom meant for the Muslim civilian population in Boeing and Cattin to be severely deprived of its rights on the basis of their religious and ethnic commonalities with the Seleka. Accordingly, the specific intent requirement applicable to the crime against humanity of persecution, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, is also met.

Conclusion

4025. On the basis of the above, for Counts 1, 4, 5 and 8, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom committed jointly with others, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute: (i) an attack against the civilian population of Boeing and Cattin as such as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(i) of the Statute (Count 1); (ii) forcible transport and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, of a majority of Muslim persons in Boeing and Cattin (Count 4); (iii) displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, of the Muslim civilian population in Boeing and Cattin (Count 5); and (iv) persecution as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute (Count 8).

4026. For Counts 2 and 3, the Chamber finds that, based on the same conduct outlined above, Mr Yekatom committed through others, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute, the crimes of murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute (Count 2), and murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Count 3). As regards Count 6, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom committed through others, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute, the war crime of attacking a building dedicated to religion, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute (Count 6).

ii. Mr Ngaïssona

4027. The Chamber now turns to Mr Ngaïssona's responsibility under Counts 1 to 6 and 8. Mr Ngaïssona is alleged to have committed the aforementioned crimes by facilitating the commission of the crimes as set out in the confirmed charges by aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting in their commission under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.

Recalling of factual findings

4028. The Chamber found that, during the period that Mr Yekatom was forming his group in 2013,⁹⁶⁷⁹ Mr Ngaïssona was actively involved in planning steps to respond to the Seleka violence in the CAR and to ensure François Bozizé's return to power by meeting and liaising with François Bozizé, Bernard Mokom and others to discuss strategies and plans, reaching out to individuals within and outside of the CAR with a view to gathering support for their cause, and providing financial assistance to those willing to assist in their activities.⁹⁶⁸⁰

⁹⁶⁷⁹ See paragraph 36 above.

Mr Ngaïssona was one of the members of FROCCA, the objective of which was to advocate for the return to ‘the constitutional order’, which signified the return of François Bozizé to power.⁹⁶⁸¹

4029. Through meetings in Cameroon and communications with individuals in Zongo, in particular Maxime Mokom, Mr Ngaïssona and others planned steps to respond to the Seleka violence in the CAR as well as to ensure François Bozizé’s return to power, by all means possible, including through armed violence.⁹⁶⁸² Mr Yekatom’s group was one such group that was formed with a view to planning a response to the Seleka violence and removing Michel Djotodia and the Seleka from power.⁹⁶⁸³

4030. The Anti-Balaka groups, which had formed in the provinces and in part gathered together at Gobere, started their advance towards Bangui, with the ultimate objective to attack the capital in order to remove Michel Djotodia from power and oust the Seleka from the CAR. In this advance, various Anti-Balaka groups started engaging in attacks against the Seleka from September 2013 onwards. Such attacks were not limited to Seleka forces, but included attacking localities with Muslim civilians.⁹⁶⁸⁴

4031. During this period of at least September to December 2013 and prior to the Bangui Attack, Mr Ngaïssona provided financial contributions and engaged in activities pertaining to the organisation and coordination of groups for the purpose of facilitating the commission of criminal acts targeting the Muslim population.⁹⁶⁸⁵ This included killings and dislocating of Muslim civilians from around Bossangoa, Bouca (Ouham prefecture), in Ndjo, Bossembélé, Boali and Gaga (Ombella-M’Poko prefecture), as well as in Bouar (Nana-Mambéré prefecture), including the attack on Bossangoa in September 2013.⁹⁶⁸⁶ Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the advance of the groups towards Bangui as well as of the hostilities during this advance, including the killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians from these locations.⁹⁶⁸⁷

4032. The plan to mount an attack on Bangui existed at least as of 30 November 2013.⁹⁶⁸⁸ By the beginning of December 2013, several thousand Anti-Balaka elements had arrived at the outskirts of Bangui to participate in an attack.⁹⁶⁸⁹ This included Mr Yekatom's elements that arrived at a location situated near the Bangui airport on 4 December 2013 and carried out preparations on the eve of the Bangui Attack.⁹⁶⁹⁰ The movement of Mr Yekatom's group in the bush, when superimposed onto those from other groups who proceeded towards Bangui along the same time frame, shows that this coordination had begun well before November 2013.⁹⁶⁹¹

4033. In the early morning hours of 5 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka mounted a coordinated attack on Bangui.⁹⁶⁹² This included Mr Yekatom's group that attacked Boeing and Cattin.⁹⁶⁹³ A radio statement issued by FROCCA on 5 December 2013 in relation to the attack on Bangui referred to the attack as '[l]e rétablissement de l'ordre fonctionnel' and further stated that the Anti-Balaka 'sont des Centrafricains pour aller libérer leur pays des jougs des djihadistes venus du D[arfour], du T[chad], du S[oudan]'.⁹⁶⁹⁴

Aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting

4034. In light of the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona, by funding and supporting the Anti-Balaka prior to the attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 aided, abetted, or otherwise assisted in the commission of the aforementioned crimes during the Bangui Attack by Mr Yekatom and his elements.

Mental elements

4035. As regards Mr Ngaïssona's mens rea, the Chamber recalls its finding that Mr Ngaïssona knew that an attack would take place on Bangui.⁹⁶⁹⁵ Mr Ngaïssona provided funds to Anti-Balaka elements that participated in the Bangui Attack.⁹⁶⁹⁶ Mr Ngaïssona made his contributions prior to the Bangui Attack, in which Mr Yekatom's elements participated,⁹⁶⁹⁷ fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim civilian population in the west of the CAR, committing the widespread attack that ultimately took place from September 2013 through February 2014, including the seminal coordinated Anti-Balaka attacks of Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.⁹⁶⁹⁸ Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the advance of the groups towards Bangui as well as of the hostilities during this advance, including the killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians from these locations.⁹⁶⁹⁹ Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁷⁰⁰ Further, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona must have known that Muslim civilians lived in Bangui, particularly, in Boeing and Cattin.

4036. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona (i) intended for Muslim civilians to be attacked during the attack on Boeing and Cattin; (ii) intended for Muslim civilians to be killed; and (iii) intended for Muslim civilians to be dislocated.

4037. Turning to the special intent requirement that Mr Ngaïssona's assistance was made with the aim of facilitating the commission of the charged crimes, the Chamber considers that it is not required for the Chamber to assess, as a matter of law, whether Mr Ngaïssona's actions had any effect on such crimes, contrary to what is argued by the Ngaïssona Defence.⁹⁷⁰¹ Nonetheless, the Chamber has indeed considered Mr Ngaïssona's financial aid and

⁹⁶⁹⁷ See paragraphs 69, 73-79 above.

psychological support, in the very least, to have had a positive effect on the commission of the crimes during the Bangui Attack. The Chamber further considered that Mr Ngaïssona provided this financial aid, organisational assistance, and psychological support to the Anti-Balaka in the context of anti-foreign sentiments and inflammatory rhetoric openly expressed by François Bozizé and others, which incited vigilance against those perceived to support the Seleka, in particular Muslim civilians.⁹⁷⁰²

4038. Consistent with the jurisprudence of the court, and contrary to the Ngaïssona Defence arguments,⁹⁷⁰³ the Chamber need not require a causal link between Mr Ngaïssona's aid and assistance to the Anti-Balaka and the crimes committed by them. Similarly, the Chamber recalls that no minimum threshold of such assistance was necessary, as a matter of law, and therefore, the Chamber considers the Ngaïssona Defence's arguments concerning the limited nature of his support⁹⁷⁰⁴ immaterial to its determination. It was further not required, as argued,⁹⁷⁰⁵ that Mr Ngaïssona's assistance must have been made to specific persons or a specific group. In this regard, financial or psychological assistance generally to the Anti-Balaka, without identifying any specific element or group, was sufficient. Mr Ngaïssona need not have been personally in contact with Mr Yekatom or his group, or indeed with any of the Anti-Balaka elements on the ground, to have assisted the commission of the crimes by them. Further, Mr Ngaïssona need not have known all the details of the crimes, simply that the Anti-Balaka will commit the crimes in the ordinary course of events. In this respect, the Chamber is satisfied when looking at such crimes on a macro-level and not the specific details of these crimes, of which Mr Ngaïssona would have had knowledge of.

4039. The Chamber further notes the Ngaïssona Defence's arguments on the facts that Mr Ngaïssona was concerned about the scale of the criminality to which the civilian population was subjected to under the Seleka regime and that it was in this context that he tried to mobilise parts of the population in Bangui or attend meetings in Paris as part of the FROCCA group.⁹⁷⁰⁶ The Ngaïssona Defence also argues that '[e]ven taken at its highest, the flimsy and inconsistent hearsay evidence supporting Mr N[gaïssona's] nominal financial assistance aligns more with humanitarian assistance than with the financing of an armed struggle'.⁹⁷⁰⁷ It submits that upon his return to Bangui, Mr Ngaïssona gave money for transportation, accommodation and food, and that his financial contributions were humanitarian in nature and therefore had no bearing on the occurrence of any crimes and/or manner of their commission.⁹⁷⁰⁸

4040. The Chamber considers that also financial assistance provided for purposes other than purchase of weapons or ammunition, or other matters not directly linked to specific hostile acts, can amount to a form of assistance through which liability under the Statute can be incurred, as long as the required elements under the Statute are fulfilled. Indeed, the Chamber considers that also financial contributions which aim at sustaining an armed group, such as to provide for its food or other sustenance, can amount to such assistance. This is because, in the view of the Chamber, such financial assistance contributes to maintaining such armed group in existence and operation.

4041. In the view of the Chamber, regardless of what Mr Ngaïssona's concerns and motives may have been at the time, it is clear, on the facts, that Mr Ngaïssona provided financial, organisational and psychological support to the Anti-Balaka with the knowledge of the crimes that the Anti-Balaka were committing during their advance towards Bangui. Overall, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona's assistance was such that it could only have been provided intentionally with the aim of facilitating the concerned crimes.

with each other.⁹⁷¹⁰ The Chamber infers that Mr Ngaïssona would have known that, during the ordinary course of these attacks, the Anti-Balaka would also attack buildings dedicated to the Muslim religion. Despite this, Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide funds to Anti-Balaka that participated in the Bangui Attack.⁹⁷¹¹ Mr Ngaïssona's financial support made it possible for at least some of the elements to participate in the attacks during the advance and during the seminal attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa.

4045. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the following specific knowledge requirements are met: (i) that the perpetrator was aware of the victims being either hors de combat, or civilians, medical personnel or religious personnel taking no active part in hostilities, applicable to murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute; and (ii) that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances establishing the lawfulness of presence in the area, applicable to forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute.

4046. Turning to the specific intent requirements concerning a number of charged crimes, the Chamber recalls the same findings as above, as well as its finding that Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁷¹⁵

4047. On this basis, the Chamber concludes that Mr Ngaïssona intended the Muslim civilian population of Boeing and Cattin to be the object of the attack, intended the Boeing Mosque to be the object of the attack, and also intended the Muslim civilian population to be discriminated against on the basis of their religious and ethnic commonalities with the Seleka. Accordingly, the specific intent requirements applicable to the war crime of directing an attack against the civilian population as such, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(i) of the Statute, the war crime of attacking protected objects, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute, and the crime against humanity of persecution, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, are also met.

Conclusion

4048. On the basis of the above, the Chamber therefore finds that, within the context of the attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin, carried out by the Anti-Balaka including Mr Yekatom's group on 5 December 2013, Mr Ngaïssona aided, abetted or otherwise assisted, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute, the commission of the following crimes: (i) attack against the civilian population as such as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(i) of the Statute (Count 1); (ii) murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute (Count 2); (iii) murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Count 3); (iv) forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute (Count 4); (v) displacement as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute (Count 5); (vi) directing an attack against a building dedicated to religion, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(iv) of the Statute (Count 6); and (vii) persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute (Count 8).

ii. Crimes committed in the context of the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 and thereafter (Counts 30 to 35, 37 to 42)

a. Crimes committed

4049. The Chamber recalls that considering the evidence before it, it was unable to conclude on the timing or perpetrators of looting in Bossangoa (Count 34),⁹⁷¹⁶ as well as on who was responsible for the destruction of the central mosque of Bossangoa (Count 35).⁹⁷¹⁷

i. Attack against the civilian population as such as a war crime (Count 30)

4050. Under Count 30, Mr Ngaïssona is charged with the war crime of directing an attack against the civilian population as such, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(i) of the Statute, in Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, on the basis of the conduct pertaining to Counts 31 to 33, 35, 37 and 39 to 42.

Recalling of factual findings

4051. The Chamber found that on 5 December 2013, in coordination with the Anti-Balaka attack on Bangui on the same day, Anti-Balaka elements, divided into two groups led by Florent Kema and Théophile Ndangba, respectively, carried out an attack on the town of Bossangoa which started at approximately 13:00 and lasted until the late afternoon or early evening.⁹⁷¹⁸ The Chamber also found that during the attack, the Anti-Balaka targeted residential areas, including the Boro neighbourhood, generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood in ⁹⁷¹⁶ See paragraph 2938 above.

⁹⁷¹⁸ See paragraph 81 above.

Bossangoa, with the intention of showing that the Anti-Balaka were attacking not only Bangui but also in the provinces, and to ‘free’ the town from Seleka and all Muslims, thereby targeting Muslim civilians and drawing no distinction between them and the Seleka.⁹⁷¹⁹ The Chamber found that during the attack, the Anti-Balaka was well armed, with some AK-47s and RPGs, as well as hunting weapons.⁹⁷²⁰ The Chamber further found that during the attack, several individuals were injured, an Anti-Balaka element forced P-2462 into sexual intercourse, and at least 18 persons were killed.⁹⁷²¹ The Chamber also found that during the attack, the Muslim civilian population of Bossangoa fled the attacked neighbourhoods to seek shelter at the École de la Liberté, where their numbers rose into several thousands.⁹⁷²² The Chamber found that the Muslim civilians that had sought refuge at the École de la Liberté remained confined to the school premises for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, staying there in cramped and generally dire conditions.⁹⁷²³

‘Directing an attack’

4052. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that the Anti-Balaka carried out the attack lawfully, with the sole aim of targeting military objectives and objects, or anyone who actively took part in the hostilities.⁹⁷²⁴ Specifically, it argues that the Anti-Balaka did not attack indiscriminately, took precautionary measures not to target civilians, and that the civilian population in Bossangoa was not the target because (i) the Anti-Balaka targeted legitimate military objectives and (ii) a large proportion of civilians actively participated in hostilities.⁹⁷²⁵ The Ngaïssona Defence also submits that the attack was proportionate.⁹⁷²⁶

4053. On the facts, the Chamber recalls its discussion in relation thereto above, in which it concluded that the great majority of Muslims in Bossangoa did not join the Seleka and were not otherwise armed at the time of the attack.⁹⁷²⁷ On the law, the Chamber recalls that a civilian population need not be the sole and exclusive target of an attack.⁹⁷²⁸ The presence within the civilian population of individuals who do not fit within the definition of civilians does not deprive the entire population of its civilian character.⁹⁷²⁹ Therefore, even if the Ngaïssona Defence's arguments are to be believed that the Anti-Balaka targeted legitimate military objectives, this did not deprive the civilian population in Bossangoa of its civilian character as such.

4054. Furthermore, this crime may be established if an operation targeted a legitimate military objective when it can be shown that the primary object of the attack was the civilian population or individual civilians.⁹⁷³⁰

Object of the attack

4055. Recalling in this regard its findings that the Anti-Balaka attacked residential areas and targeted Muslim civilians in Bossangoa, being well armed with some AK-47s, RPGs and hunting weapons while doing so, and on the basis of the above, the Chamber concludes that the Anti-Balaka directed an intentional attack against the Muslim civilian population as such in Bossangoa.

ii. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 31 and 32)

4056. Under Counts 31 and 32, Mr Ngaïssona is charged with murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute, and murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, on 5 December 2013 in Bossangoa.

Killing of one or more persons

4057. The Chamber found that in the course of the attack on Bossangoa, the Anti-Balaka killed at least 18 persons.⁹⁷³¹ Thus, the Chamber finds that the first legal element of both murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute, and murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator killed one or more persons, is met.

4058. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that the identity and mens rea of the perpetrator(s) are not established as ‘it is impossible to discount the possibility that the alleged victims might have been unfortunately killed in cross or friendly fire’.⁹⁷³²

4059. The Chamber considers that, as a matter of law, it is not necessary to identify the specific perpetrator(s) within the Anti-Balaka responsible for the killings,⁹⁷³³ as long as it is otherwise satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that it was Anti-Balaka elements who committed these killings.

4060. In this regard, the Chamber recalls its finding, on the basis of its analysis of the evidence before it, that it was indeed the Anti-Balaka who killed the individuals.

Status of the persons killed

4061. The Ngaïssona Defence further argues that the Chamber ‘cannot reasonably exclude the possibility that the alleged victims might have been actively participating in hostilities at the time of their death’.⁹⁷³⁴

4062. The Chamber recalls in this regard its finding, on the basis of its analysis of the evidence before it, that the persons found to have been killed by the Anti-Balaka were not armed or taking part in hostilities.⁹⁷³⁵ Specifically, the Chamber considered the evidence before it indicating that these individuals were not members of the Seleka, not armed at the time of their death, and not otherwise engaged in fighting against the Anti-Balaka at the time of their death on 5 December 2013. The argument of the Ngaïssona Defence that it cannot be ‘excluded’ that the victims ‘might’ have actively participated in hostilities is, without more, speculative and therefore inapt to impact the Chamber's conclusion. The Chamber finds that there are no indications in the evidence to suggest that the individuals found to have been killed by the Anti-Balaka during the attack in Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 had lost their protected status as civilians at the time of their death.

4063. On the basis of the above, the Chamber therefore finds that the second element of murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the person or persons killed were either hors de combat, or were civilians, medical personnel, or religious personnel taking no active part in the hostilities, is also met.

iii. Destruction of the adversary's property as a war crime (Count 33)

4064. Under Count 33, Mr Ngaïssona is charged with destruction of property as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(xii) of the Statute, on 5 December 2013 and in the days thereafter in Bossangoa.

Destruction of certain property

4065. The Chamber found that at some point between 5 and 8 December 2013, the Anti-Balaka burned and destroyed residential structures, lived in by Muslims at the time of the attack, in the immediate vicinity of the imam's residence.⁹⁷³⁶ Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the first element of the war crime of destruction of property, namely that the perpetrator destroyed certain property, is met.

Property of an adversary

4066. The property in question belonged to the individuals living in the residences in the immediate vicinity of the imam's property, which the Chamber found to have been Muslims. The Chamber reiterates its finding that the Anti-Balaka elements perceived Muslims as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka, and targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the ⁹⁷³⁶ See paragraph 85 above.

CAR, accordingly.⁹⁷³⁷ Accordingly, the second element of the war crime of destruction of property, that the property was property of an adversary, is also met.

Protection from destruction under international law of armed conflict

4067. Considering that the objects destroyed were residential structures, and recalling its conclusion that there were no Seleka bases in the area in question and further that no clashes between the Anti-Balaka and the Seleka took place in the area around the imam's residence,⁹⁷³⁸ the Chamber also finds that no circumstances are indicated on facts which could mean that the objects constituted military objects. The Chamber thus finds that the property destroyed was protected from that destruction under the international law of armed conflict. There is also no indication on facts that the destruction was required by military necessity. The third and fifth elements of the war crime of destruction of property, namely that, respectively, the property was protected from destruction under the international law of armed conflict and the destruction was not required by military necessity, are therefore established.

iv. Forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity and displacement as a war crime (Counts 37 and 38)

4068. Under Counts 37 and 38, Mr Ngaïssona is charged with forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute and displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, for the dislocation of Bossangoa's Muslim population to the École de la Liberté, before being evacuated to other locations, in the context of the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 and in the days following the attack.

⁹⁷³⁷ See paragraph 45 above.

Recalling of factual findings

4069. The Chamber found that during the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, the Muslim civilian population of Bossangoa fled the attacked neighbourhoods to seek shelter at the École de la Liberté, where their numbers rose into several thousands.⁹⁷³⁹ The Chamber found that Muslim civilians that had sought refuge at the École de la Liberté remained confined to the school premises for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, staying there in cramped and generally dire conditions.⁹⁷⁴⁰ The Chamber found that the Muslim civilians at the École de la Liberté were dependent on the protection of international forces for their safety and could not leave the school premises venturing into Bossangoa without risk to their person.⁹⁷⁴¹ The Chamber further found that eventually, in light of the prevailing insecurity as well as the dire and cramped living conditions at the École de la Liberté, all Muslims staying at the school were transported away from Bossangoa to Chad in two separate convoys, leaving in February and April 2014, respectively, following which Bossangoa was emptied of its Muslim population.⁹⁷⁴²

Perpetrator deported or forcibly transferred one or more persons to another State or location, by expulsion or other coercive acts

4070. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that Muslim civilians left their homes as result of a lawful attack and for their own security, and that their displacement to the École de la Liberté was ‘not only allowed under IHL, but arguably required by it’.⁹⁷⁴³

4071. The Chamber recalls, on the facts, its conclusion that the Anti-Balaka, in launching its attack on Bossangoa, specifically targeted residential areas, including the Boro neighbourhood which was generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood in Bossangoa, drawing no distinction between Seleka and Muslim civilians.⁹⁷⁴⁴ The Chamber further recalls, on the law, that the ‘forcible’ nature of a displacement need not be physical force, but may include threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence, duress, detention, psychological oppression or abuse of power, or by taking advantage of a coercive environment.

4072. The Chamber is of the view that the attack on Bossangoa in general, and the specific targeting of Muslim residential areas and the Muslim civilian population therein created conditions which made it physically, materially and psychologically unsafe for Muslim civilians there, forcing them to leave and flee to the École de la Liberté. The Chamber further considers that in light of the prevailing conditions around the École de la Liberté following the attack, these Muslims could not return to their homes. The Chamber also finds that the conditions at the École de la Liberté following the attack were such that these Muslims could not only not return to their homes, but saw themselves being forced to leave Bossangoa altogether. The Chamber considers that the fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, combined with the deplorable conditions at the École de la Liberté, amounted to ‘coercive acts’.

4073. In this context, the Chamber also notes the Ngaïssona Defence’s argument that the departure of Muslim civilians for Chad was ‘entirely voluntary’ and not attributable to the Anti-Balaka.⁹⁷⁴⁵ The Chamber recalls in this regard that there must be a genuine lack of choice on the part of the person or persons forcibly transferred, and that the prevailing situation and atmosphere, and other relevant circumstances, including in particular the victims’ vulnerability, has to be taken into account when assessing whether the individuals transferred indeed had a genuine choice.

4074. The Chamber recalls that the Muslim civilians of Bossangoa fled to the École de la Liberté due to the Anti-Balaka attack on the town on 5 December, and that they remained confined at the school for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, staying in cramped and generally dire conditions, with these conditions as well as the prevailing insecurity leading to the transfer of all Muslim staying at the school to Chad. In the Chamber’s view, the circumstances under which the Muslim civilians reached the École de la Liberté, combined with those under which these Muslim civilians remained at the École de la Liberté, make clear that these individuals had no genuine choice but to flee their homes for the school, as well as agreeing to be transported away from the school thereafter. Any ‘reconciliation efforts’, as mentioned by the Ngaïssona Defence,⁹⁷⁴⁶ did not lead to the creation of conditions which would have allowed Muslims confined to the École de la Liberté to return to their homes as they remained dependent on the protection of international forces for their safety and could not leave the school without risk to their person.⁹⁷⁴⁷ The Chamber considers that an agreement, or even a wish expressed, to be transported, does not mean that such transfer was ‘entirely voluntary’, as argued by the Ngaïssona Defence. On the contrary, the Chamber considers that it is clear on the facts that the conditions leading to their fleeing to the École de la Liberté and circumstances thereat were such that the Muslim civilians that fled to and stayed at the École de la Liberté did not have a genuine choice to stay in Bossangoa and return to their homes.

4075. The Chamber further considers that the circumstances mentioned were created by the Anti-Balaka. This is based on its finding that the Anti-Balaka attacked Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, and within this attack specifically targeted residential areas, as well as on the finding that Muslims who had fled to the École de la Liberté had to stay there for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, and despite the deplorable conditions there. This is irrespective of whether the Anti-Balaka were in full control of Bossangoa following its attack on the town. The Chamber is of the view that but for the Anti-Balaka attack on Bossangoa and its continued presence there, maintaining the prevailing insecurity, the Muslims that had fled to the École de la Liberté would not have stayed there and would not have been transported to Chad subsequently.

4076. On the basis of the above, the Chamber thus finds that the requirement for forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator forcibly transferred or deported, without grounds permitted under international law, one or more persons to another State or location, by expulsion or other coercive acts, is met.

Lawful presence

4077. In relation to the question of the Muslims' lawful presence in the area, the Chamber considers that there is no indication on the facts that the Muslims residing in Bossangoa were not lawfully present there. The Chamber recalls in this regard that the perpetrator need not make any legal evaluation as to the lawfulness of presence in an area, but need only be aware of the factual circumstances establishing the 'lawful presence'. Recalling its finding that the Anti-Balaka targeted residential areas of Bossangoa, including Boro which was known as the Muslim neighbourhood of the town, with the stated aim of 'freeing' the town not only from the Seleka, but from all Muslims, the Chamber considers that the Anti-Balaka were, on the facts, aware, that the Muslims in Bossangoa were lawfully present in their areas.

'Without grounds' and 'not justified'

4078. Specifically as regards the requirement, under Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, that the transfer or deportation took place 'without grounds permitted under international law', and the requirement under Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute that the displacement was 'not justified by the security of the civilians involved or by military necessity', the Chamber recalls that the Anti-Balaka attacked Bossangoa with the stated aim of 'freeing' the town from Seleka and all Muslims.⁹⁷⁴⁸ The Chamber further recalls its conclusion that in attacking residential areas, including those generally known as Muslim neighbourhoods, the Anti-Balaka drew no distinction between the Seleka and all Muslims in Bossangoa.⁹⁷⁴⁹

4079. In light of the above, and absent any contrary indication on the facts, the Chamber does not consider that the transfer and displacement of Muslim civilians to the École de la Liberté, and Chad thereafter, had grounds permitted under international law, or otherwise was justified by the security of these civilians or military necessity. The Chamber thus finds that these requirements for forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, as well as for displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, are also met.

Order to displace

4080. The Chamber now turns to the distinct requirement of displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute that the perpetrator ‘ordered’ the displacement of a civilian population and was in a position to effect such displacement by giving such order.

4081. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that there was no such order to displace or otherwise to perform an act or omission as the result of which such displacement would occur, by either Mr Ngaïssona or someone under his authority, who was ‘in a position to effect such displacement by giving such order’.⁹⁷⁵⁰

4082. The Chamber recalls its finding that the Anti-Balaka attacked Bossangoa with the stated aim of showing that the Anti-Balaka were attacking not only Bangui but also in the provinces, and to ‘free’ the town from the Seleka and all Muslims,⁹⁷⁵¹ as well as its finding that the Anti-Balaka perceived the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and therefore targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR.⁹⁷⁵²

4083. The Chamber further recalls that conduct alone can constitute an order.⁹⁷⁵³ This is consistent with the Ntaganda jurisprudence that states that an order within the meaning of this crime itself needs only to instruct another person in any form to (i) displace a civilian population; or (ii) perform an act or omission as a result of which such displacement would occur.⁹⁷⁵⁴

4084. The Chamber is of the view that the specific aim of wanting to ‘free’ Bossangoa not only from the Seleka but from all Muslims, seen together with its findings on the attack on residential areas in the town and the Anti-Balaka targeting Muslim civilians drawing no distinction between them and the Seleka, establish conclusively the existence of an ‘order’ within the meaning of this crime. The Chamber considers that by attacking Bossangoa under these premises, the Anti-Balaka groups were ordered to perform an act as a result of which the displacement of the Muslim civilian population in Bossangoa would necessarily occur.

The Chamber considers that these provisions must be read as a prohibition of displacing the civilian population in non-international armed conflicts.

⁹⁷⁵⁴ Ntaganda Trial Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2359, para. 1081.

Position to effect such displacement by giving such order

4085. Similarly, the Chamber considers on this basis also that the Anti-Balaka groups attacking Bossangoa were in a position to effect such displacement. Attacking residential areas while well armed, the Anti-Balaka elements were in a position to cause the dislocation of Muslim civilians from their homes. Further, and while noting that the war crime of displacement does not require for displacement as such to actually occur, the actions of the Anti-Balaka in attacking Bossangoa, including residential areas and specifically Muslim civilians, as well as in the time thereafter, led to the displacement of the Muslim civilian population to the École de la Liberté and later to Chad. Thus, the Chamber considers that also the third element of displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator was in a position to effect such displacement by giving such order, is met.

v. Imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity (Count 39)

4086. Under Count 39, Mr Ngaïssona is charged with imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute, for the maintaining of Muslims at the École de la Liberté by preventing them from leaving, including by shouting threats, in the context of the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 and the weeks following the attack.

Recalling of factual findings

4087. The Chamber found that the Anti-Balaka during its attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 targeted residential areas, including the Boro neighbourhood, generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood in Bossangoa, to ‘free’ the town from Seleka and all Muslims, thereby targeting Muslim civilians.⁹⁷⁵⁵ The Chamber further found that during the attack, the Anti-Balaka forced into sexual intercourse one woman, and killed at least 18 individuals.⁹⁷⁵⁶ It also found that during the attack, the Muslim civilian population of Bossangoa fled the attacked neighbourhoods to seek shelter at the École de la Liberté, where their numbers rose into several thousands.⁹⁷⁵⁷ The Chamber found that the Muslim civilians that had sought refuge at the École de la Liberté remained confined to the school premises for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, staying there in cramped and generally dire conditions.⁹⁷⁵⁸ Finally, the Chamber found that the Muslim civilians at the École de la Liberté were dependent on the protection of international forces for their safety and could not leave the school premises venturing into Bossangoa without risk to their person.⁹⁷⁵⁹

Imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty of one or more persons

4088. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that there is ‘no credible evidence that Anti-Balaka elements severely restricted the physical liberty of Muslim civilians by forcing them to remain’ at the École de la Liberté, since (i) Muslim civilians were not detained as they had the possibility to leave the school premises, and (ii) there is no evidence that Anti-Balaka elements were the reason why they remained in the school.⁹⁷⁶⁰ The Ngaïssona Defence submits that the ‘crucial element of control’ of the perpetrators over the location at which Muslims were kept is missing.⁹⁷⁶¹

4089. The Chamber considers that had it not been for the fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, the Muslims confined to the École de la Liberté would not have chosen to remain there in the mentioned deplorable conditions. Indeed, as found, the Muslims at the school were dependent on the protection of international forces and could not leave the school without risk to their person. That some Muslims may have ventured out of the school at their own risk does not mean that such risk did not exist. The Chamber considers that a ‘crucial element of control', as mentioned by the Ngaïssona Defence, is not specified in the law. Rather, a chamber must determine on the facts before it whether the perpetrator imprisoned or severely deprived of their physical liberty one or more persons.

4090. In the case at hand, and bearing in mind its findings recalled above, the Chamber concludes that during the entire duration of the Muslim civilians' stay at the École de la Liberté, their physical movement was restricted. Thus, the Chamber finds that the first requirement of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator imprisoned on or more persons or otherwise severely deprived one or more persons of physical liberty, is met.

Gravity of conduct in violation of fundamental rules of international law

4091. Turning to the question whether the gravity of the conduct was such that it was in violation of fundamental rules of international law, the Chamber recalls that whether a deprivation of physical liberty is severe will have to be determined on a case-by-case basis. The Chamber considers that in assessing the gravity of the conduct, determination of whether there is no legal basis to detain a person or the person is denied any procedural rights are but examples that can be taken into account in this assessment.

4092. Accordingly, the Chamber has considered the circumstances under which the Muslims fled to the École de la Liberté, as well as the conditions under which they remained there. Muslim civilians fled their homes for the school in light of the Anti-Balaka attack on Bossangoa, in the context of which the Anti-Balaka specifically targeted residential areas without distinguishing between Seleka and Muslim civilians. These Muslims then remained confined to the École de la Liberté with no possibility of returning to their homes, and eventually having to give up on their lives in Bossangoa altogether. With thousands of Muslims staying at the school, the conditions there were cramped and generally dire. The Chamber considers that the Muslims confined to the school were unable to move around freely. Nothing in the facts suggests that there was any basis, let alone established in law, that could justify the conditions which caused this confinement.

4093. On the basis of the above, the Chamber finds that also the second element of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute, namely that the gravity of the conduct was such that it was in violation of fundamental rules of international law, is met.

vi. Rape as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 40 and 41)

4094. Under Counts 40 and 41, Mr Ngaïssona is charged with rape as a crime against humanity under Article 7(1)(g) of the Statute and rape as a war crime under Article 8(2)(e)(vi) of the Statute, for the rape of a 19-year-old woman in the context of the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.

Recalling of factual findings

4095. The Chamber found that an Anti-Balaka element forced P-2462 into sexual intercourse, having blindfolded and undressed her, and after the group of five Anti-Balaka he was in, had threatened her with their weapons.⁹⁷⁶²

Penetration by force, threat of force or coercion

4096. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that the alleged rape did not occur⁹⁷⁶³ and that, in any event, the identity of the alleged perpetrator was not established.⁹⁷⁶⁴

4097. The Chamber recalls in this regard its discussion on the facts, on the basis of which it concluded that an Anti-Balaka element did force P-2462 into sexual intercourse in the context of the attack in Bossangoa on 5 December 2013. The Chamber further recalls that the Anti-Balaka group within which this Anti-Balaka element was had threatened P-2462, and that the element blindfolded and undressed her. The Chamber also recalls that this took place in the context of the Anti-Balaka's attack in Bossangoa, during which it targeted residential areas.

⁹⁷⁶² See paragraph 83 above.

⁹⁷⁶³ Ngaïssona Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2736-AnxA-Corr-Red, paras 380-382.

⁹⁷⁶⁴ Ngaïssona Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2736-AnxA-Corr-Red, paras 383-387.

4098. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the first and second element of rape as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(g) of the Statute, and rape as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(vi) of the Statute, are met.

vii. Persecution as a crime against humanity (Count 42)

4099. Under Count 42, Mr Ngaïssona is charged with the crime of persecution as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, for the severe deprivation of fundamental rights of persons in Bossangoa by targeting them on the basis of political, ethnic, and/or religious grounds by virtue of the conduct pertaining to Counts 30 to 41.

Recalling of factual findings

4100. In addition to the findings recalled by the Chamber in respect of Counts 30 to 33 and 37 to 41, the Chamber recalls that it found that Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁷⁶⁵

Perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law, one or more persons of fundamental rights

4101. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that since the Prosecution failed to prove the charges under the related counts, it also failed to prove the crime of persecution on political, ethnic and/or religious grounds as charged.⁹⁷⁶⁶

4102. The Chamber recalls in this regard that it did find proven the conduct underlying the crimes as charged in Counts 30 to 33 and 37 to 41. In this context, the Chamber considers that Muslim civilians were deprived of their right to life,⁹⁷⁶⁷ right to physical integrity,⁹⁷⁶⁸ right to property,⁹⁷⁶⁹ right to liberty and security of person, right to liberty of movement, and right against arbitrary or unlawful interference with their family and home.⁹⁷⁷⁰ On this basis, the Chamber finds that the first element of persecution as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law, one or more persons of fundamental rights, is met.

Targeted by reason of identity of a group or collectivity, or group or collectivity targeted as such

4103. The Ngaïssona Defence further submits that even if the Chamber were satisfied that the Anti-Balaka elements committed part of the underlying crimes, the required discriminatory intent remains unproven, since the ‘very low number of alleged civilian casualties, compared to the large amount of people who were safely evacuated away from the hostilities is probative of an attack that did not target civilians based on their ethnicity, religion or political affiliations’, and that neither general behaviour of alleged perpetrators nor circumstances surrounding the commission of alleged crimes allow to infer a discriminatory intent.⁹⁷⁷¹

4104. The Chamber disagrees with the Ngaïssona Defence’s suggestion that discriminatory intent cannot be inferred, and proven, in light of a ‘low number’ of civilian casualties, when compared to those who were ‘safely evacuated’. The Chamber understands this to argue that a certain minimum proportion of any group would have to be targeted for a Chamber to be able to infer and conclude on the discriminatory intent required by the crime of persecution. No such requirement exists under the law.

4105. Indeed, the law is clear in requiring that the perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law, ‘one or more persons’ of fundamental rights. Thus, even one individual may be subject to such severe deprivation of fundamental rights. This is combined with the elements further requiring that the perpetrator targeted ‘such person or persons’ by reason of the identity of a group or collectivity, or targeted the group or collectivity as such, and that such targeting was based on political, racial, national, ethnic, cultural religious, gender as defined in Article 7(3) of the Statute, or other grounds universally recognised as impermissible under international law. Determinative is therefore not the number of casualties within a group or collectivity when compared to those within the same group of collectivity that did not. Determinative is, rather, that ‘one or more persons’ were severely deprived of fundamental rights, and ‘such person or persons’ were targeted because of the identity of the group or collectivity, based on the grounds mentioned. The Chamber is of the view that this can be established through a variety of factors and need not rely on inferring the requisite intent on the basis of whatever may be considered a ‘high’ number of casualties in the circumstances.

4106. The Chamber recalls in this regard that the Anti-Balaka attacked Bossangoa with the stated aim of ‘freeing’ the town from the Seleka and all Muslims, thus targeting Muslim civilians without distinguishing from the Seleka.⁹⁷⁷² The Chamber further recalls that it found that the Anti-Balaka targeted residential areas, including Boro, generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood in Bossangoa.⁹⁷⁷³ The Chamber also recalls that the Anti-Balaka perceived Muslims in the CAR, due to religious and ethnic commonalities, as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka, thus targeting the Muslim civilian population specifically in the west of the CAR.⁹⁷⁷⁴

4107. On the basis of the above, the Chamber finds that the second and third element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator targeted such person or persons by reason of the identity of a group or collectivity or targeted the group or collectivity as such, and such targeting was based on political, racial, national, ethnic, cultural, religious, gender as defined in Article 7(3) of the Statute, or other grounds that are universally recognised as impermissible under international law, are met.

⁹⁷⁷⁴ See paragraph 45 above.

Committed in connection with any act referred to in Article 7(1) of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court 4108. In relation to the fourth element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the conduct was committed in connection with any act referred to in Article 7(1) of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met by virtue of the conduct of the Anti-Balaka in Bossangoa satisfying the requirements of the crimes of murder, destruction of property, forcible transfer and deportation or displacement, imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty, and rape, as noted above.

b. Individual criminal responsibility of Mr Ngaïssona

4109. The Chamber now turns to Mr Ngaïssona's responsibility under Counts 30 to 33, and 37 to 41. Mr Ngaïssona is alleged to have committed the aforementioned crimes by facilitating the commission of the crimes as set out in the confirmed charges by aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting in their commission under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.

Aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting

4111. Through meetings in Cameroon and communications with individuals in Zongo, in particular Maxime Mokom, Mr Ngaïssona and others planned steps to respond to the Seleka violence in the CAR as well as to ensure François Bozizé's return to power, by all means possible, including through armed violence.⁹⁷⁷⁷

4112. The Anti-Balaka groups, which had formed in the provinces and in part gathered together at Govere, started their advance towards Bangui, with the ultimate objective to attack the capital in order to remove Michel Djotodia from power and oust the Seleka from the CAR. In this advance, various Anti-Balaka groups started engaging in attacks against the Seleka from September 2013 onwards. Such attacks were not limited to Seleka forces, but included attacking localities with Muslim civilians.⁹⁷⁷⁸

4113. During this period of at least September to December 2013 and prior to the Bossangoa Attack, Mr Ngaïssona provided financial contributions and engaged in activities pertaining to the organisation and coordination of groups for the purpose of facilitating the commission of criminal acts targeting the Muslim population.⁹⁷⁷⁹ This included killings and dislocating Muslim civilians from around Bossangoa, Bouca (Ouham prefecture), in Ndjo, Bossembélé, Boali and Gaga (Ombella-M'Poko prefecture), as well as in Bouar (Nana-Mambéré prefecture), including the attack on Bossangoa in September 2013.⁹⁷⁸⁰ Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the advance of the groups towards Bangui as well as of the hostilities during this advance, including the killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians from these locations.⁹⁷⁸¹

4114. The Chamber also found that the attack on Bossangoa took place in coordination with the Anti-Balaka attack on Bangui on the same day,⁹⁷⁸² with the intention of showing that the Anti-Balaka were attacking not only Bangui but also in the provinces.⁹⁷⁸³

4115. In light of this, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona, by funding and supporting the Anti-Balaka prior to the attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 aided, abetted, or otherwise assisted in the commission of the aforementioned crimes during the attack on Bossangoa by the Anti-Balaka.

Mental elements

4116. As regards Mr Ngaïssona's mens rea, the Chamber recalls its finding that Mr Ngaïssona made his contributions prior to the Bossangoa Attack fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim civilian population in the west of the CAR, committing the widespread attack that ultimately took place from September 2013 through February 2014, including the seminal coordinated Anti-Balaka attacks of Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.⁹⁷⁸⁴ Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁷⁸⁵ The Chamber further considered that Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial aid, organisational assistance and psychological support to the Anti-Balaka in the context of anti-foreign sentiments and inflammatory rhetoric openly expressed by François Bozizé and others, which incited vigilance against those perceived to support the Seleka, in particular Muslim civilians.⁹⁷⁸⁶

4118. Turning to the special intent requirement that Mr Ngaïssona's assistance was made with the aim of facilitating the commission of the charged crimes, the Chamber recalls its considerations above.⁹⁷⁸⁷

⁹⁷⁸⁴ See paragraph 49 below.

4119. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial contributions and support to the Anti-Balaka for the purpose of facilitating the crimes against the Muslim civilian population, including killings and dislocation of Muslims. In particular, the Chamber notes that Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the hostilities committed by the Anti-Balaka during their advance towards Bangui. These included the killings and dislocation of Muslims in seven different locations in and around Bossangoa prior to the Bangui Attack and Bossangoa Attack,⁹⁷⁸⁸ committed by the Anti-Balaka groups coordinating with each other.⁹⁷⁸⁹ Despite this, Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide funds to the Anti-Balaka.⁹⁷⁹⁰ Mr Ngaïssona's financial support made it possible for at least some of the elements to participate in the attacks during the advance and during the seminal attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa.

4121. Turning to the specific knowledge requirements concerning a number of the charged crimes, the Chamber recalls its finding that the Anti-Balaka attacking Bossangoa targeted residential areas, including the Boro neighbourhood, generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood in Bossangoa, and drew no distinction between Muslim civilians and the Seleka.⁹⁷⁹¹ The Chamber further found that Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the advance of the groups towards Bangui as well as of the hostilities during this advance, including the killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians from the locations mentioned.⁹⁷⁹²

4122. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the following specific knowledge requirements are met: (i) that the perpetrator was aware of the victims being either hors de combat, or civilians, medical personnel or religious personnel taking no active part in hostilities, applicable to murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute; (ii) that the

⁹⁷⁹⁰ See paragraph 70 above.

perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances establishing the protected status of property, applicable to destruction of property as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(xii) of the Statute; (iii) that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances establishing the lawfulness of presence in the area, applicable to forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute; and (iv) that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances establishing the gravity of conduct, applicable to imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty, pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute.

4123. Turning to the specific intent requirements concerning a number of charged crimes, the Chamber recalls the same findings as above, as well as its finding that Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁷⁹³

4125. The Chamber emphasises that the above considerations are valid for the crimes it found to have been committed in Bossangoa under Counts 30 to 33, 37 to 39 and 42.

Counts 40 and 41

4126. Turning to the question of Mr Ngaïssona's responsibility for the crime of rape under Counts 40 and 41, the Prosecution argues that it was common knowledge that sexual violence and rape would be committed by parties to the armed conflict in the CAR, and particularly against victims perceived to be associated with the opposing armed groups.⁹⁷⁹⁴ The Prosecution argues that Mr Ngaïssona knew the essential elements of the charged crimes based on, inter alia, ‘his knowledge of the risk of certain types of crimes to be committed in times of conflict in the CAR including sexual and gender based violence’.⁹⁷⁹⁵

4127. The Ngaïssona Defence argues in the context of Article 25(3)(d) of the Statute that (i) ‘alleged SGBV in the present case were random acts committed by individuals’; (ii) the Prosecution ‘failed to demonstrate any pattern of SGBV amongst the alleged crimes imputed to the Anti-Balaka’; (iii) ‘there is no evidence that the alleged perpetrators of the charged rape, or other alleged acts of SGBV in the uncharged locations, committed such acts because they saw the victims as complicit of the Seleka’; and (iv) ‘there is no evidence suggesting that rape or other forms of SGBV were committed to further the common purpose’.⁹⁷⁹⁶

4129. The Chamber is indeed satisfied that Mr Ngaïssona had ‘virtual certainty’ that killings, injuries, dislocation, and destruction of property would occur in the ordinary course of events during the attack on Bossangoa on the basis outlined above. However, the Chamber is not convinced that his knowledge on the basis of ‘virtual certainty’ extended to rape occurring in the ordinary course of events.

4130. The Chamber emphasises in this regard that, according to its evaluation of the evidence, it is convinced, beyond reasonable doubt, that an Anti-Balaka element raped P-2462 during the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013. The Chamber further emphasises that it is not of the view that sexual violence in general is an ‘exceptional’ occurrence in the context of armed conflicts. On the contrary.

4131. At the same time, the Chamber underscores that it must base its conclusions on the specific evidence and charges as presented and confirmed before it, and in relation to the individual criminal responsibility of a specific accused. It is within this specific, and limited, context that the Chamber is unable to conclude, on the basis of the evidence before it, that Mr Ngaïssona had ‘virtual certainty’ that rape would occur in the ordinary course of the Anti-Balaka attack in Bossangoa. The Chamber recalls in this regard that it found a clear pattern of criminal conduct relating to the targeting of Muslim civilians with killings, injuries, dislocation, destruction of property and attacks against buildings dedicated to religion in the context of the Anti-Balaka attacks during its advance towards Bangui from September 2013, during the coordinated attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, in relation to the events at Yamwara at the end of December 2013, as regards the events along the PK9-Mbaïki axis following Michel Djotodia’s resignation, as well as in relation to the Anti-Balaka attacks in western CAR in early 2014. All this led the Chamber to conclude that Mr Ngaïssona was aware that such criminal conduct would occur in the ordinary course of events and, indeed, that he performed his own conduct for purposes of facilitating the commission of such crimes. However, the Chamber cannot conclude the same as regards the cases of rape that occurred in Bossangoa, one of which Mr Ngaïssona is charged with.

Conclusion

4132. On the basis of the above, the Chamber therefore finds that, within the context of the attack on Bossangoa, carried out by the Anti-Balaka on 5 December 2013, Mr Ngaïssona aided, abetted or otherwise assisted, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute, the commission of the following crimes: (i) attack against the civilian population as such as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(i) of the Statute (Count 30); (ii) murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute (Count 31); (iii) murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Count 32); (iv) destruction of the adversary's property as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(xii) of the Statute (Count 33); (v) forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute (Count 37); (vi) displacement as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute (Count 38); (vii) imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity (Count 39); and (viii) persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute (Count 42).

iii. Crimes committed within the context of the events at Yamwara on and around 24 December 2013 (Counts 11 to 17)

a. Crimes committed

*i. Other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity
(Count 11)*

4133. Under Count 11, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute, of six persons, in the context of the abduction of seven persons in or around Cattin.

Recalling of factual findings

4134. The Chamber found that on 24 December 2013, following the death of a member of the Lapo N'Gomat family, Saint Cyr's older brother, three women related to the family were to be escorted back to their home before dark because of the security situation in Bangui at the time. The four men, namely P-1704, P-1705, P-1716 and Saint Cyr, who were family and friends of the Lapo N'Gomat family, escorted the three women, namely, P-0967, P-1811 and another (together, seven persons), to the main road to find them a taxi.⁹⁷⁹⁹

4135. As regards the circumstances of why the seven persons were stopped, the Chamber found that elements from Mr Yekatom's group apprehended these seven persons at a checkpoint led by Alkanto close to the Lapo N’Gomat family house and Yamwara. Alkanto pointed to the women as belonging to the family of Mamour and Michel Djotodia in the presence of the elements in his group. Alkanto’s identification of the women being related to Djotodia and Mamour as well as being Muslims, combined with Alkanto’s negative feelings centred around a desire for revenge against the women, predisposed Alkanto’s group to perceive the seven persons as ‘Muslims’.⁹⁸⁰⁰

4136. The Chamber considered how Mr Yekatom’s elements treated the seven persons at the checkpoint. The Chamber found that Alkanto ordered his elements to search the male captives at the checkpoint. Alkanto’s elements beat P-1704 and P-1716 and accused them of being traitors. Following this search, no arms were found on any of the captives. An element searched Saint Cyr and found a ‘Seleka card’ on him. None of the seven persons posed a threat to Yamwara or the security of the elements placed there. In fact, the nature and the purpose of them being together and close to Yamwara was linked to the funeral of Saint Cyr’s older brother.⁹⁸⁰¹

4137. The Chamber considered the circumstances in which the seven persons were transferred from the checkpoint to Yamwara. The Chamber found that after threatening them with death and accusing them of being traitors, Alkanto ordered his elements to take the seven persons, including Saint Cyr Lapo N’Gomat, P-1704, P-1705, P-1716, P-0967 and P-1811, to Yamwara.⁹⁸⁰²

4138. The Chamber considered how Mr Yekatom’s elements treated Saint Cyr, P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 when they brought them to Yamwara. The Chamber found that elements in Mr Yekatom’s group, namely Alkanto and others, brought the captives to Cœur de Lion’s house at Yamwara. There, in Cœur de Lion’s presence, elements in Mr Yekatom’s group, including Bojos, interrogated the four men individually on their identity, ethnicity, and reasons for being there with the women, also demanding the captive men to speak in the dialect associated with their respective ethnicities. Saint Cyr and another captive, who were Boffi from their father’s side and Goula from their mother’s side, gave their ethnicity but neither could speak their dialect. Saint Cyr said that he was ‘Boffi’ but could not speak in this language. When Saint Cyr was unable to do so, elements in Mr Yekatom’s group accused him of being ‘Goula’, and therefore associated with Djotodia. The elements in Mr Yekatom’s group kept the women apart but close by, under the veranda of Cœur de Lion’s house. Mr Yekatom was not present at Yamwara during the group’s arrival there or during the said interrogation at Cœur de Lion’s house.⁹⁸⁰³

⁹⁸⁰² See paragraph 99 above.

4139. The Chamber considered how Mr Yekatom’s elements interrogated and searched Saint Cyr, P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 after they had been brought to Yamwara. Following the men’s interrogation, the elements in Mr Yekatom’s group forced them to undress, searched them again, threatened them with death, and found no weapons on any of them. Elements in Mr Yekatom’s group beat P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 and threatened them with death.⁹⁸⁰⁴

4140. The Chamber considered how P-0967, P-1811, and another captive were treated when Mr Yekatom’s elements brought them to Yamwara. The Chamber found that upon another search of the captives at Yamwara, an element in Mr Yekatom’s group recovered a SIM card in the trousers of one of the female captives and no weapons were found on them.⁹⁸⁰⁵ The elements in Mr Yekatom’s group took the women inside Cœur de Lion’s house while Saint Cyr’s interrogation continued outside, and from where they could hear what was happening outside.⁹⁸⁰⁶ Elements in Mr Yekatom’s group searched the female captives again, removing their veils, and brought them inside Cœur de Lion’s house at gunpoint.⁹⁸⁰⁷ After the women were brought inside Cœur de Lion’s house, the elements in Mr Yekatom’s group forced them to undress to their underwear, searched them, and threatened them with death.⁹⁸⁰⁸ An element in Mr Yekatom’s group pointed a weapon in the women’s direction and asked P-1811 about her tribe.⁹⁸⁰⁹ During their captivity inside Cœur de Lion’s house, elements from

Mr Yekatom's group were coming in and out of the house and threatened them with death.⁹⁸¹⁰

4141. The Chamber considered the extent to which the captives had to witness parts of Saint Cyr's mistreatment. The Chamber found that P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 were present during Saint Cyr's interrogation, maiming and beating.⁹⁸¹¹ The Chamber found that the female captives, when they were inside Cœur de Lion's house, could hear the interrogation and mistreatment of Saint Cyr taking place outside.⁹⁸¹² At some point, the female captives could no longer hear Saint Cyr crying outside anymore.⁹⁸¹³

4142. As regards P-1716's treatment specifically, the Chamber found that he remained captive at Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch on the night of his capture. During this time, elements in Mr Yekatom's group threatened P-1716 with death and Cœur de Lion interrogated him. P-1716 was released the following morning after his father paid a ransom to Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom. Mr Yekatom knew of P-1716's capture and his mistreatment at the very latest by the morning of 25 December 2013.⁹⁸¹⁴

4144. The Chamber considered how P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811, and one other captive were transferred overnight to another location close to the M'Poko airport. The Chamber found that during the intervening night of 24 and 25 December 2013, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group made the five captives walk from Yamwara to a location close to the M'Poko airport.

Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion, or Bojos did not accompany them. At this location, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group handed over the five captives to Sylvestre Yagouzou, who introduced himself as the 'coordinator of the base behind the airport' and a 'spokesperson' of the Anti-Balaka. Sylvestre Yagouzou then kept the five captives at a location close to the airport until the following day under circumstances that, to P-0967 and P-1811, were frightening.⁹⁸¹⁶ The Chamber found that the five captives were released and handed over to Sangaris on or about 27 December 2013.⁹⁸¹⁷

Perpetrator inflicted great suffering, or serious injury to body or mental or physical health

4145. The Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence makes a number of arguments concerning the gravity of the conduct underlying this crime, namely (i) the gravity threshold under Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute should be applied restrictively,⁹⁸¹⁸ (ii) the drafters of the Statute intended to exclude cruel treatment from being considered a crime against humanity per se;⁹⁸¹⁹ and (iii) the charged conduct failed to meet the standard under Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute.⁹⁸²⁰ of ‘an inhumane act’ require a value judgment and a subjective assessment of the circumstances against situations where the gravity requirements were not fulfilled.

4147. As set out below, the treatment of the six persons in the present case, when considered as a whole, squarely fulfilled the gravity requirement.

4148. In respect of the three female captives, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom’s elements subjected them to mental suffering by threatening them with death, using the phrase ‘peeling the papaya’ at the checkpoint, threatening them with death during their captivity at Yamwara in Cœur de Lion’s house, as well as during their captivity at the second location in Yamwara, without Saint Cyr. Mr Yekatom’s elements subjected them to physical suffering by searching them at Yamwara, forcing them to undress to their underwear, and keeping them in captivity at gunpoint in both the locations where they were kept at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom’s elements further subjected them to mental suffering by keeping them around the location where their family member, Saint Cyr, was beaten, his legs were broken, he was tied up in ‘arbatacher’ manner and several of his body parts were cut off within hearing distance from them. Mr Yekatom’s elements subjected them to physical suffering by making them walk overnight to another location close to the M’Poko airport, in the context of an armed conflict, where they were kept in captivity in circumstances that to P-0967 and P-1811 were frightening.

4149. In respect of the male captives, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom’s elements subjected them to physical suffering by beating them at the checkpoint and at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom’s elements subjected them to mental suffering by threatening them with death, accusing them of being traitors, and interrogating about their ethnicities them whilst beating them. Mr Yekatom’s elements further subjected them to mental suffering by keeping them around the location where Saint Cyr was interrogated and tortured within hearing distance from them.

4150. Additionally, in respect of P-1704 and P-1705, Mr Yekatom’s elements subjected them to mental suffering by regrouping them with the female captives following Saint Cyr’s torture and keeping them in captivity at another location in Yamwara at gunpoint. Mr Yekatom’s elements subjected them to physical suffering by making them walk overnight to another location close to the M'Poko airport, in the context of an armed conflict, where they were further kept in captivity.

4152. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's elements inflicted the suffering and injury upon the six persons, as noted above, by means of an inhumane act. These acts comprised of deprivation of liberty, threatening with death, beatings, interrogation about ethnicity and family background, subjecting a family member and/or friend to mistreatment within hearing distance, forced undressing of the female captives for searches, confinement without information as to whether and when they would be released, and providing no information on the state and/or whereabouts of the family member/friend that was mistreated.

4153. In the view of the Chamber, the gravity threshold requirement is met when considering the totality of these circumstances endured by the captives from the moment they were apprehended until their respective release. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that serious beatings, subjection to deplorable conditions of detention, and requiring persons to witness the beatings of others is sufficient to fulfil the gravity requirement of other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity.⁹⁸²² Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the requirement is met in respect of the first element of other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator inflicted great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health, by means of an inhumane act.

⁹⁸²² See paragraph 3828 above referring to Ongwen Trial Judgment, ICC-02/04-01/15-1762-Conf, para. 2744. See also Al Hassan Trial Judgment, ICC-01/12-01/18-2594-Red, para. 1128.

Such act was of a character similar to any other act referred to in Article 7(1) of the Statute 4154. The Chamber, as noted below, has considered that parts of the conduct that resulted in the mistreatment of the six persons fulfil the requirements of the crimes of imprisonment and other severe deprivation of liberty. In addition, this conduct collectively, namely, inter alia, threatening the captives with death multiple times, interrogation, beatings, forced undressing of the female captives, mistreatment of a family member/friend, lack of access to procedural rights in captivity, as discussed above, is impermissible under generally applicable international law, as recognised by the principal legal systems of the world. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the requirement is met in respect of the second element of other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute, namely that such act was of a character similar to any other act referred to in article 7, paragraph 1, of the Statute.

ii. Torture as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 12 and 13)

4155. Under Counts 12 and 13, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with torture as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(f) of the Statute, and torture as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, of Saint Cyr, in the context of the abduction of seven persons in or around Cattin, and their subsequent transfer to Yamwara.

4156. At the outset, the Chamber notes that the Prosecution appears to argue that Mr Yekatom is charged with the torture of seven persons in the group, including Saint Cyr.⁹⁸²³ However, in the view of the Chamber, Counts 12 and 13, as regards the charge of torture, do not include the abduction and mistreatment of the six persons, other than Saint Cyr, within its factual scope. The abduction and mistreatment of the six persons is instead charged as ‘cruel treatment, pursuant to and prohibited by article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute’ and ‘other inhumane acts, pursuant to and prohibited by article 7(1)(k) of the Statute’ with reference to the ‘six of them’ being subjected to severe physical and mental injury, including by threatening them with death or otherwise, forcing them to undress, and/or beating them.⁹⁸²⁴ This conclusion is also supported by a comparative reading of the references to paragraphs 114 to 115 of the Confirmation Decision in respect of Saint Cyr and the references to paragraphs 114 to 116 in respect of the other six persons in the group. Accordingly, the Chamber has not assessed or entered a finding on whether the mistreatment of the six persons in the group amounted to torture under Counts 12 and 13.

Recalling of factual findings

4157. The Chamber recalls that Saint Cyr was among the group of seven persons that Mr Yekatom's element stopped at the checkpoint.⁹⁸²⁵ The Chamber found that, at the checkpoint led by Alkanto, an element searched Saint Cyr and found a 'Seleka card' on him.⁹⁸²⁶

4158. The Chamber found that none of the seven persons, including Saint Cyr, posed a threat to Yamwara or the security of the elements placed there. In fact, the nature and the purpose of them being together and close to Yamwara was linked to the funeral of Saint Cyr's older brother.⁹⁸²⁷

4159. The Chamber found that after threatening them with death and accusing them of being traitors, Alkanto ordered his elements to take the seven persons, including Saint Cyr Lapo N'Gomat, to Yamwara. Alkanto's elements perceived the seven persons in the group to be all Muslims.⁹⁸²⁸

4160. The Chamber considered how Mr Yekatom's elements treated and interrogated Saint Cyr when they brought the seven persons to Yamwara. The Chamber found that elements in Mr Yekatom's group, namely Alkanto and others, brought the captives to Cœur de Lion's house at Yamwara. There, in Cœur de Lion's presence, elements in Mr Yekatom's group, including Bojos, interrogated the four men individually on their identity, ethnicity, and reasons for being there with the women, also demanding the captive men to speak in the dialect associated with their respective ethnicities. Saint Cyr and another captive, who were Boffi from their father's side and Goula from their mother's side, gave their ethnicity but neither could speak their dialect. Saint Cyr said that he was 'Boffi' but could not speak in this language. When Saint Cyr was unable to do so, elements in Mr Yekatom's group accused him of being 'Goula', and therefore associated with Djotodia.⁹⁸²⁹ Following the men's interrogation, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group forced them to undress, searched them again, threatened them with death, and found no weapons on any of them.⁹⁸³⁰

4161. The Chamber considered the circumstances of Saint Cyr's mistreatment. The Chamber found that elements in Mr Yekatom's group continued to interrogate Saint Cyr and beat him, despite him showing his identification card and insisting that he was a FACA member. Cœur de Lion, who was observing Saint Cyr's mistreatment, encouraged the assailants and ordered them to continue, saying, inter alia, that the victims were 'Muslims' and 'Seleka' and to 'do the job properly'. Elements in Mr Yekatom's group specifically beat Saint Cyr's legs, breaking them, and tied him up in 'arbatacher' manner, continuing to assault him. An element in Mr Yekatom's group cut off Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and an ear, being encouraged by Cœur de Lion's presence at the scene and his words, and feeling that there was no choice but to do it. After Saint Cyr's beating and maiming, the elements of Mr Yekatom's group took him away. Saint Cyr then died.⁹⁸³¹

Perpetrator inflicted severe physical or mental pain or suffering on one or more persons

4162. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that when Saint Cyr and the others were apprehended, it was a 'result of investigative acts that provided a reasonable basis to suspect the group as Seleka forces or Seleka informants', based on being recognised as linked to Mamour and Djotodia and found to have 'suspicious items, including Seleka card(s)' and 'the conspicuously hidden SIM card'.⁹⁸³² In support, it argues that the first time

⁹⁸²⁹ See paragraph 100 above.

⁹⁸³¹ See paragraph 101 above.

⁹⁸³² Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Conf-Corr, paras 627, 646.

the group was stopped in the ambulance, they were permitted to proceed ‘following routine searches of the van’ and that, in contrast, it was during the ‘second stop’ that the group was recognised as being part of the Mamour’s family.⁹⁸³³ The Yekatom Defence further argues that the ‘legitimacy and necessity of the security checks in and around Yamwara’ were ‘emphasised’ by the presence of the Seleka forces’ ‘continued’ attacks against Yamwara.⁹⁸³⁴

4163. Having regard to the circumstances and the manner in which the group was apprehended, searched and threatened with death at the checkpoint and during their transfer to Yamwara, the Chamber finds that they bore no resemblance whatsoever to any ‘investigative’ act legally carried out. It did not have any of the characteristics of a lawful action, regardless of whether it would have been, otherwise, lawfully sanctioned. If anything, what was clear throughout the events was that none of the members of the group, including Saint Cyr, was armed or posed a threat to the security of elements at Yamwara. In this context, the Chamber considers that the recovery of a SIM card in the trousers of one of the women at Yamwara by one of Mr Yekatom’s elements or finding a Seleka card on Saint Cyr did not mean that the group, including Saint Cyr, were suddenly rendered without protection as civilians under the legal framework. It also did not render lawful retrospectively the manner in which the group, including Saint Cyr, was apprehended. The Chamber is convinced that elements in Mr Yekatom’s group had no reason to entertain suspicions against the group, including Saint Cyr, let alone consider, as argued, that these suspicions were ‘reasonable’.

4164. In arriving at this conclusion, the Chamber considered irrelevant the Yekatom Defence’s arguments pointing to the circumstances of the search of the vehicle in which some of the members of the group were travelling with the corpse of Saint Cyr’s brother. The Chamber considers that this search of the vehicle was also neither ‘routine’ nor lawful, noting that Mr Yekatom’s group had no legal basis to set up a checkpoint or to grant themselves the authority to carry out searches of the vehicles and individuals in and around Yamwara.

4165. Having regard to the above, in respect of the first element of torture as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(f) of the Statute, and torture as a war crime, pursuant to ⁹⁸³³ Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Conf-Corr, paras 626-627.

⁹⁸³⁴ See Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 626.

Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator inflicted on the victim severe physical or mental pain or suffering, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met in respect of a combination of acts against Saint Cyr, including beating, interrogation, breaking of legs, being tied up in ‘arbatacher’ manner by elements of Mr Yekatom’s group, and maiming of his toes, fingers, and an ear at Yamwara. The Chamber considers that the severity requirement is equally met even when only considering the individual actions of the element that maimed Saint Cyr’s toes, fingers, and an ear.

Such person or persons were in custody or under control of the perpetrator

4166. The Chamber further found that Mr Yekatom and his elements had established a base at Yamwara at one point in December 2013 following the Bangui Attack.⁹⁸³⁵ Mr Yekatom was in charge of all the elements stationed at Yamwara. Cœur de Lion, who was Mr Yekatom’s deputy, lived in Yamwara.⁹⁸³⁶ Alkanto was an element in Mr Yekatom’s group and the chief of the elements who were stationed at the checkpoint where Saint Cyr was apprehended.⁹⁸³⁷

4167. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom, through Cœur de Lion and Alkanto, had control over Saint Cyr from the moment of his arrest until his eventual maiming at Yamwara. Specifically, Alkanto had control over Saint Cyr when the group was apprehended at the checkpoint and Cœur de Lion maintained control over Saint Cyr at Yamwara during his beating, interrogation, and maiming.

4168. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the requirement is met in respect of the second element of torture as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(f) of the Statute, namely that the person was in the custody or under the control of the perpetrator.

⁹⁸³⁷ See paragraphs 91-92, 95 above.

Pain or suffering did not arise only from, and was not inherent or incidental to, lawful sanctions 4169. In respect of the third element of torture as a crime against humanity under Article 7(1)(f) of the Statute, namely that the pain or suffering inflicted did not arise only from, and was not inherent in or incidental to, lawful sanction, the Chamber finds that there was no nexus between the actions of Mr Yekatom and his elements and any lawful sanction. Neither Mr Yekatom nor his elements had any lawful authority or basis to set up a checkpoint where Saint Cyr was apprehended. They equally did not have the legal authority or basis to stop and search Saint Cyr there, to bring him to Yamwara, or to keep him there. Neither Mr Yekatom, Alkanto at the checkpoint, nor Cœur de Lion at Yamwara, had any legal authority or basis to require elements in Mr Yekatom's group to beat, interrogate, threaten, or maim Saint Cyr.

Against person(s) taking no active part in hostilities

4170. Turning to the distinct element of torture as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, that the person be either hors de combat, or a civilian, the Chamber has considered the circumstances of Saint Cyr's abduction and custody at Yamwara and his status during this time. The Chamber finds that Saint Cyr was a civilian at the time of his abduction. The Chamber recalls that he, along with the other men in this group, was escorting the women, with whom he had familial relations, to find transport to go home.⁹⁸³⁸ Saint Cyr was not armed at any stage of the events, as shown by the fact that no arms were recovered from the group during the two searches, one at the checkpoint and one at Yamwara.⁹⁸³⁹ Saint Cyr was not carrying out any activities that would have altered his civilian status at the time of his abduction. This conclusion is not affected by Saint Cyr holding a rank within the FACA at the time,⁹⁸⁴⁰ or the discovery of the purported 'Seleka card' on him, following a search by Mr Yekatom's element.⁹⁸⁴¹ The Chamber thus concludes that the distinct element of torture

⁹⁸³⁸ See paragraph 95 above.

⁹⁸⁴⁰ See paragraph 101 above.

⁹⁸⁴¹ See paragraph 98 above.

was a war crime under Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the person be hors de combat or a civilian, is met.

iii. Cruel treatment as a war crime (Count 13)

4171. Under Count 13, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with cruel treatment as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, of six persons, in the context of the abduction of seven persons in or around Cattin.

Recalling of factual findings

4172. The Chamber notes the factual findings recalled in respect of Count 11.

Perpetrator inflicted severe physical or mental pain or suffering upon one or more persons

4173. In assessing the severity requirement of cruel treatment above, the Chamber has considered the Yekatom Defence's arguments raised in respect of the gravity of crimes concerning Count 11.⁹⁸⁴² While the Yekatom Defence does not 'contest that the six victims were mistreated',⁹⁸⁴³ it argues that the gravity threshold required under the legal framework cannot be established.⁹⁸⁴⁴ In support, it points to certain factual considerations, namely that the Chamber 'has conflicting information as to the precise severity of the suffering endured by the six victims which is compounded by the cross-contamination and propensity to embellish across all six witnesses'.⁹⁸⁴⁵ This concerns the (i) the extent of beatings by P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716;⁹⁸⁴⁶ (ii) circumstances and location of P-0967, P-1811 and another captive's search;⁹⁸⁴⁷ and (iii) extent of exposure to Saint Cyr's mistreatment.⁹⁸⁴⁸ As regards the legal standard, it also argues that acts of cruel treatment must meet the same standards as acts of torture but for the purposive requirement.⁹⁸⁴⁹

4174. At the outset, as regards the factual considerations raised by the Yekatom Defence, the Chamber recalls that it has addressed the allegations of tainting of evidence in its factual assessment when reaching conclusion on how the events unfolded.⁹⁸⁵⁰ It has specifically addressed purportedly inconsistent evidence concerning the beatings,⁹⁸⁵¹ the circumstances and locations of the search of the female captives,⁹⁸⁵² as well as the extent to which each individual captive observed Saint Cyr's torture.⁹⁸⁵³

4175. As regards the severity threshold of the crimes, the Chamber notes that whilst the circumstances of the imprisonment of the six persons and Saint Cyr are the same, as noted above, the circumstance of their respective mistreatment is different. In light of this, the Chamber did not consider it necessary to answer, in law, whether the standard of severity required under cruel treatment, which relates to the treatment of the six persons, must be the same as the standard of severity required for torture, which relates to the treatment for Saint Cyr.

4176. In assessing the severity underlying the cruel treatment, the Chamber also had regard to the related jurisprudence cited by the Yekatom Defence in support of its position that the severity threshold for cruel treatment was not met in the present case,⁹⁸⁵⁴ and considered it inapposite to the extent that it concerns distinct fact patterns different from the present case.⁹⁸⁵⁵ At the same time, to the extent that this jurisprudence concerned a factual assessment on a case-by-case basis,⁹⁸⁵⁶ when considering the totality of the surrounding circumstances to conclude whether a certain physical assault amounted to cruel treatment or not,⁹⁸⁵⁷ it supports the approach taken by the present Chamber.

4177. Further, the personal circumstances of their mistreatment, like age, gender, relationship to Saint Cyr, length of mistreatment, length of exposure to the direct perpetrators, etc. necessitated an individualised assessment of the severity for each of the victims. As set out in its factual findings and its conclusions below, without having recourse to the legal discussion above, the Chamber was satisfied that the severity requirement was met for each of the six persons when their individual circumstances were assessed holistically.

4178. In respect of the three female captives, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's elements subjected them to mental suffering by threatening them with death, using the phrase 'peeling the papaya' at the checkpoint, threatening them with death during their captivity at Yamwara in Cœur de Lion's house, as well as during their captivity at the second location in Yamwara, without Saint Cyr. Mr Yekatom's elements subjected them to physical suffering by searching them at Yamwara, forcing them to undress to their underwear, and keeping them in captivity at gunpoint in both the locations where they were kept at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom's elements further subjected them to mental suffering by keeping them around the location where their family member, Saint Cyr, was beaten, his legs were broken, he was tied up in 'arbatacher' manner and several of his body parts were cut off within hearing distance from them. Mr Yekatom's elements subjected them to physical suffering by making them walk overnight to another location close to the M'Poko airport, in the context of an armed conflict, where they were kept in captivity in circumstances that to P-0967 and P-1811 were frightening.

elements further subjected them to mental suffering by keeping them around the location where Saint Cyr was interrogated and mistreated within hearing distance from them.

4180. Additionally, in respect of P-1704 and P-1705, Mr Yekatom's elements subjected them to mental suffering by regrouping them with the female captives following Saint Cyr's torture and keeping them in captivity at another location in Yamwara at gunpoint. Mr Yekatom's elements subjected them to physical suffering by making them walk overnight to another location close to the M'Poko airport, in the context of an armed conflict, where they were further kept in captivity.

4182. Accordingly, having regard to the totality of mistreatment endured by the captives from the moment they were apprehended until their respective release, the Chamber finds that the severity threshold is met.

4183. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the requirement is met in respect of the first element of cruel treatment as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator inflicted severe physical or mental pain or suffering upon one or more persons.

Such person or persons were hors de combat, civilians, medical or religious personnel taking no active part in hostilities

4184. The Chamber further found that all the seven persons were in one group, where the men were escorting the women, with some of whom they had familial relations, to find transport to go home.⁹⁸⁵⁸ None of the seven persons was armed at any stage of the events, as shown by the fact that no arms were recovered from the group during the two searches, one at the checkpoint and one at Yamwara.⁹⁸⁵⁹ None of the seven persons was carrying out any activities that would have altered their civilian status. This conclusion is not affected by a SIM card being found hidden in the trousers of one of the women, neither by Saint Cyr holding a rank within the FACA at the time,⁹⁸⁶⁰ or a purported ‘Seleka card’ on him.⁹⁸⁶¹ 4185. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that all seven persons in the group were civilians. In light of this, the Chamber finds that the requirement in respect of the second element of cruel treatment as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the persons be either hors de combat, or a civilian, is met.

*iv. Imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity
(Count 14)*

4186. Under Count 14, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute, for the abduction and transfer of seven persons, including Saint Cyr, to Yamwara on or about 24 December 2013 and the subsequent transfer of six persons from Yamwara to other locations until their release on or about 27 December 2013.

Recalling of factual findings

4187. The Chamber considered the circumstances in which Mr Yekatom’s elements stopped seven persons. The Chamber found that elements from Mr Yekatom’s group apprehended these seven persons at a checkpoint led by Alkanto close to the Lapo N’Gomat family house and Yamwara.⁹⁸⁶² Alkanto ordered his elements to search the male captives at the checkpoint. Alkanto’s elements beat P-1704 and P-1716 and accused them of being traitors. Following this search, no arms were found on any of the captives. An element searched Saint Cyr and found a ‘Seleka card’ on him. None of the seven persons posed a threat to Yamwara or the ⁹⁸⁵⁹ See paragraphs 98, 101 above.

⁹⁸⁶¹ See paragraph 98 above.

⁹⁸⁶² See paragraph 96 above.

security of the elements placed there. In fact, the nature and the purpose of them being together and close to Yamwara was linked to the funeral of Saint Cyr's older brother.⁹⁸⁶³

4188. The Chamber considered the circumstances in which Mr Yekatom's elements brought the seven persons to Yamwara. The Chamber found that after threatening them with death and accusing them of being traitors, Alkanto ordered his elements to take the seven persons, including Saint Cyr Lapo N'Gomat, P-1704, P-1705, P-1716, P-0967 and P-1811, to Yamwara.⁹⁸⁶⁴

4189. The Chamber considered the circumstances of their treatment at Yamwara. The Chamber found that elements in Mr Yekatom's group, namely Alkanto and others, brought the captives to Cœur de Lion's house at Yamwara. There, in Cœur de Lion's presence, elements in Mr Yekatom's group, including Bojos, interrogated the four men individually on their identity, ethnicity, and reasons for being there with the women, also demanding the captive men to speak in the dialect associated with their respective ethnicities.⁹⁸⁶⁵

4190. The Chamber considered how P-1704, P-1705, P-1716, and Saint Cyr were treated after their interrogation at Yamwara. The Chamber found that following the men's interrogation, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group forced them to undress, searched them again, threatened them with death, and found no weapons on any of them.⁹⁸⁶⁶

4191. The Chamber considered how P-0967, P-1811, and one other captive were treated at Yamwara. The Chamber found that the elements in Mr Yekatom's group kept the women apart but close by, under the veranda of Cœur de Lion's house.⁹⁸⁶⁷ Then Mr Yekatom's group took the women inside Cœur de Lion's house while Saint Cyr's interrogation continued outside, and from where they could hear what was happening outside. After the women were brought inside Cœur de Lion's house, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group forced them to undress to their underwear, searched them, and threatened them with death. An element in Mr Yekatom's group pointed a weapon in the women's direction and asked

P-1811 about her tribe. During their captivity inside Cœur de Lion's house, elements from Mr Yekatom's group were coming in and out of the house and threatened them with death.⁹⁸⁶⁸

4192. The Chamber considered the circumstances of P-1716's captivity. The Chamber found that P-1716 remained captive at Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch on the night of his capture. During this time, elements in Mr Yekatom's group threatened P-1716 with death and Cœur de Lion interrogated him. P-1716 was released the following morning after his father paid a ransom to Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom.⁹⁸⁶⁹

4193. The Chamber considered how some captives were regrouped later in the evening of 24 December 2013. The Chamber found that elements in Mr Yekatom's group brought the three women outside of Cœur de Lion's house, regrouped them with P-1704 and P-1705, and brought them to another location in Yamwara. The elements in Mr Yekatom's group continued to keep the three women, together with P-1704 and P-1705, in captivity at this location in Yamwara at gunpoint, where the female captives were threatened and told that they would be peeled 'like a papaya'.⁹⁸⁷⁰

4194. The Chamber considered how P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811, and one other captive were transferred overnight to another location close to the M'Poko airport. The Chamber found that during the intervening night of 24 and 25 December 2013, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group made the five captives walk from Yamwara to a location close to the M'Poko airport. Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion, or Bojos did not accompany them. At this location, the elements in Mr Yekatom's group handed over the five captives to Sylvestre Yagouzou, who introduced himself as the 'coordinator of the base behind the airport' and a 'spokesperson' of the Anti-Balaka. Sylvestre Yagouzou then kept the five captives at a location close to the airport until the following day under circumstances that, to P-0967 and P-1811, were frightening.⁹⁸⁷¹ The Chamber found that the five captives were released and handed over to Sangaris on or about 27 December 2013.⁹⁸⁷²

⁹⁸⁷⁰ See paragraph 108 above.

Imprisonment or other severe deprivation of physical liberty of one or more persons

4195. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that the Prosecution has not established the severity of the deprivation of liberty.⁹⁸⁷³ The Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence takes issue with the duration of the deprivation of physical liberty with reference to a decision by Pre-Trial Chamber III in the Situation in Burundi (the 'Burundi Decision'), arguing that this decision concerned 'a fact pattern where the period of detention ranged between one and nine months'.⁹⁸⁷⁴ It argues that the victims were detained by Mr Yekatom's group for 'one evening' before Mr Yekatom's 'intervention' for their transfer to Sylvestre Yagouzou's custody 'in order to be released to the Sangaris'.⁹⁸⁷⁵ It further argues that during this time, the victims were provided with food and bedding, nor was there any evidence that the victims required any 'medical treatment or that they were denied such treatment whilst detained'.⁹⁸⁷⁶

4196. The Chamber emphasises that there is no minimum requirement of duration that a deprivation of liberty must fulfil under Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute, and therefore, it need not be for a prolonged period of time, as also noted in the Burundi Decision.⁹⁸⁷⁷ In this respect, the Pre-Trial Chamber III considered duration together with the overall circumstances of detention when assessing the severity of the physical deprivation of liberty.⁹⁸⁷⁸ The fact that the Burundi Decision itself concerned longer durations of detention has no bearing whatsoever on how the express requirements of Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute must be read.

⁹⁸⁷⁸ Burundi Decision, ICC-01/17-9-Red, paras 69-87.

4197. Indeed, it would be artificial when assessing deprivation of liberty to only look at duration, divorcing it from the surrounding circumstances. In this respect, the Chamber has regard to the case-law under international human rights instruments concerning captivity for a duration comparable to the present case, cited in the Burundi Decision in support of its finding that ‘brevity of detention alone cannot be brought forward as an argument to deny the severity of the deprivation of physical liberty’.⁹⁸⁷⁹ In all of these cited cases, duration of detention was only one of the factors that the concerned court or committee considered to assess arbitrariness of detention.⁹⁸⁸⁰

4198. In the present case, as set out below, the Chamber has assessed the individual experiences of all the seven captives along with the respective duration of the deprivation of their liberty. In this assessment, duration was not the determining factor for severity, neither did it outweigh other factors. The Chamber assessed the overall circumstances of the deprivation of physical liberty, together with the duration. The Chamber noted, inter alia, that Mr Yekatom’s elements threatened the captives with death, kept the captives at gunpoint, interrogated them about their ethnicities, separated and regrouped the persons at will at various points during their captivity, and kept them present in or around the location of where their family member, Saint Cyr, was tortured.

Zaire*, 8 November 1993, Communication No. 366/1989, para. 5.2 (detention of less than 12 hours) (the committee considered that the captive was not informed of the reasons for the arrest and detention, not presented with an arrest warrant, and taken to the place of detention under false pretexts); Portorreal v Dominican Republic, 5 November 1987, Communication No. 188/1984, para. 9.2 (detention of about 50 hours) (the committee considered the circumstances of the arrest, not being informed of the reasons for the arrest, lack of space in the cell where the person was held, receiving no food or water until the day following the arrest); Spakmo v Norway, 5 November 1999, Communication No. 631/1995 (detention of eight hours) (the committee noted that the detainee had been lawfully detained initially but the State party failed to show why it was necessary to further detain for eight hours in order to make the detainee stop their activities); ECtHR, Case of Quinn v France, Application no. 18580/91, Judgment of 22 March 1995, paras 39-43 (detention of 11 hours) (the court noted that there was a decision officially releasing the detainee ‘forthwith’ but this decision was not notified and no move was made to execute it); Case of Ruslan Yakovenko v Ukraine, Application No. 5425/11, Judgment of 4 June 2015, paras 67-70 (detention of two days) (the court noted that the domestic authorities took two days to arrange for the applicant’s release once the grounds for his detention had ceased to exist and did not employ means to minimise the delay in implementing the decision); Case of Gębura v Poland, Application No. 63131/00, Judgment of 6 March 2007, para. 35 (detention of two days) (the court noted that the delay between the decision to release the detainee and the actual release exceeded 48 hours and that administrative formalities related to the release could and should have been carried out more swiftly).

4199. This group comprised of Saint Cyr, P-1704, P-1705, P-1716, P-0967, P-1811, and another captive. The Chamber finds that the deprivation of physical liberty for all seven persons in the group began from the moment Mr Yekatom's elements apprehended them at the checkpoint close to the Lapo N'Gomat family house and Yamwara on 24 December 2013, from which moment their physical movement was restricted and they were under the control of Mr Yekatom's elements.⁹⁸⁸¹ During the entire duration until their respective release, including during their confinement close to the base at the airport, their physical movement was restricted and subject to the will and control of Mr Yekatom and his elements.

4200. In respect of Saint Cyr, the Chamber finds that the deprivation of his physical liberty lasted until his death,⁹⁸⁸² for a period of several hours. During this time, Saint Cyr's physical movement was restricted and under the control of Mr Yekatom's elements, by virtue of threats of death addressed to the whole group of seven, and beatings. Mr Yekatom's elements at Yamwara then interrogated him about his ethnicity, broke his legs, tied him up in 'arbatacher' manner, and maimed him. Accordingly, in the view of the Chamber, the severity threshold for Saint Cyr's deprivation of physical liberty is met.

4201. In respect of P-1716, the Chamber finds that the deprivation of his physical liberty lasted for approximately less than one day from the day of his capture until his release in the morning of 25 December 2013, when his father paid a ransom to Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom.⁹⁸⁸³ At the checkpoint, P-1716 was part of the group that was apprehended, mistreated and subsequently transferred along with the others to Yamwara under the threat of death, being accused as a traitor. At Yamwara, Mr Yekatom's elements beat P-1716 and threatened him with death.⁹⁸⁸⁴ P-1716 was present when Mr Yekatom's elements tortured Saint Cyr.⁹⁸⁸⁵ P-1716 remained captive at Yamwara that night under Cœur de Lion's watch, during which time Mr Yekatom's elements threatened P-1716 with death and Cœur de Lion interrogated him.⁹⁸⁸⁶ Accordingly, in the view of the Chamber, the severity threshold for P-1716's deprivation of physical liberty is met.

4202. In respect of P-0967, P-1811, P-1704, P-1705, and another captive, the Chamber finds that the deprivation of their physical liberty lasted until their release on or about 27 December 2013,⁹⁸⁸⁷ amounting to approximately three days. All five of them were initially brought together to Yamwara together with P-1716 and Saint Cyr.

4203. In assessing the severity of deprivation of liberty for P-1704 and P-1705, the Chamber has additionally considered the fact that they were both present when Saint Cyr was tortured and that Mr Yekatom's elements also beat them and threatened them with death around this time.⁹⁸⁸⁸

4204. Having regard to the overall circumstances of their captivity, as discussed above, the Chamber finds that the severity threshold for the deprivation of physical liberty is met in respect of P-0967, P-1811, P-1704, P-1705, and another captive. The Chamber is convinced that the severity requirement is met in respect of all the seven persons that were abducted at the checkpoint and brought to Yamwara, regardless of whether it may have been for 'one evening', as argued by Yekatom Defence.

4205. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the requirement in respect of the first element of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator imprisoned one or more persons or otherwise severely deprived one or more persons of physical liberty, is met.

Gravity of conduct in violation of fundamental rules of international law

4206. Turning now to the second element of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute, ⁹⁸⁸⁶ See paragraph 107 above.

namely that the gravity of the conduct was such that it was in violation of fundamental rules of international law, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met by Mr Yekatom's elements apprehending the seven persons without any legal basis and providing none of them with access to any procedural rights for the entire duration of their captivity.

4207. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that there were 'legitimate reasons to apprehend and temporarily detain all six victims noting their familial ties to the Minister of Defence, the prominent relationship held with Djotodia, the possession of Seleka card(s) and the conspicuously hidden SIM card', giving rise to 'legitimate suspicion that the victims were Seleka forces and/spies' in the context of 'the ongoing active conflict and threats' to Yamwara.⁹⁸⁸⁹ In support, the Yekatom Defence relies on the appeal judgments in the Čelebići case (the 'Čelebići Judgment') and the Prlić case (the 'Prlić Judgment').⁹⁸⁹⁰

4208. In assessing whether there was a violation of fundamental rules of international law, the Chamber has considered two factors: whether Mr Yekatom had the legal basis to apprehend and keep in captivity the seven persons and whether Mr Yekatom granted to the seven persons any procedural safeguards required under international law.

4209. As regards the first factor, and despite some interaction with national authorities,⁹⁸⁹¹ the Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom and his elements had no legal basis to arbitrarily apprehend persons on the basis of suspicions at checkpoints. Mr Yekatom and his elements had no legal authority, prescribed by law or otherwise, to keep the seven persons in captivity. Even if such legal basis existed, Mr Yekatom had further no legal authority to subject the seven persons to the mistreatment that accompanied their captivity. As regards the second factor, the Chamber considers that there was no indication that Mr Yekatom's elements granted any of the seven persons access to any procedural rights that accompany such deprivation of liberty, for example, the right to be informed of the grounds of why they were being apprehended and held captive, the right to legal assistance, and the right of independent and impartial review of the necessity of captivity.

4210. First, on the facts, with no arms being found on any of them, none of the seven in the group posed any threat to the security of Mr Yekatom, or his elements based at Yamwara. This conclusion is not affected by the recovery of a SIM card hidden in the trousers of one of the women, as there is no indication of why this SIM card was hidden, on whom exactly it was found, and whether Mr Yekatom's elements made any inquiry with the captives concerning this SIM card. Their interrogation by Mr Yekatom's elements appeared to have been restricted to the captives' family links and ethnicities, rather than genuine inquiries about determining their protected status as civilians.

4211. Second, none of the seven captives were members of the Seleka forces nor spies. The Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom's elements continued to interrogate Saint Cyr and beat him, despite him showing his identification card and insisting that he was a FACA member.⁹⁸⁹² This conclusion is not affected by the recovery of the purported 'Seleka card' on him, following a search by Mr Yekatom's element.⁹⁸⁹³ Further, apart from some of the women captives having family relations with Mamour, who was the minister of defence in the Seleka government, there was no indication that any of the seven were indeed themselves Seleka members.

4212. Third, Mr Yekatom knew that Saint Cyr was escorting the three women, with whom he had familial relations, to find transport to go home, in the context of a burial of a family relative.⁹⁸⁹⁴ Mr Yekatom's subsequent characterisation of Saint Cyr as a 'traitor' and 'being in cahoots with the Seleka'⁹⁸⁹⁵ did not justify, or otherwise render lawful, the manner in which Mr Yekatom's elements apprehended and mistreated the group, including Saint Cyr.

⁹⁸⁹⁴ See paragraphs 105-106 above.

⁹⁸⁹⁵ See paragraph 103 above.

4213. In light of these conclusions, the Chamber does not consider that Mr Yekatom or his elements could have entertained reasonable suspicions that the group of seven comprised of Seleka forces or were spies.

4214. Furthermore, the Chamber considers that the jurisprudence cited by the Yekatom Defence does not support its position. First, the two decisions concern unlawful confinement of a civilian as a grave breach of the Geneva Convention.⁹⁸⁹⁶ Second, reference to these decisions does not support the Yekatom Defence's position, in that they reaffirm the principle that confinement of civilians is unlawful when (i) they are detained without reasonable grounds to believe that the security of the detaining power 'makes it absolutely necessary', and (ii) where procedural safeguards under Article 43 of the Geneva Convention IV are not complied with, even where the initial detention may have been justified.⁹⁸⁹⁷

4216. The Chamber has further considered the Yekatom Defence's assertion that the victims were detained for one evening before 'Mr Yekatom's intervention for their transfer to Yagouzou's custody in order to be released to the Sangaris'.⁹⁸⁹⁸ The Chamber recalls that, on the basis of the evidence pointed out by the Yekatom Defence, the Chamber could not conclude that Mr Yekatom indeed called the French forces in an effort to secure the release of the 'Lapo family'.⁹⁸⁹⁹ It found that Mr Yekatom's group coordinated with Wenezoui and Sylvestre Yagouzou and the Anti-Balaka based behind the M'Poko airport in the transfer and captivity of the, at the time, five captives.⁹⁹⁰⁰ The Chamber also found that, given their direct interactions with Mr Yekatom, the female captives had no indication about, or reason to believe, the genuineness of Mr Yekatom's composure or purported efforts to have them released.⁹⁹⁰¹ The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom met the five captives at the location at the M'Poko airport and introduced himself, aware that Sylvestre Yagouzou kept the five captives in this location surrounded by Anti-Balaka elements. In the Chamber's view, Mr Yekatom continued to be aware and engaged in the depriving the five captives of their physical liberty. Having regard to this, the Chamber cannot conclude that Mr Yekatom indeed intervened in relation to the release of the five captives.

4217. Further, in the view of the Chamber, even accepting that Mr Yekatom did intervene, this would not have reduced the severity of the deprivation of physical liberty. This is especially true given that Mr Yekatom's elements continued to threaten some of the five captives with death by using again the phrase 'peeling the papaya' and continued to keep the five captives at gunpoint in a second location in Yamwara.⁹⁹⁰² This was also the case of P-1716, who was not released on the night of his capture, when Mr Yekatom would have met the female captives, but kept overnight under Cœur de Lion's watch and threatened with death, and only released the next day after his father paid a ransom to Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom.⁹⁹⁰³

v. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 15 and 16)

4218. Under Counts 15 and 16, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with murder as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute, and murder as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, of Saint Cyr, in the context of the abduction of seven persons in or around Cattin, and their subsequent transfer to Yamwara.

⁹⁹⁰⁰ See paragraph 112 above.

⁹⁹⁰² See paragraph 108 above.

⁹⁹⁰³ See paragraph 107 above.

Recalling of factual findings

4219. The Chamber found that after Saint Cyr's beating and maiming, Mr Yekatom's elements took him away.⁹⁹⁰⁴ Saint Cyr then died.⁹⁹⁰⁵ His relatives have not seen him since and his dead body has not been recovered.⁹⁹⁰⁶ When Mr Yekatom's elements brought the three women outside of Cœur de Lion's house and regrouped them with P-1704 and P-1705, Saint Cyr was not amongst them.⁹⁹⁰⁷

Killing of one or more persons

4220. Recalling that the dead body of the victim need not be recovered in order to establish the fact of death,⁹⁹⁰⁸ the Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference in the circumstances discussed above is that Mr Yekatom's elements killed Saint Cyr. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the requirement in respect of the first element of murder as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute, and of murder as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator killed one or more persons, is met.

Status of the person(s) killed

4221. As regards Saint Cyr's status at the relevant time, the Chamber has considered the circumstances of Saint Cyr's abduction and custody at Yamwara and his status during that time. The Chamber finds that Saint Cyr was a civilian at the time of his abduction. The Chamber recalls that he, along with the other men in this group, was escorting the women, with whom he had familial relations, to find transport to go home.⁹⁹⁰⁹ Saint Cyr was not armed at any stage of the events, as shown by no arms being recovered from the group during the two searches, one at the checkpoint and one at Yamwara.⁹⁹¹⁰ Saint Cyr was not carrying out any activities that would have altered his civilian status at the time of his abduction. This conclusion is not affected by Saint Cyr holding a rank within the FACA at the time,⁹⁹¹¹ or the recovery of the purported ‘Seleka card’ on him, following a search by Mr Yekatom’s element.⁹⁹¹² The Chamber therefore finds that the distinct element of murder as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the person be either hors de combat, or a civilian, medical personnel, or religious personnel taking no active part in the hostilities, is met.

vi. Persecution as a crime against humanity (Count 17)

4222. Under Count 17, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with the crime of persecution as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, of the persons in Yamwara by targeting them on the basis of political, ethnic and/or religious grounds by virtue of the conduct pertaining to Counts 11 to 16.

Recalling of factual findings

4223. The Chamber considered the circumstances showing why Mr Yekatom’s elements stopped the seven persons at the checkpoint. The Chamber found that when elements from Mr Yekatom’s group apprehended these seven persons at a checkpoint led by Alkanto close to the Lapo N’Gomat family house and Yamwara, Alkanto pointed to the women as belonging to the family of Mamour and Michel Djotodia in the presence of the elements in his group. Alkanto’s identification of the women being related to Djotodia and Mamour as well as being Muslims, combined with Alkanto’s negative feelings centred around a desire for revenge against the women, predisposed Alkanto’s group to perceive the seven persons as ‘Muslims’.⁹⁹¹³

4224. The Chamber found that, at Yamwara, in Cœur de Lion’s presence, elements in Mr Yekatom’s group, including Bojos, interrogated P-1704, P-1705, P-1716, and Saint Cyr individually on their identity, ethnicity, and reasons for being there with the women, also demanding the captive men to speak in the dialect associated with their respective ethnicities.⁹⁹¹⁴ When Saint Cyr was unable to do so, elements in Mr Yekatom's group accused him of being 'Goula', and therefore associated with Djotodia.⁹⁹¹⁵

⁹⁹¹³ See paragraph 96 above.

4225. The Chamber considered the words used by Cœur de Lion during Saint Cyr's mistreatment. The Chamber found that Cœur de Lion, who was observing Saint Cyr's mistreatment, encouraged the assailants and ordered them to continue, saying, inter alia, that the victims were 'Muslims' and 'Seleka' and to 'do the job properly'.⁹⁹¹⁶

4226. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom himself interrogated the female captives about their family background and ethnicity.⁹⁹¹⁷

4227. In addition to these findings recalled by the Chamber in respect of Counts 11 to 16, the Chamber further recalls that it found that Mr Yekatom knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.⁹⁹¹⁸

Perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law, one or more persons of fundamental rights

4228. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's arguments concerning persecution that the Prosecution has failed to establish that the crimes discriminatorily targeted the Muslim population.⁹⁹¹⁹ As regards the events at Yamwara, the Yekatom Defence argues that the alleged crimes concerned 'suspected or actual Seleka forces and were therefore part of the legitimate aim recognised in the Confirmation Decision'.⁹⁹²⁰

4229. The Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom's elements severely deprived all seven persons that were apprehended and brought to Yamwara of their physical liberty and did not provide them with any procedural rights for the respective duration. Mr Yekatom's elements deprived the seven persons of their right to liberty and security of person,⁹⁹²¹ right against arbitrary arrest and detention and related procedural guarantees,⁹⁹²² right not be subjected to torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment,⁹⁹²³ and right of all persons deprived of their liberty to be treated with humanity and with respect for their inherent dignity.⁹⁹²⁴ Saint Cyr was additionally deprived of his right to life.⁹⁹²⁵ Accordingly, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom's elements severely deprived all the seven persons who were apprehended and brought to Yamwara of fundamental rights, contrary to international law. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the requirement is met in respect of the first element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute.

Targeted by reason of identity of a group or collectivity, or group or collectivity targeted as such 4230. In respect of the second element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator targeted such person or persons by reason of the identity of a group or collectivity or targeted the group or collectivity as such, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met, by virtue of Mr Yekatom's elements perceiving the seven persons as Muslims. The Chamber considers that even though some of these seven persons were not Muslims themselves, however, by virtue of being apprehended together and suspected of being linked to the Seleka, Mr Yekatom's group considered them all to be Muslims.

4231. In respect of the third element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that such targeting was based on political, racial, national, ethnic, cultural, religious, gender as defined in article 7, paragraph 3, of the Statute, or other grounds that are universally recognised as impermissible under international law, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met, by virtue of such targeting being based on religious grounds.

Committed in connection with any act referred to in Article 7(1) of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court

4232. In respect of the fourth element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the conduct was committed in connection with any act referred to in Article 7, paragraph 1 of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met in respect of all the seven persons. The conduct of Mr Yekatom's elements, wherein they severely deprived the seven persons of physical liberty and subjected them to great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health, including torture and murder, amounted to acts referred to in article 7, paragraph 1 of the Statute and were linked to the targeting.

b. Individual criminal responsibility

i. Mr Yekatom

4233. The Chamber now turns to Mr Yekatom's responsibility under Counts 11 to 17. Mr Yekatom is alleged to have committed the aforementioned crime jointly with another or through another under Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute.

Recalling of factual findings

4234. The Chamber considered the setting up of Yamwara as a base for Mr Yekatom's elements. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's group established a base at Yamwara at one point in December 2013 following the Bangui Attack.⁹⁹²⁶ Elements who had not participated in the Bangui Attack joined Mr Yekatom's group at Yamwara after 5 December 2013.⁹⁹²⁷ Considerable number of elements received accommodation in the school buildings or in ⁹⁹²⁶ See paragraph 89 above.

provisional shelters around the premises of Yamwara, including Cœur de Lion.⁹⁹²⁸ When the base at Yamwara was established, Mr Yekatom's group set up checkpoints along its perimeter to monitor passage of vehicles and people, including, at least, one set up by Alkanto close to Yamwara.⁹⁹²⁹

4235. The Chamber considered Mr Yekatom's control of activities at Yamwara. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom did not live at Yamwara and slept elsewhere close to the airport. Mr Yekatom did regularly visit Yamwara and maintained a constant presence there through his elements.⁹⁹³⁰ Mr Yekatom was in charge of Yamwara with Cœur de Lion as his deputy.⁹⁹³¹ All witnesses who were at Yamwara during the relevant time considered Mr Yekatom to be the 'chief' of all activities at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom was also the overall chief on matters of punishment and enforcing discipline at Yamwara, and his section chiefs also had a responsibility to discipline elements. Mr Yekatom maintained overall control over the activities at Yamwara at all times, including through Cœur de Lion. Mr Yekatom had undisputed authority over Cœur de Lion, Alkanto and Bojos, among others.⁹⁹³²

4237. The Chamber considered Mr Yekatom's knowledge about the Yamwara Incident, in particular his approval of the elements involved in this incident. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom came to know about this incident, including the actions of the element that had cut off Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and an ear. Later, Mr Yekatom said that this element had done a ‘good job’ insofar. Mr Yekatom did not punish this element for these acts, on the contrary, rewarded this element with posts of responsibility within his group, including as part of his security detail. Mr Yekatom considered Saint Cyr a ‘traitor’ and ‘in cahoots with the Seleka’ and that therefore, they could not ‘keep him’. When asked about Saint Cyr’s treatment, Mr Yekatom said in Sango ‘eforolo tonga na papai’ – meaning that ‘they peeled the papaya’, ‘they removed the skin like they would do to a papaya’.⁹⁹³⁴ The expression ‘peeling’ or ‘skinning’ the ‘papaya’ was used by elements in Mr Yekatom’s group in relation to the treatment of captured persons suspected of being Seleka.⁹⁹³⁵

4238. The Chamber considered Mr Yekatom’s direct interactions with the captives. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom met the female captives inside Cœur de Lion’s house that night and introduced himself as ‘Rombhot’ and ‘the chief’. Mr Yekatom interrogated the female captives about their ethnicities and family background. Mr Yekatom knew that the three women were Muslim.⁹⁹³⁶ Mr Yekatom’s presence and words at this stage were not reassuring to the female captives. The female captives had no indication about, or reason to believe, the genuineness of Mr Yekatom’s composure or purported efforts to have them released.⁹⁹³⁷ Mr Yekatom knew that his elements had captured, mistreated, and kept them at gunpoint at Yamwara.⁹⁹³⁸ On the morning of 25 December 2013, Mr Yekatom met the five captives at this location and introduced himself.⁹⁹³⁹ Mr Yekatom was aware that Sylvestre Yagouzou kept them in the location close to the M’Poko airport surrounded by Anti-Balaka elements.⁹⁹⁴⁰

4239. The Chamber considered Mr Yekatom’s direct interactions with Saint Cyr’s father. The Chamber found that the same evening of the Yamwara Incident, P-1654, Saint Cyr’s father, came to Yamwara to meet Mr Yekatom. Mr Yekatom, with Bojos and Cœur de Lion, questioned P-1654 about his family for hours, including about his ethnicity, and threatened him and his family with death.⁹⁹⁴¹ They asked him why ‘the Goula’, in particular, Mamour’s relative, had been invited to the funeral; they also asked about Saint Cyr's relation with him.⁹⁹⁴² Mr Yekatom did not inform P-1654, who was fearful for Saint Cyr, about the state and location of Saint Cyr or that of the other captives.⁹⁹⁴³ After hearing the questioning from Mr Yekatom and his elements and upon P-1654's return from Yamwara to his house, the day after Saint Cyr and the others were captured, P-1654 and the rest of his family fled Boeing.⁹⁹⁴⁴

4241. In assessing Mr Yekatom's responsibility, the Chamber has regard to (i) the level of control he exercised over the activities at Yamwara and his elements there; (ii) his presence at Yamwara on the evening of 24 December 2013; (iii) his direct interactions with the female captives and Saint Cyr's father that evening; (iv) his direct interactions subsequently with the five captives at the Anti-Balaka base close to the airport; (v) his direct interactions with P-1839 after the incident; (vi) his use of the phrase 'peeling the papaya' concerning Saint Cyr; and (vii) his approval of the actions of his elements.

Control of person or persons who execute the material elements of the crime

4242. The Chamber finds that from the moment of the capture of the seven persons and at least until their respective death or release, Mr Yekatom retained control over the actions of his elements and of their will. When Alkanto and his elements brought the seven persons from the checkpoint to Yamwara, they brought them in front of Cœur de Lion's house.⁹⁹⁵⁰ It was in Cœur de Lion's presence that the four male captives were interrogated individually.⁹⁹⁵¹

4243. In the evening of abduction of the seven persons on 24 December 2013, Mr Yekatom was present at Yamwara with Cœur de Lion and Bojos when they met P-1654, Saint Cyr's father.⁹⁹⁵² Mr Yekatom did not inform Saint Cyr's father, who was fearful for Saint Cyr, about his state and location.⁹⁹⁵³

4244. Mr Yekatom, through Cœur de Lion, instrumentalised his elements, to beat, interrogate, break legs, tie up, and maim Saint Cyr. As recalled above, the element that cut off Saint Cyr's body parts felt that there was 'no choice' but to do it.⁹⁹⁵⁴ Further, the Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom said that this element had done a 'good job insofar', in respect of the actions concerning Saint Cyr, which not only shows the reaffirmation of his control over the actions of this element, and those of Cœur de Lion, but also an approval thereof.⁹⁹⁵⁵ The Chamber considers, that, given Cœur de Lion's presence, encouragement, and orders to the assailants to 'do the job properly', this element was replaceable at the time of the incident.⁹⁹⁵⁶ The Chamber further recalls that Mr Yekatom approved of his elements mistreating the remaining six persons during their captivity at Yamwara.⁹⁹⁵⁷

4245. In respect of the male captives, Mr Yekatom, through Cœur de Lion, instrumentalised his elements to apprehend, search, beat, interrogate, and threaten with death P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716. Alkanto apprehended the group of seven at the checkpoint and Mr Yekatom's elements at the checkpoint threatened them with death, using the phrase 'peeling the papaya'. Cœur de Lion was present when the seven persons were brought to Yamwara, when P-1704, P-1705, P-1716 were beaten, and when Saint Cyr was tortured. Bojos was one of Mr Yekatom's elements that interrogated the male captives at Yamwara. It was in Cœur de Lion's house where Mr Yekatom's element kept the female captives at gunpoint. Similarly, it was under Cœur de Lion's watch that P-1716 was kept overnight at Yamwara. P-1716's father paid a ransom to both Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom for P-1716's release.

4246. In respect of the female captives, Mr Yekatom instrumentalised his elements to apprehend, search, interrogate, and threaten them with death at various points during their captivity. Mr Yekatom's elements kept the three women under the veranda of Cœur de Lion's house during this time and were taken later inside his house where they were kept under gunpoint.⁹⁹⁵⁸ When Mr Yekatom was in Yamwara later that evening, he himself met the three female captives inside this house on 24 December 2013 and questioned them about their ethnicities and family background.⁹⁹⁵⁹ Following this, Mr Yekatom's elements further kept the five captives, including the three female captives, in another location at Yamwara, after regrouping them following Saint Cyr's torture, and threatened them with death.⁹⁹⁶⁰ Mr Yekatom used Sylvestre Yagouzou in keeping the five captives at a base close to the airport, surrounded by Anti-Balaka elements.⁹⁹⁶¹

4247. The Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom's elements used the phrase 'peeling the papaya' that has been used in other contexts to refer to the treatment of captured Seleka.⁹⁹⁶² When asked about Saint Cyr's treatment particularly, Mr Yekatom himself used this phrase.⁹⁹⁶³ In the view of the Chamber, this phrase spoke to a level of an understanding amongst Mr Yekatom's elements about a manner of mistreatment, and possible death, of those suspected to be Seleka, despite being civilian. In the Chamber's view, the execution of this phrase did not require Mr Yekatom to be physically present at the time when those suspected of being Seleka were captured or to have given a specific order in that respect. This phrase did, however, denote a power of Mr Yekatom to frustrate its execution, if needed. Neither Cœur de Lion, given his position as Mr Yekatom's deputy, nor any other elements within his group, shared this power to frustrate the commission of acts, involving 'peeling the papaya'.

4248. Furthermore, also in respect of the six persons, the Chamber considered that Mr Yekatom had the sole power to end the deprivation of their physical liberty and their mistreatment during their captivity by his elements. Mr Yekatom had the authority to issue the relevant orders to require that his elements abide by the legal standards of treatment of the captives and to grant them procedural rights under international law and CAR domestic law. Despite this, the Chamber notes that when Mr Yekatom arrived in Yamwara, the captivity and mistreatment of the six persons did not abate. The Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom did not take any steps to ensure that the six persons were treated with dignity. The Chamber recalls that when Mr Yekatom met with Saint Cyr's father, P-1654, at Yamwara that evening, the five captives were not sent home. The five captives continued to be kept at gunpoint at another location in Yamwara where Mr Yekatom's elements again threatened to kill them. The Chamber found that, subsequently, Mr Yekatom's elements brought the five captives to another location close to the M'Poko airport. The Chamber considers that this did not mean that Mr Yekatom relinquished control over the five captives. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's elements coordinated with Wenezoui and Sylvestre Yagouzou and the Anti-Balaka based behind the M'Poko airport in the transfer and captivity of the five captives.⁹⁹⁶⁴ The Chamber further found that Mr Yekatom met the five captives again when they were being kept in the base close to the airport.⁹⁹⁶⁵ In the view of the Chamber, this signalled that Mr Yekatom continued to maintain control over the term of their captivity, its conditions, and their treatment. The Chamber notes that at no point until the release of the captives, did Mr Yekatom exercise his prerogative to release the six persons when he met Saint Cyr's father, P-1654, earlier. In the view of the Chamber, Mr Yekatom used the power apparatus available to him to steer it intentionally towards the commission of the crime, without leaving any of his elements at liberty to decide whether the crime is to be executed.

4249. The Chamber has further considered Mr Yekatom's approval of the actions of his elements as regards this incident. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom approved of his elements capturing, interrogating, keeping captive, and mistreating the seven captives. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements beating, interrogating, maiming, and killing Saint Cyr. As regards the remaining six captives, Mr Yekatom approved of his elements capturing, interrogating, threatening with death, forcing them to undress, keeping them captive at gunpoint, and keeping them within hearing distance of Saint Cyr's mistreatment at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements beating P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 at various stages of their captivity. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements keeping P-1716 overnight at Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements transferring P-1704, P-1705, P-0967, P-1811 and one other captive to another Anti-Balaka base close to the airport and handing them over to Sylvestre Yagouzou.

Mental elements

Article 30

4250. The Chamber now turns to Mr Yekatom's mens rea underlying Counts 11 to 17 pursuant to Article 30 of the Statute requiring intent and knowledge of the crimes.

4251. The Chamber has regard to Mr Yekatom's knowledge of the incident, his presence at Yamwara later in the evening of 24 December 2013, and his direct interactions with Saint Cyr's father and the three women captives. In particular, Mr Yekatom also knew that the female captives were Muslim. Mr Yekatom knew that his elements had mistreated Saint Cyr, and that he subsequently died.⁹⁹⁶⁶ When asked about Saint Cyr's treatment, Mr Yekatom said in Sango 'eforolo tonga na papai' – meaning that 'they peeled the papaya', 'they removed the skin like they would do to a papaya'.⁹⁹⁶⁷ Mr Yekatom considered they could not 'keep' Saint Cyr as he was a 'traitor' and 'in cahoots with the Seleka'.⁹⁹⁶⁸ Indeed, when

⁹⁹⁶⁸ See paragraph 103 above.

Mr Yekatom paid a visit to the three women and the two men at the Anti-Balaka base close to the airport in the following day(s),⁹⁹⁶⁹ Saint Cyr was notably not amongst them.

4252. In addition to the above, the Chamber recalls its finding that Mr Yekatom approved of his elements capturing, interrogating, keeping captives, and mistreating the seven persons. Mr Yekatom approved of his elements beating, interrogating, maiming, and killing Saint Cyr.⁹⁹⁷⁰ 4253. On this basis, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom: (i) intended his elements to severely deprive the seven persons of their physical liberty; (ii) intended his elements to torture and murder Saint Cyr; (iii) intended his elements to cruelly treat the six persons; (iv) intended his elements to inflict on the six persons great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health, by means of an inhumane act; and (v) intended his elements to persecute the seven persons on the basis that they perceived them to be Muslims.

4254. The Chamber turns to the third element of other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established the character of the inhumane act.

4255. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that the Prosecution did not establish that third party suffering was 'deliberate on the part of the perpetrator'.⁹⁹⁷¹ Having regard to the case-law cited in support of this argument, the Chamber considers that requiring that suffering be 'deliberate' introduces an additional mental requirement which is not in the legal framework. The third element of other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity need only show that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established the character, meaning the 'nature and gravity', of the act. This has been established in the present case. The Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom's elements knew that keeping the other captives within hearing distance of Saint Cyr's torture will cause severe mental suffering and that such suffering will result.

4256. The Chamber further considers that Mr Yekatom, as a FACA member, was aware of the applicable regime under international humanitarian law as well as the CAR domestic regime. Mr Yekatom knew that neither he nor his elements had any basis to capture and mistreat the seven persons. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom met the female captives while they were being kept in Cœur de Lion's house on the night of their capture,⁹⁹⁷² and was therefore able to observe their condition. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom also met Saint Cyr's father,⁹⁹⁷³ who was also related to the other captives, and must have been aware of the circumstances of their capture and treatment, along with that of Saint Cyr and the female captives. Further, the Chamber found that Mr Yekatom met the five captives on the morning of 25 December 2013 at the location where they were being kept at an Anti-Balaka base close to the airport and therefore, was able to know and observe the circumstances of their captivity there.⁹⁹⁷⁴

4257. Having regard to this, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom was aware of the factual circumstances that established the character of the inhumane act.

Counts 13 and 16

4258. The Chamber now turns to the mental element underlying Counts 13 and 16 concerning Saint Cyr's torture and murder as a war crime and cruel treatment of six persons as a war crime, namely that the victims were person or persons, who were either hors de combat, or were civilians and the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established the victim's civilian status.

4259. As regards the requirement that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established the victim's civilian status, the Yekatom Defence argues that Mr Yekatom's elements would have understood Saint Cyr's family to be 'integrated within enemy forces’.⁹⁹⁷⁵ The Chamber accepts the suggestion that elements in Mr Yekatom’s group could have viewed Saint Cyr as being ‘integrated within enemy forces’ because of his family name. However, this suggestion and these conclusions do not change the Chamber’s finding regarding Mr Yekatom’s knowledge and intent. The Chamber considers that, regardless of whether Saint Cyr, through his family name, could be considered as being ‘integrated within enemy forces’, he was a civilian, by role and function, at the time of his capture, a fact that Mr Yekatom and his elements were fully aware of.

4260. The Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom’s elements, who were present at various stages of the events, namely, Alkanto, Bojos, Cœur de Lion, and others were aware of Saint Cyr’s civilian status. In particular, the element who searched Saint Cyr at the checkpoint, discovered no weapons on him or any other group member.⁹⁹⁷⁶ When elements in Mr Yekatom’s group further searched the men in the group, including Saint Cyr at Yamwara, they did not discover any weapons.⁹⁹⁷⁷ In Cœur de Lion’s presence, elements in Mr Yekatom’s group, including Bojos, interrogated the four men individually on the reasons for being there with the women.⁹⁹⁷⁸

4261. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom was aware of the civilian status of the six persons, as the very least, on the evening of 24 December 2013, from his direct interactions with the three female captives, during which he interrogated them about their ethnicities and family background.⁹⁹⁷⁹ From his interactions with Saint Cyr’s father,⁹⁹⁸⁰ at the very least, Mr Yekatom would have known that other captives, who were also related to Saint Cyr, were also civilian. Mr Yekatom knew that, at the time of his capture, Saint Cyr was escorting the three women, with whom he had familial relations, together with the other three men, to find transport to go home, in the context of a burial of a family relative.⁹⁹⁸¹

⁹⁹⁷⁷ See paragraph 101 above.

⁹⁹⁷⁸ See paragraph 100 above.

⁹⁹⁷⁹ See paragraph 104 above.

⁹⁹⁸⁰ See paragraphs 105-106 above.

⁹⁹⁸¹ See paragraph 106 above.

4262. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the requirement is met in respect of the mental element underlying torture and murder as a war crime regarding Saint Cyr and for cruel treatment of six persons as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute.

4263. The Chamber now turns to the special intent requirement applicable to torture as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that perpetrator inflicted the pain or suffering for such purposes as: obtaining information or a confession, punishment, intimidation or coercion or for any reason based on discrimination of any kind.

4264. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's arguments that the Prosecution has not established the purposive requirement under Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, in that it has not shown the 'specific purpose for which [Saint Cyr] was allegedly tortured'.⁹⁹⁸² In support, it points to the evidence that the element that cut off Saint Cyr's body parts 'was not given any order to commit such acts' and 'only [sought] to gain personal benefits which does not align with the special intent requirement'.⁹⁹⁸³

4265. The Chamber further notes the Yekatom Defence's arguments that this element was not given any order to commit such acts and that she had undertaken the acts to 'prove her worth'.⁹⁹⁸⁴ The Chamber finds that these personal motives did not have any relevance for establishing the elements of the crime. There is nothing in the legal framework of the Court requiring proof of motive of the direct perpetrator of a war crime or a crime underlying crimes against humanity to establish the mental elements of such crimes. The Chamber also considers that merely because personal motivations can be identified, it does not necessarily follow that the required nexus with the widespread or systematic attack is inevitably lacking.⁹⁹⁸⁵

⁹⁹⁸³ Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Conf-Corr, paras 630-631.

⁹⁹⁸⁵ See further ICTY, Appeals Chamber, Prosecutor v. Duško Tadić, Judgment, 15 July 1999, IT-94-1-A, paras 248-272.

4266. As set out below, Mr Yekatom and his elements inflicted pain and suffering on Saint Cyr for the purpose of punishment, intimidation, and discrimination based on religion.

4267. At the outset, the Chamber recalls that the element in question cut off Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and an ear, being encouraged by Cœur de Lion's presence at the scene and his words and feeling that there was 'no choice'.⁹⁹⁸⁶ In light of this, the suggestion that this element, as a direct perpetrator, may have also had other motivations for executing the crime, namely, to 'prove her worth', is irrelevant for a finding of Mr Yekatom's responsibility. In the view of the Chamber, other purported motivation held by this element do not negate her acts and intention to inflict pain and suffering on Saint Cyr for the purpose of punishment, intimidation, and discrimination based on religion.

4268. The Chamber finds that the words and actions of Mr Yekatom's elements show that Saint Cyr's mistreatment was for the purpose of discrimination based on religion. Mr Yekatom's elements perceived Saint Cyr as being part of a group that was being considered 'all Muslim' at the time of its capture at the checkpoint.⁹⁹⁸⁷ In Cœur de Lion's presence, elements in Mr Yekatom's group, including Bojos, interrogated Saint Cyr on his identity, ethnicity, and reasons for being there with the women, also demanding he speak in the dialect associated with his ethnicity.⁹⁹⁸⁸ Saint Cyr and another captive, who were Boffi from their father's side and Goula from their mother's side, gave their ethnicity but neither could speak their dialect. Saint Cyr said that he was 'Boffi' but could not speak in this language. When Saint Cyr was unable to do so, elements in Mr Yekatom's group accused him of being 'Goula', and therefore associated with Djotodia.⁹⁹⁸⁹ Elements in Mr Yekatom's group continued to interrogate Saint Cyr and beat him, despite him showing his identification card and insisting that he was a FACA member.⁹⁹⁹⁰ During Saint Cyr's beating, Cœur de Lion was using terms like 'Muslims' and 'Seleka'.⁹⁹⁹¹

⁹⁹⁸⁸ See paragraph 100 above.

⁹⁹⁸⁹ See paragraph 100 above.

⁹⁹⁹¹ See paragraph 101 above.

4269. Considering these facts, together with the continuous beating, forced undressing, threats to kill, interrogation, tying up, and maiming that Saint Cyr was subjected to, the Chamber finds that the special purpose requirement of punishment and intimidation is also met.

4270. The Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom shared the special intent requirement with his elements. Mr Yekatom knew that his elements perceived Muslim civilians, due to their religious or ethnic affiliation, as collectively responsible for the crimes committed by the Seleka, or as complicit with, or supportive of, the Seleka.⁹⁹⁹² Mr Yekatom knew that Saint Cyr had family links with ‘Goula’.⁹⁹⁹³ Mr Yekatom knew that the three women, whom Saint Cyr was escorting, were Muslim.⁹⁹⁹⁴ Mr Yekatom considered Saint Cyr a ‘traitor’ and ‘in cahoots with the Seleka’ and that therefore, they could not ‘keep him’.⁹⁹⁹⁵ Later, Mr Yekatom said that the element that had cut off Saint Cyr’s body parts had done a ‘good job’ insofar. Mr Yekatom did not punish this element for these acts and, on the contrary, rewarded this element with posts of responsibility within his group, including as part of his security detail.⁹⁹⁹⁶

4271. This notwithstanding, the Chamber considers that for the purposes of assessing Mr Yekatom’s responsibility in relation to the events concerning Saint Cyr, as set out below, it was sufficient, in this instance, to establish the special intent requirement only in respect of Mr Yekatom, and not additionally, in relation to the element that cut off Saint Cyr’s body parts, or any other named elements in Mr Yekatom’s group.

Count 14

4272. The Chamber now turns to Mr Yekatom’s mens rea underlying Count 14, meaning the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established the gravity of the conduct.

⁹⁹⁹² See paragraph 48 above.

⁹⁹⁹⁴ See paragraph 104 above.

4273. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's argument that Alkanto had 'personal vendetta' towards P-1811 and that his 'vigilance was further heightened by his personal grievances' against her and her husband.⁹⁹⁹⁷ The Chamber finds that these personal motives did not have any relevance for establishing the elements of the crime. There is nothing in the legal framework of the Court requiring proof of motive of the direct perpetrator of a crime underlying crimes against humanity to establish the mental elements of such crimes. The Chamber also considers that merely because personal motivations can be identified, it does not necessarily follow that the required nexus with the widespread or systematic attack is inevitably lacking.⁹⁹⁹⁸

4274. The Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom knew that neither he nor his elements had any legal authority to capture the seven persons at the checkpoint and keep them at Yamwara. Mr Yekatom, as a FACA member, was aware of the applicable regime under international humanitarian law as well as the CAR domestic regime. Mr Yekatom must have known that the seven persons should have been granted the basic procedural rights during their captivity. Mr Yekatom knew that, regardless of the purported suspicions entertained by his elements, his elements had no legal authority or basis to subject the seven persons to the mistreatment during their captivity.

4275. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom knew that, at the time of his capture, Saint Cyr was escorting the three women, with whom he had familial relations, to find transport to go home, in the context of a burial of a family relative.⁹⁹⁹⁹ Mr Yekatom must have known that the other male captives, namely, P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716, were similarly accompanying the women and for the same reason. In respect of P-1716, who was released the following morning after his father paid a ransom to Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom, Mr Yekatom knew that P-1716 was being kept at Yamwara, at the very latest on the morning of 25 December 2013 when P-1716's father paid a ransom to Cœur de Lion and Mr Yekatom. Mr Yekatom must have known that P-1716 was part of the seven persons that had been apprehended at the checkpoint and had been assimilated in the group. In respect of Saint Cyr, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom knew that Saint Cyr was being targeted because of his association with the women in the group and considered him a ‘traitor’ and ‘in cahoots with the Seleka’.¹⁰⁰⁰⁰ In respect of P-0967, P-1811, and another captive, the Chamber found that Mr Yekatom knew that his elements had captured and kept them at gunpoint at Yamwara.¹⁰⁰⁰¹ Further, on the morning of 25 December 2013, Mr Yekatom met the five captives, namely, P-0967, P-1811, P-1704, P-1705, and another captive, at the Anti-Balaka base and introduced himself. Mr Yekatom was aware that Sylvestre Yagouzou had kept the five in this location close to the M’Poko airport surrounded by Anti-Balaka elements.¹⁰⁰⁰²

4276. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom was aware of the factual circumstances that established the gravity of the conduct in respect of the imprisonment and other severe deprivation of physical liberty.

Conclusion

4277. On this basis, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom committed through others, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute: (i) other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute (Count 11); (ii) torture as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(f) of the Statute (Count 12); (iii) torture as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, for Saint Cyr and cruel treatment as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, for six persons (Count 13); (iv) imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute (Count 14); (v) murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute (Count 15); (vi) murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Count 16); and (vii) persecution as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute (Count 17).

ii. Mr Ngaïssona

4278. The Chamber now turns to Mr Ngaïssona’s responsibility under Counts 11 to 17. Mr Ngaïssona is alleged to have committed the aforementioned crimes by facilitating the commission of the crimes as set out in the confirmed charges by aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting in their commission under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.

¹⁰⁰⁰⁰ See paragraph 103 above.

¹⁰⁰⁰² See paragraph 110 above.

Recalling of factual findings

4279. The Chamber refers to the factual findings as recalled above.¹⁰⁰⁰³

4280. In addition, the Chamber found that between the coordinated attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa of 5 December 2013 and until his return to Bangui on 14 January 2014, Mr Ngaïssona remained informed of the continued activities related to the Anti-Balaka, and continued liaising with various individuals in this regard.¹⁰⁰⁰⁴

Aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting

4281. In light of this, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona, by funding and supporting the Anti-Balaka prior to the attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, and subsequently, aided, abetted, or otherwise assisted in the commission of the crimes underlying Counts 11, 13 (in respect of the six persons), 14 and 17 forming part of the Yamwara Incident by Mr Yekatom's elements. For the same reasons, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Kovács dissenting, finds that Mr Ngaïssona aided, abetted, or otherwise assisted in the commission of crimes underlying Counts 12, 13, 15 and 16 concerning Saint Cyr's torture and murder. As discussed in further detail below, Judge Kovács considers that the mental element, namely, that Mr Ngaïssona was aware that this crime would take place in the ordinary course of events, was not satisfied in respect of Saint Cyr's torture and murder.

Mental elements

4282. As regards Mr Ngaïssona's mens rea, the Chamber recalls its finding that Mr Ngaïssona made his contributions fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim civilian population in the west of the CAR, committing the widespread attack that ultimately took place from September 2013 through February 2014, including the seminal coordinated ¹⁰⁰⁰³ See paragraphs 4028-4031 above.

¹⁰⁰⁰⁴ See paragraph 57 above.

Anti-Balaka attacks of Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.¹⁰⁰⁰⁵ Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the advance of the groups towards Bangui as well as of the hostilities during this advance, including the killings of Muslim civilians from these locations.¹⁰⁰⁰⁶ Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.¹⁰⁰⁰⁷ The Chamber further considered that Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial aid, organisational assistance and psychological support to the Anti-Balaka in the context of anti-foreign sentiments and inflammatory rhetoric openly expressed by François Bozizé and others, which incited vigilance against those perceived to support the Seleka, in particular Muslim civilians.¹⁰⁰⁰⁸

4283. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona (i) knew that the Anti-Balaka would inflict great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health, by means of an inhumane act, on Muslim civilians; (ii) intended for Muslim civilians to be severely deprived of physical liberty; and (iii) intended for Muslim civilians to be killed generally.

4284. The Chamber, by majority, Judge Kovács dissenting, finds that Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka would also torture and kill Muslim civilians within the context of the Yamwara Incident, within the meaning of Article 30(3) of the Statute which requires that ‘a circumstance exists or a consequence will occur in the ordinary course of events’.

4285. Judge Kovács has considered the particularity of the conduct concerning Saint Cyr’s torture involving an element in Mr Yekatom’s group cutting off his toes, fingers, and an ear for reasons, inter alia, that this element may gain the trust of the chiefs in Mr Yekatom’s group.¹⁰⁰⁰⁹ Judge Kovács also notes, in this context, the particular circumstances of Alkanto bearing negative feelings centred around a desire for revenge against the women,

¹⁰⁰⁰⁷ See paragraph 49 above.

accompanied by Saint Cyr.¹⁰⁰¹⁰ Judge Kovács further notes that the Chamber did not find any instances of torture, similar to that faced by Saint Cyr, in any of the crimes that the Anti-Balaka committed in their advance to Bangui prior to 5 December 2013. Further, he considers that the charges, as confirmed, indeed do not contain any comparable incidents. In this respect, he draws a distinction between the incident concerning Djido Saleh in which his body parts were cut off when he was already dead, and not before, as was the case with Saint Cyr.

4286. Accordingly, Judge Kovács considers that these facts taken together show that the particular cruelty involved in the crime of torture, namely the cutting off of Saint Cyr's toes, fingers, and ear did not take place in the ordinary course of events within the meaning attributed to it in the jurisprudence as outlined above.¹⁰⁰¹¹ In his view, the personal and specific nature of the motives of Mr Yekatom's elements that contributed to the commission of this crime created a break in what one could consider 'the ordinary course', as required by Article 30(3) of the Statute, and therefore considers that this test is not satisfied in this specific instance in respect of Mr Ngaïssona. Further, Judge Kovács is of the view that it was Saint Cyr's torture that resulted in his death, and therefore, similar considerations also apply to Saint Cyr's murder. To conclude on this aspect, Judge Kovács considers that Mr Ngaïssona was not aware that Muslim civilians would be subjected to the particular cruelty resulting in their death, as was the case with Saint Cyr, in these circumstances.

4288. The majority has noted Judge Kovács' views and considers that the Chamber's assessment of torture was not limited to the cutting off of Saint Cyr's body parts and extended to the entire circumstances concerning his mistreatment. Further, the Chamber found that

Mr Ngaïssona was aware that the Anti-Balaka would inflict great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health on Muslim civilians. The Chamber also found that Mr Ngaïssona was aware that the Anti-Balaka would kill Muslim civilians. In the view of the majority, this awareness of mistreating and killing Muslim civilians included within its ambit, cutting off of body parts, regardless of whether such specific incidents of comparable nature would have taken place, prior to the Yamwara Incident, in the context of the crimes committed in the Anti-Balaka's advance to Bangui before 5 December 2013.

4289. Further, the majority's considerations apply regardless of whether Saint Cyr's death resulted from his torture. In the view of the majority, the fact that Judge Kovács differentiates between cutting off of body parts of Saint Cyr when alive and Djido Saleh when dead does not affect the majority's conclusion.

4290. Turning to the special intent requirement that Mr Ngaïssona's assistance was made with the aim of facilitating the commission of the charged crimes, the Chamber recalls its considerations above.¹⁰⁰¹²

4291. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial contributions and support to the Anti-Balaka for the purpose of facilitating the crimes against the Muslim civilian population, including killings of Muslims. In particular, the Chamber notes that Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the hostilities committed by the Anti-Balaka during their advance towards Bangui. Mr Ngaïssona also remained informed of their continued activities until his return to Bangui on 14 January 2014.

4292. Accordingly, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Kovács dissenting in respect of Saint Cyr's torture and murder, finds that the only reasonable conclusion in these circumstances is that Mr Ngaïssona was not only aware that the Anti-Balaka would commit these crimes in the ordinary course of events, but intended for them to commit these crimes forming part of the Yamwara Incident and lent his assistance with the aim of facilitating such crimes.

4293. Having regard to his views above,¹⁰⁰¹³ Judge Kovács considers that Mr Ngaïssona could not have lent his assistance with the aim of facilitating Saint Cyr's torture and murder. At the same time, Judge Kovács considers appropriate to clarify that he agrees with the majority that Mr Ngaïssona lent his assistance with the aim of facilitating the crimes, including the cruel treatment of the six persons and the killing of Muslim civilians generally as outlined in other contexts.

4294. The majority has noted Judge Kovács' views and recalls that in order to satisfy the special intent requirement that Mr Ngaïssona's assistance was made with the aim of facilitating the commission of the charged crimes, it was not necessary to have been aware of the specific details of each of the crimes. In the present instance, in the view of the majority, it was sufficient that Mr Ngaïssona was aware that the Anti-Balaka would target Muslim civilians in the ordinary course of events.

4295. On this basis of the same factual findings recalled above, the Chamber finds that the following specific knowledge requirements are met: (i) that the perpetrator was aware of the victims being either hors de combat, or civilians, medical personnel or religious personnel taking no active part in hostilities, applicable to murder, torture, and cruel treatment as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute; (ii) that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances establishing the nature and gravity of the inhumane act inflicting great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health, pursuant to Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute; and (iii) that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances establishing the gravity of conduct, applicable to imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty, pursuant to Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute.

4296. Turning to the specific intent requirements concerning a number of charged crimes, the Chamber recalls the same findings as above, as well as its finding that Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.¹⁰⁰¹⁴

4297. On this basis, the Chamber concludes that Mr Ngaïssona intended the Muslim civilian population to be discriminated against on the basis of their religious and ethnic commonalities with the Seleka. Accordingly, the specific intent requirement applicable to the crime against humanity of persecution, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, is also met.

Conclusion

4298. On the basis of the above, the Chamber therefore finds that, within the context of the captivity of seven individuals at Yamwara by Mr Yekatom's elements on 24 December 2013 and the subsequent transfer and captivity of five of them until their release on or around 27 December 2013, Mr Ngaïssona aided, abetted or otherwise assisted, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute, the commission of the following crimes: (i) other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute (Count 11); (ii) cruel treatment as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, for six persons (Count 13); (iii) imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity, pursuant to by Article 7(1)(e) of the Statute (Count 14); (v) and (iv) persecution as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute (Count 17).

4299. Further, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Kovács dissenting, finds that Mr Ngaïssona aided, abetted, or otherwise assisted in the commission of crimes of (i) torture as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(f) of the Statute (Count 12); (ii) torture as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, for Saint Cyr, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Count 13); (iii) murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute (Count 15); and (iv) murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Count 16). Judge Kovács would have acquitted Mr Ngaïssona on Counts 12, 13, 15 and 16 in respect of Saint Cyr's torture and killing. Accordingly, Judge Kovács has not considered Saint Cyr's torture and murder for the purposes of assessing Mr Ngaïssona's liability for persecution as a crime against humanity (Count 17), but agrees with the majority on the outcome for this count.

iv. Crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki Axis (Counts 24 to 28)

a. Crimes committed

i. Forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity and displacement as a war crime (Counts 24 and 25)

4300. Under Counts 24 and 25, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, and displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, for the dislocation of the majority of the Muslim population from their towns and villages between on or about 10 January 2014 and on or about 6 February 2014, in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki Axis (including Sekia, Ndangala, Bimon, Kapou, Bossongo, Pissa, Mbaïki).

Recalling of factual findings

4301. The Chamber found that starting on 10 January 2014, Mr Yekatom and elements under his control left Yamwara and advanced from Bangui on the road towards Mbaïki, taking over a number of villages in the Lobaye prefecture, located in the south-west part of the country, including Sekia, Ndangala, Bimon, Kapou, Bossongo and Pissa.¹⁰⁰¹⁵ They did not meet with resistance as they passed from PK9 to Sekia and Pissa, since the Seleka had fled these areas after learning that the Anti-Balaka were approaching.¹⁰⁰¹⁶ At the time of the group's presence on the Mbaïki road, Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto instructed the elements to kill all the Muslims in their area.¹⁰⁰¹⁷

¹⁰⁰¹⁵ See paragraph 113 above.

¹⁰⁰¹⁷ See paragraph 114 above.

4302. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's group took over checkpoints at PK9, Sekia, Bimon, Bossongo and Pissa in their advance towards Mbaïki.¹⁰⁰¹⁸ Mr Yekatom and his elements also set up new bases at PK9 and Sekia.¹⁰⁰¹⁹ By taking over these checkpoints, Mr Yekatom and his group aimed at searching and identifying Muslims in the area and raising money to finance the group and its needs. Mr Yekatom's group was armed.¹⁰⁰²⁰

4303. The Chamber found that a significant proportion of the Muslim civilian population fled their towns and villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis due to and in fear of the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the axis.¹⁰⁰²¹ The Chamber found that at least 1,000 Muslim civilians who fled from locations along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and in the Lobaye prefecture went to Mbaïki, substantially increasing the Muslim population of the town.¹⁰⁰²² Muslims in Mbaïki at the time were living in difficulty, under conditions of overcrowding, hunger and fear of death from the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁰²³

4304. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom and elements under his control entered Mbaïki on 30 January 2014.¹⁰⁰²⁴ That day, a meeting was held at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki, with Mr Yekatom and members of his group, representatives of the Mbaïki civilian and religious authorities, international organisations and NGOs, as well as the Sangaris. At the meeting, the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki, which was a foregone conclusion at that point, was decided.¹⁰⁰²⁵ The Chamber found that after the meeting, the prefect and other individuals contacted the authorities to arrange the convoy that would transport the Muslim civilian population out of Mbaïki.¹⁰⁰²⁶ The Chamber found that during this timeframe, elements of Mr Yekatom's group threatened and harassed Muslim civilians in Mbaïki, telling them to leave the area.¹⁰⁰²⁷ The Chamber found that the Anti-Balaka also attacked a gendarme patrol in Mbaïki which was there to protect the population, taking the patrol's weapons and the service car that they were using.¹⁰⁰²⁸

4305. The Chamber found that on 6 February 2014, Chadian forces transported a first group of Muslim civilians from Mbaïki to Chad and other locations in the CAR. These Muslim civilians had to leave their belongings behind. They left Mbaïki in fear of the Anti-Balaka and, in particular, due to the arrival of Mr Yekatom's group to Mbaïki. The total number of Muslims removed from Mbaïki at the time amounted to at least 3,000. As a result of this dislocation, very few Muslim civilians remained in Mbaïki. The living conditions in the refugee camps in Chad were extremely difficult.¹⁰⁰²⁹ The Chamber found that thereafter, the Congolese MISCA transported a second group of Muslims from Mbaïki to Bangui and other locations.¹⁰⁰³⁰

4306. As regards forcible transfer and deportation, the Yekatom Defence challenges the causal link between the movement of Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and 'the displacement and evacuation of the Muslim population'.¹⁰⁰³¹ It argues that the coercive environment was created by 'a convergence of adverse events, all of which was unconnected to Mr Yekatom's conduct'.¹⁰⁰³² As part of these adverse events, the Yekatom Defence points to the Muslim population becoming more vulnerable following the resignation of Michel Djotodia and the withdrawal of Seleka forces and the 'increase in the intensity of hostilities between local communities' with retaliation against Muslims being undertaken by local civilians and self-defence groups who had taken up arms prior to the arrival of Mr Yekatom's group along the axis.¹⁰⁰³³ It further submits that the Muslim population fled their localities towards Mbaïki 'at times upon the advice or instruction of the Seleka', having lost protection from the Seleka forces.¹⁰⁰³⁴ It submits that the Muslim population was mistaken in its understanding as to who the perpetrators of crimes were that led to their forced expulsion,¹⁰⁰³⁵ and was also mistaken that the arrival of Mr Yekatom's group would result in conflict.¹⁰⁰³⁶ The Yekatom Defence submits that the victims' decision 'to leave the localities prior to the commission of crimes or threatening acts due to a fear of violence commonly associated with armed conflict, or a general fear or distrust of the particular authority in question does not allow for the conclusive determination' on the causal link.¹⁰⁰³⁷ It argues that the first element of Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute is not met where the individual voluntarily leaves the area before any coercive circumstances arise and where the conduct following their departure was not aimed at creating conditions to hamper their return.¹⁰⁰³⁸

4307. The Yekatom Defence also argues that the alleged dislocation of Muslims was 'incidental' as a result of 'an entirely lawful attack, or collateral consequences of a lawful attack'.¹⁰⁰³⁹ It further argues that the purpose of the movement of Mr Yekatom's group along the axis was to 'provide security and facilitate the work of the gendarmerie in the midst of a security vacuum created' and the securing of Seleka posts served a legitimate military purpose 'namely to prevent the return of the Seleka'.¹⁰⁰⁴⁰

4308. As regards the war crime of displacement, in addition to its submission that the movement of Mr Yekatom's group was legitimate, the Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom issued no specific order for it to occur, nor has the Prosecution established that Mr Yekatom's instructions had a direct effect on the commission of the crime and he would have been virtually certain that his instructions would result in the commission of the crime in the ordinary course of events.¹⁰⁰⁴¹

4309. As regards the requirement that the crime must take place ‘by expulsion or other coercive acts’, the Chamber recalls that forcible transfer and deportation are ‘open-conduct’ crimes in that the perpetrator may commit several different acts that may qualify.¹⁰⁰⁴² In assessing this element in respect of both forcible transfer and deportation in the present case, the Chamber recalls that the term ‘forcibly’ is not restricted to physical force, but may include inter alia threat of force or coercion, such as that caused by fear of violence.¹⁰⁰⁴³

4310. The Chamber has considered the existence of coercive acts concerning three sets of persons that were dislocated within the relevant timeframe: first, those that were dislocated from locations along the PK9-Mbaïki axis as soon as Mr Yekatom’s group began advancing on 10 January 2014; second, those that were dislocated as Mr Yekatom’s group advanced along the axis, took over villages, and took over checkpoints; and third, those that were dislocated from Mbaïki during the period that Mr Yekatom’s group was present there.

4311. As regards the first set, the Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom leaving Yamwara with his elements and advancing towards Mbaïki starting on 10 January 2014 was sufficient, in itself, to create the coercive circumstances due to which the Muslims along the axis dislocated. In the Chamber’s view, the subsequent takeover of villages, taking over of checkpoints, and continued armed presence of Mr Yekatom’s group along this axis hampered the return of these Muslims to their homes during this time and thereafter.

4312. As regards the second set, the Chamber considers that the dislocation took place as a result of the fear of violence that was set in motion by Mr Yekatom’s advance, taking over of a number of villages in the Lobaye prefecture, and taking over of checkpoints during this advance towards Mbaïki. The Chamber recalls that it found that by the time that Mr Yekatom’s group arrived Mbaïki on 30 January 2014 and met the relevant authorities there, the removal of the civilian population from Mbaïki was a foregone conclusion.

¹⁰⁰⁴² Ruto et al. Confirmation Decision, ICC-01/09-01/11-373, para. 244.

¹⁰⁰⁴³ Elements of Crimes, Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, n. 12.

4313. As regards the third set, the Chamber considers that the dislocation of these Muslims from Mbaïki occurred because of Mr Yekatom's actions mentioned above combined with living in conditions of overcrowding, hunger, and fear of death from the Anti-Balaka.

4314. As regards all three sets mentioned above, the Chamber finds that both forcible transfer and deportation took place as a result of the fear of violence that was set in motion by Mr Yekatom's acts. In the view of the Chamber, the Muslim persons, in all three sets, fleeing along the PK9-Mbaïki axis had no genuine choice in leaving their homes to other parts of the CAR, or to the neighbouring countries. The Chamber recalls in this regard that there must be a genuine lack of choice on the part of the person or persons forcibly transferred, and that the prevailing situation and atmosphere, and other relevant circumstances, including in particular the victims' vulnerability, has to be taken into account when assessing whether the individuals transferred indeed had a genuine choice.¹⁰⁰⁴⁴ In the view of the Chamber, Muslims along the PK9-Mbaïki axis would not have wished to flee, absent the circumstances created by Mr Yekatom's group in that area, including, in particular, their advance towards Mbaïki, their armed presence in the Lobaye prefecture, their takeover of villages, and taking over and setting up of checkpoints in several locations.¹⁰⁰⁴⁵

4315. The Chamber considers that even if other factors contributed to the fear of violence, the existence of such factors added to the context, but are inapt by and of themselves to impact the Chamber's conclusion above. In the view of the Chamber, the purported loss of the Seleka presence only reaffirms the Chamber's conclusion that these Muslims left as a result of Mr Yekatom's acts and not as a result of a fear of violence commonly associated with armed conflict, as argued by the Yekatom Defence. The Chamber could draw no conclusion on the Yekatom Defence's argument that these Muslims were being protected by the Seleka presence there and dislocated for loss of that protection. In any event, as noted above and below, the Chamber considers that while there may have been other factors that compounded or added to the reasons for displacement, they did not sever the link between Mr Yekatom's acts and the dislocation of Muslims.¹⁰⁰⁴⁶

¹⁰⁰⁴⁵ See ICTY, Trial Chamber II, Prosecutor v. Simić et al., Judgment, 17 October 2003, IT-95-9-T, para. 126.

¹⁰⁰⁴⁶ See paragraphs 3976-3978, 4315 above.

4316. Having regard to this, the Chamber finds that the acts of Mr Yekatom and his group amounted to ‘coercive acts’ pursuant to the first element of deportation or forcible transfer as a crime against humanity.

4317. Before turning to the remaining requirements of forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, the Chamber recalls that Muslims in Mbaïki at the time were composed of three groups: (i) Mbaïki inhabitants; (ii) Muslims who fled from localities along the PK9-Mbaïki axis; and (iii) Muslims who fled from other locations in the Lobaye prefecture.

4318. The Chamber finds that the requirement of forcible transfer is met in respect of the movement of all three categories of Muslim persons mentioned above, who were dislocated to other parts of the CAR, in the context of Mr Yekatom’s advance from Bangui to Mbaïki. The Chamber finds that the requirement of deportation is met in respect of the movement of these Muslim persons, who further fled from Mbaïki to Chad and other locations. Thus, the Chamber finds that the first requirement of forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator forcibly transferred or deported, without grounds permitted under international law, one or more persons to another State or location, by expulsion or other coercive acts, is met.

Lawful presence

4319. The Chamber now turns to the second requirement of forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, namely that such person or persons were lawfully present in the area from which they were so deported or transferred, is met. The Chamber considered that there is no evidence on the record, nor any arguments advanced by the parties, indicating that these Muslims living along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and those living in Mbaïki at the time were not lawfully present there. This applied also to those Muslim persons who had been dislocated to Mbaïki from localities not along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and who found themselves dislocated from their homes to Mbaïki during this time. The Chamber recalls in this regard also that ‘lawful presence’ does not mean that the victim must have had legal residence in the area. The protection under this provision extends to individuals, who, for whatever reason, have come to live in a community, including internally displaced persons, who have established temporary homes after being uprooted from their original communities.¹⁰⁰⁴⁷ Accordingly, and recalling that Muslim persons were present and living along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and in Mbaïki, the Chamber finds that the second requirement of forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute is met.

4320. Specifically as regards the requirement, under Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, that the transfer or deportation took place ‘without grounds permitted under international law’, and the requirement under Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute that the displacement was ‘not justified by the security of the civilians involved or by military necessity’. In addition to the factual findings above, the Chamber recalls that at the time of Mr Yekatom’s group’s presence on the Mbaïki road, Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto instructed the elements to kill all the Muslims in their area.¹⁰⁰⁴⁸ Mr Yekatom and his elements also set up new bases at PK9 and Sekia.¹⁰⁰⁴⁹ By taking over these checkpoints, Mr Yekatom and his group aimed at searching and identifying Muslims in the area and raising money to finance the group and its needs.¹⁰⁰⁵⁰

4321. The Chamber has further considered that there is no indication in the evidence on the record that the displacement of the Muslim civilian population along the PK9-Mbaïki axis was justified by their security or military necessity. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the second element of displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, namely that such order was not justified by the security of the civilians involved or by military necessity, is met.

4322. In light of the above, and absent any contrary indication on the facts, the Chamber does not consider that the transfer and displacement of Muslim civilians to Mbaïki, and Chad and other locations thereafter, had grounds permitted under international law, or otherwise was justified by the security of these civilians or military necessity. The Chamber thus finds that these requirements for forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, as well as for displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, are also met.

Order to displace

4323. The Chamber now turns to the distinct requirements of displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, meaning the perpetrator ordered a displacement of a civilian population, such order was not justified by the security of the civilians involved or by military necessity, and the perpetrator was in a position to effect such displacement by giving such order.

4324. The Chamber recalls the Yekatom Defence's arguments made in reference to the Ntaganda jurisprudence above in relation to Count 5.¹⁰⁰⁵¹ The Chamber recalls that, as regards the requirement of an 'order', the Chamber considers that conduct alone can constitute an order.¹⁰⁰⁵² This is consistent with the Ntaganda jurisprudence that states that an order within the meaning of this crime itself needs only to instruct another person in any form to (i) displace a civilian population; or (ii) perform an act or omission as a result of which such displacement would occur.¹⁰⁰⁵³

4325. In light of this, the Chamber finds that, in the present instance, Mr Yekatom's group's advance towards Mbaïki, takeover of villages, taking over of checkpoints, armed presence along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and Mr Yekatom's instruction to his elements to kill all the Muslims in their area is sufficient to constitute an 'order' within the meaning of the first element of displacement as a war crime. It was a combination of these actions that directly led to the commission of this crime. The Chamber considers that the instructions of Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto to their elements in the area under these premises constituted an order to perform an act as a result of which the displacement of the Muslim civilian population from those areas would necessarily occur. In the view of the Chamber, Mr Yekatom need not have given a formal order, written or otherwise, to his elements or to the Muslim civilian population spelling out expressly that the displacement must occur.

¹⁰⁰⁵¹ See paragraphs 3984-3985 above. See also Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, para. 661.

¹⁰⁰⁵² See further Additional Protocol II, Article 17 (stating that the displacement of the civilian population shall not be ordered for reasons related to the conflict unless the security of the civilians involved or imperative military reasons so demand); ICRC, Rule 129(B) of the Customary International Humanitarian Law, Volume II, Chapter 38, Section A (stating that parties to a non-international armed conflict may not order the displacement of the civilian population, in whole or in part, for reasons related to the conflict, unless the security of the civilians involved or imperative military reasons so demand). The Chamber considers that these provisions must be read as a prohibition of displacing the civilian population in non-international armed conflicts.

¹⁰⁰⁵³ Ntaganda Trial Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2359, para. 1081.

4326. The Chamber is also satisfied that there is a direct link between the actions of Mr Yekatom's group and the displacement of the Muslim civilian population from along the PK9-Mbaïki axis. This applies to all the three sets of persons who dislocated, as discussed above.¹⁰⁰⁵⁴ The Chamber further considers that, in the present case, Mr Yekatom's conduct need not have been the sole reason why the Muslim civilian population fled. This is because the Chamber is otherwise satisfied that had it not been for the actions of Mr Yekatom and his group, the concerned Muslim civilian population would not have been displaced. Further, as noted in its evidentiary analysis as well as in its conclusions on Count 4,¹⁰⁰⁵⁵ while there may have been other factors that compounded or added to the reasons for displacement, they did not sever the link between Mr Yekatom's acts and the displacement.

4327. The Chamber has considered the Yekatom Defence's argument concerning the victims' decision to leave the localities due to a fear of violence commonly associated with the armed conflict or a general fear or distrust of a particular authority in question or before any coercive circumstances arose.¹⁰⁰⁵⁶ The Chamber accepts that some Muslims may have left as soon as Mr Yekatom's group began advancing and prior to the takeover of villages and taking over of checkpoints. However, as also noted above in relation to forcible transfer and deportation, the Chamber considers that the armed presence of Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis from 10 January 2014 onwards and their actions until Mr Yekatom's group left Mbaïki was sufficient to hamper the return of those Muslims to their homes during this time.

¹⁰⁰⁵⁶ Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, paras 655-656.

4328. The Chamber is of the view that the armed presence of Mr Yekatom's group's on the Mbaïki road, as well as express instructions from Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto to their elements to kill all the Muslims in their area,¹⁰⁰⁵⁷ together with taking over of checkpoints by Mr Yekatom and his group, aimed at searching and identifying Muslims in the area, establish conclusively the existence of an 'order' within the meaning of this crime.¹⁰⁰⁵⁸ The Chamber considers that by advancing under these premises from Bangui on the road towards Mbaïki, taking over a number of villages in the Lobaye prefecture, located in the south-west part of the country, including Sekia, Ndangala, Bimon, Kapou, Bossongo and Pissa, Mr Yekatom's elements were ordered to perform an act as a result of which the displacement of the Muslim civilian population from these locations would necessarily occur.

Position to effect such displacement by giving such order

4329. In respect of the third element of displacement as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator was in a position to effect such displacement by giving such order, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met by virtue of Mr Yekatom's position as the chief of the group that advanced to Mbaïki as well as being the one providing the instructions to his elements to kill Muslims. The Chamber considers that taking over and being present in areas while armed, Mr Yekatom's group was in a position to cause the dislocation of Muslim civilians from their homes. Further, and while noting that the war crime of displacement does not require for displacement as such to actually occur, the Chamber considers that it was Mr Yekatom's group's actions that led to the displacement of the Muslim civilian population to Mbaïki and later to Chad and other locations.

ii. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 26 and 27)

4330. Under Counts 26 and 27, Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona are charged with murder as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute, and murder as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute of Deputy Mayor Saleh on or about 28 February 2014 in Mbaïki, in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki Axis (including Sekia, Ndangala, Bimon, Kapou, Bossongo, Pissa, Mbaïki).

Recalling of factual findings

4331. The Chamber found that Djido Saleh, the second deputy mayor of Mbaïki, and his family, were among the very few remaining Muslims in Mbaïki, following the removal of Muslim civilians out of Mbaïki.¹⁰⁰⁵⁹ The Chamber found that prior to his killing, elements of Mr Yekatom's group threatened Djido Saleh.¹⁰⁰⁶⁰ The Chamber found that on 28 February 2014, a group of individuals attacked Djido Saleh's house while he and his family were inside. Djido Saleh's family fled. As Djido Saleh tried to flee, the group of individuals pursued him and threw stones at him. Djido Saleh tried to defend himself with a bow and at least one arrow. The group of individuals, which included at least three elements of Mr Yekatom's group, one of them being Honorine Gbafalo, killed him as he tried to reach the gendarmerie. Honorine Gbafalo cut off his genitals. Other individuals beat him and cut parts of his body, including one of his ears and his neck, partly severing his head.¹⁰⁰⁶¹

Killing of one or more person

4332. The Yekatom Defence submits that the Prosecution did not identify the perpetrator and should have done so, given that it was a 'material fact'.¹⁰⁰⁶² It argues that in the absence of this, the charged crime cannot be attributed to Mr Yekatom.¹⁰⁰⁶³

4333. The Chamber recalls that, as a matter of law, it is not necessary to identify the specific perpetrator(s) within Mr Yekatom's group, who were responsible for this killing,¹⁰⁰⁶⁴ as long as it was otherwise satisfied beyond reasonable doubt that it was Mr Yekatom's elements who killed Djido Saleh. Mr Yekatom's specific conduct in relation to this killing is discussed further below. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the only reasonable inference in the circumstances discussed above is that Mr Yekatom's elements killed Djido Saleh.

Boškoški and Tarčulovski*, Judgment, 10 July 2008, IT-04-82-T, paras 312, 346, 577-578, 607 (the accused was found guilty of ordering the commission of murder of a victim, in the case of which the identity of the police members who killed the victim had not been established).

4334. On this basis, in respect of the first element of murder as a crime against humanity pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute, and of murder as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator killed one or more persons, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met in respect of Mr Yekatom's elements.

Status of the person(s) killed

4335. The Chamber recalls its finding, on the basis of its analysis of the evidence before it, that Djido Saleh was not armed or taking part in hostilities at the relevant time.¹⁰⁰⁶⁵ Specifically, the Chamber considered the evidence before it indicating that Djido Saleh was not a member of the Seleka. The Chamber recalls that it found that Djido Saleh tried to defend himself with a bow and at least one arrow against the group of individuals that was attacking him.¹⁰⁰⁶⁶ In the Chamber's view, by using necessary and proportionate force in defending himself against a group of individuals,¹⁰⁰⁶⁷ Djido Saleh did not lose protection as a civilian. Accordingly, in respect of the distinct elements of murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute, that the person be either hors de combat, or a civilian, medical personnel, or religious personnel taking no active part in the hostilities, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met in respect of Djido Saleh.

iii. Persecution as a crime against humanity (Count 28)

¹⁰⁰⁶⁵ See paragraph 125 above.

by targeting them on the basis of political, ethnic and/or religious grounds by virtue of the conduct pertaining to Counts 24-27.

Recalling of factual findings

4337. In addition to the findings recalled by the Chamber in respect of Counts 24 to 27, the Chamber further recalls that it found that Mr Yekatom knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.¹⁰⁰⁶⁸ In particular, the Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's elements that killed Djido Saleh and cut off parts of his dead body targeted him on the basis that he was a Muslim.¹⁰⁰⁶⁹

Perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law, one or more persons of fundamental rights

4338. The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's arguments that the Prosecution has failed to establish that the crimes discriminatorily targeted the Muslim population.¹⁰⁰⁷⁰ As regards the events along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, the Yekatom Defence argues that the alleged crimes concerned 'suspected or actual Seleka forces and were therefore part of the legitimate aim recognised in the Confirmation Decision'.¹⁰⁰⁷¹ It adds that Counts 6, 26 and 27 would be 'exception if proven' and would constitute two discrete incidents and would not establish 'any alleged pattern of crimes which targeted the Muslim population'.¹⁰⁰⁷²

4339. The Chamber recalls that there was no indication in the evidence that Djido Saleh was part of the Seleka forces or suspected to be so. The Chamber also considers that there is no additional requirement in law that incidents underlying persecution otherwise fulfil any distinct pattern of crimes to fall within the definition of this crime. In the view of the Chamber, the killing of Djido Saleh exemplifies the targeting of Muslim civilians by Mr Yekatom's elements alongside the others discussed as part of the Bangui Attack and the Yamwara Incident.

4340. In respect of the first element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator severely deprived, contrary to international law, one or more persons of fundamental rights, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met. Specifically, the Chamber considers that Djido Saleh was deprived of his right to life.¹⁰⁰⁷³ Further, Muslim persons in locations along the PK9-Mbaiki axis had to flee following the advance by Mr Yekatom's elements and were deprived of their right to liberty and security of person, right to liberty of movement, right against arbitrary or unlawful interference with their family and home, and right to property.¹⁰⁰⁷⁴

Targeted by reason of identity of a group or collectivity, or group or collectivity targeted as such 4341. The Chamber further finds that Mr Yekatom's elements targeted Muslim persons by reason of their perceived religious commonalities with the Seleka, and therefore on religious grounds.

4342. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the requirements are met in respect of the second and third element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the perpetrator targeted such person or persons by reason of the identity of a group or collectivity or targeted the group or collectivity as such and such targeting was based on political, racial, national, ethnic, cultural, religious, gender as defined in article 7, paragraph 3, of the Statute, or other grounds that are universally recognised as impermissible under international law.

Committed in connection with any act referred to in Article 7(1) of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court

4343. In respect of the fourth element of persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, namely that the conduct was committed in connection with any act referred to in article 7, paragraph 1, of the Statute or any crime within the jurisdiction of the Court, the Chamber finds that this requirement is met by virtue of the conduct of Mr Yekatom's elements satisfying the requirements of the crimes against humanity of murder, forcible transfer and deportation, and the war crime of displacement, as noted above.

b. Individual criminal responsibility

i. Mr Yekatom

4344. The Chamber now turns to Mr Yekatom's responsibility under Counts 24 to 28. Mr Yekatom is alleged to have committed the aforementioned crimes 'jointly with' or 'through' others under Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute.

Existence of an agreement

4345. The Chamber found that starting on 10 January 2014, Mr Yekatom and elements under his control left Yamwara and advanced from Bangui on the road towards Mbaïki, taking over a number of villages in the Lobaye prefecture, located in the south-west part of the country, including Sekia, Ndangala, Bimon, Kapou, Bossongo and Pissa.¹⁰⁰⁷⁵ They did not meet resistance as they passed from PK9 to Sekia and Pissa, since the Seleka had fled these areas after learning that the Anti-Balaka were approaching.¹⁰⁰⁷⁶ At the time of the group's presence on the Mbaïki road, Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto instructed the elements to kill all the Muslims in their area.¹⁰⁰⁷⁷ Mr Yekatom was the undisputed leader of the Anti-Balaka group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, which comprised at least 1,000 elements at the time.¹⁰⁰⁷⁸

¹⁰⁰⁷⁵ See paragraph 113 above.

¹⁰⁰⁷⁸ See paragraph 115 above.

4346. The Chamber further found that Mr Yekatom's group took over checkpoints at PK9, Sekia, Bimon, Bossongo and Pissa in their advance towards Mbaïki, and set up new bases at PK9 and Sekia.¹⁰⁰⁷⁹ By taking over these checkpoints, Mr Yekatom and his group aimed at searching and identifying Muslims in the area and raising money to finance the group and its needs.¹⁰⁰⁸⁰

4347. The Chamber found that a significant proportion of the Muslim civilian population fled their towns and villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis due to and in fear of the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the axis.¹⁰⁰⁸¹ At least 1,000 Muslim civilians who fled from locations along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and in the Lobaye prefecture went to Mbaïki, substantially increasing the Muslim population of the town.¹⁰⁰⁸² Muslims in Mbaïki at the time were living in difficulty, under conditions of overcrowding, hunger and fear of death from the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁰⁸³

4348. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom and elements under his control entered Mbaïki on 30 January 2014.¹⁰⁰⁸⁴ That day, a meeting was held at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki, with Mr Yekatom and members of his group, representatives of the Mbaïki civilian and religious authorities, international organisations and NGOs, as well as the Sangaris.¹⁰⁰⁸⁵ At the meeting, the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki, which was a foregone conclusion at that point, was decided.¹⁰⁰⁸⁶ After the meeting finished, Mr Yekatom addressed the crowds outside of the meeting location and subsequently at Mbaïki's bus station, where he delivered 'peace messages' similar to those he had expressed at the meeting.¹⁰⁰⁸⁷ The presence of the Sangaris and other international actors in Mbaïki at that time compelled Mr Yekatom to bring this 'peace message' to Mbaïki and prevented attacks of his group against the Muslim civilian population.¹⁰⁰⁸⁸

¹⁰⁰⁸¹ See paragraph 118 above.

¹⁰⁰⁸² See paragraph 119 above.

¹⁰⁰⁸⁵ See paragraph 120 above.

¹⁰⁰⁸⁶ See paragraph 120 above.

¹⁰⁰⁸⁸ See paragraph 121 above.

4349. The Chamber also found that during this time, elements of Mr Yekatom's group threatened and harassed Muslim civilians in Mbaïki, telling them to leave the area.¹⁰⁰⁸⁹ Both Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion knew that elements of the group committed acts of violence in Mbaïki.¹⁰⁰⁹⁰ Efforts and measures to prevent these acts were taken only after the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki had been decided and/or carried out.¹⁰⁰⁹¹ The Anti-Balaka also attacked a gendarme patrol in Mbaïki which was there to protect the population, taking the patrol's weapons and the service car that they were using.¹⁰⁰⁹²

4350. The Chamber found that Muslim civilians left Mbaïki in fear of the Anti-Balaka and, in particular, due to the arrival of Mr Yekatom's group to Mbaïki.¹⁰⁰⁹³

4351. The Chamber further found that following the death of Djido Saleh, Mr Yekatom told Raymond Mongbandi that the killing was 'an accident' and that he would pay for the burial, which he never did.¹⁰⁰⁹⁴ As a direct consequence of the killing, MISCA ordered Mr Yekatom and his elements to leave Mbaïki, which they immediately did.¹⁰⁰⁹⁵

4352. The Chamber recalls that it also found that Mr Yekatom knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.¹⁰⁰⁹⁶

4353. The Chamber further found that throughout the period relevant to the charges, Mr Yekatom retained and exercised control over an active group of elements which was seen as and understood to be part of the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁰⁹⁷ Mr Yekatom was the uncontested leader of this group which first set up at Yamwara in Boeing after 5 December 2013, and moved down the PK9-Mbaïki axis following Michel Djotodia's resignation.¹⁰⁰⁹⁸

4354. The Yekatom Defence submits that there was no group with a common purpose committing crimes to which Mr Yekatom was a member, since (i) the Anti-Balaka was no single unified or coordinated movement, but rather multiple resistance groups; (ii) the Anti-Balaka 'north' and 'south' coordination were distinct entities until June 2014, with diametrically opposed objectives; (iii) Mr Yekatom was part of a distinct and separate movement whose shared objectives were legitimate military aims, limited to the restoration of security and administrative infrastructures in the CAR, protection of the civilian population, and reinforcement of resources and security measures.¹⁰⁰⁹⁹

4355. In relation to these arguments, the Chamber recalls its findings on Mr Yekatom's control over his group specifically, as well as on Mr Yekatom's group's position within the Anti-Balaka.

4356. Therefore, and on the basis of the above, the Chamber finds that at the time of the advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, an agreement existed between Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto to establish control over the area as well as to remove all Muslims therefrom, including by killing them. This agreement is established by their instructions to kill all Muslims in the area, as well as the subsequent implementation of these instructions, which included the creation of conditions leading to the dislocation of Muslims specifically along the PK9-Mbaïki axis. This shows that the relevant meeting of minds existed in substance. The agreement was specifically directed at engaging in conduct which amounted to: (i) forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute; (ii) displacement as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute; (iii) murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute; (iv) murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute; and (v) persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute.

Execution of the material elements of the crime through other persons

4357. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's group advanced along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, while he remained its undisputed leader.¹⁰¹⁰⁰ The Chamber further found that Mr Yekatom's elements took over checkpoints and established bases in localities along the axis, aiming at searching and identifying Muslims in the area and raising money to finance the group and its needs,¹⁰¹⁰¹ threatened Muslims in Mbaïki following the meeting at St Jeanne d'Arc Church,¹⁰¹⁰² and that at least three elements of his group, including Honorine Gbafalo, were involved in the killing of Djido Saleh as one of the last Muslims remaining in Mbaïki.¹⁰¹⁰³

4358. Moreover, the Chamber recalls its finding that throughout the period relevant to the charges, Mr Yekatom retained and exercised control over an active group of elements which was seen as and understood to be part of the Anti-Balaka, being its uncontested leader.¹⁰¹⁰⁴

4359. On the basis of the above, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom could rely on the elements of his group to execute the agreement, and that the will of the individual elements in this execution was immaterial. The Chamber therefore finds that the conduct of the elements of Mr Yekatom's group during the advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, as well as in Mbaïki thereafter in the execution of the crimes there must be attributed to Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto as their own.

Mr Yekatom's control over the crime

4360. As the Chamber has found that (i) Mr Yekatom was a participant to the agreement with Cœur de Lion and Alkanto pursuant to which Mr Yekatom's group advanced along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and engaged in conduct including the commission of crimes, and (ii) the conduct of Mr Yekatom's group's elements, who executed the material elements of the crimes must be attributed to Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto as their own, the Chamber will now assess the involvement of Mr Yekatom in those crimes to determine whether he had control over the crime by virtue of his essential contribution to it and the resulting power to frustrate its commission.

4361. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom did not control the direct perpetrators by subjugating anyone's will or by making an essential contribution to any crime, since (i) his group was far smaller and less organised than argued by the Prosecution, with Mr Yekatom not presenting himself as leader of the group; (ii) members of Mr Yekatom's group joined voluntarily to protect the civilian population and could leave the group at will and without sanction, and Mr Yekatom not being in a position to subjugate the will of his group's members; (iii) Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion operated two units with independent functionality across material aspects throughout the charged period; and (iv) committing crimes was antithetical to the purpose of Mr Yekatom's group as understood by him.¹⁰¹⁰⁵

4362. The Chamber reiterates its findings that at the time of the advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, Mr Yekatom's group numbered at least 1,000 elements, that Mr Yekatom was the undisputed leader of this group, and that Mr Yekatom, with Cœur de Lion and Alkanto, gave instruction to their elements to kill the Muslims in their area. Moreover, the Chamber recalls its findings that conditions for Muslims in Mbaïki following the meeting at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church were life-threatening, despite Mr Yekatom's supposed 'peace messages', such that these conditions led to the Muslim civilian population in Mbaïki, including those who had fled there from localities along the axis, having no choice but to leave the town.

4363. The above conclusively shows that Mr Yekatom had full control over his elements performing the relevant conduct in the context of the advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, and during the events in Mbaïki until the transport of the Muslim civilian population and including the killing of Djido Saleh. Therefore, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom had control over the crimes committed during the mentioned advance and subsequent events in Mbaïki by virtue of his essential contribution to them, and the resulting power to frustrate their commission.

Mental elements

4364. The Yekatom Defence argues that Mr Yekatom did not share the requisite mens rea to commit crimes, since Mr Yekatom (i) did not issue any order to target the Muslim population nor encouraged members of his group to do so at any time during the charged period; (ii) was not aware that undertaking legitimate military operations would have led to the charged crimes in the ordinary course of events; and (iii) had the intent to protect the civilian population, including Muslims, and to promote social cohesion and peace throughout the CAR.¹⁰¹⁰⁶

4365. The Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom's conduct in the context of the advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, and in Mbaïki thereafter was such that it can only have been intentional. In particular, the Chamber also recalls its findings that (i) Mr Yekatom, with Cœur de Lion and Alkanto, issued specific instructions to their elements; (ii) Mr Yekatom took part in the meeting at St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki, at which time the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki was a foregone conclusion; and (iii) Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion knew that elements of the group committed acts of violence in Mbaïki. The Chamber thus concludes that Mr Yekatom was aware that the implementation of his meeting of minds with Cœur de Lion and Alkanto would in the ordinary course of events result in the execution of the material elements of the crimes. On this basis, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom (i) intended for Muslim civilians to be dislocated; and (ii) intended for one of the last remaining Muslim civilians in Mbaïki to be killed.

¹⁰¹⁰⁶ Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, paras 691-694.

Church, at which the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki, already a foregone conclusion at that time, was decided.¹⁰¹⁰⁹ Further, the Chamber recalls its finding that Mr Yekatom and Cœur de Lion knew that elements of the group committed acts of violence in Mbaïki, and that efforts and measures to prevent these acts were taken only after the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki had been decided and/or carried out.¹⁰¹¹⁰ The Chamber recalls its finding that following the death of Djido Saleh, Mr Yekatom said it was ‘an accident’ and that he would pay for the burial, which he never did.¹⁰¹¹¹

4367. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the following specific knowledge requirements are met: (i) that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances establishing the lawfulness of presence in the area, applicable to forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute; and (ii) that the perpetrator was aware of the victims being either hors de combat, or civilians, medical personnel or religious personnel taking no active part in hostilities, applicable to murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute.

4368. The Chamber further recalls its findings that Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto instructed their elements to kill the Muslims in their areas,¹⁰¹¹² and that Mr Yekatom knew that his elements perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.¹⁰¹¹³ On this basis, the Chamber concludes that Mr Yekatom meant for the Muslim civilian population along the PK9-Mbaïki axis to be severely deprived of its rights on the basis of their religious commonalities with the Seleka. Accordingly, the specific intent requirement applicable to the crime against humanity of persecution, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, is also met.

¹⁰¹¹¹ See paragraph 125 above.

¹⁰¹¹² See paragraph 114 above.

¹⁰¹¹³ See paragraph 48 above.

Conclusion

4369. On the basis of the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Yekatom committed jointly with and through others, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute: (i) forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute (Count 24); (ii) displacement as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute (Count 25); (iii) murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute (Count 26); (iv) murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Count 27); and (v) persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute (Count 28).

ii. Mr Ngaïssona

4370. The Chamber now turns to Mr Ngaïssona's responsibility under Counts 24 to 28. Mr Ngaïssona is alleged to have committed the aforementioned crimes by facilitating the commission of the crimes as set out in the confirmed charges by aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting in their commission under Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.

Recalling of factual findings

4371. The Chamber refers to the factual findings as recalled above.¹⁰¹¹⁴

4372. Moreover, the Chamber found that between the coordinated attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa of 5 December 2013 and his return to Bangui on 14 January 2014, Mr Ngaïssona remained informed of the continued activities related to the Anti-Balaka, and continued liaising with various individuals in this regard.¹⁰¹¹⁵ The Chamber found that immediately following his return to Bangui on 14 January 2014, Mr Ngaïssona was installed as general coordinator of the Anti-Balaka and that, as such, he represented the entirety of the Anti-Balaka towards the CAR transition government and international authorities.¹⁰¹¹⁶ With a view to engaging with the transition government and international authorities, the Anti-Balaka structure started being further formalised with the return of Mr Ngaïssona and his ¹⁰¹¹⁴ See paragraphs 4028-4031 above.

¹⁰¹¹⁶ See paragraphs 60-61 above.

appointment as general coordinator.¹⁰¹¹⁷ Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide financial assistance to the Anti-Balaka and actively engaged in formalising the structure of the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰¹¹⁸ The Chamber also found that despite evolution of its structure and leadership tussles, the Anti-Balaka remained represented towards the national and international authorities as one entity through Mr Ngaïssona.¹⁰¹¹⁹

Aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting

4373. In light of the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona, by funding and supporting the Anti-Balaka in 2013 and continuing to do so in 2014, in addition to taking steps to further formalise the Anti-Balaka's structure, aided, abetted or otherwise assisted in the commission of the aforementioned crimes in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.

Mental elements

4374. As regards Mr Ngaïssona's mens rea, the Chamber recalls its finding that Mr Ngaïssona made his contributions throughout the period of the charges fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim civilian population in the west of the CAR, committing the widespread attack that ultimately took place from September 2013 through at least February 2014, including the seminal coordinated Anti-Balaka attacks of Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.¹⁰¹²⁰ Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.¹⁰¹²¹ The Chamber further considered that Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial aid, organisational assistance and psychological support to the Anti-Balaka in the context of anti-foreign sentiments and inflammatory rhetoric openly expressed by François Bozizé and ¹⁰¹¹⁷ See paragraph 62 above.

¹⁰¹¹⁹ See paragraph 64 above.

¹⁰¹²⁰ See paragraph 49 above.

¹⁰¹²¹ See paragraph 49 above.

others, which incited vigilance against those perceived to support the Seleka, in particular Muslim civilians.¹⁰¹²²

4375. Having regard to the above, and recalling that according to Article 30(2)(b) of the Statute, a person has intent where, in relation to a consequence, the person means to cause that consequence or is aware that it will occur in the ordinary course of events, the Chamber thus finds that Mr Ngaïssona: (i) intended for Muslim civilians to be dislocated and (ii) intended for one of the last remaining Muslim civilians in Mbaïki to be killed.

4377. Having regard to the above, the Chamber finds that Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial contributions and support to the Anti-Balaka for the purpose of facilitating the crimes against the Muslim civilian population, including killings and dislocation of Muslims. In particular, the Chamber notes that Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the hostilities committed by the Anti-Balaka during their advance towards Bangui. These included the killings and dislocation of Muslims in seven different locations in and around Bossangoa prior to the Bangui Attack and Bossangoa Attack,¹⁰¹²⁴ committed by the Anti-Balaka groups coordinating with each other.¹⁰¹²⁵ Despite this, Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide funds to the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰¹²⁶ Moreover, he also took the role as general coordinator of the Anti-Balaka upon his return to Bangui, within which he represented the movement, as one entity, towards national and international authorities.¹⁰¹²⁷

¹⁰¹²⁴ See paragraphs 50-53 above.

¹⁰¹²⁵ See paragraph 51 above.

¹⁰¹²⁶ See paragraph 70 above.

¹⁰¹²⁷ See paragraphs 60-61 above.

4378. Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the only reasonable conclusion in these circumstances is that Mr Ngaïssona was not only aware that the Anti-Balaka would commit these crimes in the ordinary course of events, but intended for them to commit these crimes in the context of Mr Yekatom's group's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, and lent his assistance with the aim of facilitating such crimes.

4379. Turning to the specific knowledge requirements concerning the charged crimes, the Chamber recalls its finding that Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto instructed the elements of Mr Yekatom's group to kill all the Muslims in their area.¹⁰¹²⁸ The Chamber further found that Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the advance of the Anti-Balaka groups towards Bangui as well as of the hostilities during this advance, including the killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians from the locations mentioned.¹⁰¹²⁹

4380. On this basis, the Chamber finds that the following specific knowledge requirements are met: (i) that the perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances establishing the lawfulness of presence in the area, applicable to forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute; and (ii) that the perpetrator was aware of the victims being either hors de combat, or civilians, medical personnel or religious personnel taking no active part in hostilities, applicable to murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute.

4381. Further, the Chamber recalls its finding that Mr Ngaïssona knew that the Anti-Balaka perceived, and himself perceived, the Muslims in the CAR as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka and that the Anti-Balaka targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR, on this basis.¹⁰¹³⁰

4382. On this basis, the Chamber concludes that Mr Ngaïssona intended for the Muslim civilian population to be discriminated against on the basis of their religious commonalities with the

¹⁰¹³⁰ See paragraph 49 above.

Seleka. Accordingly, the specific intent requirement applicable to the crime against humanity of persecution, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute, is also met.

Conclusion

4383. On the basis of the above, the Chamber therefore finds that, within the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, Mr Ngaïssona aided, abetted or otherwise assisted, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute, the commission of the following crimes: (i) forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute (Count 24); (ii) displacement as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute (Count 25); (iii) murder as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(a) of the Statute (Count 26); (iv) murder as a war crime, pursuant to Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute (Count 27); and (v) persecution as a crime against humanity, pursuant to Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute (Count 28).

v. Recruitment of children under the age of 15 into the Anti-Balaka and their use (Count 29)

4385. The Chamber recalls that, considering the evidence before it, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Chung dissenting, was unable to conclude on the age or presence of children in Mr Yekatom's group.¹⁰¹³¹

4386. Judge Chung would have concluded on Mr Yekatom's responsibility for the enlistment, conscription and use of children under the age of 15 in his group based on P-2476's account. Judge Chung is of the view that Mr Yekatom, through Cœur de Lion, enlisted P-2476, who was under 15 years at the relevant time, in his group in February 2014 for a period of one week. Judge Chung considers that Mr Yekatom, through his elements, used P-2476 for activities such as guarding the Mbaïki base, buying provisions, and cooking for the elements. Accordingly, Judge Chung would have found that Mr Yekatom committed through others, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute, the enlistment and use of children under the age of fifteen years to participate actively in hostilities as a war crime pursuant to Article 8(2)(e)(vii) of the Statute (Count 29).

VI. SENTENCE

4387. Having determined that the accused are responsible for the above-mentioned crimes, the Chamber now turns to the determination of the appropriate sentences. In doing so, the Chamber takes into account the findings set out above, as well as the participants' additional submissions and evidence relevant to sentencing.

A. Submissions

¹⁰¹³² Prosecution Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2747-Red, paras 1, 27; Prosecution Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-310, p. 6, lines 3-13.

whole.¹⁰¹³³ According to the Prosecution, each accused ‘made important contributions’ to the charged crimes.¹⁰¹³⁴

4389. With regard to Mr Ngaïssona, the Prosecution submits that while he is only charged as an accessory, his contributions go to a broad crime base and were pervasive. Notably, he contributed to the crimes committed by Mr Yekatom and his group as well as by the Anti-Balaka in Bossangoa, and his contributions impacted upon every aspect of the commission of the crimes.¹⁰¹³⁵ With respect to Mr Yekatom, the Prosecution submits that he played a close, personal role in the commission of the crimes he is charged with, warranting a higher sentence than Mr Ngaïssona.¹⁰¹³⁶

4390. In addition, the Prosecution submits that the crimes were aggravated by various factors, including: (i) the discriminatory and violent targeting of Muslims or persons (perceived to be) associated with them because of their real or presumed ethnic or religious identity and/or political association; (ii) the commission of crimes against particularly defenceless and vulnerable victims; (iii) the commission of crimes with particular cruelty; and (iv) the multiplicity of victims.¹⁰¹³⁷ Regarding Mr Yekatom specifically, it submits that his criminal conduct is further aggravated by the fact that as the leader of his Anti-Balaka group and career soldier, he abused his position of authority to order his elements to commit crimes violating the protections afforded to persons not taking part in hostilities under international humanitarian law.¹⁰¹³⁸ It finally submits that there are no mitigating factors for either of the accused.¹⁰¹³⁹

4391. The Yekatom Defence considers the Prosecution's proposal to impose a joint sentence of 22 years 'unreasonable'.¹⁰¹⁴⁰ It submits that the Chamber should consider Mr Yekatom's individual circumstances, in particular his background, family responsibilities – being the primary salary earner for his family including his fourteen children and the carer of his elderly mother –, and reintegration prospects, as well as the impact of his detention on himself and his family.¹⁰¹⁴¹ It further asks the Chamber to consider the conflict between the Seleka and the Anti-Balaka, the dissolution and targeting of the FACA after March 2013, and Mr Yekatom's ongoing commitment to military values as providing the relevant framework for assessing his conduct during the charged period.¹⁰¹⁴²

4392. In addition, the Yekatom Defence submits the following mitigating circumstances: (i) Mr Yekatom's efforts to minimise the harm caused to the victims;¹⁰¹⁴³ (ii) his efforts to assist victims of the charged crimes;¹⁰¹⁴⁴ (iii) his efforts to promote peace and reconciliation;¹⁰¹⁴⁵ and (iv) various alleged institutional violations of his rights, which resulted in a significant delay of the proceedings, including his ineffective legal representation, the joinder of his case with Mr Ngaïssona's which was subsequently compounded by the restrictions implemented in response to the Covid-19 pandemic, disclosure violations by the Prosecution, and the alleged fabrication of evidence in relation to Count 29.¹⁰¹⁴⁶ According to the Yekatom Defence, no aggravating circumstances should be considered.¹⁰¹⁴⁷

4393. The Ngaïssona Defence submits on the one hand that Mr Ngaïssona's maximum sentence should be time served in detention,¹⁰¹⁴⁸ and on the other hand that Mr Ngaïssona's responsibility for all charged counts is based on the same underlying acts and conduct and any joint sentence should thus be 'equal to the highest individual sentence pronounced'.¹⁰¹⁴⁹ According to the Ngaïssona Defence, only such a potential sentence would be proportionate to Mr Ngaïssona's 'minimal degree of participation and intent and the powerful mitigating circumstances'.¹⁰¹⁵⁰

4394. The Ngaïssona Defence further submits that there are no aggravating factors in Mr Ngaïssona's case.¹⁰¹⁵¹ Contrarily, it avers that Mr Ngaïssona's individual circumstances and positive prospects for rehabilitation should be taken into consideration.¹⁰¹⁵² It also refers to the following mitigating factors: (i) Mr Ngaïssona's actions to promote peace and reconciliation;¹⁰¹⁵³ (ii) his respectful behaviour and cooperation during court proceedings and with the investigations in the case;¹⁰¹⁵⁴ (iii) his detention conditions, in particular the undue prolongation of his detention by virtue of the Covid-19 pandemic, the joinder of his case with Mr Yekatom's and the 'hardship experienced in pre-trial custody';¹⁰¹⁵⁵ and (iv) his unique family circumstances, namely that he has been unable to fulfil his role as the main provider for his large family, who has been negatively impacted by his detention.¹⁰¹⁵⁶ It further notes that considering Mr Ngaïssona's indigency, it did not make any submissions regarding a potential fine pursuant to Article 77 of the Statute.¹⁰¹⁵⁷

4395. The CLRV1, representing 292 victims, requests that Mr Yekatom be sentenced to no less than 20 years of imprisonment for the war crime of conscription and/or enlistment and use of children under the age of 15 into his group pursuant to Count 29 and defers to the Prosecution regarding the overall sentence to be imposed.¹⁰¹⁵⁸

4396. The CLRV2, representing 1,673 victims, submit that, despite the different modes of liability under which the accused are charged, their essential contributions to the crimes should lead to the imposition of the same sentence. Accordingly, they request that Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona be each sentenced to 30 years of imprisonment.¹⁰¹⁵⁹ The CLRV2 justify their request by reference to the extreme gravity of the crimes and the culpable conduct of the accused, underscoring the cruelty and brutality with which certain crimes were committed. They further refer to the extent and magnitude of harm suffered by the victims, their families, and the Muslim community as a whole.¹⁰¹⁶⁰ In the CLRV2's submission, several aggravating circumstances exist, including the particular defencelessness and high number of victims, the abuse of power and/or the official capacity of Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona in committing the crimes, and the discrimination of victims on ethnic, religious and/or political grounds.¹⁰¹⁶¹ Finally, the CLRV2 submit that there are no mitigating circumstances and that the accused's individual circumstances should not lead to a reduction of the sentences.¹⁰¹⁶²

B. Determination of the Chamber

1. Applicable law

4397. The principal legal provisions applicable to sentencing are Articles 76 to 78 of the Statute and Rules 145 to 147 of the Rules.¹⁰¹⁶³ The Appeals Chamber has found that these provisions, when read together with the underlying objectives contained in the Preamble to the Statute, establish a comprehensive scheme for the determination of a sentence.¹⁰¹⁶⁴

i. Sentencing principles and factors

4398. At the outset, the Chamber recalls that the Statute¹⁰¹⁶⁵ and the Rules envisage a sentencing regime aimed primarily at retribution and deterrence. Rehabilitation of the sentenced person may also constitute a relevant consideration in this context, but should not be given undue weight in the context of cases of international criminal law.¹⁰¹⁶⁶

4399. The Court's legal framework does not prescribe mandatory minimum or maximum sentences, or sentence ranges for specific crimes, and thus, the Chamber has broad discretion in determining a sentence.¹⁰¹⁶⁷ However, in its determination of the sentence under Article 78(1) of the Statute, and noting that retribution is a central tenet of sentencing, the totality of the sentence must be proportionate¹⁰¹⁶⁸ and reflect the culpability of the convicted person.¹⁰¹⁶⁹ Accordingly, any penalties must be tailored to the gravity of the crimes.¹⁰¹⁷⁰ 4400. Therefore, in accordance with Article 78(1) of the Statute, the Chamber must identify and assess ‘such factors as the gravity of the crime and the individual circumstances of the convicted person’. Rule 145(1)(c) of the Rules further mandates the Chamber to consider, inter alia, the extent of the damage caused, in particular the harm caused to the victims and their families, the nature of the unlawful behaviour and the means employed to execute the crime, the degree of participation of the convicted person, the degree of intent, the circumstances of manner, time and location, and the age, education, social and economic condition of the convicted person. Rule 145(2) of the Rules further stipulates that the Chamber shall also take into account any mitigating and aggravating circumstances, as appropriate.

ii. Gravity

4401. Gravity is one of the principal factors to be considered in the determination of a sentence.¹⁰¹⁷¹

Gravity is measured both in abstracto, by assessing the constitutive elements of the crime,¹⁰¹⁷² and in concreto, by assessing the particular circumstances of the case.¹⁰¹⁷³

4402. The Chamber's in concreto assessment is made quantitatively and qualitatively.¹⁰¹⁷⁴ It must take into account: (i) the gravity of the crime, including the particular acts which constitute the elements of the crime; as well as (ii) the gravity of the accused's culpable conduct, particularly the conduct constituting the elements of the relevant mode of liability. It is worth noting in this context that the Court's legal framework does not foresee that principal perpetrators necessarily deserve a higher sentence. Whether this is the case depends on the individual circumstances of a case.¹⁰¹⁷⁵

4403. Beyond the factors listed in Rule 145(1)(c) of the Rules, the Chamber has discretion to consider other relevant factors for the purpose of determining the gravity of the crime.¹⁰¹⁷⁶

4404. The consequences of a crime in relation to which a person has been convicted may be taken into account to determine the sentence as long as they were, at least, objectively foreseeable to the convicted person. This applies both to the assessment of a heightened gravity of the crime and to potential aggravating circumstances.¹⁰¹⁷⁷

¹⁰¹⁷¹ Al Hassan Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/12-01/18-2662, para. 20, Ntaganda Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2442, para. 14; Bemba Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/05-01/08-3399, para. 15; Lubanga Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/04-01/06-2901, para. 36.

¹⁰¹⁷² Whilst the Court's Statute pertains to the most serious crimes of concern to the international community (see Preamble of the Statute), not all crimes under its jurisdiction are necessarily of equivalent gravity. Therefore, pursuant to Article 78(1) of the Statute, the Chamber must assess in abstracto the gravity of each one of them. See Al Hassan Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/12-01/18-2662, para. 20; Ntaganda Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2442, para. 14; Al Mahdi Trial Judgment, ICC-01/12-01/15-171, para. 72; Katanga Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/04-01/07-3484-tENG-Corr, para. 43.

iii. Aggravating circumstances

4405. Aggravating circumstances must relate to the crimes of which a person is convicted or to the convicted person themselves.¹⁰¹⁷⁸ Furthermore, there must be a sufficiently proximate link between this circumstance and the crime(s) that form the basis for the conviction.¹⁰¹⁷⁹ A legal element of the crime or the mode of liability cannot be considered as an aggravating circumstance.¹⁰¹⁸⁰

4406. Rule 145(2)(b) of the Rules provides a non-exhaustive list of such aggravating circumstances.¹⁰¹⁸¹ Circumstances other than those listed may only be considered if they are similar ‘by virtue of their nature’.¹⁰¹⁸² As stated above, chambers may also consider the consequences of a crime or offence in relation to which a conviction was entered as long as these consequences were, at least, objectively foreseeable to the convicted person.¹⁰¹⁸³

4407. The Chamber may consider aggravating circumstances where it is convinced of their existence beyond reasonable doubt.¹⁰¹⁸⁴

iv. Mitigating circumstances

4408. Rule 145(2)(a) of the Rules provides a non-exhaustive list of circumstances which may be considered in mitigation when determining a sentence. This includes ‘circumstances falling short of constituting grounds for exclusion of criminal responsibility’ and the ‘convicted person’s conduct after the act’.

4409. The Chamber may consider other circumstances and determine the weight to be afforded to them, if any, within its discretion.¹⁰¹⁸⁵ Such circumstances must be related to the convicted person, but not necessarily to the crimes they are convicted of.¹⁰¹⁸⁶ Moreover, they are not limited by the scope of the confirmed charges or findings in the judgment.¹⁰¹⁸⁷

4410. The Chamber must be convinced of mitigating circumstances on a balance of probabilities.¹⁰¹⁸⁸

v. Determination of the appropriate sentence

4411. First, the Chamber is required to weigh and balance all abovementioned factors in accordance with Rule 145(1)(b) of the Rules and pronounce a sentence for each crime for which a conviction has been entered.

4412. When considering an individual sentence, certain facts may be assessed under more than one of the categories listed in Article 78 of the Statute and Rule 145 of the Rules, which are neither neatly distinguishable nor mutually exclusive.¹⁰¹⁸⁹ The category in which such a fact is placed is of limited relevance. Rather, what is of importance is that the Chamber identifies all relevant factors, attaches appropriate weight to them¹⁰¹⁹⁰ and does not ‘double-count’ them.¹⁰¹⁹¹ Notably, any factors assessed in relation to the gravity of the crime should not be considered as aggravating circumstances, and vice versa.¹⁰¹⁹²

4413. Second, if the person is convicted of multiple crimes, the Chamber must pronounce ‘a joint sentence specifying the total period of imprisonment’ pursuant to Article 78(3) of the Statute. This joint sentence ‘shall be no less than the highest individual sentence pronounced’.

4414. While there may be overlaps in the facts underlying several charged crimes, each individual sentence must be calculated separately, with reference to all relevant facts and circumstances applicable to the crime concerned. It is only in the context of determining the joint sentence that any relevant factual overlap is accounted for so that the convicted person is not punished beyond their real culpability.¹⁰¹⁹³

4415. Third, and finally, Article 78(2) of the Statute requires the Chamber to deduct from the sentence any time that the convicted person spent in detention upon an order of the Court.

2. Factors and circumstances applicable to both accused

4416. As stated above, the Statute requires the Chamber to determine, for each accused, an individual sentence for each crime before determining a joint sentence. However, certain factors and circumstances relate to the convicted person as such and are thus applicable to several, or even all crimes, and the individual sentences to be determined for an accused. In this respect, the Chamber recalls that in accordance with Article 78(1) of the Statute, it shall take into account, inter alia, the ‘individual circumstances of the convicted person’.¹⁰¹⁹⁴ Similarly, Rule 145(1)(b) of the Rules mandates the Court to ‘balance all the relevant factors, including any mitigating and aggravating factors’ and to consider the ‘circumstances [...] of the convicted person’. Subparagraph (c) further mandates it to take into consideration, inter alia, the ‘age, education, social and economic condition of the convicted person’.

4417. Moreover, the Chamber notes that in the context of a multi-accused case, there may be factors and circumstances which are of relevance to all the accused.

sentence for the crimes of which Mr Yekatom or Mr Ngaïssona, respectively, are found guilty.

i. Aggravating factors

a. Commission of the crimes for any motive involving discrimination

4419. The Chamber notes that Rule 145(2)(b)(v) of the Rules provides that the '[c]ommission of the crime for any motive involving discrimination on any of the grounds referred to in article 21, paragraph 3' constitutes an aggravating factor. The latter explicitly lists 'religion or belief', 'political or other opinion', and 'ethnic [...] origin'.

4420. The Yekatom Defence submits that any alleged discrimination against the Muslim population cannot be considered an aggravating circumstance as it coincides with the underlying conduct for the 'alleged common purpose, criminal policy and, in relation to Counts 8, 17 and 28, the elements of the crime of persecution'.¹⁰¹⁹⁵

4421. The Ngaïssona Defence argues, inter alia, that Mr Ngaïssona 'never harboured or expressed anti-Muslim animus',¹⁰¹⁹⁶ and that 'considering discriminatory intent for all of the charged crimes which already underlie the charge of persecution, would amount to double counting'.¹⁰¹⁹⁷

4422. To the extent that the Defence argue that the accused did not act with discriminatory intent, the Chamber recalls that the evidence establishes the contrary. First, it recalls its finding that the Anti-Balaka perceived Muslims in the CAR, due to religious and ethnic commonalities, as collectively responsible for, complicit in, or supportive of the violence and abuses committed by the Seleka, and on this basis violently targeted the Muslim civilian population, specifically in the west of the CAR.¹⁰¹⁹⁸ In that context, the crimes the accused are convicted of were all committed for discriminatory motives, in that the Muslim civilian population was targeted because of its perceived religious and ethnic commonalities with the Seleka.¹⁰¹⁹⁹

4423. Most importantly, it recalls its findings that Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona knew about and shared the Anti-Balaka's perception of Muslims in the CAR and knew about their ensuing targeting of the Muslim civilian population, and that Mr Ngaïssona made his contributions fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim civilian population in the west of the CAR.¹⁰²⁰⁰ The Chamber further recalls that it established that Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona themselves intended the Muslim civilian population to be targeted in relation to the crimes that took place in the context of all charged incidents.¹⁰²⁰¹

4424. Considering the central character of this discriminatory dimension to the conviction of both accused, the Chamber finds it appropriate to assess the commission for motives involving discrimination as an aggravating factor for all crimes,¹⁰²⁰² except for the crime against humanity of persecution under Article 7(1)(h) of the Statute and the war crime of torture under Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Statute. Specific considerations in relation to the discriminatory dimension of individual crimes are addressed in the relevant sections below.

4425. Regarding the Defence's submissions on the prohibition of double-counting,¹⁰²⁰³ the Chamber notes that it is not prohibited from considering the discriminatory aspect of the crimes that 'underlie' the crime of persecution, noting that this factor does not form part of the legal elements of almost all other crimes the accused are convicted of,¹⁰²⁰⁴ nor of the relevant modes of liability. It recalls in that regard that the prohibition against double-counting does not extend to factors that do not constitute legal elements of the crimes or modes of liability but rather serve to prove them.¹⁰²⁰⁵ The Chamber further emphasises that it does not consider this aggravating factor in the context of the crime against humanity of persecution, and the war crime of torture, which include this ‘discriminatory dimension’ as one of their constitutive elements. Finally, it recalls that it considers any overlaps in the underlying conduct between different crimes in its determination of the joint sentence for each of the accused.

b. Overall impact of the crimes

4426. The Chamber notes the Prosecution’s and the CLRV2’s submissions regarding the multiplicity of victims directly and indirectly impacted by the charged crimes and the extent of the harm they suffered from,¹⁰²⁰⁶ as well as the Defence’s responses thereto.¹⁰²⁰⁷

4427. The Chamber acknowledges the impact of the crimes committed by the Anti-Balaka on the CAR as a whole, as well as the damage caused to the nation’s social fabric.¹⁰²⁰⁸ It nonetheless considers it appropriate to only assess the purported impact and harm caused by the crimes committed by the accused, to the extent it considers them relevant, as part of its below individual assessments of the gravity and the accused’s culpability for each crime.

ii. Mitigating factors

a. Circumstances related to the joinder of the cases of the accused and the Covid-19 pandemic

4428. The Defence submit that the joinder of the cases against the accused and the Covid-19 pandemic restrictions caused delays and prolonged the accused’s detention, and thus

¹⁰²⁰⁵ See Appeals Chamber, The Prosecutor v. Dominic Ongwen, Judgment on the appeal of Mr Dominic Ongwen against the decision of Trial Chamber IX of 6 May 2021 entitled “Sentence”, 15 December 2022, ICC-02/04-01/15-2023 (A2) (the ‘Ongwen Sentencing Appeals Judgment’), para. 319; [Bemba et al. constitute mitigating factors.¹⁰²⁰⁹ The CLRV2 argue that even though some delays were caused due to the joinder, these were minimal and do not justify a reduction in the sentence, and ultimately joinders serve the proper administration of justice.¹⁰²¹⁰

4429. The Chamber acknowledges that Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona have each been in detention for over six and a half years.¹⁰²¹¹ Contrary to the Defence's submissions, it is however not convinced that the factors alleged, that is the joinder of the cases of the accused and the Covid-19 pandemic, resulted in delays warranting any mitigation of sentence.

4430. First, the Chamber notes that joinders promote the efficacy and expeditiousness of the proceedings.¹⁰²¹² In that regard, it recalls that the cases against Mr Yekatom and Mr Ngaïssona were joined at the pre-trial stage in order 'to enhance the fairness and expeditiousness of the proceedings by avoiding the duplication of evidence, inconsistency in the presentation and assessment of evidence, undue impact on witnesses and victims and unnecessary expense'.¹⁰²¹³ Regarding the pre-trial stage, the Chamber notes that the date of the confirmation hearing was initially set to 30 April 2019 for Mr Yekatom and re-scheduled to 18 June 2019 following the joinder of the accused's cases.¹⁰²¹⁴ The Chamber considers that regarding Mr Yekatom, this delay was minor and ultimately contributed to the efficiency of the proceedings. Further, while the confirmation hearing was later postponed to 19 September 2019 for both accused, the Chamber notes that the Pre-Trial Chamber granted such postponement based on considerations relating to the protection of witnesses and victims, as well as third parties, and not to the joinder as such.¹⁰²¹⁵

4431. Regarding the trial stage, the Chamber recognises that the joinder may have entailed that some evidence mainly relevant to only one accused was presented during the trial.¹⁰²¹⁶ However, the Chamber considers that such evidence was helpful in understanding the context in which to place the conduct of both accused, ultimately leading to more efficient evidentiary hearings. Consequently, the Chamber considers that overall the joinder served the administration of justice and did not result in undue delays to the proceedings that ought to be considered in mitigation.¹⁰²¹⁷

4432. Second, the Chamber acknowledges that the Covid-19 pandemic made it necessary to amend the hearing schedule on a number of occasions, prior to and during the trial, in light of the extraordinary situation arising from the global public health situation.¹⁰²¹⁸ However, it recalls that any such amendments were required in light of the Host State's and Court's procedures set in place in response to the Covid-19 pandemic and thus beyond the Chamber's control. In any event, mindful of its duty to ensure an expeditious trial, the Chamber sought to keep adjustments to the schedule to a minimum and finds that it has not been demonstrated that delays warranting mitigation occurred in the circumstances.

4433. The Chamber further notes the Defence's arguments regarding the impact of the Covid-19 pandemic on the detention conditions of the accused and their well-being.¹⁰²¹⁹ In this respect, it particularly recalls that, from 19 March 2020 until 14 July 2021, the Registry implemented several measures at the Detention Centre to protect detainees against the spread of Covid-19, which included the suspension of all in-person visits, notably legal and non-privileged visits (the ‘Detention Centre Measures’).¹⁰²²⁰ The Chamber observes that the Detention Centre Measures were enacted by the Registrar following advice by the medical officer of the Detention Centre owing to the exceptional circumstances caused by the Covid-19 pandemic. This unprecedented situation beyond anyone’s control affected not only the Detention Centre, but the Court as a whole, the Host State and numerous other countries world-wide.¹⁰²²¹

4434. The Chamber recognises that as a result of the measures, the accused were unable to meet with their families for over 16 months, their interactions with others were extremely limited, and their day-to-day life particularly isolated. This was further compounded by the significant physical distance from their home country, including from the majority of their friends and relatives, and increased anxiety and uncertainty about the outside world and ¹⁰²²⁰ The Chamber notes that, while they varied over time, the Detention Centre Measures also included, inter alia, the suspension of the import of external material; the suspension of in-person spiritual visits and in-person recreational activities; and the suspension of non-acute medical appointments. The Chamber notes that ensuring the health and safety of detained persons generally falls within the purview of the Registrar, pursuant to Regulation 103 of the Regulations of the Court.

developments.¹⁰²²² In the Chamber's view, all this rendered the detention conditions of the accused significantly more onerous than would otherwise have been the case.

4435. Nonetheless, the Chamber observes that the Registry tried to limit the Detention Centre Measures and mitigate their impact to the extent possible, notably by putting additional means of communication into place.¹⁰²²³ The Chamber encouraged the Registry's efforts and, where possible, itself took measures to alleviate the impact of the Detention Centre Measures. In particular, it exceptionally allowed deviation from them in specific circumstances.¹⁰²²⁴

4436. Taking all of the above considerations into account, and considering the specific circumstances of the case, the Chamber finds it appropriate to consider the impact of the Covid-19 pandemic on the detention conditions of the accused and their well-being as mitigating, albeit with limited weight.

b. Context in which the crimes took place

4437. The Yekatom Defence argues that the context in which the charged crimes occurred, namely the conflict between the Seleka and Anti-Balaka, should be taken into account by the Chamber. In this context, it notably refers to the chaos and atrocities that took place in 2013 in the CAR, including the dissolution and systematic targeting of the FACA shortly after the Seleka's takeover of Bangui in March 2013. It further mentions the presence and criminal conduct of the Seleka, the violent tensions amongst the local communities, and the absence of any effective security apparatus in the localities.¹⁰²²⁵ The Chamber also notes the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions in this respect, in particular regarding the Seleka regime causing 'havoc and devastation on CAR civilians, including Mr Ngaïssona'.¹⁰²²⁶

4438. The Chamber recalls that the charged crimes were committed in the context of an armed conflict in the CAR between the Seleka and the Anti-Balaka, with the initial formation of self-defence groups in various localities across the CAR aimed at defending against the abuses and violence committed by the Seleka,¹⁰²²⁷ and finds that the accused's conduct must be understood in this context and against this background. The Chamber nonetheless considers that these factors do not diminish in any way the accused's culpable conduct as such.¹⁰²²⁸

4439. Consequently, while it finds it appropriate to consider this factor in mitigation for both accused, it attributes it minimal weight in its assessment of their individual sentences.

3. Mr Yekatom

i. Factors and circumstances applicable to all crimes

4440. The Chamber recalls its findings at paragraph 4416 above.

4441. Accordingly, and in light of the relevant submissions by the participants, the Chamber first addresses factors and circumstances applicable to all crimes for which Mr Yekatom is convicted at this juncture, before turning to its considerations specific to each crime in section VI.B.3.ii.¹⁰²²⁹ The Chamber clarifies that the conclusions in this section have been drawn at this juncture merely for the clarity of written reasoning and efficiency. Nonetheless, the Chamber, in accordance with the applicable law set out above,¹⁰²³⁰ recalls and duly considers them in the context of determining each individual sentence for which Mr Yekatom is found guilty of.

a. Individual circumstances

4442. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom grew up in a modest family and his education was interrupted due to several political crises in the CAR. As the eldest of his siblings, he reportedly left school and started working when his father died, in order to improve his family's financial situation. It describes him as a 'courageous' and 'generous' person who was 'close to the underprivileged'.¹⁰²³¹ It further submits that today, Mr Yekatom is the father of 14 children, two of whom have lost their mothers and eight of whom are minors, and that foregoing his responsibilities as the 'primary salary earner' has had a 'detrimental impact on the quality of his children's education and the state of medical care provided to [Mr Yekatom's] mother'.¹⁰²³² The Chamber takes note of Mr Yekatom's social and economic conditions but considers that they are common to many convicted persons and not exceptional. Accordingly, it does not consider them mitigating as such.¹⁰²³³

4443. Similarly, the Chamber does not consider the mere fact that Mr Yekatom has no prior convictions¹⁰²³⁴ mitigating. In this respect, it echoes the jurisprudence of other chambers that the absence of prior convictions is a fairly common feature among individuals convicted by international tribunals.¹⁰²³⁵ That said, it accepts that it constitutes a relevant individual circumstance of an accused,¹⁰²³⁶ and is thus taken into account in determining the appropriate sentences for Mr Yekatom.

4444. Contrarily, the Chamber does not give any weight to Mr Yekatom's alleged 'propensity for violence' for all crimes in the abstract. While taking note of the Prosecution's examples of his violent behaviour in addition to the charged crimes,¹⁰²³⁷ it considers it sufficient to consider his purported propensity for violence in the context of assessing Mr Yekatom's degree and participation in the individual crimes below.

4445. The Chamber also fails to see how Mr Yekatom's previous positions within the FACA and as a member of parliament, his reported opposition to corruption and nepotism within the FACA and the parliament, or his commitment to military values¹⁰²³⁸ would weigh in Mr Yekatom's favour in the context of determining his sentence. If anything, these factors, combined with his purported awareness of the basic tenets of international humanitarian law as a FACA member¹⁰²³⁹ and the rule of law, serve to demonstrate that Mr Yekatom was in fact in a position to differentiate between criminal and non-criminal conduct. Yet, he chose to commit the crimes he is convicted of.¹⁰²⁴⁰

b. Mitigating factors

i. Specific context and causes for Mr Yekatom's acts

4446. The Yekatom Defence asks the Chamber to consider the specific context and causes for Mr Yekatom's acts as a mitigating factor.¹⁰²⁴¹ Notably, it refers to the dissolution and systematic targeting of the FACA shortly after the Seleka's takeover of Bangui in March 2013, which resulted in Mr Yekatom's abduction and detention,¹⁰²⁴² as well as his military ¹⁰²³⁹ The Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's submission that all FACA members were trained in international humanitarian law and its application (see Yekatom Defence Closing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2737-Corr-Red, paras 299-300).

duty to his country compelling him to ‘fight to save his country, drive out the Seleka and President Djotodia’.¹⁰²⁴³ According to the Yekatom Defence, ‘Mr Yekatom was in a difficult situation that he did not choose’.¹⁰²⁴⁴ 4447. The Chamber recalls that it already considered the context in which both accused committed the crimes they are respectively convicted of and attributed it mitigating effect, albeit minimal.¹⁰²⁴⁵ It cannot discern any circumstances which would warrant additional mitigation for Mr Yekatom specifically. Notably, the Chamber considers that, irrespective of who initiated the armed conflict in the CAR,¹⁰²⁴⁶ what is of relevance is that Mr Yekatom, on his own will, returned to the CAR from Zongo in 2013, started forming a group, together with others, over which he assumed control, with a view to planning a response to the Seleka violence¹⁰²⁴⁷ and carried out the crimes he is convicted of. Further to this, the Chamber sees substantial differences between the facts in this case and the facts in the ICTY case-law cited by the Yekatom Defence¹⁰²⁴⁸ and therefore does not consider these submissions in mitigation of Mr Yekatom’s sentence.

ii. Specific hardship in detention

Mucić et al.*, Trial Judgment, 16 November 1998, IT-96-21-T, para. 1284. In this respect it is worth noting that the relevant trial chamber found that Mr Landžo, inter alia, had – contrary to Mr Yekatom – ‘no proper military training’ and a ‘immature and fragile personality’, which had been attested by ‘several expert witnesses’ (see para. 1283).

¹⁰²⁴⁹ Yekatom Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 11, line 8 – p. 14, line 23, p. 35, line 14 – p. 37, line 22. See also Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, para. 41.

Mr Yekatom's rights were not respected at the Detention Centre, notably his right to receive culturally appropriate food.¹⁰²⁵⁰

4449. The Chamber acknowledges that Mr Yekatom has been detained thousands of kilometres away from his family¹⁰²⁵¹ and culture.¹⁰²⁵² It is also conscious of the fact that Mr Yekatom missed important family events such as the birth of his youngest son as a result of his detention.¹⁰²⁵³ Undoubtedly, this situation impacted on Mr Yekatom's family life and well-being. However, the Chamber considers the remoteness from one's culture and family to be a common feature of an accused before this Court, which, by itself, is not mitigating. That said, the Chamber recalls that it already gave weight to this circumstance in the context of affording mitigating effect to the impact of the Covid-19 pandemic on the detention conditions of the accused and their well-being.¹⁰²⁵⁴

4450. The Chamber is further mindful that visits and contacts were restricted during Mr Yekatom's detention and takes note of the Yekatom Defence's submission that phone calls were, at times, difficult due to, inter alia, the CAR's limited phone network.¹⁰²⁵⁵ While the Court has no control over the latter, it recalls that the restrictions and limitations on Mr Yekatom's contacts and visits were warranted and continuously evaluated by the Chamber.

4451. First, the contact restrictions were put in place partly as a result of Mr Yekatom's own actions.¹⁰²⁵⁶ They were periodically reviewed throughout the trial, with due consideration being given to Mr Yekatom's right to family life, and eased whenever permissible.¹⁰²⁵⁷

4452. Second, and as stated above,¹⁰²⁵⁸ the Detention Centre Measures were taken in response to the global pandemic in order to protect, inter alia, Mr Yekatom's own health. Beyond the mitigating effect already afforded to both accused in this respect,¹⁰²⁵⁹ the Chamber cannot discern any specific hardship on Mr Yekatom resulting from them which requires further mitigation.

4453. Third, and with respect to the Yekatom Defence's critique that Mr Yekatom's requests for family visits were 'turned down' several times,¹⁰²⁶⁰ the Chamber recalls that the Court's funding for the facilitation of family visits is limited.¹⁰²⁶¹ While acknowledging that Mr Yekatom has a right to family visits, the Chamber recalls that resource constraints are appropriate factors to consider in the context of determining visiting arrangements.¹⁰²⁶² Further noting that Mr Yekatom has in fact received family visits while in detention,¹⁰²⁶³ albeit not from all of his family members,¹⁰²⁶⁴ the Chamber considers that this circumstance need not be considered any further in mitigation.

4454. Finally, in relation to the alleged absence of serving culturally appropriate food, the Chamber recalls that this matter falls exclusively within the purview of the Registrar and is subject to the Presidency's judicial review and has been addressed by them. Notably, the Presidency, by majority, held that it was inconsistent with Regulation 199(1) of the Regulations of the Court (the 'Regulations') that '[t]he only means offered to Mr Yekatom to ensure the cultural requirements of his medical meals is to purchase ingredients from the Africa Shop List and prepare his own food, either to supplement or in lieu of the provided meals'. The Presidency urged the Registrar to explore other options, in order to provide prepared food which takes into account Mr Yekatom's health and cultural requirements, without requiring him to cook himself.¹⁰²⁶⁵ The Chamber neither has any oversight regarding the implementation of the Presidency's decision, nor does it, in any event, consider the purported lack of culturally appropriate food to be a relevant mitigating factor in this instance.

4455. In light of the above considerations, the Chamber considers there to be no specific hardship in Mr Yekatom's detention which would warrant mitigation of his sentence beyond the mitigating weight afforded to the hardship caused by the Detention Centre Measures.

¹⁰²⁶² See Presidency, The Prosecutor v. Germain Katanga and Mathieu Ngudjolo Chui, Decision on "Mr Mathieu Ngudjolo's Complaint Under Regulation 221\(1\) of the Regulations of the Registry Against the Registrar's Decision of 18 November 2008", 10 March 2009, ICC-RoR217-02/08-8, para. 49. iii. Cooperation with the Court

4456. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom remained respectful and cooperative with the Court throughout the proceedings and displayed good behaviour in detention.¹⁰²⁶⁶

Contrarily, the Prosecution submits that Mr Yekatom failed to cooperate.¹⁰²⁶⁷

4457. The Chamber acknowledges that overall, Mr Yekatom has been cooperative during the trial hearings. Notably, he attended all court hearings in person, unless health reasons prevented him from doing so, in which case he agreed to follow via video link or waive his right to be present.¹⁰²⁶⁸ He acted respectfully in the courtroom and never disrupted the proceedings. Moreover, almost no inappropriate behaviour in the Detention Centre towards Registry staff or other detainees has been reported to the Chamber.¹⁰²⁶⁹

4458. However, the Chamber recalls that good behaviour and cooperation is expected of any accused and cannot, by itself, be considered as a mitigating factor, unless the behaviour is ‘exceptional’ in nature.¹⁰²⁷⁰ The Chamber cannot discern any such exceptional behaviour with respect to Mr Yekatom. In addition, the Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom’s compliance with the Chamber’s orders has not been flawless. Notably, it recalls that Mr Yekatom violated the imposed contact restrictions on a number of occasions.¹⁰²⁷¹

¹⁰²⁶⁶ Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, para. 38; Yekatom Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 5, lines 2-10, p. 37, line 23 – p. 38, line 9, p. 39, lines 1-11.

¹⁰²⁷⁰ See Ntaganda Sentencing Appeals Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2667-Red, paras 6, 260. See also Al Hassan Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/12-01/18-2662, para. 124; Ntaganda Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2442, paras 229-30.

4459. In light of the above, the Chamber does not afford the factor of cooperation any mitigating effect.

iv. Institutional violations

4460. The Yekatom Defence submits that the serious and repeated institutional violations of Mr Yekatom's rights, which it argues caused significant delays to the proceedings, warrant a mitigation of his sentence.¹⁰²⁷² Notably, and in addition to the alleged delays by virtue of the Covid-19 pandemic and the joinder addressed above,¹⁰²⁷³ the Yekatom Defence refers to the following violations: (i) the ineffective legal representation during Mr Yekatom's arrest and transfer to the Court by two lawyers who were subject to a conflict of interest as they previously represented Prosecution witnesses in the Prosecution's investigation against Mr Yekatom; (ii) the Prosecution's disclosure violations, including in relation to exculpatory material and to Count 29, which delayed the Yekatom Defence's preparation of its defence; and (iii) the fabrication of evidence concerning Count 29, which placed additional burdens on the Yekatom Defence and impacted the preparation of its defence, in addition to the Registry's refusal to conduct internal investigations in that regard.¹⁰²⁷⁴

4461. The Chamber is not persuaded that any of the alleged violations should be considered in mitigation. First, the Chamber notes that the Yekatom Defence has not substantiated why the conflict of interests which affected the two counsel who represented Mr Yekatom during his arrest and transfer amounted to 'ineffective representation', particularly considering the extremely short duration of their appointment.¹⁰²⁷⁵ Moreover, the Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom received effective and continuous representation throughout the pre-trial and trial proceedings before this Court. Notably, shortly after his transfer, on 26 November 2018, Mr Stéphane Bourgon was appointed as Lead Counsel for Mr Yekatom.¹⁰²⁷⁶ Ms Mylène Dimitri, who had already served as Associate Counsel in Mr Bourgon's team, succeeded him as Lead Counsel on 7 August 2019¹⁰²⁷⁷ and has represented Mr Yekatom's interests continuously until today.

¹⁰²⁷² Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, para. 38; Yekatom Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 5, line 2 – p. 7, line 5.

¹⁰²⁷⁵ In this respect, the Chamber recalls that Ms Christine Priso Ouamballo assisted Mr Yekatom only within the context of his surrender to the Court (see Report on Mr Yekatom's Arrest and Surrender, ICC-01/14-01/18-17-US-Exp-Red2), as acknowledged by the Yekatom Defence (see Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, para. 38). Furthermore, it recalls that Mr Mathias Barthelemy Morouba was appointed on 19 November 2018 (see Notification of the Appointment of Mr Mathias Barthelemy Morouba as Counsel for Mr Alfred Yekatom, 19 November 2018, ICC-01/14-01/18-13 (with confidential Annex III and public Annexes I, II and IV) and his appointment suspended the day after (see Pre-Trial Chamber II, Decision concerning the legal representation of Alfred Yekatom, 20 November 2018, ICC-01/14-01/18-16).

4462. Second, and with respect to the Prosecution's disclosure violations, the Chamber recalls that the Chamber has taken appropriate measures to remedy these violations throughout the trial proceedings.¹⁰²⁷⁸ It does not consider that any additional consideration must be given to these circumstances in the context of determining the appropriate individual sentences for Mr Yekatom.

4463. Third, and regarding the alleged additional burden placed on the Yekatom Defence's preparation of its defence by virtue of the alleged fabrication of evidence regarding Count 29, the Chamber notes that it lies within the nature of the defence's work to dedicate resources to investigate and prepare its case. Further recalling that the Chamber did not find any violation of the Statute or internationally recognised human rights in the Prosecution's investigation or prosecution of Mr Yekatom,¹⁰²⁷⁹ it cannot discern any mitigating circumstance in this respect.

v. Efforts to promote peace, reconciliation and social cohesion

4464. The Yekatom Defence argues that Mr Yekatom made genuine and sustained personal efforts to promote peace and reconciliation across the CAR, both before and after the period relevant to the charges,¹⁰²⁸⁰ particularly highlighting his activities as a member of parliament.¹⁰²⁸¹ It further submits that Mr Yekatom took concrete steps to restore social cohesion across the CAR and particularly in the Lobaye prefecture, referring to his efforts to allow for the return of Muslims to their homes, the reopening of mosques and cemeteries, and that he played a significant role in providing educational and economic opportunities for the youth in Lobaye.¹⁰²⁸²

4465. The Prosecution and CLRV2 submit that the suggestion that Mr Yekatom worked towards the promotion of peace is ‘an affront to the enumerable victims of the crimes committed by his own Anti-Balaka group’ and does not conform with the evidence.¹⁰²⁸³

4466. At the outset, the Chamber recalls its findings above addressing Mr Yekatom’s purported activities aimed at peace and reconciliation.¹⁰²⁸⁴ Furthermore, the Chamber takes note of all of the Yekatom Defence’s submissions¹⁰²⁸⁵ and evidence submitted for the purposes of sentencing in this regard¹⁰²⁸⁶ and addresses them below to the extent that it considers them relevant to its assessment of this mitigating factor.

¹⁰²⁸⁶ In particular, the Chamber notes D29-3010 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0832-R01; D29-1317 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0838-R01; D29-8017 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0845-R01; D29-8019 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0881-R01; D29-8023 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0921-R01; D29-8024 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0909-R01; D29-8026 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0916-R01.

4467. The Chamber considers that efforts to promote peace, reconciliation and social cohesion may only constitute a mitigating circumstance if they are genuine and concrete.¹⁰²⁸⁷ They are not genuine if they are accompanied by conduct which undermines them or perpetuates the group's criminal activities,¹⁰²⁸⁸ or if they are mainly motivated by ulterior motives.¹⁰²⁸⁹

4468. Bearing the above in mind, the Chamber does not consider Mr Yekatom's efforts during the period relevant to the charges in mitigation as they were inconcrete and disingenuous. In this respect, the Chamber recalls that throughout the period relevant to the charges and with respect to most of the charged crimes, Mr Yekatom did not intervene or condemn his elements' actions, including violent acts and abuses committed by them against Muslims, nor did he sanction individuals for their actions.¹⁰²⁹⁰ On the contrary, the Chamber heard evidence of Mr Yekatom even rewarding an element for their criminal acts.¹⁰²⁹¹ This conduct clearly perpetuated the group's criminal purpose and undermined any purported peace efforts. Moreover, Mr Yekatom committed all crimes of which he is convicted with discriminatory intent against Muslims.¹⁰²⁹²

4469. Additionally, the Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom, contrary to the Yekatom Defence's submission,¹⁰²⁹³ did not entertain any special relations with the Sangaris with a view to re-establishing peace.¹⁰²⁹⁴ Similarly, the Chamber is not persuaded that the evidence cited by the Yekatom Defence supports its argument that Mr Yekatom generally and actively worked and cooperated with other international organisations, governmental authorities, civil society actors and religious leaders.¹⁰²⁹⁵

The Chamber notes that it has duly considered this evidence, where appropriate, and refers in particular to paragraphs 67, 1638-1639, 1719, 1886, 1912, 3902, 4471.

4470. Specifically regarding Mr Yekatom's purported efforts along the PK9-Mbaïki axis – which are at the core of the Yekatom Defence's submissions – the Chamber notes that they were motivated by ulterior motives, as well as undermined by Mr Yekatom's conduct and that of his elements during this period. Notably, it recalls that it was the presence of the Sangaris and other international actors in Mbaïki at the time which compelled Mr Yekatom to bring his 'peace message' to Mbaïki¹⁰²⁹⁶ and prevent attacks of his group¹⁰²⁹⁷ against the Muslim civilian population.¹⁰²⁹⁸ Moreover, Mr Yekatom delivered his 'peace message' only once he arrived to Mbaïki and attended the meeting at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church, in which the removal of the Muslim population from Mbaïki, which was a foregone conclusion at that point, was decided.¹⁰²⁹⁹ The Chamber also notes that Raymond Mongbandi, the mayor of Mbaïki at the time, did not confirm that Mr Yekatom cooperated with the MISCA/MINUSCA to ensure security in Mbaïki.¹⁰³⁰⁰ Importantly, the Chamber also found that during this timeframe, Mr Yekatom's elements, with his knowledge, threatened and harassed Muslim civilians in Mbaïki, telling them to leave the area.¹⁰³⁰¹ The Anti-Balaka also attacked a gendarme patrol in Mbaïki which was there to protect the civilian population.¹⁰³⁰² Any measures to prevent these acts, and all instances of 'cooperation' between Mr Yekatom and the authorities, were taken only after Mr Yekatom had gained effective control of the PK9-Mbaïki axis and the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki had been decided and/or carried out.¹⁰³⁰³

4471. Contrarily, the Chamber acknowledges that Mr Yekatom undertook certain actions after the period relevant to the charges, which are given some weight in assessing this mitigating factor. In particular, it recalls that Mr Yekatom attended the reconciliation ceremony at the ¹⁰²⁹⁶ The Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom addressed the crowds outside the St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki and subsequently at Mbaïki's bus station, where he delivered 'peace messages' similar to those he had expressed at the meeting, see paragraph 120 above.

¹⁰²⁹⁷ The Chamber recalls that the evidence shows that Mr Yekatom made certain efforts to control his elements, not only by providing his phone number but also by meeting the MISCA/MINUSCA when it reported incidents of 'misbehaviour by the Anti-Balaka', and by asking the ComZone and deputy ComZone of Mbaïki to identify 'fake Anti-Balaka', see paragraph 3558 above. See also Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, p. 17.

Omnisport arena on 29 March 2014¹⁰³⁰⁴ and the Brazzaville Forum in July 2014,¹⁰³⁰⁵ and that he was involved in peace initiatives in Boda in March and July 2014.¹⁰³⁰⁶

4472. The Chamber also notes that Deleris Ahamat, a Muslim who held functions as the president of the ‘Conseil Supérieur Islamique de Centrafrique’ and vice-president of the ‘Comité Islamique Centrafricain’, stated that Mr Yekatom undertook efforts to reopen mosques between the end of 2014 and 2016.¹⁰³⁰⁷ Ibrahim Balla, a Muslim merchant and chef de quartier, stated that Mr Yekatom attended a meeting in Bimbo in April or May 2015 in the context of social cohesion and peace building and took steps to enable Muslims to circulate freely.¹⁰³⁰⁸ Furthermore, Thierry Georges Vackat, a Christian member of the ‘Conseil national de transition’ between 2013 and 2016, and Deleris Ahamat stated that Mr Yekatom participated in the Bangui Forum on 30 March 2016.¹⁰³⁰⁹

4473. While acknowledging these efforts, the Chamber also stresses that they must be put into perspective. Notably, they occurred in the context of broader peace negotiations with the CAR government and international authorities¹⁰³¹⁰ and were thus not primarily driven by Mr Yekatom. Furthermore, it is important to consider that these efforts were made when no more large-scale active hostilities took place, the Seleka had mostly retreated or was billeted, and many Muslim civilians had been forced to flee their localities.¹⁰³¹¹

4474. The Chamber is further not persuaded that the other alleged efforts, such as Mr Yekatom’s involvement in organising football games, building schools and a health centre, or starting his company ‘Koya security’ in which he purportedly created employment opportunities for the youth,¹⁰³¹² are of relevance to its assessment of Mr Yekatom’s efforts towards the establishment of peace and reconciliation. Notably, the Chamber is of the view that at least some of these actions seem to primarily have been motivated by Mr Yekatom's personal economic and political interests, considering, in particular, that he was running to be elected as a parliamentarian in the 2016 elections.¹⁰³¹³ Relatedly, the Chamber also considers Mr Yekatom's actions as a member of parliament¹⁰³¹⁴ to be predominantly politically motivated and of no interest to the present assessment.

4475. In conclusion, the Chamber accepts that Mr Yekatom may have wished for peace to return to the CAR once the Anti-Balaka's objectives had been accomplished and that he took certain efforts towards this goal. Nonetheless, taking all of the above considerations into account, the Chamber only considers the abovementioned peace and reconciliation activities which were made after the period relevant to the charges and only affords them limited weight in mitigating Mr Yekatom's sentence.

vi. Efforts to assist victims

4476. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom undertook genuine and non-selective efforts to assist victims during the period relevant to the charges and thereafter, in particular the Muslim population and direct victims of the charged crimes.¹⁰³¹⁵ It adds that the genuineness of these efforts is demonstrated by the fact that Muslim civilians directly sought his help during the period relevant to the charges, and have testified on his behalf in these proceedings.¹⁰³¹⁶

4477. The CLVR2 challenge these arguments and submit that, even if the accused made gestures of assistance to the victims, these were intended to make the situation appear better rather than truly providing assistance, and do not lessen the seriousness of the crimes.¹⁰³¹⁷

¹⁰³¹³ See e.g. D29-8017 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0845-R01, at 0848, para. 23, who stated that Mr Yekatom 'souhaitait la construire parce que ses électeurs souhaitaient obtenir une école à KAPOU'.

¹⁰³¹⁴ See in particular D29-8019 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0881-R01, at 0885, paras 34-35; D29-8017 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0845-R01, at 0848, para. 21; D-8027 Statement, CAR-D29-0009-0934-R01, at 0937-38, paras 17-26.

¹⁰³¹⁷ CLVR2 Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-310, p. 52, lines 7-13.

4478. Similar to its findings above in relation to Mr Yekatom's efforts towards peace and reconciliation, the Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom's alleged efforts during the period relevant to the charges to assist the Muslim population are disingenuous as they stand in stark contrast to his criminal conduct against this group.

4479. Furthermore, it does not transpire from the evidence that Mr Yekatom generally assisted victims during or after the period relevant to the charges. Rather, the Yekatom Defence's arguments are limited to highlighting isolated and selective acts,¹⁰³¹⁸ which at times seem to be mainly motivated by ulterior reasons. In this regard, the Chamber particularly notes that Mr Yekatom's involvement in assisting D29-5014's Muslim family, who were subjected to violence in the PK9 area towards the end of January or early February 2014,¹⁰³¹⁹ must be viewed in light of the fact that the witness had a relationship with the Beina family.¹⁰³²⁰ Noting that Habib Beina was a high-level element in Mr Yekatom's group¹⁰³²¹ and personally close to him, it is clear that Mr Yekatom had a personal interest in their protection.

4480. In light of the above, and in accordance with the jurisprudence of this Court,¹⁰³²² the Chamber does not consider it appropriate to consider these sporadic and selective efforts generally mitigating, particularly considering the large number of crimes Mr Yekatom committed in parallel to these alleged acts of kindness, as well as their heinous nature. However, to the extent that the judgment discusses specific instances of Mr Yekatom's purported efforts to assist victims of the specific crimes he is convicted of, the Chamber assesses them in the context of determining the individual sentences below.¹⁰³²³

¹⁰³²³ See in particular paragraphs 4554, 4638 below.

vii. Efforts to minimise harm

4481. The Yekatom Defence submits that Mr Yekatom concretely and genuinely sought to minimise the harm caused to the victims.¹⁰³²⁴ According to the Yekatom Defence, the evidence establishes that Mr Yekatom (i) personally undertook measures to ensure that the principle of distinction was respected; (ii) issued directives making clear that the Muslim population was not to be targeted; (iii) undertook enquiries and instigated appropriate measures when violations against the Muslim population or their property occurred, or attempted to prevent further violations; (iv) undertook efforts to restore the security apparatus across the Lobaye prefecture and collaborated with local actors to prevent harm to the Muslim population; and (v) implemented measures to alleviate fear amongst the civilian population in relation to the RFACPP's activities, including conducting military training exercises without firing live ammunition or blanks, and taking particular routes so as 'not to unnecessarily frighten the civilian population'.¹⁰³²⁵

4482. With respect to points (i) and (ii), the Chamber recalls that the evidence establishes the opposite. Concretely, the Chamber found that Mr Yekatom expressly instructed the elements under his command to attack Muslim civilians, in the context of events relating to crimes as charged in this case and himself did not draw an appropriate distinction between Seleka members and Muslim civilians when giving instructions to his elements.¹⁰³²⁶

4483. The Chamber notes that in support of its point (iii), the Yekatom Defence presents two arguments. It refers, on the one hand, to Mr Yekatom's intervention during a disagreement between elements from Stéphane Chrisostome Dawili's group and a former FACA captain regarding the theft of his goats on 24 April 2014 at PK9.¹⁰³²⁷ In this regard, the Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom's intervention during this incident consisted of shooting at the involved elements, leading to the death of two of them and injuring the other, who was hospitalised for two to three weeks.¹⁰³²⁸ Leaving aside that it has not been established for the purposes of sentencing that this incident concerned the return of looted goods, the Chamber finds it entirely inappropriate to consider such violent behaviour as an act of minimising harm for the purposes of sentencing.

4484. The Chamber also rejects the Yekatom Defence's second argument. Notably, it does not consider that the evidence establishes Mr Yekatom's purported continuous cooperation with the MISCA when operating along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, as alleged by the Yekatom Defence,¹⁰³²⁹ and recalls its findings above in this regard.¹⁰³³⁰

4485. Regarding point (iv), the Chamber also recalls its findings above.¹⁰³³¹ Finally, and with respect to point (v), the Chamber considers that even assuming that these efforts have all been established to the requisite standard,¹⁰³³² they are of such limited nature that they could not possibly be afforded any weight for the purposes of sentencing considering the heinous nature of the crimes Mr Yekatom is convicted of and the hostile environment he and his elements created.¹⁰³³³

4486. In light of the above, and recalling that it already affords limited mitigating effect to Mr Yekatom's peace efforts, the Chamber does not consider these arguments any further.

¹⁰³³³ See e.g. paragraph 121 above.

c. Aggravating factor: Abuse of power

4487. The Prosecution¹⁰³³⁴ and CLRV2¹⁰³³⁵ ask the Chamber to consider Mr Yekatom's alleged abuse of power as an aggravating factor pursuant to Rule 145(2)(b)(ii) of the Rules.¹⁰³³⁶ Specifically, the Prosecution submits that, as the leader of his Anti-Balaka group and career soldier, Mr Yekatom abused his position of authority to order his elements to commit crimes.¹⁰³³⁷

4488. As held by the Appeals Chamber, a position of authority alone does not merit a harsher sentence. Rather, a chamber must look at this position in conjunction with the manner in which the authority is exercised.¹⁰³³⁸ The Chamber does not consider that Mr Yekatom, beyond holding a position of authority as an Anti-Balaka leader, exercised this authority in a way that would warrant further consideration as an aggravating factor within the meaning of Rule 145(2)(b)(ii) of the Rules.

4489. Considering the specific circumstances at hand, the Chamber is of the view that Mr Yekatom's role and acts are more appropriately assessed in the context of determining his degree of participation and intent in relation to the individual crimes below.¹⁰³³⁹ Consequently, it also does not address the Yekatom Defence's submissions regarding double-counting any further.¹⁰³⁴⁰

ii. Determination of individual sentences for each crime

4490. At the outset, the Chamber recalls that the facts underlying the crimes of which Mr Yekatom is convicted overlap to a certain degree. Accordingly, they need to be taken into consideration for more than one crime. The Chamber clarifies that this does not constitute

‘double-counting’. In this respect, it notes the Appeals Chamber’s jurisprudence that ‘[t]he calculation of an individual sentence necessarily entails an assessment of all the circumstances relevant to a particular crime’, including those circumstances that may be relevant to the determination of more than one individual sentence. Indeed, ‘if the circumstances relevant to more than one individual sentence were to be excluded from the calculation of any of those individual sentences, the true culpability of a convicted person for a particular crime would be unclear’.¹⁰³⁴¹ However, as stated above,¹⁰³⁴² any relevant factual overlap is accounted for in the context of determining a joint sentence, to ensure reflecting the proper culpability of an accused.¹⁰³⁴³ With regard to the discriminatory dimension of all crimes, the Chamber additionally recalls its findings above.¹⁰³⁴⁴

4491. In the present section, the Chamber addresses crime-specific considerations in relation to each of the 20 crimes of which Mr Yekatom is convicted. The analysis is grouped by the following incidents, which feature the same or at least connected underlying facts: (a) the crimes committed in the context of the attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin – the Bangui Attack (Counts 1 to 6 and 8); (b) the crimes committed in the context of the events at Yamwara on and around 24 December 2013 – the Yamwara Incident (Counts 11 to 17); and (c) the crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka’s advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis (Counts 24 to 28). Each section contains general considerations applying to all crimes of the relevant incident. This has been done merely for clarity and avoidance of duplication. However, the Chamber emphasises that it has taken each of these findings into account when determining the individual sentences below.

a. Crimes committed in the context of the attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin (Counts 1 to 6 and 8)

4492. The Chamber observes that the crimes committed in the context of the Bangui Attack share a number of features,¹⁰³⁴⁵ in particular as concerns Mr Yekatom's individual responsibility. In this respect, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰³⁴⁶ Notably, it recalls that Mr Yekatom is convicted of committing the crimes underlying Counts 1 to 6 and 8 jointly with, or through others, pursuant to Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute.

4493. In determining Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent for the purposes of sentencing, the Chamber finds the following circumstances of relevance, which in its view significantly heighten it.

4494. First, as stated above, Mr Yekatom was the founder and chief of the group that carried out the attack on Boeing and Cattin on 5 December 2013.¹⁰³⁴⁷ In this regard, he exercised a leading role and unlimited control over his group and the crimes committed by the elements in it.¹⁰³⁴⁸ Notably, on 4 December 2013, he chose some of his elements and instructed them to move towards Bangui, he provided instructions on how to carry out the attack, and it was pursuant to his instructions that his elements attacked the Boeing Market, the Boeing Mosque and Cattin.¹⁰³⁴⁹

4495. Second, the Chamber notes that the attack on Boeing and Cattin by Mr Yekatom's group was not spontaneous, it was planned in coordination with other Anti-Balaka groups as part of the larger Bangui Attack, with this coordination beginning well before November

¹⁰³⁴⁶ See paragraphs 36, 48, 55, 63; section II.B, in particular paragraphs 73-78; paragraphs 1299, 1305; section V.B.3.i.b.i above.

¹⁰³⁴⁹ See paragraphs 74-76, 3950 above.

2013.¹⁰³⁵⁰ In the months leading up to this attack, Mr Yekatom and his group armed and trained in the bush.¹⁰³⁵¹ The night before the attack, Mr Yekatom personally conducted reconnaissance at the Boeing Market with some of his elements.¹⁰³⁵² In the view of the Chamber, these acts show a high level of planning and involvement by Mr Yekatom in the execution of the crimes.

4496. Third, the Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom not only issued the instructions regarding the attack on Boeing and Cattin to the elements under his command, but he personally launched the attack and participated in it as an armed member of his group.¹⁰³⁵³

4497. Fourth, notwithstanding the fact that Mr Yekatom knew that elements of his group did not distinguish between Muslim civilians and the Seleka, he did not demand or emphasise the need for such distinction when instructing his elements during their preparations and in advance of the attack.¹⁰³⁵⁴ Contrarily, Mr Yekatom instructed the elements under his command to target sectors in Boeing and Cattin where ‘Muslims’ were to be found, aware that his instructions would be understood as also targeting Muslim civilians.¹⁰³⁵⁵

4498. The Chamber is mindful that certain factual findings on Mr Yekatom’s acts only pertain to specific crimes committed during the course of the Bangui Attack. Where this is the case, they are discussed in the context of the relevant crimes below. Nonetheless, these differences do not lead to different conclusions regarding Mr Yekatom’s degree of participation and intent for the individual crimes committed. On the contrary, taking all of the above as well as the below crime-specific considerations into account, the Chamber considers ¹⁰³⁵⁰ See paragraph 73 above. In this regard, the Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence’s submission that Mr Yekatom’s involvement in the Bangui Attack was a result of or at least linked to direct orders from his military superior, Ngremangou, and that he was not involved in the decision-making and planning of the attack. The Chamber recalls its conclusion that Ngremangou instructed Mr Yekatom and his group to advance to participate in the Bangui Attack. However, noting the high degree of Mr Yekatom’s participation and intent in the crimes committed in the context of the Bangui Attack, the Chamber does not consider that this factor is relevant to its determination on sentencing. See paragraphs 2520-2521 above. See also Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, para. 23; Yekatom Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 31, lines 3-17.

Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent to be high for each of the crimes underlying Counts 1 to 6 and 8.

4499. Another feature common to the crimes committed in the context of the Bangui Attack is their commission for motives involving discrimination. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom's elements targeted Muslim persons in Boeing and Cattin by reason of their perceived religious commonalities with the Seleka, as well as Mr Yekatom's intent in that regard.¹⁰³⁵⁶ As indicated above,¹⁰³⁵⁷ the Chamber considers this circumstance to be an aggravating factor within the meaning of Rule 145(2)(b)(v) of the Rules for the crimes underlying Counts 1 to 6.¹⁰³⁵⁸

i. Attack against the civilian population as such as a war crime (Count 1)

4500. The war crime of attack against the civilian population as such violates the principle of distinction, which is at the core of international humanitarian law. The purpose of this principle, and of the incrimination of intentional attacks on civilians in the Statute, is to protect lives and to avoid the suffering of individuals not taking a direct part in hostilities during an armed conflict.¹⁰³⁵⁹

4501. The Chamber notes that the war crime of attacking the civilian population as such is a conduct crime which, for its commission, does not require a result in terms of infliction of an actual harm or death on civilians. The Chamber considers that generally, conduct crimes are in abstracto less serious than result crimes which do require an infliction of harm on the victim.¹⁰³⁶⁰ Nonetheless, considering the protected interests at stake, the Chamber deems this crime to be of high gravity in abstracto.

¹⁰³⁵⁶ See paragraphs 4004, 4024 above.

¹⁰³⁵⁷ See section VI.B.2.i.a above.

¹⁰³⁵⁸ With respect to Count 8, the Chamber recalls that the discriminatory dimension is a constitutive element of the crime against humanity of persecution. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider it as an aggravating factor for this crime.

¹⁰³⁵⁹ See Ongwen Sentencing Judgment, ICC-02/04-01/15-1819-Red, para. 148; Ntaganda Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2442, para. 53. See further Galić Trial Judgment, IT-98-29-T, para. 27.

4502. The Chamber recalls, however, that it may consider harm arising as a consequence of a crime in the context of sentencing.¹⁰³⁶¹ In the present case, as set out in detail in the sections below, extensive harm was inflicted on the civilian population as a result of the attack on Boeing and Cattin.¹⁰³⁶² In the view of the Chamber, this heightens the gravity in concreto of Count 1. The Chamber recognises that these consequences constitute the relevant facts underlying the other crimes Mr Yekatom is convicted of in the context of the Bangui Attack. While all relevant circumstances must be considered in the context of the individual sentence under this count, these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the determination of the joint sentence.¹⁰³⁶³

4503. On the basis of the concrete circumstances, the Chamber considers the gravity of the crime to be high in concreto. In addition to the considerations in relation to the extent of the harm caused, the Chamber considers the nature of the unlawful behaviour to be of particular relevance to the assessment of the gravity of the crime. It recalls the nature of the targets comprising the attack – a market, a mosque and unarmed civilians –, and that these were not legitimate military targets.¹⁰³⁶⁴ Specifically, upon Mr Yekatom's instructions,¹⁰³⁶⁵ Mr Yekatom's group attacked the Boeing Market where the Muslim traders were shot at.¹⁰³⁶⁶ Mr Yekatom's group also attacked the main mosque serving both the communities of Boeing and Cattin, as well as an unarmed man in Cattin.¹⁰³⁶⁷ Further, the Chamber notes that while it is unclear to what extent Mr Yekatom's group was armed during the attack, what is clear is that they possessed and used some firearms, as well as a rocket.¹⁰³⁶⁸ It also recalls that in the Boeing Market specifically, Mr Yekatom's elements shot in all directions.¹⁰³⁶⁹

4504. Regarding Mr Yekatom's participation and intent in relation to this crime, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰³⁷⁰ In particular, it recalls that the Chamber convicts Mr Yekatom for Count 1 as a direct perpetrator pursuant to Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute, for having founded his group and himself launched and carried out the attack, as a chief of his group and an armed participant in it.¹⁰³⁷¹

4505. Finally noting the extent of the harm caused by this crime, the Chamber is not persuaded by the Yekatom Defence's argument that the conduct underlying the crime in question is of 'limited scope'.¹⁰³⁷²

ii. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 2 and 3)

4507. The crime of murder protects human life and as such, it is inherently one of the most serious crimes. Murder further causes harm to the relatives and dependants left behind, who not only lose the direct victim, but may also be directly injured as a result of the crime committed.¹⁰³⁷⁵ The gravity of this crime, both as a war crime and as a crime against humanity, must therefore be considered very high in abstracto.

4508. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Counts 2 and 3 to be particularly high. The Chamber has taken into account the extent of victimisation, notably that during the attack on Boeing and Cattin, elements of Mr Yekatom's group killed multiple civilians: (i) one Muslim trader – Hassan Mahamat, and two unnamed Muslim traders at the Boeing Market; and (ii) one unnamed Muslim man in Cattin.¹⁰³⁷⁶

4509. The Chamber has taken into account the violent circumstances of and the means employed to commit the murders.¹⁰³⁷⁷ Notably, the Chamber recalls that elements of Mr Yekatom's group killed the unarmed Muslim man in Cattin, who eventually succumbed to his wounds, on the basis that he was an 'Arab'.¹⁰³⁷⁸ The Chamber notes the testimony of Salehou Ndiaye who described how the 'Anti-Balaka' chased the victim, who he heard 'pleading for help', and that he 'later' saw four 'Anti-Balaka elements' armed with a Kalashnikov and three machetes standing next to the victim's body which he later saw, lying on the road, with 'wounds' all over. Salehou Ndiaye further stated that a crowd of locals followed the 'Anti-Balaka' and were 'encouraging them'.¹⁰³⁷⁹

4510. As to the murders at the market in Boeing, the Chamber recalls that when Mr Yekatom's group reached the market, the armed elements in the front fired at the Muslim traders who were present there. During this time, Mr Yekatom's elements shot in all directions.¹⁰³⁸⁰ The Chamber further recalls that neither of the two unnamed Muslim traders who were killed were armed at the time of their murders.¹⁰³⁸¹ In relation to Hassan's death specifically, the Chamber recalls P-1339's evidence according to which, after Mr Yekatom fired a shot in the air and his elements 'launched the attack', Hassan received a bullet and died after he 'left his shop with [a] weapon to defend himself'.¹⁰³⁸² The Chamber considers that the violent nature of the crime is demonstrated by the weapons that were used – including a grenade which was thrown into 'the house' that propelled Hassan outside his shop – and the fact that Hassan was attacked whilst he was in his shop, on the basis that generally a person can reasonably expect less harm to occur when inside their own property.¹⁰³⁸³

4511. The Chamber notes the impact and harm Hassan Mahamat's murder caused to his family.

The Chamber first notes that in the intervening period between Hassan's death and P-2682's definite knowledge thereof, P-2682 was uncertain about Hassan's fate.¹⁰³⁸⁴ Compounding this uncertainty, was the fact that shortly after Hassan was murdered, P-2682 called Hassan's phone, and a man answered and threatened to kill her next.¹⁰³⁸⁵ Second, the Chamber notes the long-lasting harm Hassan's murder caused to his family. In her testimony, P-2682 described to the Chamber the profound physical, psychological, emotional and financial impact of losing her spouse. She stated that

[a]fter the death of my husband, I know that once he's dead, everything is over. I cannot stop thinking about him, reminiscing about our life, his generosity, especially towards my family, because I came from a poor family and we were lucky to have him as part of our family. Everything we asked him to do, he would do. So today, even when I am with the others, I might forget for a while, but if I'm alone, I think about him. When I lack something, I think about what he would do if he had been present, and so this drives me into a situation where I become practically sick.¹⁰³⁸⁶

4512. The Chamber recalls that while P-2682 moved to PK5 a few days before the events at the Boeing Market, her continued stay in PK5 is inevitably linked to the death of her husband and the threats to her life that she received from an unidentified speaker speaking from Hassan's phone.¹⁰³⁸⁷ During her stay in PK5, she mourned her husband in an environment with uninhabitable living conditions, which aggravated her loss.¹⁰³⁸⁸ As a result of the conditions in PK5, she fled to Chad, fearing for her safety.¹⁰³⁸⁹ The Chamber recalls that in her testimony, P-2682 described how this displacement affected her, notably that it made her 'scared' and sad and that in Chad she 'was really suffering' because of the death of her husband.¹⁰³⁹⁰

¹⁰³⁹⁰ P-2682: T-017, p. 39, lines 12-20, p. 45, lines 9-25. See also paragraph 2702 above.

4513. The Chamber considers that the significant impact of the crimes on Hassan's family, as described above, is inherent to the violent nature of the crimes committed and is accordingly satisfied that this harm was also objectively foreseeable to Mr Yekatom.

4514. The Prosecution submits that the 'unarmed civilian victims' of the charged crimes were particularly 'vulnerable and defenceless' against the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰³⁹¹ Specifically, it argues that 'vulnerable Muslims traders were murdered by [Mr Yekatom]'s elements' during the Bangui Attack.¹⁰³⁹² The Chamber cannot discern a particular vulnerability or defencelessness within the sense of Rule 145(2)(b)(iii) of the Rules, which would warrant an aggravated sentence. It considers that the particular circumstances of the murders have already been accounted for in the Chamber's assessment of the circumstances of manner, location and means employed to execute the crimes pursuant to Rule 145(i)(c) of the Rules above.

4515. Regarding Mr Yekatom's participation and intent in relation to this crime, the Chamber recalls its above findings.¹⁰³⁹³ In particular, the Chamber recalls that before the Bangui Attack, Mr Yekatom instructed his elements to target sectors where 'Muslims' were to be found. He also instructed his elements on the night before the Bangui Attack to target Muslims traders at the Boeing Market. The Chamber found that Mr Yekatom's instructions were understood by the elements to accept that Muslim civilians would be killed as a result of the fighting,¹⁰³⁹⁴ and that Mr Yekatom intended his elements to murder Muslim traders at the Boeing Market and knew that his elements would kill Muslim civilians in Cattin.¹⁰³⁹⁵

4516. Having considered all of the above circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰³⁹⁶ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crimes for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰³⁹⁷ the Chamber sentences Mr Yekatom to a term of 14 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of murder (Count 2) and 14 years of imprisonment for the war crime of murder (Count 3).

iii. Forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity and displacement as a war crime (Counts 4 and 5)

4517. The prohibition of forcible transfer of population and deportation is intended to protect the right of individuals to remain in their homes and communities and not to be deprived of their property by being forcibly displaced to another location.¹⁰³⁹⁸ In this respect, it guards against the wholesale destruction of communities. It constitutes a serious crime due to the fact that people are illegally moved against their will or without having a genuine choice in the matter, from the area in which they are lawfully present, leading to their exclusion from and potential destruction of the economic and social life of their communities.¹⁰³⁹⁹ Accordingly, the Chamber deems this crime to be of high gravity in abstracto.

4518. Ordering the displacement of a civilian population as a war crime is also intended to protect the right of individuals to remain in their homes and communities and not to be displaced without justification during a non-international armed conflict. However, noting that ordering displacement does not require for displacement as such to actually occur, the Chamber considers the crime under Article 8(2)(e)(viii) of the Statute to be in abstracto less serious compared to forcible transfer of population or deportation under Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute, which requires the actual infliction of harm on the victims.¹⁰⁴⁰⁰ Accordingly, the Chamber deems this crime to be of substantial gravity in abstracto.

¹⁰³⁹⁸ See paragraph 3801 and the references cited therein. See also Ntaganda Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2442, para. 158 referring to, inter alia, Y. Sandoz et al. (ed.) ¹⁰⁴⁰⁰ See Ntaganda Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/04-02/06-2442, para. 163.

4520. At the outset, the Chamber highlights the significant number of persons affected by the crimes underlying Counts 4 and 5. It recalls that, from 5 December 2013 onwards, the majority of Muslims of Boeing and Cattin fled to PK5, while some others fled to other parts of the CAR, in the context of the attack by Mr Yekatom's group on Boeing and Cattin.¹⁰⁴⁰¹ The Chamber further highlights that some Muslims endured forced displacement multiple times. It recalls that with the influx of Muslims fleeing the Bangui Attack, PK5 became overcrowded, uninhabitable, and unsafe. As a result, some Muslims fled to neighbouring countries, fearing for their safety.¹⁰⁴⁰²

4521. In this regard, the Chamber recalls the scale of the movement of Muslims outside of the CAR and emphasises that they had to leave their homes and were removed from their known surroundings. The Chamber notably received evidence from Anti-Balaka witnesses that Muslims were sent to Chad, Cameroon and Congo with the assistance of the international and MISCA forces.¹⁰⁴⁰³

4523. The Chamber further recalls the difficult circumstances and hardship which affected the people who were forcibly displaced from Boeing and Cattin. It notes that they endured the loss of their family members,¹⁰⁴⁰⁷ loss of their home, loss of their belongings, and sense of material and non-material unsafety for prolonged periods.¹⁰⁴⁰⁸ The displaced persons experienced fear and threats to physical security, a lack of freedom of movement, and a fear of being identified as a Muslim following the events.¹⁰⁴⁰⁹ Notably, Muslims who fled to PK5 continued to feel threatened by the Anti-Balaka's presence in and around PK5 and Bangui. This climate of fear contributed to the lack of freedom of movement within and outside of PK5. It made it almost impossible to leave PK5 safely.¹⁰⁴¹⁰ This is illustrated by P-2472 who explained that after the Bangui Attack, there were 'continuous attacks by the Anti-Balaka against the Muslim population in [Bangui] for approximately three months. The Muslims who were living in PK5 were encircled and could not go out. We spent many months unable to sleep and being in constant fear of being attacked'.¹⁰⁴¹¹

4524. Compounding this was the fact that at PK5 the living conditions were difficult and dire – with a lack of food, medicines, basic sanitary conditions and rest, making the environment practically uninhabitable, in addition to being overcrowded and unsafe.¹⁰⁴¹² Catherine Samba-Panza explained that the enclaves such as the one at PK5, were 'really not fit for [...] human life'.¹⁰⁴¹³

4525. The Chamber further recalls that it received evidence regarding the continuing animosity shown to Muslims during their displacement from the CAR to neighbouring countries, including by the Anti-Balaka. For example, P-2682 described how when she was 'evacuated' to Chad, she encountered the 'Anti-Balaka' who threatened them and made gestures with their hands, saying, 'We're going to kill you. We're going to slit your throats'.¹⁰⁴¹⁴

4526. Finally, the Chamber notes the testimony of Salehou Ndiaye who indicated that whilst some Muslims who used to live in Boeing and Cattin were able to return to the places where they lived before 'the events', others were not.¹⁰⁴¹⁵ He also described how his family has been affected.¹⁰⁴¹⁶ Whilst he returned to the CAR, he lives in a one bedroom flat and does not have the financial resources to bring his family back to live with him – he tries 'to survive, covering the expenses in both places, Senegal and in Bangui'.¹⁰⁴¹⁷ He explained how this affected him emotionally, noting that 'the fact that I'm far away from my family and my family is far away from me, this is very difficult'.¹⁰⁴¹⁸ He also explained the effects that the events had on him generally, that it is 'very, very difficult to forget all that happened', 'it's a source of pain', and he avoids going to where he used to live because 'all this comes flooding back' causing him to 'spend a sleepless night'.¹⁰⁴¹⁹

4527. Noting the above, the Chamber considers that the consequences and harm of the commission of the crimes under Counts 4 and 5 were high, with the victims not only deprived of their property, but also effectively uprooted from their homes, communities, and in some cases, their country. Victims notably experienced physical and emotional suffering, considering in particular the difficult conditions at the time of their displacement or at the locations they were displaced to, particularly in PK5 which the Chamber found was practically uninhabitable.¹⁰⁴²⁰ This in turn led to the loss of social, occupational and economic stability, and material safety, and to the loss of communities, as most of the Muslim population had to flee from Boeing and Cattin and remained unable to return at least for some time following the events.¹⁰⁴²¹

4528. In this context, the Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's submission that 'a proportion of displaced persons are alleged to have returned to their homes and/or returned to CAR in general'¹⁰⁴²² and that there has to be 'a cut-off point when assessing the gravity of offences'.¹⁰⁴²³ The Chamber understands this to mean that in the Yekatom Defence's view it should take into account the duration of the displacement, as well as the purported return of a proportion of the displaced persons. The Chamber also takes note of the Ngaïssona Defence's submission that the CLRV2's and Prosecution's arguments on the long-term impact of displacement beyond the initial transfer aim to impute harms unconnected to Mr Ngaïssona's conduct in 2013, and that the reasons cited by victims for not returning to their places of origin to this day are sometimes either not directly linked to the charges, or the link to the charges is insufficiently clear.¹⁰⁴²⁴ The Chamber notes that these submissions overlap with the Yekatom Defence's and, for clarity, addresses them together at this juncture.

4529. To the contrary, the CLRV2 submit, inter alia, that (i) the majority of victims are still unable, more than 10 years later, to return; (ii) returning to one's country of origin without being able to effectively return to one's own home with the same means as before cannot reasonably reduce the gravity of the crimes; and (iii) the people who returned experienced major difficulties in re-establishing themselves and finding employment, notably as their homes were occupied during their absence and/or looted or destroyed, and they lost everything when they left.¹⁰⁴²⁵

4531. In this regard, the Chamber does not consider that the harm deriving from displacement necessarily ended by virtue of either (i) an eventual return to the CAR from abroad; or (ii) for those displaced within the CAR, settling elsewhere. The Chamber recalls that victims had to leave their houses and for some, their belongings behind, and thus emphasises that their return to the CAR or their place of origin does not mean that they were able to reach the same standards of living or live in the same conditions as before,¹⁰⁴²⁷ and does not reduce the gravity of the crimes as such.

4532. Turning to the arguments as to the necessity of a ‘cut-off point’, the Chamber recalls that it may consider any consequences arising from the crimes in the context of sentencing, as long as they were objectively foreseeable to the accused.¹⁰⁴²⁸ In this regard, the Chamber considers that the harm described above, including beyond the initial displacement of victims, is inherent to the nature of the crimes, derives from, and is sufficiently linked to them. It thus considers of limited relevance to its present assessment the fact that other factors may have played a role in some victims not returning to their places of origin following the events.

4533. Further considering the nature of Mr Yekatom’s role in the context of his group’s attack on Boeing and Cattin,¹⁰⁴²⁹ as well as the fact that he knew that the launching of his attack and the instructions to his elements would cause the Muslims from Boeing and Cattin to flee,¹⁰⁴³⁰ the Chamber is satisfied that the harm and consequences described above were objectively foreseeable to Mr Yekatom.

4534. Regarding the Prosecution’s and the CLRV2’s submissions on the vulnerability of victims of these crimes,¹⁰⁴³¹ the Chamber considers that while victims were placed in a vulnerable situation, it cannot discern a particular vulnerability or defencelessness within the sense of Rule 145(2)(b)(iii) of the Rules, which would warrant an aggravated sentence. It considers that the particular circumstances of their treatment have already been accounted for in the Chamber's assessment of the circumstances of manner, location and means employed to execute the crimes pursuant to Rule 145(i)(c) of the Rules above.

4535. Regarding Mr Yekatom's participation and intent in relation to these crimes, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁴³² In particular, it recalls that the Chamber convicts Mr Yekatom for Counts 4 and 5 as a direct perpetrator pursuant to Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute, for having founded his group and himself launching and carrying out the attack, as a chief of his group and an armed participant in it.¹⁰⁴³³ Notably, the Chamber emphasises that it was the entirety of Mr Yekatom's conduct that created the conditions, including an environment of fear of violence, as a result of which the Muslims in Boeing and Cattin fled.¹⁰⁴³⁴ Additionally, Mr Yekatom knew that his acts would cause the Muslims from Boeing and Cattin to flee.¹⁰⁴³⁵ Finally, the Chamber recalls that Mr Yekatom's conduct constituted an 'order' to displace the Muslim civilian population from Boeing and Cattin and that Mr Yekatom was in a position to affect the displacement by giving such an order.¹⁰⁴³⁶

*iv. Directing an attack against a building dedicated to religion as a war crime (Count

4537. The Chamber considers that even if inherently grave, and mindful of the severe impact crimes against property may have on victims, such crimes are generally of lesser gravity than crimes against persons.¹⁰⁴³⁹ The Chamber also recalls that this crime is a conduct crime and that such crimes generally are in abstracto less serious than result crimes.¹⁰⁴⁴⁰ Further considering the protected interest at stake, the Chamber deems this crime to be of substantial gravity in abstracto.

4539. In this regard, the Chamber finds it relevant that while the Boeing Mosque was indeed damaged by Mr Yekatom's elements, it was the civilian population who destroyed it thereafter.¹⁰⁴⁴¹ Nonetheless, the Chamber considers that the nature of the unlawful behaviour and the means employed by Mr Yekatom's elements heighten the gravity of the crime. In particular, it recalls that on 5 December 2013, and following Mr Yekatom's instructions, Mr Yekatom's elements attacked the Boeing Mosque using a 'rocket', a destructive weapon, and torched it with gasoline – both of which had the potential to cause a significant amount of damage.¹⁰⁴⁴²

4540. The Chamber recalls that whilst there is no results requirement in the elements of this war crime, it may consider harm arising as a consequence of a crime in the context of sentencing.¹⁰⁴⁴³

4541. In addition to the physical damage caused to the Boeing Mosque, the Chamber notes the specific emotional and psychological impact caused to the local Muslim community. In this regard, the Chamber recalls the particular significance of the Boeing Mosque as the main mosque to the communities of Boeing and Cattin, where around 100 Muslim families lived at the time.¹⁰⁴⁴⁴ It notes the testimony of Salehou Ndiaye who explained that during a period of 'six or seven years' between the attack on the Boeing Mosque and the resumption of prayers at that location, the Muslim community had to find alternative places to pray and meet. Salehou Ndiaye stated that he believed that some Muslims started doing daily prayers at home and some would go to PK5 as it was the closest neighbourhood with mosques.¹⁰⁴⁴⁵ He also explained that religious buildings ‘are places where people take refuge when there are problems’, that ‘it hurts’ and he was ‘sad’ to see the Boeing Mosque destroyed.¹⁰⁴⁴⁶

4542. Considering the nature of Mr Yekatom’s specific acts and conduct in the context of the Anti-Balaka’s attack on Boeing and Cattin¹⁰⁴⁴⁷ and the means used by Mr Yekatom’s elements to attack the Boeing Mosque, the Chamber is satisfied that it was entirely foreseeable to Mr Yekatom that the attack on the Boeing Mosque by his elements would lead to it being damaged and that such damage would cause harm to the Muslim communities of Boeing and Cattin. However, the Chamber does not consider that it was objectively foreseeable to Mr Yekatom for the purposes of sentencing that following the attack on the Boeing Mosque by his elements, it would be destroyed by the civilian population, resulting in further harm.

4543. Therefore, whilst the Chamber is mindful of the impact of the harm on the victims as described above,¹⁰⁴⁴⁸ the Chamber does not consider it appropriate in the circumstances to attribute the full extent of these consequences to Mr Yekatom. The Chamber accordingly only gives them limited weight in its determination of the individual sentence for this crime.

4544. The Chamber does not agree with the Yekatom Defence that the gravity of the crime is lessened because it concerns a crime against a single property, which was not the only mosque used by local residents and which was subsequently rebuilt and reopened in 2021.¹⁰⁴⁴⁹ Rather, the Chamber considers that the gravity of the crime is heightened given

¹⁰⁴⁴⁶ See paragraph 2649 above. The Chamber also notes the expert report of Daryn Reicherter which concludes that the destruction of culturally significant property and religious sites has ‘profound psychological effects’ and has thus ‘long been weaponised in war’. It notes that in the CAR specifically, ‘civilians sought refuge in places of worship and cultural significance’ and the targeting of such buildings ‘would have led to an accumulation of stress and lack of a sense of safety’. See Daryn Reicherter Expert Report, CAR-OTP-2127-6805, at 6827-28. Regarding the Ngaïssona Defence’s submissions on the alleged lack of probative value of Daryn Reicherter’s report (Ngaïssona Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 71, lines 14-20), the Chamber refers to its findings above (see footnote 10419 above). that the Boeing Mosque had a specific emotional and psychological value to the inhabitants of Boeing and Cattin.

4545. Regarding Mr Yekatom's participation and intent in relation to this crime, the Chamber recalls its above findings.¹⁰⁴⁵⁰ In particular, it recalls that it was upon Mr Yekatom's instructions that his elements carried out the attack on the Boeing Mosque.¹⁰⁴⁵¹

v. Persecution as a crime against humanity
(Count 8)

4547. In relation to the crime against humanity of persecution, it is noted that persecution is essentially a crime against equality of all persons regardless of their political, racial, national, ethnic, cultural, religious or gender affiliation or identity, and regardless of any other ground of discrimination universally recognised as impermissible under international law. The blameworthiness of the crime lies in the deprivation of fundamental rights underlying it, and additionally – and crucially – in the discrimination by the perpetrator in selecting the target(s). Therefore, the Chamber considers that persecution is a particularly serious crime in abstracto.¹⁰⁴⁵⁴

numerous fundamental rights, namely, the right to liberty and security of person, right to liberty of movement, right against arbitrary or unlawful interference with their family, and home, right to property, right to freedom of religion, right not to be denied the right to practice their own religion in community with other members of their group, and in the case of four Muslim men, going as far as denying them their right to life.¹⁰⁴⁵⁶ Mr Yekatom specifically meant for the Muslim civilian population in Boeing and Cattin to be targeted because of their religious and ethnic commonalities with the Seleka.¹⁰⁴⁵⁷

4549. It further recalls its findings above regarding the crime-specific considerations made in relation to assessing the gravity of Counts 1 to 6, including the harm and consequences caused by these crimes and Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent. The Chamber notes that the facts underlying his conviction under Count 8 are the same as those forming the basis of the convictions under Counts 1 to 6. In this respect, it stresses, once more, that these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the context of determining the joint sentence.

4550. Having considered all of the above circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁴⁵⁸ with the exception of the aggravating factor of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive, the Chamber sentences Mr Yekatom to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of persecution (Count 8).

b. Crimes committed within the context of the events at Yamwara on and around 24 December 2013 (Counts 11 to 17)

4551. The Chamber observes that the crimes committed in the context of the events at Yamwara share a number of features,¹⁰⁴⁵⁹ in particular as concerns Mr Yekatom's individual responsibility. In this respect, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁴⁶⁰ Notably, it recalls

¹⁰⁴⁵⁶ See paragraph 4002 above. See also CLRV2 Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2745-Red, para. 26.

¹⁰⁴⁵⁸ See section VI.B.2; section VI.B.3.i; paragraphs 4492-4499 above.

¹⁰⁴⁶⁰ See paragraphs 36, 48, 55, 63; section II.D.3, in particular paragraphs 103-107, 110-111; paragraphs 1299, 1305; section V.B.3.iii.b.i above.

that Mr Yekatom is convicted of committing the crimes underlying Counts 11 to 17 through others pursuant to Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute.

4552. In determining Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent for the purposes of sentencing, the Chamber notes that Mr Yekatom was not present when his elements took the seven persons to Yamwara and interrogated them.¹⁰⁴⁶¹ Mr Yekatom was also not present during the mistreatment of Saint Cyr, P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 in front of Cœur de Lion's house,¹⁰⁴⁶² nor when the Five Captives were made to walk from Yamwara to a location close to the M'Poko airport.¹⁰⁴⁶³

4553. However, the Chamber considers that multiple other circumstances significantly heighten Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and show that he acted with a high degree of intent. First, the Chamber recalls that at Yamwara, Mr Yekatom was considered the chief, had unlimited control over his elements' activities, and the elements involved in the Yamwara Incident reported to him.¹⁰⁴⁶⁴ As stated above, and specifically with regard to the Yamwara Incident, the Chamber finds that from the moment of the capture of the seven persons and at least until their respective death or release, Mr Yekatom retained full control over the actions of his elements and of their will.¹⁰⁴⁶⁵ Second, Mr Yekatom was not only aware that his elements committed crimes against the seven persons, but was present at Yamwara during the evening of 24 December 2013; and interacted with the Five Captives, Saint Cyr's father and P-1839.¹⁰⁴⁶⁶ Third, he not only failed to discipline or sanction his elements' criminal behaviour, but even approved of it.¹⁰⁴⁶⁷ His approval, participation in, and power over the execution of the crimes can further be deduced from his use of the phrase 'eforolo tonga na papai' after the events, meaning that they 'peeled the papaya', a term equally used by his elements at Yamwara on multiple occasions during this incident.¹⁰⁴⁶⁸ In light of his supreme role at Yamwara, the Chamber considers that Mr Yekatom's aforementioned behaviour endorsed his elements' criminal conduct and encouraged them to continue in the commission of crimes.

4554. Turning to the Yekatom Defence's submission that Mr Yekatom undertook genuine and non-selective efforts to assist the victims by securing the release and transfer of the 'Lapo family',¹⁰⁴⁶⁹ the Chamber notes that this has not been established by the evidence. In this respect, it refers to its findings above.¹⁰⁴⁷⁰

4556. Another feature common to all crimes committed at Yamwara is their commission for motives involving discrimination. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that the seven persons were targeted by Mr Yekatom's group on the basis that they were perceived to be Muslims, as well as Mr Yekatom's intent in that regard.¹⁰⁴⁷¹ Alkanto, who led the checkpoint at which the seven persons were apprehended, and over whom Mr Yekatom had undisputed authority, identified the female captives as being related to Michel Djotodia and Mamour as well as being Muslims, and ordered their transfer to Yamwara. This identification marked the beginning of various death threats expressed by his group against all seven persons.¹⁰⁴⁷²

Mr Yekatom's and his elements' discriminatory approach is further demonstrated by virtue of their interrogating of the six persons, as well as P-1654, about their ethnicity and demanding the male captives to speak in the dialect associated therewith.¹⁰⁴⁷³ As indicated above,¹⁰⁴⁷⁴ the Chamber considers this circumstance to be an aggravating factor within the meaning of Rule 145(2)(b)(v) of the Rules for the crimes underlying Counts 11 to 17.¹⁰⁴⁷⁵

4557. Contrarily, the Chamber cannot discern a particular vulnerability or defencelessness of the seven persons within the sense of Rule 145(2)(b)(iii) of the Rules,¹⁰⁴⁷⁶ which would warrant an aggravated sentence for all crimes committed during the Yamwara Incident. It considers that the particular circumstances of their treatment are more appropriately accounted for in the Chamber's assessment of the circumstances of manner, location and means employed to execute the crime pursuant to Rule 145(i)(c) of the Rules below.

4558. Lastly, the Chamber considers that the following circumstances should be taken into account in assessing Counts 11 to 17, as they concern the nature of the unlawful behaviour and the means employed, as well as the impact of the crimes.

4559. First, the Chamber finds that the environment set up by the Anti-Balaka at Yamwara was deliberately vicious and chosen to increase the suffering of the seven persons.¹⁰⁴⁷⁷ Notably, it recalls that Yamwara was a base with approximately 1,000 Anti-Balaka elements present¹⁰⁴⁷⁸ and that the captives were brought there only a few weeks after the Bangui Attack, during which Mr Yekatom's elements had killed Muslim civilians.¹⁰⁴⁷⁹ The Chamber ¹⁰⁴⁷³ The Chamber recalls that elements in Mr Yekatom's group interrogated the four men individually on their identity, ethnicity, and reasons for being there with the women, also demanding the captive men to speak in the dialect associated with their respective ethnicities. Moreover, it recalls that Mr Yekatom himself interrogated the female captives about their ethnicities and family background and, together with other elements, questioned P-1654 about his family, including about his ethnicity. See paragraphs 100, 104-105 above.

¹⁰⁴⁷⁴ See section VI.B.2.i.a above.

¹⁰⁴⁷⁵ With respect to Count 17, the Chamber recalls that the discriminatory dimension is a constitutive element of the crime against humanity of persecution. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider it as an aggravating factor for this crime.

¹⁰⁴⁷⁷ See also CLRV2 Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2745-Red, para. 52.

¹⁰⁴⁷⁹ In this regard, the Chamber recalls that P-1705 stated that on 5 December 2013, 'when there were shots fired' in Boeing, some people took refuge in Kilometre 5 and others took shelter in their own homes and were killed by the

also considers it relevant that some of Mr Yekatom's elements, who kept the seven persons captive, were armed and continuously demonstrated their willingness to use their weapons against the captives.¹⁰⁴⁸⁰ For instance, when the three women were being kept inside Cœur de Lion's house, an element at the main entrance had a weapon pointed in their direction.¹⁰⁴⁸¹ Further, Mr Yekatom's elements holding the women captive inside the second house were also armed, with at least a machete and a firearm.¹⁰⁴⁸² P-1811 recalled that an element grazed the wall with a machete, surprising P-0967 by raising it towards her and calling her a 'chicken'.¹⁰⁴⁸³

4560. Furthermore, the captives were continuously threatened to be killed by Mr Yekatom's elements and treated as 'traitors'.¹⁰⁴⁸⁴ From the moment they were apprehended at the checkpoint until being brought to the location behind the airport, or in Saint Cyr's case until his death, they were confronted with graphic death threats such as to be 'skinned like a papaya'.¹⁰⁴⁸⁵ In particular, at the checkpoint, they were told that 'today we are going to sow some seeds', which P-1811 understood to mean that 'since the soil is wet, it would open and they would bury them there'.¹⁰⁴⁸⁶ P-0967 explained that when hearing such language '[i]t was quite clear to [them] that it meant that [they] would be buried that day'.¹⁰⁴⁸⁷

4561. Additionally, the Chamber considers the fact that one of the seven persons died as a result of their captivity by the Anti-Balaka indicative of the high level of brutality employed.

4562. The seven persons' state of uncertainty was further aggravated by regrouping them multiple times into sub-groups throughout their captivity,¹⁰⁴⁸⁸ and moving them to different locations,¹⁰⁴⁸⁹ with no clarity as to the reasons for this procedure, the fate of each group or the duration of their captivity. Moreover, the Chamber notes that the Anti-Balaka elements

Anti-Balaka, the houses and the mosque were destroyed. P-1705 specified that he knew it was the Anti-Balaka who killed them because 'those who went to see what was going on' told him about the events. See paragraph 2724 above.

further intensified the captives' vulnerable situation and stripped them of their dignity by searching them on two occasions¹⁰⁴⁹⁰ and forcing them to undress, which in the case of the female captives included removing their veils.¹⁰⁴⁹¹

4563. Second, the Chamber also finds it noteworthy that the Yamwara Incident took place on the day of Saint Cyr's brother's funeral,¹⁰⁴⁹² a period of grief for all captives. This fact was known to Mr Yekatom and his elements.¹⁰⁴⁹³ In this respect, the Chamber recalls in particular that the deceased was Saint Cyr's and P-1705's older brother and that the six persons, who were family members or friends of the Lapo N'Gomat family, were apprehended by Mr Yekatom's group only hours after some of them had transported his dead body from the hospital to his family home.¹⁰⁴⁹⁴

4564. Third, the Chamber is mindful of the impact of the crimes committed at Yamwara and the Anti-Balaka's continued presence in its vicinity. Notably, these crimes caused multiple harms to the surviving captives, in particular Saint Cyr's family members, as further discussed below. Furthermore, these crimes and their continued presence created an environment of fear, which forced at least P-0967, P-1705 and P-1654 and his family to flee.¹⁰⁴⁹⁵

4565. The Chamber considers that all of these harms were objectively foreseeable to Mr Yekatom. In this respect, it recalls that Mr Yekatom, fully aware of the Anti-Balaka's objectives and policy, set up a base at Yamwara together with his group, as well as checkpoints along its perimeter to monitor the passage of vehicles and people.¹⁰⁴⁹⁶ He was aware that FACA members of his group, who also trained civilian elements, bore strong anti-Muslim sentiments and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka and that his elements would not distinguish between Seleka and Muslim civilians during combat.¹⁰⁴⁹⁷ Moreover, the resulting harms caused to the surviving captives of the Yamwara Incident by virtue of their mistreatment, as well as the impact on Saint Cyr's family and friends as a result of his torture and murder, were inherent to the nature of the crimes committed during the Yamwara Incident.

i. Imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity (Count 14)

4566. The crime of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity protects the liberty of physical movement, thus making it a crime of substantial gravity in the abstract.¹⁰⁴⁹⁸

4567. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Count 14 to be high. It recalls its findings above regarding the circumstances of and the means employed to execute all crimes committed at Yamwara, in particular the enormous brutality exercised.¹⁰⁴⁹⁹ In this context, the Chamber takes into account that during their captivity, the seven persons not only had to endure the deprivation of their own liberty, but were also exposed to parts of Saint Cyr's mistreatment. Notably, the female captives were put in a situation where they had no choice but to listen and guess about his fate,¹⁰⁵⁰⁰ the men witnessed his mistreatment first-hand.¹⁰⁵⁰¹

4568. With respect to P-1716, the Chamber recalls that, when the Five Captives were regrouped, he was separated from the group and kept apart from them at Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch.¹⁰⁵⁰² Mr Yekatom's elements went as far as to show him where they had previously buried other people.¹⁰⁵⁰³ This isolation from the other captives and threats further exacerbated his already vulnerable position.

4569. With respect to Saint Cyr, the Chamber notes that he was held captive at gunpoint and had to endure multiple barbaric physical assaults on his body. The Chamber recalls in this regard that Saint Cyr's legs were broken, his toes, fingers and an ear cut off and he was tied up in the 'arbatacher' manner.¹⁰⁵⁰⁴ Ultimately, he was killed by Mr Yekatom's elements.¹⁰⁵⁰⁵

4570. The Chamber further takes into account the extent of victimisation, notably that Mr Yekatom's elements severely deprived a total of seven individuals of their physical liberty,¹⁰⁵⁰⁶ some of whom suffered this deprivation in two separate locations.

4571. Additionally, it notes the emotional and psychological harm caused by the commission of the crime on the surviving captives. P-1716 testified that he was 'at the point of death, so [he] cannot forget what was happening' and that the events 'haunt' him until today.¹⁰⁵⁰⁷ P-0967 stated '[i]t was horrible. It was very difficult. We didn't think we were going to survive.'¹⁰⁵⁰⁸

4572. Finally, the Chamber is not persuaded by the Yekatom Defence's argument that Count 14 is of reduced gravity as the 'duration of the alleged imprisonment of the Lapo family members amounted to a single evening'.¹⁰⁵⁰⁹ First, this is not supported by the evidence for all captives: amongst the six persons, five were held from 24 until on or about 27 December 2013,¹⁰⁵¹⁰ and only P-1716's detention lasted one night.¹⁰⁵¹¹ As regards Saint Cyr, the Chamber notes that his captivity was cut short by no other reason than his murder by Mr Yekatom's elements.¹⁰⁵¹² Second, the Chamber is, in any event, of the view that the duration of the six persons' captivity cannot be considered in isolation. Rather, it must be considered jointly with the other circumstances surrounding the events, as set out above and below.

4573. Regarding Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent in relation to this crime, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁵¹³ In particular, it recalls that by virtue of his position, Mr Yekatom had the sole power to end the deprivation of the captives' physical liberty throughout the period of their respective captivities.¹⁰⁵¹⁴ Fully cognisant of this power, as well as the fact that his elements had mistreated Saint Cyr and the latter's physical state in the evening of 24 December 2013,¹⁰⁵¹⁵ Mr Yekatom did not intervene to free the captives.

4574. Having considered all of the above circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁵¹⁶ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁵¹⁷ the Chamber sentences Mr Yekatom to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty (Count 14).

ii. Other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity (Count 11) and cruel treatment as a war crime (Count 13)

4575. At the outset, the Chamber notes that the facts underlying Counts 11 and 13 (with regard to cruel treatment of the six persons) overlap. Accordingly, it addresses these counts jointly in this section.

4576. The crime of other inhumane acts pursuant to Article 7(1)(k) of the Statute is particularly serious as it is directed against a person and requires the perpetrator to intentionally inflict great suffering, or serious injury to body or to mental or physical health. Irrespective of the crime's residual nature,¹⁰⁵¹⁸ 'inhumane acts' are considered to be 'serious violations of international customary law and the basic rights pertaining to human beings, drawn from the norms of international human rights law, which are of a similar nature and gravity to the acts referred to in [A]rticle 7(1) of the Statute’.¹⁰⁵¹⁹

4577. Similarly, the war crime of cruel treatment is inherently grave as it violates the personal integrity of the victim. The Chamber further notes that this crime is prohibited by most universal or regional human rights instruments,¹⁰⁵²⁰ as well as under international humanitarian law,¹⁰⁵²¹ further attesting to its severity.¹⁰⁵²²

4578. In light of the above, the Chamber considers that the gravity of both crimes must be considered high in abstracto.

4579. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber finds the gravity of Counts 11 and 13 to be high. The Chamber recalls its findings above regarding the circumstances of and the means employed to execute the crimes committed at Yamwara in this respect.¹⁰⁵²³

4580. The Chamber finds it of particular note that the harms inflicted on the captives under Counts 11 and 13 were executed through numerous different acts and were multi-faceted, as they caused physical, as well as psychological and emotional harms. Regarding the latter, the Chamber particularly recalls that the captives witnessed Saint Cyr’s torture. Notably, the male captives watched parts of Saint Cyr’s mistreatment¹⁰⁵²⁴ and the female captives were put in a situation where they had no choice but to listen and guess about Saint Cyr’s fate.¹⁰⁵²⁵

4581. P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 described this horrific experience and not being able to do anything.¹⁰⁵²⁶ Notably, P-1716 stated that ‘[i]t was terrible to watch live directly what was happening. Somebody that I knew, he was being beaten, his leg was being fractured and parts of his body were being cut off, 'we were being subjected to these atrocities live'.¹⁰⁵²⁷ P-1704 said that that he felt 'traumatised'.¹⁰⁵²⁸ The Chamber considers that the exposure to a family member's or friend's suffering, whilst in a precarious and frightening situation oneself, is particularly cruel and heightens the gravity of these crimes.

4582. With respect to P-1716 particularly, the Chamber further recalls that, when the Five Captives were regrouped, he was separated from the group and kept apart from the other captives at Yamwara under Cœur de Lion's watch.¹⁰⁵²⁹ P-1716 indicated that the 'Anti-Balaka' constantly told him that he would be killed and buried. The witness further stated that they showed him where they had previously buried other people and that the ground was indeed 'disturbed' in these locations.¹⁰⁵³⁰ The Chamber finds this behaviour of constantly and graphically reminding P-1716 that his survival was entirely in the control of Mr Yekatom's elements, to exhibit particular cruelty.

4583. In addition to the above, the Chamber also considers relevant that the crimes underlying Counts 11 and 13 were committed against a total of six individuals and the long-lasting impact caused, as already touched upon above.¹⁰⁵³¹ In this context, the Chamber particularly highlights that P-1704 and P-1716 indicated that they continue to be haunted by the events.¹⁰⁵³² P-1704 stated that:

I'm still haunted by what happened. Even last night I thought about it. And often I get headaches because of it. [...] Sometimes I even have nightmares about what happened, you see. [...] I see it in my mind again, like a movie, when they were hitting him and cutting his ears off. It['s] still traumatising me.¹⁰⁵³³

4584. In contrast, and taking note of the Yekatom Defence's submissions in this regard,¹⁰⁵³⁴ the Chamber has duly taken into account that, apart from Saint Cyr, the captives were not severely physically injured.

4585. Regarding Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent in relation to these crimes, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁵³⁵ In particular, it recalls that by virtue of his position, Mr Yekatom had the sole power to end the mistreatment of the six persons.¹⁰⁵³⁶ Fully cognisant of this power, as well as the fact that his elements mistreated Saint Cyr and the latter's physical state in the evening of 24 December 2013,¹⁰⁵³⁷ Mr Yekatom did not intervene to free the captives.

iii. Torture as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 12 and 13)

4587. At the outset, the Chamber notes that torture as a crime against humanity contains legal elements which are not contained in torture as a war crime, and vice versa.¹⁰⁵⁴⁰ However, ¹⁰⁵³⁴ See Yekatom Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 33, lines 23-24.

¹⁰⁵⁴⁰ Notably, both crimes require that the 'perpetrator inflicted severe physical or mental pain or suffering upon one or more persons'. However, Article 7(1)(f) of the Elements of Crimes requires the following elements: 'Such person or persons were in the custody or under the control of the perpetrator'; 'Such pain or suffering did not arise only from, and was not inherent in or incidental to, lawful sanctions'; 'The conduct was committed as part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population'; and 'The perpetrator knew that the conduct was part of or intended the conduct to be part of a widespread or systematic attack directed against a civilian population'. Contrarily, Article 8(2)(c)(i) of the Elements of Crimes requires: 'The perpetrator inflicted the pain or suffering for such purposes as: obtaining information or a confession, punishment, intimidation or coercion or for any reason based on discrimination of any kind'; 'Such person or persons were either hors de combat, or were civilians, medical personnel or religious personnel taking no active part in the hostilities'; 'The perpetrator was aware of the factual circumstances that established this status'; 'The conduct took place in the context of and was associated with an armed conflict not the Chamber is of the view that it cannot be said in the abstract whether the presence of these additional elements renders one of the crimes graver than the other.¹⁰⁵⁴¹ Accordingly, the Chamber considers that their gravity in abstracto shall be assessed as one.

4588. Torture is a particularly heinous act, by which an individual's human dignity, security and mental well-being is assaulted. The right not to be subjected to torture is a non-derogable right recognised in customary and conventional international law¹⁰⁵⁴² and as a norm of ius cogens. The gravity of this crime, both as a war crime and as a crime against humanity, must therefore be considered very high in abstracto.¹⁰⁵⁴³

4589. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of the crimes underlying Counts 12 and 13 (torture of Saint Cyr) as particularly high. In this respect, the Chamber highlights the circumstances of and the means employed to execute these crimes.¹⁰⁵⁴⁴ While the crimes only concern one individual, Saint Cyr, the manner in which he was mistreated was particularly deprived and violent.¹⁰⁵⁴⁵ Notably, he was unarmed¹⁰⁵⁴⁶ and beaten by multiple perpetrators for a considerable amount of time. The assailants knocked Saint Cyr to the ground, used a stick to force him down on his knees¹⁰⁵⁴⁷ and specifically beat his legs, breaking them. His hands and feet were tied together in the back in the 'arbatacher'-style and despite his inability to defend himself, the assailants continued assaulting him.¹⁰⁵⁴⁸ Eventually an element in Mr Yekatom's group went as far as to cut off his toes, fingers and an ear.¹⁰⁵⁴⁹

4590. The Chamber further recalls that P-1716 considered Saint Cyr to be in ‘a very critical’ state when he was taken away, indicating that it was unlikely that he would still be alive.¹⁰⁵⁵⁰ P-1705 further indicated that Saint Cyr was simply thrown onto the ground,¹⁰⁵⁵¹ which, in the Chamber’s view, further illustrates Mr Yekatom’s elements’ lack of appreciation for his dignity and life.

4591. Some of Saint Cyr’s family members directly witnessed his mistreatment first-hand, the others were put in a situation where they had no choice but to listen to his cries from close by and left in a state of uncertainty as to his condition.¹⁰⁵⁵² Cœur de Lion, who watched Mr Yekatom’s elements beat and interrogate Saint Cyr, encouraged and ordered the assailants to continue.¹⁰⁵⁵³

4592. The Chamber further notes the impact and harm caused to Saint Cyr’s family as a result of his torture. In particular, it recalls that P-1704, P-1705, and P-1716 described how terrible it was to watch Saint Cyr’s mistreatment and not being able to do anything,¹⁰⁵⁵⁴ which haunts them until today. The Chamber further notes that, P-1654, who had just lost his other older son, was left in a state of uncertainty of not knowing, until at least the release of the Five Captives, whether Saint Cyr was still alive.¹⁰⁵⁵⁵

4593. Regarding Mr Yekatom’s degree of participation and intent in relation to these crimes, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁵⁵⁶ In particular, it recalls that Mr Yekatom considered Saint Cyr a ‘traitor’ and that they could therefore not ‘keep him’. When asked about Saint Cyr’s treatment, Mr Yekatom said in Sango ‘eforolo tonga na papai’ – meaning that ‘they peeled the papaya’, ‘they removed the skin like they would do to a papaya’.¹⁰⁵⁵⁷ The Chamber also notes that instead of punishing the element who cut off Saint Cyr’s body parts,

he praised the element for having done a ‘good job’ and rewarded the element with a post of responsibility in his group.¹⁰⁵⁵⁸

4594. Mr Yekatom also did not inform Saint Cyr’s father, P-1654, who was fearful for Saint Cyr, about his son’s state and location, or that of the other captives. On the contrary, Mr Yekatom threatened him by telling him not to go to the authorities or he and his family would be killed.¹⁰⁵⁵⁹ Furthermore, no evidence has been brought before the Chamber to show that Mr Yekatom took any efforts to limit Saint Cyr’s suffering or save his life.

iv. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 15 and 16)

4596. The Chamber recalls its considerations above in relation to the gravity of the crimes of murder in abstracto.¹⁰⁵⁶² Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Counts 15 and 16 as particularly high.

4597. The Chamber notes the devastating impact of Saint Cyr’s murder on his family. It recalls that Saint Cyr’s four children, all under 18 years at the time of his capture, lost their father and had to be taken in by Saint Cyr’s father, P-1654.¹⁰⁵⁶³ Saint Cyr’s death impacted his family members immensely, in particular P-1654 and P-1705, who found themselves in great difficulty without his help.¹⁰⁵⁶⁴ P-0967 said that her sister, Saint Cyr’s mother, was on the verge of death because she was suffering, traumatised, losing two of her children in one week.¹⁰⁵⁶⁵

4598.P-0967 herself, who considered Saint Cyr as her son, was similarly impacted, and described the anguish of not knowing what happened to him. During her testimony she begged the Court that:

If the commander of the Anti-Balaka, the person in charge of the Anti-Balaka who killed my son, I want to know, if he was buried, I beg him to tell me where the grave is so that I can talk about this to my sister. But if his flesh was sold at the market, he should tell me so so that I can find some peace.¹⁰⁵⁶⁶

4599.Regarding Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent in relation to these crimes, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁵⁶⁷

4600.Having considered all of the above circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁵⁶⁸ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crimes for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁵⁶⁹ the Chamber sentences Mr Yekatom to a term of 14 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of murder (Count 15) and 14 years of imprisonment for the war crime of murder (Count 16).

(Count 17)

4601.In relation to the gravity in abstracto of the crime against humanity of persecution, the Chamber refers to its considerations above.¹⁰⁵⁷⁰

4602.Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Count 17 to be high. In this regard, the Chamber highlights that Mr Yekatom's elements

targeted a total of seven individuals at Yamwara on religious grounds,¹⁰⁵⁷¹ and violated numerous fundamental rights of the captives, namely, the right to liberty and security of person, right against arbitrary arrest and detention and related procedural guarantees, right not to be subjected to torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, and right of all persons deprived of their liberty to be treated with humanity and with respect for their inherent dignity and, in Saint Cyr's case, going as far as denying him his right to life.¹⁰⁵⁷² Mr Yekatom intended his elements to persecute the seven persons on the basis that they were perceived to be Muslims.¹⁰⁵⁷³

4603. It further recalls its findings above regarding the circumstances of and the means employed to execute all crimes committed at Yamwara,¹⁰⁵⁷⁴ as well as the crime-specific considerations made in relation to assessing the gravity of Counts 11 to 16, including the harm and consequences caused by these crimes and Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent. The Chamber notes the facts underlying his conviction under Count 17 are the same as those forming the basis of the convictions under Counts 11 to 16. In this respect, it stresses, once more, that these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the context of determining the joint sentence.

c. Crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis (Counts 24 to 28)

4605. The Chamber observes that the crimes committed in the context of Mr Yekatom's group's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis share a number of features,¹⁰⁵⁷⁶ in particular as concerns Mr Yekatom's individual responsibility. In this respect, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁵⁷⁷ Notably, it recalls that Mr Yekatom is convicted of committing the crimes underlying Counts 24 to 28 jointly with and through others pursuant to Article 25(3)(a) of the Statute.

4606. The Chamber considers that multiple circumstances significantly heighten Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and show that he acted with a high degree of intent. First, Mr Yekatom was the undisputed leader of the Anti-Balaka group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, comprising at least 1,000 elements, and he had full control over his elements during the advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and subsequent events in Mbaïki.¹⁰⁵⁷⁸ Second, at the time of the advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, an agreement existed between Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto to establish control over the area as well as to remove all Muslims therefrom, including by killing them.¹⁰⁵⁷⁹ Third, Mr Yekatom, along with Cœur de Lion and Alkanto, gave instructions to elements of the group to kill all the Muslims in the area.¹⁰⁵⁸⁰ Fourth, Mr Yekatom instructed his elements to advance along the axis, and during this advance he and the elements under his command took over villages, occupied checkpoints and set up bases, including in Mbaïki.¹⁰⁵⁸¹ Fifth, Mr Yekatom took part in the meeting at the St Jeanne d'Arc Church in Mbaïki, at which the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki – which was a foregone conclusion at that point – was decided.¹⁰⁵⁸² Sixth, Mr Yekatom knew that elements of his group committed acts of violence in Mbaïki. Efforts ¹⁰⁵⁷⁶ In this respect, the Chamber notes that these features are addressed jointly for all crimes merely for clarity and avoidance of duplication. However, it emphasises that it has taken each of these findings into account when determining the individual sentences below.

and measures to prevent these acts were taken only after the removal of the Muslim civilian population from Mbaïki had been decided and/or carried out.¹⁰⁵⁸³

4607. The Chamber takes note of the Yekatom Defence's argument that Mr Yekatom was not present at all times during the events on the PK9-Mbaïki axis.¹⁰⁵⁸⁴ In this regard, it notes that it indeed received evidence indicating that Mr Yekatom was not permanently based at a particular location along the PK9-Mbaïki axis,¹⁰⁵⁸⁵ and that he may have been absent when Chadian forces transported Muslim civilians away from Mbaïki,¹⁰⁵⁸⁶ and when his elements killed Djido Saleh.¹⁰⁵⁸⁷ The Chamber, however, also received evidence that Mr Yekatom 'constantly' moved around the PK9-Mbaïki axis to patrol and control the elements under his command.¹⁰⁵⁸⁸ Considering the factors highlighted above, and bearing in mind Mr Yekatom's role and full control over his elements along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, the Chamber finds of limited relevance to the present assessment that Mr Yekatom might not have been physically present during some of the acts underlying Counts 24 to 28.

4608. The Chamber is mindful that certain factual findings on Mr Yekatom's acts only pertain to specific crimes committed during the course of Mr Yekatom's group's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis. Where this is the case, they are discussed in the context of the relevant crimes below. Nonetheless, these differences do not lead to different conclusions regarding Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent for the individual crimes committed. On the contrary, taking all of the above as well as the below crime-specific considerations into account, the Chamber finds Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and his intent to be high for each of the crimes underlying Counts 24 to 28.

4609. Another feature common to all crimes committed in the context of Mr Yekatom's group's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis is their commission for motives involving discrimination. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that the Muslim civilian population along the PK9-Mbaïki axis was targeted on the basis of their perceived religious commonalities with the Seleka, as well as Mr Yekatom's intent in that regard.¹⁰⁵⁸⁹ The Chamber highlights in particular the discriminatory character of the killing and subsequent mistreatment of Saleh, who was one of the very few remaining Muslims in Mbaïki.¹⁰⁵⁹⁰ As indicated above,¹⁰⁵⁹¹ the Chamber considers this circumstance to be an aggravating factor within the meaning of Rule 145(2)(b)(v) of the Rules for the crimes underlying Counts 24 to 27.¹⁰⁵⁹²

i. Forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity and displacement as a war crime (Counts 24 and 25)

4610. The Chamber refers to its considerations above as to the gravity in abstracto of the crimes of forcible transfer and deportation, and of displacement.¹⁰⁵⁹³

4611. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Counts 24 and 25 to be high. In this respect, the Chamber recalls that, due to and in fear of the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, a significant proportion of the Muslim civilian population fled their towns and villages along the axis, with at least 1,000 Muslim civilians fleeing from locations along the PK9-Mbaïki axis and in the Lobaye prefecture to Mbaïki.¹⁰⁵⁹⁴ At least 3,000 Muslim civilians were later removed from Mbaïki, with very few Muslim civilians remaining in the town as a result.¹⁰⁵⁹⁵ Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the number of persons affected by the crimes underlying Counts 24 and 25 was significant and considers particularly noteworthy that they constituted a large part of the Muslim civilian population present along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.

¹⁰⁵⁸⁹ See paragraphs 4341, 4368 above.

¹⁰⁵⁹¹ See section VI.B.2.i.a above.

¹⁰⁵⁹² With respect to Count 28, the Chamber recalls that the discriminatory dimension is a constitutive element of the crime against humanity of persecution. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider it as an aggravating factor for this crime.

¹⁰⁵⁹³ See paragraphs 4517-4518 above.

¹⁰⁵⁹⁵ See paragraphs 122-123 above. See also CLRv2 Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2745-Red, para. 60.

4613. Concerning victims dislocated to Mbaïki from their villages along the axis, the Chamber recalls that fleeing Muslims had to leave their possessions behind and arrived in Mbaïki with 'nothing on them'.¹⁰⁵⁹⁹ Muslims in the town endured difficult living conditions, due to overcrowding, hunger and fear of death from the Anti-Balaka,¹⁰⁶⁰⁰ and a lack of medical care in the town.¹⁰⁶⁰¹ Following the arrival of Mr Yekatom and his elements to Mbaïki, Muslims were further subjected to threats and harassment from the elements, were not able to move around freely, and their living conditions worsened by the day.¹⁰⁶⁰²

4614. Regarding the situation in Mbaïki, Raymond Mongbandi notably stated that there was 'little food' in Mbaïki.¹⁰⁶⁰³ P-2353 testified that 'it was hunger and the death threat that weighed on the populations. When you are hungry, when you've got nothing to eat and you've got the death threats as well, life becomes terrible'.¹⁰⁶⁰⁴ The Chamber also recalls the detailed account of Diakité Aboubakar:

When the evacuees arrived in M[baïki], prices of everything went high. There was not enough meat for the people. There was a general shortage of food including vegetables like coco, aubergines, peanuts, manioc etc. Some of the evacuees had brought food but that was all finished. The reserve in the city was all depleted. By the time they left the city, there was nothing left. Life was very difficult. They must have remained in M[baïki] for about two weeks before the trucks came and took them. At this time, the women were even scared to go to the market because the Anti-Balaka were walking around armed with knives and machetes. We had never seen anything like this.¹⁰⁶⁰⁵

4615. The Chamber further highlights that some Muslim civilians were forced to leave twice in a short amount of time – first from their villages and towns along the PK9-Mbaïki axis to Mbaïki, and then again from Mbaïki to other locations in the CAR or abroad, notably to Chad,¹⁰⁶⁰⁶ which contributed to victims' hardship and the uncertainty of their situations.

4616. Regarding the removal from Mbaïki by Chadian forces, the Chamber recalls that Muslim civilians were not allowed to get into the trucks with their belongings and had to leave them behind,¹⁰⁶⁰⁷ they were treated harshly by Chadian soldiers to ensure their speedy departure,¹⁰⁶⁰⁸ some families were separated in the trucks,¹⁰⁶⁰⁹ and women and children were more numerous than men in the trucks.¹⁰⁶¹⁰ Further, witnesses stated that the travel conditions in the convoy to Chad were difficult, with no provision of food or water, and they were attacked by the Anti-Balaka on the way.¹⁰⁶¹¹

4617. The Chamber also notes that some of the individuals who were removed from Mbaïki, as well as others who watched the scene, described the departure of Muslims from Mbaïki as a difficult and emotional situation.¹⁰⁶¹² For instance, Diakité Aboubakar, who was removed from Mbaïki by the Congolese MISCA, testified that '[m]any were sad to see us leave. Many were crying. They were helping us to put our property in the vehicle. And when we were leaving Mbaïki, we were greeting the population. Some of the inhabitants were very happy to see us leave, while others were sad'.¹⁰⁶¹³ The Chamber considers that all the circumstances described above added to the distress of the Muslim civilians who were forced to leave.

4619. As a result of their dislocation, many witnesses reported feeling that they had to ‘abandon everything’ and that they had ‘lost everything’.¹⁰⁶¹⁶ The Chamber recalls P-1666’s testimony regarding his feelings on the day he was transported away from Mbaïki:

We didn’t think that one day we would leave from this town. You must remember, we invested a lot. We built a lot up and all of a sudden we had to abandon everything and leave. It was really with great sadness because we were forced to abandon everything which we had shared as we grew up, so there was a lot of sadness. It was difficult. It was very hard to bear.¹⁰⁶¹⁷

4620. The Chamber also notes the evidence that some Muslims who were forced to leave had lived in Mbaïki or surrounding towns and villages for a long time.¹⁰⁶¹⁸ While they reported hoping to return at some point, some individuals indicated that they or some of their family members continue to live in refugee camps or other locations where they had to resettle, and still feel the impact of their dislocation and related losses on their lives and the lives of their family, having returned neither to their original places of residence nor to their living conditions prior to the commission of the crimes.¹⁰⁶¹⁹

4621. P-2353 notably testified that:

If you have your own house and you’re driven out of your house and someone takes all your possessions, what can you do? You can only be sad. [...] It’s a very painful

See Daryn Reicherter Expert Report, CAR-OTP-2127-6805, at 6832-40. Regarding the Ngaïssona Defence’s submissions on the alleged lack of probative value of Daryn Reicherter’s report (Ngaïssona Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 71, lines 14-20), the Chamber refers to its findings above (see footnote 10419 above).

impact and on several levels. I was a shopkeeper and I had employees. And today I've lost everything, just about everything. I've got nothing. All the fruit of my investment is gone. [...] my wives are just about managing to meet their needs. My children are all scattered and it's very difficult to meet their needs. [...] But after these events, I've lost everything. I've lost everything. The little ones with me, I manage to send them to school, but the children who are slightly elder in age have left school, have dropped out. I don't know how they're going to fend for themselves tomorrow. The second problem is I do not have a home. [...] Sometimes I have problems in paying my rent. [...] I've got financial problems, and I really am struggling to meet the needs of my family.¹⁰⁶²⁰

4622. The Chamber also notes that the UN Secretary-General reported a radical change in the ethnic and religious demography of the CAR following the flight of many Muslims mostly to Cameroon and Chad. He referred to towns which once had been multi-confessional as having been emptied of their Muslim communities, including Mbaïki.¹⁰⁶²¹

4623. Considering the above, the Chamber finds that the consequences and harm of the commission of the crimes under Counts 24 and 25 were high, with the victims not only deprived of their property, but also effectively uprooted from their homes and communities, and in some cases their country. Victims notably experienced physical and emotional suffering, considering in particular the difficult conditions at the time of their displacement or at the locations they were displaced to. This in turn led to the loss of social, occupational and economic stability, and material safety, and to the loss of communities, as most of the Muslim population had to flee from Mbaïki and surrounding towns and villages and remained unable to return at least for some time following the events.¹⁰⁶²²

4624. The Chamber recalls the Yekatom Defence's, Ngaïssona Defence's, and CLRV2's submissions regarding the duration and long-term impact of displacement as well as regarding the purported return of a number of displaced persons,¹⁰⁶²³ and addresses them here to the extent that they relate to the crimes under Counts 24 and 25. It notes in particular the Yekatom Defence's submission that 'a proportion of displaced persons are alleged to have returned to their homes and/or returned to CAR in general, with reports on the peaceful cohabitation of Muslims in Mbaïki by 2015/2016'.¹⁰⁶²⁴

4625. The Chamber notes that the majority of the evidence cited by the Yekatom Defence relates to the return of peace to Mbaïki or the Lobaye prefecture, rather than the return of previously dislocated Muslim civilians along the PK9-Mbaïki axis. Regarding the latter, while some Muslim civilians may have eventually returned to the villages and towns along the PK9-Mbaïki axis after the period relevant to the charges,¹⁰⁶²⁵ the evidence on the record in this respect is scarce, mostly refers to an eventual return several years after the initial displacement, and, in any event, does not establish that all, or even a majority, were able to return to their villages or towns, or even to the CAR.

4626. In this regard, the Chamber does not consider that the harm deriving from displacement necessarily ended by virtue of either (i) an eventual return to the CAR from abroad; or (ii) for those displaced within the CAR, settling elsewhere. The Chamber recalls that victims had to leave their houses and their belongings behind, and thus emphasises that their return to the CAR or their place of origin does not mean that they were able to reach the same standards of living or live in the same conditions as before,¹⁰⁶²⁶ and does not reduce the gravity of the crimes as such.

4627. Turning to the arguments as to the necessity of a 'cut-off point', the Chamber recalls that it may consider any consequences arising from the crimes in the context of sentencing, as long as they were objectively foreseeable to the accused.¹⁰⁶²⁷ In this regard, the Chamber considers that the harm described above, including beyond the initial displacement of victims, is inherent to the nature of the crimes, derives from, and is sufficiently linked to them. It thus considers of limited relevance to its present assessment the fact that other factors may have played a role in some victims not returning to their places of origin following the events.

4628. Further considering the nature of Mr Yekatom's role in the context of his group's advance along the PK9-Mbaiki axis, as well as his essential contributions and participation in an agreement that entailed removing all Muslims from the area,¹⁰⁶²⁸ the Chamber is satisfied that the harm and consequences described above were objectively foreseeable to Mr Yekatom. In this context, regarding the Yekatom Defence's submission that Mr Yekatom took concrete steps to assist victims,¹⁰⁶²⁹ the Chamber refers to its above findings.¹⁰⁶³⁰

4629. Regarding the Prosecution's and the CLRV2's submissions on the vulnerability of victims of these crimes,¹⁰⁶³¹ the Chamber considers that while victims were placed in a vulnerable situation, it cannot discern a particular vulnerability or defencelessness within the sense of Rule 145(2)(b)(iii) of the Rules which would warrant an aggravated sentence. It considers that the particular circumstances of their treatment have already been accounted for in the Chamber's assessment of the circumstances of manner, location and means employed to execute the crimes pursuant to Rule 145(i)(c) of the Rules above.

4630. Finally, regarding Mr Yekatom's participation and intent in relation to these crimes, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁶³² In particular, the Chamber notes that it has taken into consideration that Mr Yekatom might not have been physically present during some of the acts underlying Counts 24 and 25.¹⁰⁶³³ However, for the reasons highlighted above, the Chamber considers Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent as high. Notably, it emphasises that Mr Yekatom, along with Cœur de Lion and Alkanto, gave instructions to their elements to kill all the Muslims in the area, and the implementation of these instructions included the creation of conditions leading to the dislocation of Muslims specifically along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.¹⁰⁶³⁴

4631. Having considered all of the above circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁶³⁵ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crimes for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁶³⁶ the Chamber sentences Mr Yekatom to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of forcible transfer and deportation (Count 24) and 10 years of imprisonment for the war crime of displacement (Count 25).

ii. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 26 and 27)

4632. In relation to the gravity in abstracto of the crimes of murder, the Chamber refers to its considerations above.¹⁰⁶³⁷

4633. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Counts 26 and 27 to be particularly high. The Chamber finds the circumstances of and the means employed to execute Saleh's murder particularly cruel and brutal, which significantly heightens the crimes' gravity.¹⁰⁶³⁸ It recalls that a group of individuals – which included at least three elements of Mr Yekatom's group –, attacked Saleh's house while he and his family were inside, pursued Saleh and threw stones at him as he tried to flee, and killed him near the gendarmerie of Mbaïki.¹⁰⁶³⁹ Further, the vicious cutting off of parts of Saleh's body shortly after his death, in combination with the cruel and humiliating behaviour and utterances displayed and spoken concurrently, were particularly heinous and demonstrate an utter disregard for physical integrity and human dignity. Notably, the Chamber recalls that upon his killing, the attackers dragged Saleh's body along the ground, partly undressed him, cut off his genitals, one of his ears and his neck, partly severing his head, and beat his body.¹⁰⁶⁴⁰ They also put their feet on different parts of Saleh's body and pretended to further harm him with their weapons.¹⁰⁶⁴¹ While the scene took place, the attackers insulted and made fun of Saleh, discussed eating his flesh and burning his body, and boasted about their actions.¹⁰⁶⁴² The mistreatment of Saleh's body was filmed and some individuals repeatedly asked that pictures of the body and of themselves be taken.¹⁰⁶⁴³

4634. The Chamber considers the mistreatment of Saleh's body to be directly linked to the crimes of murder and inherent to their nature, particularly noting the context in which they occurred, as well as objectively foreseeable to Mr Yekatom. It recalls that Mr Yekatom, Cœur de Lion and Alkanto instructed the elements to kill all the Muslims in the area, that elements under Mr Yekatom's command threatened and harassed Muslim civilians in Mbaïki – which Mr Yekatom was aware of –, and further threatened Saleh as one of the very few remaining Muslims in town, and that Saleh was targeted and his body mistreated because he was a Muslim.¹⁰⁶⁴⁴ It also recalls that Mr Yekatom's elements bore strong anti-Muslim sentiment and feelings of vengeance against the Seleka, which Mr Yekatom was aware of.¹⁰⁶⁴⁵ In the circumstances, the Chamber considers that it was foreseeable for Mr Yekatom that in some instances his elements' attacks on Muslims would escalate and lead to such kind of mistreatment.

4635. Further, the Chamber notes that Catherine Samba-Panza visited Mbaïki shortly before Saleh's killing and held a speech in which she called on the Anti-Balaka in general to stop the violence.¹⁰⁶⁴⁶ In that context, contemporaneous press articles and reports recognised the killing of Saleh, whom they described as the deputy mayor and one of the last remaining Muslims in Mbaïki, as a particularly impactful and emblematic event.¹⁰⁶⁴⁷ The Chamber ¹⁰⁶⁴⁵ See paragraphs 74, 2452 above. The Chamber notes that while this discussion is situated in the Chamber's evidentiary analysis of the Bangui Attack, it is equally relevant to the events that took place along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, in particular bearing in mind that elements such as Cœur de Lion, at least until his death, and Habib Beina were elements of the group throughout events during the Bangui Attack, Yamwara and along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.

further recalls that, when asked about the impact that Saleh's death had on him, Raymond Mongbandi indicated that '[w]hat really caused an impact on [him] was the fact that a human being was decapitated', which he described as 'a horrible act'.¹⁰⁶⁴⁸

4636. The Chamber also notes that, following the attack on Saleh's house, his family was forced to flee,¹⁰⁶⁴⁹ and Saleh's wife and child were unable to attend his burial. In particular, Raymond Mongbandi testified that they could not attend the burial 'because the situation was very risky' considering the wife was Muslim and '[i]f the Anti-Balaka took note of her presence, she could have been executed'.¹⁰⁶⁵⁰ Raymond Mongbandi further testified that the MISCA escorted those participating in the burial to the cemetery, 'this really allow[ing] Djido's burial'.¹⁰⁶⁵¹

4637. Regarding the above, the Chamber finds that the harm suffered by Saleh's family and community by virtue of his killing and the mistreatment of his body was inherent to the nature of the crimes, and thus objectively foreseeable to Mr Yekatom.

4638. In this context, the Chamber notes the Yekatom Defence's submission that Mr Yekatom's offer to assist Saleh's family with burial costs should be considered in mitigation.¹⁰⁶⁵² The Chamber however recalls that Mr Yekatom did not pay for Saleh's burial and that Saleh's family was unable to attend his burial, as explained above.¹⁰⁶⁵³ In these circumstances, the Chamber does not consider that Mr Yekatom's offer demonstrates a genuine effort to assist the victims that would lessen the gravity of these crimes in any way.

4639. In relation to the Prosecution's argument that Saleh was alone and defenceless,¹⁰⁶⁵⁴ the Chamber cannot discern a particular vulnerability or defencelessness of Saleh within the Defence's objections regarding some of these items, but considers that no prejudice arises in light of their use in this context. It notes in particular that, in the present context, it does not rely upon the content of those articles and reports in relation to the circumstances of Saleh's killing.

sense of Rule 145(2)(b)(iii) of the Rules, which would warrant an aggravated sentence. The Chamber emphasises that the circumstances of this murder are particularly brutal and appalling, as described above. It nonetheless found it more appropriate to consider them as part of the gravity assessment of the circumstances of manner, location and means employed to execute the crimes pursuant to Rule 145(i)(c) of the Rules above.

4640. Finally, regarding Mr Yekatom's participation and intent in relation to these crimes, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁶⁵⁵ It acknowledges that Mr Yekatom might not have been physically present during Saleh's killing, or issued a specific order in relation to Saleh.¹⁰⁶⁵⁶ However, for the reasons highlighted above, the Chamber considers Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent as high.¹⁰⁶⁵⁷ It also recalls its conclusion that Mr Yekatom assumed a degree of responsibility for the killing, in light of his statement that Saleh's killing had been 'an accident', combined with his offer to cover Saleh's funeral expenses.¹⁰⁶⁵⁸

*iii. Persecution as a crime against humanity
(Count 28)*

4642. In relation to the gravity in abstracto of the crime against humanity of persecution, the Chamber refers to its considerations above.¹⁰⁶⁶¹

¹⁰⁶⁵⁵ See in particular paragraphs 4605-4608 above.

4644. It further recalls its findings above regarding the crime-specific considerations made in relation to assessing the gravity of Counts 24 to 27, including the harm and consequences caused by these crimes and Mr Yekatom's degree of participation and intent. The Chamber notes that the facts underlying his conviction under Count 28 are the same as those forming the basis of his convictions under Counts 24 to 27. In this respect, it stresses, once more, that these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the context of determining the joint sentence.

4645. Having considered all of the above circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁶⁶⁵ with the exception of the aggravating factor of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive, the Chamber sentences Mr Yekatom to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of persecution (Count 28).

iii. Determination of joint sentence

4646. Having determined the individual sentences for each crime of which Mr Yekatom is convicted, the Chamber now turns to its determination of the joint sentence for all crimes, which must reflect Mr Yekatom's total culpability.¹⁰⁶⁶⁶ According to Article 78(3) of the Statute, the total term of imprisonment shall be no less than the highest individual sentence pronounced. In Mr Yekatom's case, the minimum joint sentence is thus 14 years. The maximum sentence shall not exceed 30 years of imprisonment or a sentence of life imprisonment in conformity with Article 77(1)(b) of the Statute.

4647. The Prosecution requests a joint sentence of imprisonment of not less than 22 years for Mr Yekatom.¹⁰⁶⁶⁷ The CLRV1 defers to the Prosecution regarding the joint sentence to be imposed¹⁰⁶⁶⁸ and the CLRV2 request that he be sentenced to 30 years of imprisonment.¹⁰⁶⁶⁹

4648. At the outset, the Chamber recalls that sentencing an individual is a unique exercise tailored to the specific circumstances of each case. Any comparison with other cases before this Court is thus of limited relevance, if any.¹⁰⁶⁷⁰ Consequently, the Chamber considers the Yekatom Defence's submissions in this regard irrelevant.¹⁰⁶⁷¹

4649. In determining the joint sentence, the Chamber is called to pronounce a sentence in line with the Court's primary purposes of punishment – retribution and deterrence.¹⁰⁶⁷² It is conscious that the sentence imposed on the accused should also be suitable to give effect to the strong condemnation of the crimes at stake in this case by the international community.¹⁰⁶⁷³

4650. In this context, the Chamber also acknowledges the victims' desire for justice, to be re-empowered and for an adequate punishment to be imposed upon both accused.¹⁰⁶⁷⁴ It also accepts the CLRV2's submission that deterrence, both of the accused and others, plays a crucial role in this case 'in light of the still prevailing situation of relative conflict, insecurity and impunity of the CAR'.¹⁰⁶⁷⁵ Conversely, the Chamber finds it entirely inappropriate to consider the fact that previous proceedings before the Court in the 'CAR Situation' ended with acquittal and non-confirmation of charges,¹⁰⁶⁷⁶ noting that neither Mr Yekatom nor Mr Ngaïssona had any involvement in these cases.¹⁰⁶⁷⁷

4651. The Chamber takes note of the Yekatom Defence's submission that the crimes were committed within a short timeframe.¹⁰⁶⁷⁸ It is also mindful of the factual overlap underlying a number of crimes of which Mr Yekatom is found guilty, which must be taken into consideration when determining his joint sentence.¹⁰⁶⁷⁹

4652. First, the Chamber notes that a factual overlap exists between crimes which concurrently constitute war crimes and crimes against humanity and are thus only distinguished by their different contextual elements.¹⁰⁶⁸⁰ Notably, this concerns the crimes of murder (Counts 2 and 3, 15 and 16, as well as 26 and 27, respectively) and, to a certain extent, torture (Counts 12 and 13).¹⁰⁶⁸¹

4653. Second, there is a partial overlap in the conduct underlying the crimes respectively committed within the context of (i) the Bangui Attack; (ii) the Yamwara Incident; and (iii) the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, as well as in the respective harm and consequences deriving from these crimes.

4654. Specifically, with respect to the crimes committed within the context of the Bangui Attack,¹⁰⁶⁸² the Chamber notes that the conduct underlying Counts 1 to 6 and 8 broadly

¹⁰⁶⁷⁹ The Chamber takes note of the participants' submissions in this respect, see Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, paras 12-13; CLRV2 Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2745-Red, para. 21; CLRV2 Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-310, p. 46, line 14 – p. 47, line 2.

¹⁰⁶⁸⁰ See also Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, paras 12-13. Contra, CLRV2 Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2745-Red, para. 21 and CLRV2 Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-310, p. 46, line 14 – p. 47, line 2, who argue that the concurrent charges for crimes against humanity and war crimes for similar conduct should be considered as 'accentuating the overall gravity of the crimes, rather than diminishing it'.

¹⁰⁶⁸¹ In this regard, the Chamber recalls its legal findings above, which address the differences between torture as a war crime and as a crime against humanity, see paragraphs 3817-3822 above.

¹⁰⁶⁸² See also Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, para. 13 i).

overlaps. It also observes that the harm and consequences deriving from the crime of forcible transfer and deportation, and the crime of displacement (Counts 4 and 5) overlap. Additionally, it observes that the crime of directing an attack against the civilian population as such (Count 1) was committed by way of conduct, and resulted in harm, which in turn constituted facts underlying separate crimes committed in the context of this attack. With respect to the crime of persecution (Count 8), the Chamber observes an overlap insofar as the crime was committed through acts constituting also the crimes under Counts 1 to 6. Furthermore, the discriminatory dimension underlying the crime of persecution was also considered as an aggravating factor in relation to Counts 1 to 6.

4655. With respect to the crimes committed during the Yamwara Incident,¹⁰⁶⁸³ the Chamber notes that the conduct underlying Counts 11 to 17 partly overlaps. It also observes the factual overlaps between the consequences, in particular the harm on the surviving captives, of the crimes of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty (Count 14), other inhumane acts (Count 11) and cruel treatment (Count 13), as well as between the consequences of the crimes of torture (Counts 12 and 13) and murder (Counts 15 and 16), in particular with regard to the emotional and psychological harm on Saint Cyr's family and friends. In addition, it notes that the crime of persecution (Count 17) was committed through acts also constituting the crimes under Counts 11 to 16 and that the discriminatory dimension underlying the crime of persecution was further considered as an aggravating factor in relation to Counts 11 to 16, with the exception of the war crime of torture under Count 13.

4656. With respect to the crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis,¹⁰⁶⁸⁴ the Chamber notes that the conduct underlying Counts 24 to 28 partly overlaps. Moreover, it observes the overlap between the harm and consequences deriving from the crime of forcible transfer and deportation, and the crime of displacement (Counts 24 and 25). Additionally, it recalls that the crime of persecution (Count 28) was committed through acts also constituting the crimes under Counts 24 to 27 and that the discriminatory dimension has also been considered an aggravating factor in relation to Counts 24 to 27.

¹⁰⁶⁸³ See also Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, para. 13 ii).

¹⁰⁶⁸⁴ See also Yekatom Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2746-Red, para. 13 iii).

4657. Having duly considered the above, the Chamber does not consider the timeframe or these overlaps to have a significant bearing on its determination of Mr Yekatom's joint sentence. In this respect, it notes that Mr Yekatom is convicted of 20 crimes, which were committed in the context of three separate incidents, spanning over different geographical areas. Furthermore, Mr Yekatom committed these crimes in the context of an organised armed group and as part of a wider policy, in which he voluntarily participated. Moreover, Mr Yekatom was fully aware of all of these crimes and played a key role in their commission.¹⁰⁶⁸⁵

4658. Most importantly, the Chamber notes that – with the exception of the abovementioned overlaps – the crimes committed by Mr Yekatom were wholly distinct and violated a wide array of fundamental protected interests. Notably, these protected interests included the right to life; the right not to be subjected to torture, and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment; the right to liberty and security of person; the right to liberty of movement; the right to freedom of religion and to not be denied the right to practice their own religion in community with other members of their group; the right to property; the right against arbitrary arrest and detention and related procedural guarantees; the right against arbitrary or unlawful interference with their family and home; and the right of all persons deprived of their liberty to be treated with humanity and respect for their inherent dignity.¹⁰⁶⁸⁶

4659. For the same reasons, the Chamber also considers that a joint sentence corresponding to the highest individual sentence pronounced is incapable of reflecting Mr Yekatom's total culpability. Accordingly, the Chamber finds it appropriate to set Mr Yekatom's joint sentence slightly higher than 14 years.

4660. In determining his joint sentence, the Chamber further considered the Yekatom Defence's submissions regarding Mr Yekatom's rehabilitation and reintegration prospects. Specifically, the Yekatom Defence submits that the Chamber must consider whether any sentence imposed against Mr Yekatom would adequately allow for his reintegration and contribute to the maintenance of peace and reconciliation in the CAR.¹⁰⁶⁸⁷ In its submission, ¹⁰⁶⁸⁵ See in particular paragraphs 4492-4498, 4551-4555, 4605-4608 above.

it argues that Mr Yekatom ‘qualifies on all counts to be reintegrated into society’,¹⁰⁶⁸⁸ taking into account his individual and mitigating circumstances, including the fact that he is now 50 years old and that his military and political career ‘are behind him’.¹⁰⁶⁸⁹

4661. The Chamber acknowledges that reintegration and rehabilitation may constitute relevant considerations in determining an appropriate sentence. However, it also recalls the Court’s consistent jurisprudence that it should not be given undue weight.¹⁰⁶⁹⁰ Noting the specifics of Mr Yekatom’s case and the conclusions drawn above, the Chamber does not consider his prospects of reintegration and rehabilitation to be exceptional. Accordingly, it affords this factor only limited weight in determining the appropriate joint sentence.

4662. In light of the above considerations, the Chamber sentences Mr Yekatom to a joint sentence of 15 years.

4663. This sentence is pronounced unanimously. While Judge Chung would have convicted Mr Yekatom of Count 29, he does not consider his dissent in this respect to have any impact on the joint sentence.

4664. The Chamber is of the view that this term is proportionate to Mr Yekatom’s specific individual circumstances, conforms with the purposes of punishment under the Court’s legal framework, and adequately acknowledges the victims’ suffering and harm, whilst safeguarding Mr Yekatom’s prospects of rehabilitation and reintegration into society. Consequently, the Chamber considers imprisonment to constitute a sufficient penalty for Mr Yekatom and therefore does not impose any fine in addition thereto.¹⁰⁶⁹¹

iv. Deduction of time spent in detention

4665. The Chamber recalls that, in accordance with Article 78(2) of the Statute, ‘[i]n imposing a sentence of imprisonment, the Court shall deduct the time, if any, previously spent in detention in accordance with an order of the Court’.

¹⁰⁶⁹⁰ See paragraph 4398 above.

¹⁰⁶⁹¹ Rule 146(1) of the Rules.

4666. Noting that Mr Yekatom was surrendered to the Court by the CAR authorities on 17 November 2018,¹⁰⁶⁹² the Chamber orders that the time he spent in detention from that date until the date of this judgment, shall be deducted from his sentence.

4. Mr Ngaïssona

i. Factors and circumstances applicable to all crimes

4667. In this section, as indicated above,¹⁰⁶⁹³ and in light of the relevant submissions by the participants, the Chamber first addresses factors and circumstances applicable to all crimes for which Mr Ngaïssona is convicted at this juncture, before turning to its considerations specific to each crime in section VI.B.4.ii. The Chamber clarifies that the conclusions in this section have been drawn at this juncture merely for the clarity of written reasoning and efficiency. Nonetheless, the Chamber, in accordance with the applicable law set out above,¹⁰⁶⁹⁴ recalls and duly considers them in the context of determining each individual sentence for which Mr Ngaïssona is found guilty of.

a. Individual circumstances

4668. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that Mr Ngaïssona's unique family circumstances warrant mitigation of the sentence, submitting that as the central figure and main provider for his large family and community,¹⁰⁶⁹⁵ his detention impacted them financially and morally.¹⁰⁶⁹⁶ The Chamber recalls that family circumstances are accorded little, if any weight, in sentencing, unless they are exceptional.¹⁰⁶⁹⁷ The Chamber notes Mr Ngaïssona's family ¹⁰⁶⁹³ See paragraph 4416 above.

¹⁰⁶⁹⁵ The Chamber notes that according to the Ngaïssona Defence, Mr Ngaïssona has a wife, nine children, 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild under his care, and is also the main provider for much of his extended family, see Ngaïssona Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748, para. 41; Annex 2 to the Ngaïssona Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748-Conf-Exp-Anx2 (confidential redacted version, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748-Conf-Anx2-Red).

¹⁰⁶⁹⁷ The Chamber also takes note of the submissions of the Prosecution and CLRV2 in this regard: Prosecution Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-310, p. 40, lines 15-21; CLRV2 Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2745-Red, para. 70; CLRV2 Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-310, p. 52, lines 14-23. See also Al Hassan Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/12-01/18-2662, paras 86-87; Bemba Sentencing Judgment, ICC-01/05-01/08-3399, paras 77-78.

circumstances but does not find them to be exceptional. Accordingly, it does not consider them mitigating as such.

4669. Similarly, the Chamber does not consider the fact that Mr Ngaïssona has no prior convictions¹⁰⁶⁹⁸ mitigating. As set out above, it notes that individuals convicted by international tribunals often lack prior convictions. That said, it accepts that it constitutes a relevant individual circumstance of an accused,¹⁰⁶⁹⁹ and is thus taken into account when determining the appropriate sentences for Mr Ngaïssona.

b. Mitigating factors

i. Specific hardship in detention

4670. The Ngaïssona Defence argues that the specific hardship Mr Ngaïssona experienced in pre-trial custody constitutes a mitigating factor.¹⁰⁷⁰⁰ As noted above, the Chamber is mindful that Mr Ngaïssona has been detained for a lengthy period, at a considerable geographic distance from the CAR and in a culturally different environment.¹⁰⁷⁰¹ It further acknowledges that during his detention, restrictions on contact were imposed on Mr Ngaïssona and he received a limited number of family visits, has not seen certain family members, including most of his children, and has been impacted by the death of a number of persons close to him, including his father.¹⁰⁷⁰² In this regard, the Chamber notes that it permitted Mr Ngaïssona temporary release from the Detention Centre to attend the funeral of his father.¹⁰⁷⁰³

4671. The Chamber is cognisant that Mr Ngaïssona's family life and his mental and physical well-being have been impacted by the circumstances of his detention, notably that he has been detained at great geographic distance from the CAR, his family and culture.¹⁰⁷⁰⁴ However, as indicated above,¹⁰⁷⁰⁵ the Chamber considers this remoteness to be a common feature of an accused before this Court, which, by itself, is not mitigating. That said, the Chamber recalls that it already gives weight to this circumstance in the context of affording mitigating effect to the impact of the Covid-19 pandemic on the detention conditions of the accused and their well-being.¹⁰⁷⁰⁶

¹⁰⁷⁰³ See Decision on the Ngaïssona Defence's requests for temporary transfer and cancellation of hearings on 19 and 20 February 2024, 23 February 2024, ICC-01/14-01/18-2377 (with public Annex A; confidential Annex B) (the 'Decision on Temporary Transfer').

4672. The Chamber now turns to the Ngaïssona Defence's contention that Mr Ngaïssona has had limited contact with his family because of, inter alia, restrictions on contact imposed for much of his detention, the Detention Centre's restrictive policy on family visits and the financial and visa-related obstacles encountered by his family in arranging travel to The Netherlands, particularly given the Court's limitations on funded family visits.¹⁰⁷⁰⁷

4673. First, the Chamber recalls that the contact restrictions were put in place partly in response to Mr Ngaïssona's own actions.¹⁰⁷⁰⁸ They were periodically reviewed throughout the trial, with due consideration being given to Mr Ngaïssona's right to family life, and eased whenever permissible.¹⁰⁷⁰⁹ The Chamber also recalls that Mr Ngaïssona voluntarily decided not to exercise his right to make non-privileged telephone calls for ten months, thereby limiting his contact with his family in this period.¹⁰⁷¹⁰

4674. Second, as set out above, the imposition of specific ‘stringent Covid-19 related “temporary measures”’ and the related suspension of certain Detention Centre activities¹⁰⁷¹¹ were taken in response to the global pandemic, in order to protect, inter alia, Mr Ngaïssona’s health.¹⁰⁷¹² Beyond the mitigating effect already afforded to both accused in this respect, the Chamber cannot discern any specific hardship Mr Ngaïssona experienced in detention in light of these restrictions, which requires further mitigation.

4675. Third, as set out above, the Chamber recalls that the Court has limited funding for the facilitation of family visits.¹⁰⁷¹³ Notwithstanding that Mr Ngaïssona has a right to family visits, the Chamber recalls that resource constraints, both financial and in terms of the days on which Detention Centre staff are available to monitor visits,¹⁰⁷¹⁴ are appropriate factors to consider in the context of determining visiting arrangements.¹⁰⁷¹⁵ As Mr Ngaïssona has received family visits while in detention, albeit not from all family members,¹⁰⁷¹⁶ the Chamber considers that this circumstance need not be considered any further.

4676. Finally, in relation to the Ngaïssona Defence’s argument that Mr Ngaïssona’s rights were violated by the denial of ‘nutritious and culturally appropriate food that is safe for consumption’,¹⁰⁷¹⁷ the Chamber recalls, as set out above, that food-related complaints are exclusively within the purview of the Registrar and subject to the Presidency’s judicial review.¹⁰⁷¹⁸ In this regard, the Chamber notes that notwithstanding Mr Ngaïssona’s dissatisfaction with the Registrar's response to the complaints he filed on this matter,¹⁰⁷¹⁹ he chose not to exercise his right to judicial review and instead requested the Chamber's intervention, which was rejected.¹⁰⁷²⁰ Therefore, in light of the foregoing, it does not consider that this factor constitutes a relevant mitigating factor in this instance.

4677. In light of the above considerations, the Chamber considers there to be no specific hardship in Mr Ngaïssona's detention which would warrant mitigation of his sentence beyond the mitigating weight afforded to the hardship caused by the Detention Centre Measures.

ii. Cooperation with the Court

4678. The Ngaïssona Defence submits that Mr Ngaïssona's overall behaviour and cooperation in the case exceeded mere good behaviour and should be considered as mitigating factors.¹⁰⁷²¹ Specifically, it argues that Mr Ngaïssona consistently showed good, cooperative behaviour in the courtroom and in detention¹⁰⁷²² and cooperated with the investigations in the case.¹⁰⁷²³ The Prosecution argues that Mr Ngaïssona has not cooperated with the Court.¹⁰⁷²⁴

4679. The Chamber recalls that Mr Ngaïssona has attended all court hearings in person unless health reasons prevented him from doing so and has been consistently cooperative, respectful and non-disruptive therein.¹⁰⁷²⁵ Further, the Chamber notes that Mr Ngaïssona complied with the Chamber's conditions during a period of temporary release in February 2024¹⁰⁷²⁶ and that no inappropriate behaviour in the Detention Centre towards Registry staff or other detainees has been reported to the Chamber.

¹⁰⁷¹⁹ See Defence Request to Redress the Violations of Mr Ngaïssona's Rights in Detention, 2 June 2020, ICC-01/14-01/18-541-Conf (with confidential ex parte Annexes 1-5, only available to the Ngaïssona Defence and the Registry) (public redacted version) notified the next day, ICC-01/14-01/18-541-Red), paras 11-13.

¹⁰⁷²⁶ See Decision on Temporary Transfer, ICC-01/14-01/18-2377.

4680. Nonetheless, as stated above, good behaviour and cooperation are not mitigating factors, unless the behaviour is ‘exceptional’ in nature.¹⁰⁷²⁷ The Chamber does not consider there to be any such exceptional behaviour with respect to Mr Ngaïssona. Concerning the Ngaïssona Defence’s submission that Mr Ngaïssona cooperated with the Prosecution and the French gendarmerie regarding the investigations in the case,¹⁰⁷²⁸ the Chamber considers that even if established to the requisite standard, these actions were not exceptional such that they would impact the sentences. Moreover, the Chamber considers that Mr Ngaïssona’s compliance with the Chamber’s orders has not been exemplary. In particular, it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona breached the contact restrictions in place on multiple occasions.¹⁰⁷²⁹

4681. All the above considered, the Chamber does not afford the factor of cooperation any mitigating effect.

iii. Efforts to promote peace, reconciliation and social cohesion

4682. The Ngaïssona Defence submits that Mr Ngaïssona’s concrete and genuine efforts to promote peace and reconciliation between Muslims and non-Muslims of the CAR should be given significant weight.¹⁰⁷³⁰ In particular, the Ngaïssona Defence lists eight concrete actions which it submits contributed to peace and to protect the Muslim population. Furthermore, it argues that Mr Ngaïssona never personally gained from these actions, referring to the many obstacles he faced as Anti-Balaka national coordinator, and that they demonstrate Mr Ngaïssona’s genuine will as a political leader to use his influence to calm the intercommunal violence. It also submits that several of the measures proposed by Mr Ngaïssona were adopted by the transitional government and the international community, which confirms that they were genuine and concrete.¹⁰⁷³¹ It adds that the limited success of these initiatives should not bear any weight and that several witnesses, including

Catherine Samba-Panza, testified that the situation in the CAR would have been worse without Mr Ngaïssona.¹⁰⁷³²

4683. The Prosecution argues that efforts to promote peace and reconciliation are not mitigating factors if public pronouncements are accompanied by conduct which undermines those statements or perpetuates the group's criminal agenda and activities, as is the case for Mr Ngaïssona.¹⁰⁷³³ The CLRV2 submit that the argument that Mr Ngaïssona was an advocate for peace does not conform with the evidence.¹⁰⁷³⁴

4684. The Chamber recalls its conclusions above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's purported activities aimed at peace and reconciliation.¹⁰⁷³⁵ Furthermore, the Chamber takes note of all of the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions¹⁰⁷³⁶ and evidence submitted for the purpose of sentencing in this regard¹⁰⁷³⁷ and addresses them below to the extent that it considers them relevant to its assessment of this mitigating factor.

4685. The Chamber recalls that efforts to promote peace, reconciliation and social cohesion may only constitute a mitigating circumstance if they are genuine and concrete.¹⁰⁷³⁸

4686. Taking the above into account, the Chamber does not consider Mr Ngaïssona's efforts during the period relevant to the charges mitigating. In the view of the Chamber, they were neither genuine nor concrete, given that they were accompanied by conduct which undermined them and perpetuated the Anti-Balaka's criminal acts.¹⁰⁷³⁹ The Chamber further recalls that in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance towards Bangui, during attacks on Bossangoa and Bangui, and during the advance of Mr Yekatom's group along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, Mr Ngaïssona did not intervene or condemn the Anti-Balaka's actions, including violent acts and abuses committed by them against Muslims, nor did he sanction individuals for their actions. Notably, the national coordination under the lead of Mr Ngaïssona praised the Anti-Balaka for having acted heroically and referred to the transition government as ungrateful for not recognising the ‘act of deliverance’ the Anti-Balaka in their view performed.¹⁰⁷⁴⁰ Moreover, Mr Ngaïssona committed all crimes of which he is convicted with discriminatory intent against Muslims.¹⁰⁷⁴¹

4687. In this context, the Chamber notes that in the period relevant to the charges various media statements attributed to the Anti-Balaka and seemingly signed by Mr Ngaïssona in his capacity as Anti-Balaka general coordinator appeared to call for peace and reconciliation.¹⁰⁷⁴² However, the Chamber considers that these statements were disingenuous given that in other forums Mr Ngaïssona continued to employ discriminatory rhetoric against Muslims at a time when Anti-Balaka groups were carrying out various attacks in localities in western CAR prefectures.¹⁰⁷⁴³ The Chamber particularly recalls that in a radio broadcast of an interview on 27 February 2014 – whilst claiming that he was not an enemy of the state or of peace – Mr Ngaïssona also made clear that he fully stood by the actions of the Anti-Balaka in their pursuit of their core objective, and that while Mr Ngaïssona knew about the death and dislocation of Muslim civilians due to the Anti-Balaka’s actions, he either chose not to refer to such events at all, or downplayed them.¹⁰⁷⁴⁴

4688. Contrarily, the Chamber acknowledges that Mr Ngaïssona undertook certain efforts after the period relevant to the charges, which are given some weight in assessing this mitigating factor.

4689. In particular, it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona attended the Brazzaville Forum in July 2014 where he expressed commitments to peace.¹⁰⁷⁴⁵ It further notes that in mid-2014, in the context of the Brazzaville negotiations, Mr Ngaïssona and the Anti-Balaka organised missions to the provinces to give information to the Anti-Balaka regarding the peace process.¹⁰⁷⁴⁶ The Chamber also notes that after the Brazzaville agreement, the Anti-Balaka under Mr Ngaïssona engaged in various initiatives removing roadblocks.¹⁰⁷⁴⁷ The Chamber also notes that Mr Ngaïssona was involved in peace initiatives in Boda in March and July 2014.¹⁰⁷⁴⁸

4690. Additionally, the Chamber notes that after the period relevant to the charges, statements were issued by the Anti-Balaka national coordination under Mr Ngaïssona's lead calling for peace.¹⁰⁷⁴⁹ On 4 April 2014, Mr Ngaïssona issued a press release in which he announced 'la fin de toutes hostilités sur toute l'étendue du territoire national'.¹⁰⁷⁵⁰ The Chamber notes that this message was repeated in subsequent press releases in April and May 2014, in preparation for the Brazzaville Forum.¹⁰⁷⁵¹ Nonetheless, the Chamber also recalls the specific context in which such statements were made. Notably, a handwritten document dated 17 April 2014, containing a commitment to peace was signed by Mr Ngaïssona as the immediate result of his impending arrest, pursuant to an arrest warrant issued against him by the CAR public prosecutor.¹⁰⁷⁵²

4691. The Chamber also notes the issuance of statements or 'communiqués' asking the Anti-Balaka to observe a peaceful attitude and not to do anything to disturb the 'Muslim brothers' during Ramadan, as well as to allow free circulation of humanitarian, international forces and other vehicles. In relation to the latter, the Chamber also finds it of note that this seems to have taken place right after the Anti-Balaka engaged in a 'ville morte' activity in October 2014.¹⁰⁷⁵³

4692. While acknowledging these efforts, the Chamber also stresses that they must be put into perspective. Notably, they occurred in the context of broader peace negotiations with the CAR government and international authorities.¹⁰⁷⁵⁴ Furthermore, it is important to consider that these efforts were made when no more large-scale active hostilities took place, the Seleka had mostly retreated or was billeted, and many Muslim civilians had been forced to flee their localities.¹⁰⁷⁵⁵ Additionally, the Chamber notes that even after the period relevant to the charges, notwithstanding the fact that the Anti-Balaka national coordination, led by Mr Ngaïssona, repeatedly expressed its commitment to peace and security in the CAR, it continued to make public statements equating Seleka or other violence-committing individuals with Muslims in general.¹⁰⁷⁵⁶

4693. The Chamber further notes that within the first months of becoming general coordinator, Mr Ngaïssona provided the transitional government with a plan for the billeting and inclusion of Anti-Balaka elements in a DDR programme.¹⁰⁷⁵⁷ While a DDR programme was eventually set up some years later,¹⁰⁷⁵⁸ the Chamber is not persuaded by the argument that Mr Ngaïssona's involvement in the DDR proposals can be construed as a genuine peace effort. Instead, it considers that Mr Ngaïssona was primarily motivated by ulterior motives, including financial and political reasons.

4694. First, in terms of Mr Ngaïssona's financial motivations, it recalls the testimony of Jo-Brice Ouabiro Dana who stated that Mr Ngaïssona said during a meeting that taking care of the Anti-Balaka should not only be his responsibility, but that they should start a process with the government to take care of them.¹⁰⁷⁵⁹ Second, in terms of Mr Ngaïssona's political motivations, it is clear from the evidence that Mr Ngaïssona and the Anti-Balaka as a whole wanted to be taken into account within the transition process, including for personal interests,¹⁰⁷⁶⁰ and that the DDR proposals were utilised for this purpose.¹⁰⁷⁶¹ For example,

¹⁰⁷⁵⁹ See paragraphs 1871 above.

the Chamber received evidence that Mr Ngaïssona sought a post as DDR coordinator within the new transition government.¹⁰⁷⁶² Third, and most importantly, the Chamber notes that it has received evidence which suggests that the proposals were not genuine. For example, the Chamber considers of note in this regard the testimony of Catherine Samba-Panza, who said that Mr Ngaïssona's statement of being ready to put down weapons was a 'political spin' ('effets d'annonce').¹⁰⁷⁶³ Accordingly, Mr Ngaïssona's actions in relation to the DDR programme have not been taken into consideration for the purpose of the present assessment.

4695. Similarly, the Chamber does not consider that the fact of Mr Ngaïssona overseeing an initiative to identify Anti-Balaka elements and provide them with badges constitutes a genuine peace effort.¹⁰⁷⁶⁴ In this regard, it recalls its finding that the badges had a two-fold, inter-connected, purpose: (i) to distinguish what were considered 'real' from 'fake' Anti-Balaka; and (ii) for an eventual DDR programme.¹⁰⁷⁶⁵ The Chamber also recalls the testimony of Aurélien Llorca who explained Mr Ngaïssona's personal political motivations for issuing the badges, notably to 'prove' that people were under Mr Ngaïssona's organisation, as well as at the coordination's initiative with a view to improving the Anti-Balaka's visibility in the field, both towards local inhabitants and international forces.¹⁰⁷⁶⁶

4696. The Chamber also takes note of the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions regarding Mr Ngaïssona's creation of the PCUD party in November 2014 and disbanding of the Anti-Balaka movement.¹⁰⁷⁶⁷ The Chamber is unconvinced by the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that the fact that the creation of the PCUD risked the division of the Anti-Balaka movement shows that the PCUD was not a means for Mr Ngaïssona to gain power.¹⁰⁷⁶⁸ Instead it considers that the creation of the PCUD was primarily driven by Mr Ngaïssona's political ambitions, rather than from a genuine effort to establish peace. Therefore, it does not consider this action to be of relevance in the context of peace or reconciliation efforts.

4697. The Chamber also notes that it received evidence that Mr Ngaïssona made some efforts to stop and deter the Anti-Balaka from committing crimes both during and after the period relevant to the charges, including by giving elements money for their needs.¹⁰⁷⁶⁹ At the outset, it notes that it does not consider such financial assistance mitigating on the basis that this would run counter to the Chamber's finding that financial contributions which aim at sustaining an armed group, such as to provide for its food or other sustenance, can amount to a form of assistance through which liability under the Statute can be incurred.¹⁰⁷⁷⁰ The Chamber also does not consider the setting up of a 'military police' by the general coordination under Mr Ngaïssona's lead as mitigating. In this respect, it notes that the initiative did not aim to address the types of crimes for which Mr Ngaïssona is convicted. Rather it sought to track down and hand over to the gendarmerie 'fake' Anti-Balaka, and was also understood to track down those considered to be Anti-Balaka elements, but acting out of bounds, specifically in the context of theft and looting.¹⁰⁷⁷¹

4698. Further, the Chamber stresses again that during the period relevant to the charges, Mr Ngaïssona did not intervene or condemn the Anti-Balaka's actions, nor did he sanction individuals for their actions.¹⁰⁷⁷² It considers that at no point did Mr Ngaïssona systematically or genuinely seek to prevent the Anti-Balaka from committing crimes. In this regard, the Chamber recalls its discussion on the concept of 'fake Anti-Balaka',¹⁰⁷⁷³ and its conclusion that Mr Ngaïssona used this concept to suggest that the violence and abuses attributed to the Anti-Balaka were committed by individuals not linked to the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁷⁷⁴ The Chamber further recalls that in an interview in July 2014, when asked about violent acts committed by the Anti-Balaka, Mr Ngaïssona sought to portray them as isolated acts by specifically identified individuals, which, at that time, Mr Ngaïssona knew not to be correct.¹⁰⁷⁷⁵ The Chamber considers that even if Mr Ngaïssona did engage in some (limited) actions to prevent the Anti-Balaka from committing crimes after the period relevant to the charges, any such actions are undermined by the rhetoric he publicly employed seeking to downplay the scale of the Anti-Balaka's criminality, as well as the identity of the perpetrators.

4699. In conclusion, the Chamber accepts that Mr Ngaïssona may have wished for peace to return to the CAR once the Anti-Balaka's objectives had been accomplished and that he took certain efforts towards this goal. Nonetheless, taking all of the above considerations into account, the Chamber only considers the abovementioned peace and reconciliation activities which were made after the period relevant to the charges¹⁰⁷⁷⁶ and only affords them limited weight in mitigating Mr Ngaïssona's sentence.

iv. Efforts to assist victims

4700. The Ngaïssona Defence submits that Mr Ngaïssona personally intervened in a non-selective way to protect fellow Muslims in Bangui and went beyond his responsibilities as general coordinator in doing so. It points to examples of Mr Ngaïssona housing Muslims when they were captured by the Anti-Balaka and securing their 'safe passage to PK5', as well as returning their stolen property.¹⁰⁷⁷⁷

4701. Whilst the Chamber acknowledges that some witnesses provided evidence that Mr Ngaïssona helped certain Muslims,¹⁰⁷⁷⁸ it considers that any such actions undertaken are disingenuous as they stand in stark contrast to his criminal conduct against this group.¹⁰⁷⁷⁹ Further, it does not transpire from the evidence that Mr Ngaïssona generally assisted victims during the period relevant to the charges or thereafter. Rather, the Chamber notes that many of the alleged acts of assistance relate to Mr Ngaïssona returning stolen property, notably vehicles to Muslims,¹⁰⁷⁸⁰ rather than the provision of assistance in relation to the crimes which he is convicted of.¹⁰⁷⁸¹

4702. As to the Ngaïssona Defence's submission that Mr Ngaïssona provided 'safe passage' to Muslims to PK5,¹⁰⁷⁸² the Chamber recalls that after the Bangui Attack, PK5 became overcrowded, practically uninhabitable and unsafe, and that Muslim persons who fled there continued to fear for their security because of the presence of the Anti-Balaka around PK5 and Bangui generally. It also recalls that as a result, some Muslims then fled to neighbouring countries, fearing for their safety.¹⁰⁷⁸³ In the circumstances, it does not therefore consider that such interventions by Mr Ngaïssona constituted genuine assistance.

4703. In light of the above, and in accordance with the jurisprudence of this Court, the Chamber does not consider it appropriate to consider the limited interventions referred to by the Ngaïssona Defence as generally mitigating.¹⁰⁷⁸⁴

c. Aggravating factors: Abuse of power

4704. The CLRV2 ask the Chamber to consider Mr Ngaïssona's alleged abuse of power as an aggravating factor pursuant to Rule 145(2)(b)(ii) of the Rules. Specifically, the CLRV2 submit that he held a 'high-level position in the Anti-Balaka organisation' and used his influence and power to promote the anti-Muslim animus, instead of using it to prevent the escalation of the conflict'. Moreover, it argues that '[w]hile holding a ministerial position, Mr Ngaïssona mobilised the youth' to strengthen [François] Boziz[é]'s position.¹⁰⁷⁸⁵

4705. The Chamber recalls the jurisprudence above.¹⁰⁷⁸⁶ The Chamber does not consider that Mr Ngaïssona, beyond holding various positions of authority including as the Anti-Balaka general coordinator¹⁰⁷⁸⁷ and minister of youth, sports, arts and culture,¹⁰⁷⁸⁸ exercised his authority in these roles in a way that would warrant consideration as an aggravating factor within the meaning of Rule 145(2)(b)(ii) of the Rules. Considering the specific circumstances at hand, the Chamber is of the view that Mr Ngaïssona's role and acts are more appropriately assessed in the context of assessing his degree of participation and intent in relation to the individual crimes below.¹⁰⁷⁸⁹

ii. Determination of individual sentences for each crime

4706. At the outset, the Chamber recalls that the facts underlying the crimes of which Mr Ngaïssona is convicted overlap to a certain degree. Accordingly, they need to be taken into consideration for more than one crime. The Chamber recalls its findings above in this respect.¹⁰⁷⁹⁰

4707. In the present section, the Chamber addresses crime-specific considerations in relation to each of the 28 crimes of which Mr Ngaïssona is convicted. The analysis is grouped by the following incidents, which feature the same or at least connected underlying facts: (a) the crimes committed in the context of the attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin – the Bangui Attack (Counts 1 to 6 and 8); (b) the crimes committed in the context of the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 – the Bossangoa Attack – and subsequent days and weeks (Counts 30 to 33, 37 to 39, 42); (c) the crimes committed in the context of the events at Yamwara on and around 24 December 2013 – the Yamwara Incident (Counts 11 to 17); and (d) the crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis (Counts 24 to 28). Each section contains general considerations applying to all crimes of the relevant incident. This has been done merely for clarity and avoidance of duplication. However, the Chamber emphasises that it has taken each of these findings into account when determining the individual sentences below.

a. Crimes committed in the context of the attack on Bangui, including Boeing and Cattin (Counts 1 to 6 and 8)

4708. The Chamber observes that the crimes committed in the context of the Bangui Attack share a number of features,¹⁰⁷⁹¹ in particular as concerns Mr Ngaïssona's individual responsibility. In this respect, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁷⁹² Notably, it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona is convicted of aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting the commission of crimes in the context of the Bangui Attack, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.

4709. In determining Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent for the purposes of sentencing, the Chamber notes the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions¹⁰⁷⁹³ and finds the following factors of relevance. Despite being outside of the CAR in 2013, Mr Ngaïssona was actively involved in planning the concrete steps to respond to the Seleka violence in the CAR as well as to ensure François Bozizé's return to power, by all means possible, including through armed violence.¹⁰⁷⁹⁴ Specifically, Mr Ngaïssona provided financial aid, organisational assistance and psychological support to the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁷⁹⁵ Mr Ngaïssona made these contributions for the purpose of facilitating the commission of criminal acts targeting the Muslim population, and fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim civilian population in the west of the CAR.¹⁰⁷⁹⁶

4710. For the purposes of determining the appropriate sentences for the crimes underlying Counts 1 to 6 and 8, the Chamber also considers it relevant to note that the Bangui Attack was not a spontaneous attack but was planned.¹⁰⁷⁹⁷ It further notes that Mr Ngaïssona specifically provided funds to Anti-Balaka elements that participated in the Bangui Attack,¹⁰⁷⁹⁸ that ¹⁰⁷⁹¹ In this respect, the Chamber notes that these features are addressed jointly for all crimes merely for clarity and avoidance of duplication. However, it emphasises that it has taken each of these findings into account when determining the individual sentences below.

¹⁰⁷⁹² See in particular sections II.A.2-II.A.3; section II.A.5, in particular paragraph 49; section II.A.6., in particular paragraph 56; paragraphs 827, 1299, 1301-1302, 1304; section V.B.3.i.b.ii above.

¹⁰⁷⁹⁶ See paragraphs 49, 3943-3945 above.

¹⁰⁷⁹⁷ See paragraphs 69-71, 73 above.

¹⁰⁷⁹⁸ See paragraph 70 above.

Mr Ngaïssona's contributions were found to have had, in the very least, a positive effect on the commission of the crimes during the Bangui Attack,¹⁰⁷⁹⁹ and that his financial support made it possible for at least some of the elements to participate in the Bangui Attack.¹⁰⁸⁰⁰ The Chamber also notes that Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the advance of the groups towards Bangui as well as of the hostilities during this advance, including the killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians, and that notwithstanding this, Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide funds to the Anti-Balaka that participated in the Bangui Attack.¹⁰⁸⁰¹ Further, he was not only aware that the Anti-Balaka would commit these crimes in the ordinary course of events, but intended for them to commit these crimes within the context of the Bangui Attack and lent his assistance with the aim of facilitating such crimes.¹⁰⁸⁰²

4711. All facts considered, the Chamber cannot find any circumstances which would qualify Mr Ngaïssona's participation or intent as particularly high or low for the purposes of sentencing.

¹⁰⁷⁹⁹ See paragraph 4037 above. See also Prosecution Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-310, p. 24, lines 6-14. Contra Ngaïssona Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748, paras 8-10.

¹⁰⁸⁰⁶ With respect to Count 8, the Chamber recalls that the discriminatory dimension is a constitutive element of the crime against humanity of persecution. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider it as an aggravating factor for this crime.

i. Attack against the civilian population as such as a war crime (Count 1)

4713. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of this crime as high in abstracto and in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁸⁰⁷ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent.¹⁰⁸⁰⁸

4714. The Chamber also recalls that it may consider harm arising as a consequence of a crime in the context of sentencing.¹⁰⁸⁰⁹ In the present case, extensive harm was inflicted on the civilian population as a result of the attack on Boeing and Cattin.¹⁰⁸¹⁰ In the view of the Chamber, this heightens the gravity in concreto of Count 1. The Chamber recognises that these consequences constitute the relevant facts underlying the other crimes Mr Ngaïssona is convicted of in the context of the Bangui Attack. While all relevant circumstances must be considered in the context of the individual sentence under this count, these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the determination of the joint sentence.¹⁰⁸¹¹

4715. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁸¹² in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁸¹³ the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the war crime of attack against the civilian population as such (Count 1).

ii. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 2 and 3)

4716. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of these crimes as very high in abstracto and particularly high in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁸¹⁴ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent.¹⁰⁸¹⁵

¹⁰⁸⁰⁷ See section VI.B.3.ii.a.i above.

4717. The Chamber considers that the significant impact of the crimes on Hassan's family, as described above, is inherent to the violent nature of the crimes committed and is accordingly satisfied that this harm was also objectively foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona.¹⁰⁸¹⁶

4718. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁸¹⁷ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁸¹⁸ the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 11 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of murder (Count 2) and 11 years of imprisonment for the war crime of murder (Count 3).

iii. Forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity and displacement as a war crime (Counts 4 and 5)

4719. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of Counts 4 and 5 as high and substantial, respectively, in abstracto and as high in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁸¹⁹ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent.¹⁰⁸²⁰

4720. With respect to the impact of the crimes,¹⁰⁸²¹ the Chamber considers that the dislocation of Muslim civilians from Boeing and Cattin, as well as the harm and consequences caused, were all objectively foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona. In this regard, it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona was fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim population, noting in particular his knowledge and awareness of their prior dislocating of Muslim civilians.¹⁰⁸²² Moreover, it recalls that the harm described above, including beyond the initial displacement of victims, is inherent to the nature of the crimes and derives from them.

against Mr Ngaïssona, recalling notably that the Pre-Trial Chamber declined to confirm charges against Mr Ngaïssona in relation to several prefectures,¹⁰⁸²³ the Chamber notes that it has only considered the harm deriving from the charged crimes, that is in relation to Muslims forcibly displaced from Boeing and Cattin.

4722. Further noting the Ngaïssona Defence's submission that the evidence relied upon by the CLRV2 concerning displacement should be scrutinised, referring to its reliance on items of limited probative value,¹⁰⁸²⁴ the Chamber emphasises that it has not relied on victim participation forms in this context.

4723. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁸²⁵ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crimes for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁸²⁶ the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 8 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of forcible transfer and deportation (Count 4) and 8 years of imprisonment for the war crime of displacement (Count 5).

iv. *Directing an attack against a building dedicated to religion as a war crime (Count

4724. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of this crime as substantial in abstracto and low in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁸²⁷ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent.¹⁰⁸²⁸

4725. With respect to the impact of the crime,¹⁰⁸²⁹ it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona was fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim population.¹⁰⁸³⁰ On this basis, it considers that it was entirely foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona that in the context of the Bangui Attack,

Anti-Balaka elements would attack buildings dedicated to the Muslim religion,¹⁰⁸³¹ and that in such cases, damage to the building and harm to Muslim communities would ensue. However, the Chamber does not consider that the subsequent destruction of the Boeing Mosque by the civilian population and the further harm resulting therefrom was objectively foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona for the purposes of sentencing.

4727. Further noting the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions in this regard, the Chamber stresses that it has not relied on the submissions by the participants concerning inter- or transgenerational harm¹⁰⁸³² or evidence pertaining to the alleged loss of religiosity,¹⁰⁸³³ for the purposes of sentencing in the present case. Regarding the Ngaïssona Defence's submission that the CLRV2's attribution of the destruction of hundreds of mosques to Mr Ngaïssona, including in towns that are not part of the charges, would punish him beyond his alleged culpability,¹⁰⁸³⁴ the Chamber notes that it has not relied on any such evidence in this context.

4728. Finally, and noting its conclusions above, the Chamber is not persuaded by the Ngaïssona Defence's submission countering the CLRV2's argument that the persecutory motive behind the 'destruction' of the Boeing Mosque is an aggravating factor, given there is no evidence that the Anti-Balaka sought to impose their religion or eradicate the Muslim faith.¹⁰⁸³⁵ discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁸³⁷ the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 8 years of imprisonment for the war crime of directing an attack against a building dedicated to religion (Count 6).

v. Persecution as a crime against humanity
(Count 8)

4730. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of this crime as particularly serious in abstracto and high in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁸³⁸ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent,¹⁰⁸³⁹ and that Mr Ngaïssona intended for the Muslim civilian population to be discriminated against on the basis of their religious and ethnic commonalities with the Seleka.¹⁰⁸⁴⁰

4731. Noting that the facts underlying Mr Ngaïssona's conviction under Count 8 are the same as those forming the basis of his convictions under Counts 1 to 6, the Chamber stresses, once more, that these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the context of determining the joint sentence.

4732. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁸⁴¹ with the exception of the aggravating factor of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive, the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of persecution (Count 8).

b. Crimes committed in the context of the attack on Bossangoa on 5 December 2013 and thereafter (Counts 30 to 33, 37 to 39, 42)

4733. The Chamber observes that the crimes committed in the context of the Bossangoa Attack and events in its aftermath share a number of features,¹⁰⁸⁴² in particular as concerns Mr Ngaïssona's individual responsibility. In this respect, the Chamber recalls its findings

¹⁰⁸³⁷ See section VI.B.2.i.a above.

¹⁰⁸³⁸ See section VI.B.3.ii.a.v above.

¹⁰⁸³⁹ See in particular paragraphs 4708-4711 above.

¹⁰⁸⁴⁰ See paragraph 4047 above.

¹⁰⁸⁴¹ See section VI.B.2; section VI.B.4; paragraphs 4708-4712 above.

above.¹⁰⁸⁴³ Notably, it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona is convicted of aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting the commission of crimes in the context of the Bossangoa Attack and events in its aftermath, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.

4734. Regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent for the purposes of sentencing, the Chamber takes note of the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions¹⁰⁸⁴⁴ and recalls its findings above,¹⁰⁸⁴⁵ which equally apply to Mr Ngaïssona's involvement in the Bossangoa Attack and events in its aftermath. The Chamber also considers it relevant to note that the Bossangoa Attack took place in coordination with the Bangui Attack on the same day and was not a spontaneous attack.¹⁰⁸⁴⁶ Further, Mr Ngaïssona knew and was informed of the hostilities committed by the Anti-Balaka during their advance towards Bangui, including the killings and dislocation of Muslim civilians, and that notwithstanding, Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide funds to the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁸⁴⁷ The Chamber notes that Mr Ngaïssona's financial support made it possible for at least some of the elements to participate in the Bossangoa Attack.¹⁰⁸⁴⁸ It also recalls that Mr Ngaïssona was not only aware that the Anti-Balaka would commit the crimes in the ordinary course of events, but intended for them to commit them in the context of the Bossangoa Attack and lent his assistance with the aim of facilitating such crimes.¹⁰⁸⁴⁹

4735. For the purposes of determining the appropriate sentences for the crimes underlying Counts 30 to 33, 37 to 39, and 42, the Chamber deems it relevant that Mr Ngaïssona's participation in the crimes committed in the context of the Bossangoa Attack and events in its aftermath was limited to the abovementioned funding and supporting activities in relation to the Anti-Balaka prior to the attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.¹⁰⁸⁵⁰

¹⁰⁸⁴³ See in particular sections II.A.2-II.A.3; section II.A.5, in particular paragraph 49; section II.A.6., in particular paragraph 56; paragraphs 827, 1299, 1301-1302, 1304; section V.B.3.ii.b above.

¹⁰⁸⁴⁴ See Ngaïssona Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748, paras 5-19; Ngaïssona Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 59, line 13 – p. 67, line 7.

¹⁰⁸⁴⁸ See paragraph 4119 above.

¹⁰⁸⁵⁰ See paragraph 4115 above.

4736. All facts considered, the Chamber cannot find any circumstances which would qualify Mr Ngaïssona's participation or intent as particularly high or low for the purposes of sentencing.

4737. Nonetheless, the Chamber notes that another feature common to all crimes committed in the context of the Bossangoa Attack and events in its aftermath is their commission for motives involving discrimination. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that the Muslim civilian population of Bossangoa was targeted on religious grounds.¹⁰⁸⁵¹ Further, Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial contributions and support to the Anti-Balaka for the purpose of facilitating the crimes against the Muslim civilian population, including in Bossangoa.¹⁰⁸⁵² As indicated above,¹⁰⁸⁵³ the Chamber considers this circumstance to be an aggravating factor within the meaning of Rule 145(2)(b)(v) of the Rules for the crimes underlying Counts 30 to 33, 37 to 39.¹⁰⁸⁵⁴

4738. Finally, with respect to the impact of the crimes, the Chamber considers that the harm and consequences caused to victims, as described below, were objectively foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona. In this regard, it recalls that in providing his contributions and support, Mr Ngaïssona was fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim population, noting in particular his knowledge and awareness of their prior killing and dislocating of Muslim civilians.¹⁰⁸⁵⁵ Further, the resulting harm caused to victims by virtue notably of the attack, killings, destruction of homes, forced displacement, and confinement, was inherent to the nature of the crimes committed in the context of the Bossangoa Attack and events in its aftermath.¹⁰⁸⁵⁶

¹⁰⁸⁵³ See section VI.B.2.i.a above.

¹⁰⁸⁵⁴ With respect to Count 42, the Chamber recalls that the discriminatory dimension is a constitutive element of the crime against humanity of persecution. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider it as an aggravating factor for this crime.

¹⁰⁸⁵⁵ See e.g. paragraphs 49, 56, 4119 above.

¹⁰⁸⁵⁶ See also, in relation to Counts 37 and 38, paragraph 4768 and, in relation to Count 39, paragraph 4781 below.

i. Attack against the civilian population as such as a war crime (Count 30)

4739. The Chamber refers to its considerations above as to the gravity in abstracto of the crime of attack against the civilian population as such.¹⁰⁸⁵⁷

4740. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Count 30 to be high. The Chamber considers the nature of the unlawful behaviour and the means employed to be of particular relevance to its assessment. Notably, it recalls the nature of the targets comprising the attack, that is residential areas, including the Boro neighbourhood – generally known as the Muslim neighbourhood –, and the Muslim civilian population of Bossangoa.¹⁰⁸⁵⁸ Further, during the attack, the Anti-Balaka was well armed, with some AK-47s, RPGs, and hunting weapons.¹⁰⁸⁵⁹

4741. The Chamber also recalls that it may consider harm arising as a consequence of a crime in the context of sentencing.¹⁰⁸⁶⁰ In the present case, as set out in detail in the sections below, extensive harm was inflicted on the civilian population as a result of the Bossangoa Attack.¹⁰⁸⁶¹ In the view of the Chamber, this heightens the gravity in concreto of Count 30. The Chamber recognises that these consequences constitute the relevant facts underlying the other crimes Mr Ngaïssona is convicted of in the context of the Bossangoa Attack. While all relevant circumstances must be considered in the context of the individual sentence under this count, these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the determination of the joint sentence.¹⁰⁸⁶²

4742. In addition, the Chamber notes that several individuals were injured during the Bossangoa Attack.¹⁰⁸⁶³ In particular, Batoul Naffi was injured in the vicinity of the imam's compound, receiving a bullet wound to the leg and machete wounds to the head.¹⁰⁸⁶⁴ Other individuals were also injured during the attack, notably by bullets.¹⁰⁸⁶⁵

4743. Regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent in relation to this crime, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁸⁶⁶

ii. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 31 and 32)

4745. The Chamber refers to its considerations above as to the gravity of the crimes of murder in abstracto.¹⁰⁸⁶⁹

4746. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Counts 31 and 32 to be high.

4747. The Chamber finds the extent of victimisation to be of particular relevance, recalling that the Anti-Balaka killed at least 18 persons who were not armed or taking part in hostilities in the course of the Bossangoa Attack.¹⁰⁸⁷⁰ It further highlights the circumstances of and the means employed to commit the crimes, noting in particular that many of the victims were shot at,¹⁰⁸⁷¹ and some also had their throat slit.¹⁰⁸⁷² Victims' bodies were found in the vicinity of the imam's house,¹⁰⁸⁷³ and some were killed while seeking refuge from the attack.¹⁰⁸⁷⁴

¹⁰⁸⁷⁴ See e.g. paragraphs 2870, 2874-2876 above.

4748. In this regard, the Chamber recalls the testimony of P-2462, who described how the imam's house was 'surrounded' by the Anti-Balaka and 'they started to shoot'.¹⁰⁸⁷⁵ It further recalls its finding that no battle between the Seleka and Anti-Balaka took place in the vicinity of the imam's residence.¹⁰⁸⁷⁶

4749. The Chamber also received evidence that victims could not be buried in accordance with the practices of their religion. P-2200 notably stated that on the day following the Bossangoa Attack, as it was too dangerous to leave the school, they did not have clean shrouds in which to wrap the bodies, nor was there the usual washing of the bodies for their burial. Further, they could not access the usual cemetery because the Anti-Balaka were still around in the town, and the victims were buried in communal holes.¹⁰⁸⁷⁷ P-2657 also stated that they could not go to the cemetery as it was far, the situation was unstable, and the Anti-Balaka would attack the Muslims.¹⁰⁸⁷⁸

4750. Additionally, the Chamber refers to the testimony of P-2049, which illustrates the emotional pain suffered by the family of victims to this day.¹⁰⁸⁷⁹

4751. Regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent in relation to these crimes, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁸⁸⁰

iii. Destruction of the adversary's property as a war crime (Count 33)

4753. The war crime of destruction of an adversary's property is a crime against the right to property, which is in principle of lesser gravity than crimes against life, physical integrity, and personal liberty and dignity.¹⁰⁸⁸³ Considering the protected interests at stake, the Chamber deems this crime to be of substantial gravity in abstracto.

4754. In this respect, the Chamber notes that the actual gravity of this crime is variable, taking into account factors such as the economic consequences for the victims and the number of victims.¹⁰⁸⁸⁴ Further, in addition to the deprivation of the right of property of the owner, the crime's gravity may increase depending on the de facto function of the property destroyed, particularly if it included people's homes.¹⁰⁸⁸⁵ Indeed, in such cases, the perpetrators do not merely destroy structures, but also destroy people's homes – a place where the victims ought to have been able to feel shielded and safe, depriving them of a private place, a shelter and a sense of security.¹⁰⁸⁸⁶

4755. Having regard to the extent of the damage and harm caused to the victims in the concrete circumstances, the Chamber deems the gravity in concreto of this crime to be substantial. The Chamber stresses that, as a consequence of this crime, victims sustained abrupt and definitive damage: from one day to the next, they lost their houses – which the Anti-Balaka burned and destroyed.¹⁰⁸⁸⁷ Beyond the material harm suffered, this deprived the victims of their 'homes' and the option to return to a private place and shelter in their communities, as well as their sense of security.¹⁰⁸⁸⁸

4756. Regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent in relation to this crime, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁸⁸⁹

iv. Forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity and displacement as a war crime (Counts 37 and 38)

4758. The Chamber refers to its considerations above as to the gravity in abstracto of the crimes of forcible transfer and deportation, and of displacement.¹⁰⁸⁹²

4760. In this respect, the Chamber recalls that the Bossangoa Attack, and the specific targeting of Muslim residential areas and the Muslim civilian population therein, forced Muslim civilians to flee and seek shelter at the École de la Liberté, where their numbers rose into several thousands.¹⁰⁸⁹³ All the Muslim civilians displaced thereat were later forced to leave Bossangoa altogether and transported to Chad, following which the town was emptied of its Muslim population.¹⁰⁸⁹⁴ Accordingly, the Chamber finds that the number of persons affected by the crimes underlying Counts 37 and 38 was significant.

consequence of the actions of the Anti-Balaka to heighten the gravity of the crime under Count 38.¹⁰⁸⁹⁶

4762. Regarding victims displaced at the École de la Liberté, the Chamber notes that their dislocation took place urgently, with Muslim civilians fleeing to seek shelter in the midst of the Bossangoa Attack.¹⁰⁸⁹⁷ P-2049 notably explained that, while some people were able to take some belongings, others were not able to bring anything with them.¹⁰⁸⁹⁸ In addition, the Chamber recalls that, as further described below in relation to Count 39, Muslim civilians forcibly displaced at the École de la Liberté remained confined there for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, were dependent on the protection of international forces for their safety, and could not leave the school premises without risk to their person. They stayed there in cramped and dire conditions for several months.¹⁰⁸⁹⁹ In the view of the Chamber, the prevailing deplorable conditions around and at the École de la Liberté and the significant amount of time victims were placed in such conditions further heighten the harm they suffered from due to the crimes under Counts 37 and 38.

4763. The Chamber also highlights that Muslim civilians were forced to leave twice in a short amount of time – first from their homes in Bossangoa to the École de la Liberté, and then again from the school to Chad,¹⁰⁹⁰⁰ which contributed to victims’ hardship and the uncertainty of their situation. Several witnesses testified that they felt like they no longer had a home they could return to in Bossangoa.¹⁰⁹⁰¹

4764. Regarding the transportation of Muslims to Chad, the Chamber recalls P-2453’s testimony that due to a lack of space in the vehicles, they could only take rucksacks with some substantial essential items and had to abandon other personal belongings.¹⁰⁹⁰² Further, P-2200 stated regarding his removal that he noticed the presence of the Anti-Balaka along the route until the border and that, without the escort by Chadian soldiers, they would not have been able to pass.¹⁰⁹⁰³ In this context, the Chamber also notes P-2658's statement that the Muslims had no choice but to go to Chad because only Chad sent trucks to 'evacuate' them,¹⁰⁹⁰⁴ as well as P-2049's evidence that, while transportation to other towns in the CAR was discussed, the decision was taken to bring people to Chad due to the lack of security in those other locations.¹⁰⁹⁰⁵

4765. The Chamber considers that these circumstances increased the victims' distress, and finds particularly significant that they had no choice but to leave their homes and ultimately go to Chad, and were removed from their known surroundings. Some witnesses still lived in refugee camps in Chad at the time of their testimony in 2021 and 2022.¹⁰⁹⁰⁶ P-2462 notably explained that she no longer lives like she used to – they sleep on the tarpaulins in tents built by HCR, she sleeps on a wooden bed; her school life has been destroyed; her mother suffers a lot because she does not know what to do – P-2462 is the only one who is able to remain with her mother and help her, so the living conditions for them are extremely difficult.¹⁰⁹⁰⁷

4766. The Chamber also received evidence that following their displacement, it remained difficult for Muslim civilians to return to Bossangoa.¹⁰⁹⁰⁸ P-2049 notably testified that:

I really have that desire to return home. My country remains my country. Today I'm living in a refugee camp, and I am suffering. My town is Bossangoa. I have my relatives. I would like to return to Bossangoa, but peace has not been restored in Bossangoa. If I go back there now, I do not have a home. I have no way to survive. So I prefer to stay in the refugee camp here. And when I shall have the resources to rebuild a house in Bossangoa when security would have been restored in my country, it will be with joy that I would return and resettle in my native town of Bossangoa.¹⁰⁹⁰⁹

4767. Considering the above, the Chamber finds that the consequences and harm of the commission of the crimes under Counts 37 and 38 were high, with the victims not only

See Daryn Reicherter Expert Report, CAR-OTP-2127-6805, at 6832-40. Regarding the Ngaissona Defence's submissions on the alleged lack of probative value of Daryn Reicherter's report (see Ngaissona Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 71, lines 14-20), the Chamber refers to its findings above (see footnote 10419 above).

¹⁰⁹⁰⁸ See also paragraphs 3033, 3035-3037 above.

deprived of their property, but also effectively uprooted from their homes and communities, and in some cases their country. Victims notably experienced physical and emotional suffering, considering in particular the difficult conditions at the time of their displacement or at the locations they were displaced to. This in turn led to the loss of social, occupational and economic stability, and material safety, and to the loss of communities, as the Muslim population was forced to flee from Bossangoa and remained unable to return at least for some time following the events.¹⁰⁹¹⁰

4768. Regarding the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions on the long-term impact of forced displacement,¹⁰⁹¹¹ the Chamber recalls that it may consider any consequences arising from the crimes in the context of sentencing, as long as they were objectively foreseeable to the accused.¹⁰⁹¹² In this context, the Chamber considers that the harm described above, including beyond the initial displacement of victims, is inherent to the nature of the crimes, derives from, and is sufficiently linked to them. It thus considers of limited relevance to its present assessment the fact that other factors may have played a role in some victims not returning to their places of origin following the events. Recalling its above findings,¹⁰⁹¹³ the Chamber thus finds that it was entirely foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona that Anti-Balaka elements would forcibly displace Muslim civilians, and that the harm described above would occur.

4769. Turning to the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that the alleged harm to unidentified individuals in camps outside of the CAR cannot be considered in the harm assessment against Mr Ngaïssona, recalling notably that the Pre-Trial Chamber declined to confirm charges against Mr Ngaïssona in relation to several prefectures,¹⁰⁹¹⁴ the Chamber notes that it has only considered the harm deriving from the charged crimes, that is in relation to Muslim civilians dislocated to the École de la Liberté in the context of the Bossangoa Attack and forced to leave Bossangoa thereafter.

4770. The Chamber further notes the Ngaïssona Defence's submission that the evidence relied upon by the CLRV2 concerning displacement should be scrutinised, referring to its reliance on items of alleged limited probative value.¹⁰⁹¹⁵ The Chamber emphasises that it has not relied on victim participation forms in this context.

4771. Regarding the Prosecution's and the CLRV2's submissions on the vulnerability of victims of these crimes,¹⁰⁹¹⁶ the Chamber considers that while victims were placed in a vulnerable situation, it cannot discern a particular vulnerability or defencelessness within the sense of Rule 145(2)(b)(iii) of the Rules, which would warrant an aggravated sentence. It considers that the particular circumstances of their treatment have already been accounted for in the Chamber's assessment of the circumstances of manner, location and means employed to execute the crimes pursuant to Rule 145(i)(c) of the Rules above.

4772. Finally, regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent in relation to these crimes, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁹¹⁷

v. Imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity (Count 39)

4774. The Chamber refers to its considerations above as to the gravity of the crime in abstracto.¹⁰⁹²⁰

4775. Turning to the assessment of the facts in concreto, the Chamber considers the gravity of Count 39 to be high.

4776. The Chamber finds of particular significance the circumstances of and the means employed to execute the crime, as well as the extent of victimisation deriving from it – considering in particular the large number of victims and the significant length of time they were placed in the conditions described below –, and considers these factors to significantly heighten the gravity of the crime.

4777. First, the Chamber recalls that several thousand Muslim civilians remained confined at the École de la Liberté for fear of threats by the Anti-Balaka, where they were dependent on the protection of international forces for their safety and could not leave without risk to their person.¹⁰⁹²¹ Witnesses notably testified that the school felt like ‘a prison’,¹⁰⁹²² and described how they were specifically advised not to leave the school for risk of being attacked by the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁹²³

4778. In that respect, P-2200 stated that the situation for Muslims in Bossangoa at that time was like being in prison, in that they were encircled from all sides by the Anti-Balaka who had established their positions at several places in the town in such a way that those in the school did not dare to leave.¹⁰⁹²⁴ P-1577 also testified that in the aftermath of the Bossangoa Attack, they could see Anti-Balaka elements especially around the area of the school. P-1577 confirmed that the camp was protected by African Union troops surrounding it from different locations, presumably to protect them from attack from the Anti-Balaka. P-1577 testified that people were allowed to leave the school but if, for example, they wanted to travel and pick things up from their homes, they had to go with an armed guard and not travel too far away from the protection of the camp for fear of being attacked.¹⁰⁹²⁵

4779. Second, the Chamber notes the cramped and dire living conditions under which victims remained at the École de la Liberté.¹⁰⁹²⁶ In this context, the Chamber refers to the testimony of witnesses – who described, inter alia, the overall crowdedness and lack of proper accommodation and sanitation, the difficulties in operating the clinic, and the lack of proper schooling –, and to photographs provided by P-1577.¹⁰⁹²⁷ It highlights that the Muslim civilians at the school stayed in such conditions for months, from December 2013 to February or, for some, April 2014.¹⁰⁹²⁸

4780. The Chamber finds the testimonies of P-1577 and P-2453 particularly illustrative in that regard. P-1577 explained that the École de la Liberté was ‘very densely populated’, with no significant latrines or sanitation available, a typical scene of a displaced camp, that is, a very busy place with people cooking outdoors, the smell of cooking, lots of crying, uncomfortable people, and dirty children.¹⁰⁹²⁹ P-2453 stated that although the École de la Liberté was very big, comprised of six buildings:

[...] it was not enough to accommodate all of us, some had to stay in tents outside. I was sleeping in a classroom with many other people, we put the women and children on one side and the men were on another side. We were all sleeping on mats on the floor, only a few people who had arrived in early September had a mattress.¹⁰⁹³⁰

4781. Third, in light of the prevailing conditions around and at the École de la Liberté, all Muslim civilians confined thereat could not only not return to their homes, but were eventually forced to leave Bossangoa altogether for Chad.¹⁰⁹³¹ For instance, P-2462 testified that they eventually left to Chad ‘because of the crisis. We were enclaved in the École de Liberté. It was almost like a prison. Many people [...] refused to leave, but many people couldn't handle it anymore to live under these conditions, so many took the decision, the majority took the decision to leave'.¹⁰⁹³² The Chamber refers in that context to its above findings as to the consequences and harm deriving from the displacement of Muslim civilians from the school to Chad,¹⁰⁹³³ which equally derive from and are intrinsically linked to this crime.

4782.Regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent in relation to this crime, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁹³⁴

vi. Persecution as a crime against humanity
(Count 42)

4784.In relation to the gravity of the crime against humanity of persecution, the Chamber refers to its considerations above.¹⁰⁹³⁷

¹⁰⁹³⁸ See paragraphs 4106-4107 above. See also e.g. paragraph 4760 above.

¹⁰⁹³⁹ Given Mr Ngaïssona's acquittal in relation to Counts 40 and 41, the Chamber notes that it has only considered the deprivation of the right to physical integrity with respect to the injuries sustained by individuals during the Bossangoa Attack in the context of sentencing.

or unlawful interference with their family and home.¹⁰⁹⁴⁰ Mr Ngaïssona intended the Muslim civilian population of Bossangoa to be discriminated against on the basis of their religious and ethnic commonalities with the Seleka.¹⁰⁹⁴¹

c. Crimes committed within the context of the events at Yamwara on and around 24 December 2013 (Counts 11 to 17)

4788. The Chamber observes that the crimes committed in the context of the events at Yamwara share a number of features,¹⁰⁹⁴³ in particular as concerns Mr Ngaïssona's individual responsibility. In this respect, the Chamber recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁹⁴⁴ Notably, it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona is convicted of aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting the commission of crimes at Yamwara, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.

¹⁰⁹⁴⁰ See paragraph 4102 above. See also CLRV2 Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2745-Red, para. 26.

¹⁰⁹⁴¹ See paragraph 4124 above.

¹⁰⁹⁴² See section VI.B.2; section VI.B.4.i; paragraphs 4733-4738 above.

¹⁰⁹⁴³ In this respect, the Chamber notes that these features are addressed jointly for all crimes merely for clarity and avoidance of duplication. However, it emphasises that it has taken each of these findings into account when determining the individual sentences below.

¹⁰⁹⁴⁴ See in particular sections II.A.2-II.A.3; section II.A.5, in particular paragraph 49; section II.A.6., in particular paragraph 56; section II.A.7, in particular paragraphs 57, 64; paragraphs 827, 1299, 1301-1302, 1304; section V.B.3.iii.b.ii above.

4789. Regarding the degree of Mr Ngaïssona's participation and intent for the purposes of sentencing, the Chamber takes note of the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions,¹⁰⁹⁴⁵ and recalls its findings above,¹⁰⁹⁴⁶ which equally apply to his involvement in the Yamwara Incident. Additionally, the Chamber notes that after the attacks on 5 December 2013, Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide financial assistance to the Anti-Balaka,¹⁰⁹⁴⁷ remained informed of the Anti-Balaka's continued activities and continued liaising with various individuals in this regard.¹⁰⁹⁴⁸ Furthermore, the Chamber recalls that Mr Ngaïssona was not only aware that the Anti-Balaka would commit the crimes forming part of the Yamwara Incident in the ordinary course of events, but intended for the Anti-Balaka to commit them and lent his assistance with the aim of facilitating such crimes.¹⁰⁹⁴⁹

4790. For the purposes of determining the appropriate sentences for the crimes underlying Counts 11 to 17, the Chamber deems it relevant that Mr Ngaïssona's participation in the crimes committed at Yamwara was limited to the abovementioned funding of the Anti-Balaka and supporting their activities 'prior to the attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013, and subsequently' generally.¹⁰⁹⁵⁰

4791. All facts considered, the Chamber cannot find any circumstances which would qualify Mr Ngaïssona's participation or intent as particularly high or low for the purposes of sentencing.

4792. Nonetheless, the Chamber notes that another feature common to all crimes committed at Yamwara is their commission for motives involving discrimination. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that the seven persons were targeted by Mr Yekatom's group because they were perceived to be Muslims.¹⁰⁹⁵¹ Further, Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial contributions and support to the Anti-Balaka for the purpose of facilitating the crimes against ¹⁰⁹⁴⁵ See Ngaïssona Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748, paras 5-19; Ngaïssona Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 59, line 13 – p. 67, line 7.

the Muslim civilian population, including at Yamwara.¹⁰⁹⁵² As indicated above,¹⁰⁹⁵³ the Chamber considers this circumstance to be an aggravating factor within the meaning of Rule 145(2)(b)(v) of the Rules for the crimes underlying Counts 11 to 16.¹⁰⁹⁵⁴

4793. Additionally, the Chamber considers that the abovementioned nature of the unlawful behaviour and the means employed, as well as the impact of all crimes committed at Yamwara,¹⁰⁹⁵⁵ should be taken into account when determining the individual sentences for Mr Ngaïssona. With respect to the impact of the crimes,¹⁰⁹⁵⁶ the Chamber considers that the harm and consequences caused to victims were all objectively foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona. In this regard, it recalls that in providing his contributions and support, Mr Ngaïssona was fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim population, noting in particular his knowledge and awareness of their prior killing of Muslim civilians.¹⁰⁹⁵⁷ Moreover, the resulting harms caused to the surviving captives of the Yamwara Incident by virtue of their mistreatment, as well as the impact on Saint Cyr's family and friends as a result of his torture and killing, were inherent to the nature of the crimes committed during the Yamwara Incident.

4794. Before the Chamber turns to its determination of the individual sentences for each crime, it is recalled that Judge Kovács would have acquitted Mr Ngaïssona of Counts 12, 13, 15 and 16 concerning Saint Cyr's torture and murder. With respect to these crimes, his dissent should thus be borne in mind in the context of the above findings, as well as the findings in sections iii, iv and v.

¹⁰⁹⁵² See paragraphs 49, 4291-4292 above.

¹⁰⁹⁵³ See section VI.B.2.ii.b above.

¹⁰⁹⁵⁴ With respect to Count 17, the Chamber recalls that the discriminatory dimension is a constitutive element of the crime against humanity of persecution. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider it as an aggravating factor for this crime.

- i. Imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty as a crime against humanity (Count 14)

4796. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁹⁶⁰ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁹⁶¹ the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 8 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty (Count 14).

- ii. Other inhumane acts as a crime against humanity (Count 11) and cruel treatment as a war crime (Count 13)

4797. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of these crimes as high in abstracto and in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁹⁶² Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent.¹⁰⁹⁶³

4798. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁹⁶⁴ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crimes for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁹⁶⁵ the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 9 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of other inhumane acts (Count 11) and 9 years of imprisonment for the war crime of cruel treatment (Count 13).

iii. Torture as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 12 and 13)

4799. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of these crimes as very high in abstracto and particularly high in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁹⁶⁶ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent,¹⁰⁹⁶⁷ Judge Kovács dissenting.

4800. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁹⁶⁸ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crimes for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁹⁶⁹ with the exception of the war crime of torture for which it is a constitutive element, the Chamber, by majority, Judge Kovács dissenting, sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of torture (Count 12) and 10 years of imprisonment for the war crime of torture (Count 13).

iv. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 15 and 16)

4801. The Chamber recalls its assessment of the gravity of these crimes as very high in abstracto and particularly high in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁹⁷⁰ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent,¹⁰⁹⁷¹ Judge Kovács dissenting.

4802. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁹⁷² in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crimes for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁹⁷³ the Chamber, by majority, Judge Kovács dissenting, sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 11 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of murder (Count 15) and 11 years of imprisonment for the war crime of murder (Count 16).

v. Persecution as a crime against humanity
(Count 17)

4803. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of this crime as particularly serious in abstracto and as high in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁹⁷⁴ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent,¹⁰⁹⁷⁵ and that Mr Ngaïssona intended the Muslim civilian population to be discriminated against on the basis of their religious and ethnic commonalities with the Seleka,¹⁰⁹⁷⁶ Judge Kovács dissenting in relation to Saint Cyr's torture and murder.

4804. Noting that the facts underlying Mr Ngaïssona's conviction under Count 17 are the same as those forming the basis of his convictions under Counts 11 to 16, the Chamber stresses, once more, that these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the context of determining the joint sentence.

4805. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁹⁷⁷ apart from the aggravating circumstance of the aggravating factor of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive, the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of persecution (Count 17).

4806. While Judge Kovács would have acquitted Mr Ngaïssona from Counts 12, 13, 15 and 16 regarding Saint Cyr's torture and murder and therefore did not consider these crimes in assessing Mr Ngaïssona's liability for persecution, he nonetheless considers the above-mentioned sentence to appropriately reflect Mr Ngaïssona's culpability under Count 17 regarding the remaining underlying crimes. Accordingly, the abovementioned sentence is pronounced unanimously.

- d. Crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis (Counts 24 to 28)

4807. The Chamber observes that the crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis share a number of features,¹⁰⁹⁷⁸ in particular as concerns Mr Ngaïssona's individual responsibility. In this respect, it recalls its findings above.¹⁰⁹⁷⁹ Notably, it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona is convicted of aiding, abetting or otherwise assisting the commission of crimes in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, within the meaning of Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute.

4808. Regarding the degree of Mr Ngaïssona's participation and intent for the purposes of sentencing, the Chamber takes note of the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions¹⁰⁹⁸⁰ and recalls its findings above,¹⁰⁹⁸¹ which equally apply to his involvement in the Anti-Balaka's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis. Further, the Chamber notes that immediately following his return to Bangui on 14 January 2014, Mr Ngaïssona was installed as general coordinator of the Anti-Balaka and, as such, represented the entirety of the Anti-Balaka towards the CAR transition government and international authorities.¹⁰⁹⁸² As general coordinator of the Anti-Balaka, Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide financial assistance to the Anti-Balaka and actively engaged in formalising the structure of the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁹⁸³ Additionally, the Chamber recalls that Mr Ngaïssona was not only aware that the Anti-Balaka would commit the crimes in the ordinary course of events, but intended for them to commit them in the context of Mr Yekatom's group's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, and lent his assistance with the aim of facilitating such crimes.¹⁰⁹⁸⁴

¹⁰⁹⁷⁸ In this respect, the Chamber notes that these features are addressed jointly for all crimes merely for clarity and avoidance of duplication. However, it emphasises that it has taken each of these findings into account when determining the individual sentences below.

¹⁰⁹⁸² See paragraphs 60-61, 64 above.

¹⁰⁹⁸⁴ See paragraph 4378 above.

4809. For the purposes of determining the appropriate sentences for the crimes underlying Counts 24 to 28, the Chamber deems it relevant that Mr Ngaïssona's participation in the crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis was limited to the abovementioned funding and supporting activities in relation to the Anti-Balaka in 2013, which he continued to provide in 2014, in addition to his contributions to further formalise the Anti-Balaka's structure, notably in his role as general coordinator of the Anti-Balaka.¹⁰⁹⁸⁵

4810. All facts considered, the Chamber cannot find any circumstances which would qualify Mr Ngaïssona's participation or intent as particularly high or low for the purposes of sentencing.

4811. Nonetheless, the Chamber notes that another feature common to all crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis is their commission for motives involving discrimination. In this regard, the Chamber recalls that the Muslim civilian population along the PK9-Mbaïki axis was targeted by reason of their perceived religious commonalities with the Seleka.¹⁰⁹⁸⁶ Further, Mr Ngaïssona provided his financial contributions and support to the Anti-Balaka for the purpose of facilitating the crimes against the Muslim civilian population, including along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.¹⁰⁹⁸⁷ As indicated above,¹⁰⁹⁸⁸ the Chamber considers this circumstance to be an aggravating factor within the meaning of Rule 145(2)(b)(v) of the Rules for the crimes underlying Counts 24 to 27.¹⁰⁹⁸⁹

¹⁰⁹⁸⁵ See paragraphs 4373, 4808 above.

¹⁰⁹⁸⁷ See paragraphs 49, 4377-4378, 4382 above.

¹⁰⁹⁸⁸ See section VI.B.2.i.a above.

¹⁰⁹⁸⁹ With respect to Count 28, the Chamber recalls that the discriminatory dimension is a constitutive element of the crime against humanity of persecution. Accordingly, the Chamber does not consider it as an aggravating factor for this crime.

i. Forcible transfer and deportation as a crime against humanity and displacement as a war crime (Counts 24 and 25)

4812. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of Counts 24 and 25 as high and substantial, respectively, in abstracto and as high in the concrete circumstances.¹⁰⁹⁹⁰ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent.¹⁰⁹⁹¹

4813. With respect to the impact of the crimes,¹⁰⁹⁹² the Chamber considers that the dislocation of Muslim civilians along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, as well as the harm and consequences caused, were objectively foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona. In this regard, it recalls that Mr Ngaïssona was fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim population, noting in particular his knowledge and awareness of their prior dislocating of Muslim civilians.¹⁰⁹⁹³ Moreover, it recalls that the harm described above, including beyond the initial displacement of victims, is inherent to the nature of the crimes and derives from them.

4814. Regarding the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that the alleged harm to unidentified individuals in camps outside of the CAR cannot be considered in the harm assessment against Mr Ngaïssona, recalling notably that the Pre-Trial Chamber declined to confirm charges against Mr Ngaïssona in relation to several prefectures,¹⁰⁹⁹⁴ the Chamber notes that it has only considered the harm deriving from the charged crimes, that is in relation to Muslim civilians dislocated from their towns and villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, and Muslim civilians dislocated subsequently from Mbaïki.

4815. The Chamber further notes the Ngaïssona Defence's submission that the evidence relied upon by the CLRV2 concerning displacement should be scrutinised, referring to its reliance on items of alleged limited probative value.¹⁰⁹⁹⁵ The Chamber emphasises that it has not relied on victim participation forms in this context.

4816. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹⁰⁹⁹⁶ in particular the aggravating circumstance of committing the crimes for a discriminatory motive,¹⁰⁹⁹⁷ the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 8 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of forcible transfer and deportation (Count 24), and 8 years of imprisonment for the war crime of displacement (Count 25).

ii. Murder as a crime against humanity and as a war crime (Counts 26 and 27)

4818. With respect to the impact of the crimes,¹¹⁰⁰⁰ the Chamber considers the harm suffered by Saleh's family and community, as well as the mistreatment of Saleh's body upon his killing, to be objectively foreseeable to Mr Ngaïssona. In this regard, it recalls the considerations above, particularly its finding that the mistreatment of Saleh's body was directly linked to the crimes of murder and inherent to their nature, in light of the context in which they occurred.¹¹⁰⁰¹ Further, Mr Ngaïssona was fully aware that the Anti-Balaka would violently target the Muslim population, noting in particular his knowledge and awareness of their prior killing of Muslim civilians.¹¹⁰⁰²

the crime against humanity of murder (Count 26) and 11 years of imprisonment for the war crime of murder (Count 27).

*iii. Persecution as a crime against humanity
(Count 28)*

4820. The Chamber recalls that it assessed the gravity of this crime as particularly serious in abstracto and high in the concrete circumstances.¹¹⁰⁰⁵ Furthermore, it recalls its findings above regarding Mr Ngaïssona's degree of participation and intent,¹¹⁰⁰⁶ and that Mr Ngaïssona intended for the Muslim civilian population along the PK9-Mbaiki axis to be discriminated against on the basis of their religious commonalities with the Seleka.¹¹⁰⁰⁷

4821. Noting that the facts underlying Mr Ngaïssona's conviction under Count 28 are the same as those forming the basis of his convictions under Counts 24 to 27, the Chamber stresses, once more, that these factual overlaps are duly taken into account in the context of determining the joint sentence.

4822. Having considered all of these circumstances, as well as the factors relevant to all crimes,¹¹⁰⁰⁸ with the exception of the aggravating factor of committing the crime for a discriminatory motive, the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a term of 10 years of imprisonment for the crime against humanity of persecution (Count 28).

iii. Determination of joint sentence

4823. Having determined the individual sentences for each crime of which Mr Ngaïssona is convicted, the Chamber now turns to its determination of the joint sentence for all crimes, which must reflect Mr Ngaïssona's total culpability.¹¹⁰⁰⁹ In accordance with Article 78(3) of the Statute, the minimum joint sentence for Mr Ngaïssona is 11 years. As stated above, the maximum sentence shall not exceed 30 years of imprisonment or a sentence of life imprisonment in conformity with Article 77(1)(b) of the Statute.

¹¹⁰⁰⁵ See section VI.B.3.ii.c.iii above.

¹¹⁰⁰⁷ See paragraph 4382 above.

¹¹⁰⁰⁸ See section VI.B.2; section VI.B.4.i; paragraphs 4807-4811 above.

¹¹⁰⁰⁹ See Rule 145(1)(a) of the Rules.

4824. The Prosecution requests a joint sentence of imprisonment of not less than 20 years.¹¹⁰¹⁰ The Ngaïssona Defence submits, on the one hand, that Mr Ngaïssona's maximum sentence should be time served in detention,¹¹⁰¹¹ and, on the other hand, that the Chamber 'should pronounce a joint sentence pursuant to Article 78(3) that is equal to the highest individual sentence pronounced'.¹¹⁰¹² The CLRV2 request that Mr Ngaïssona be sentenced to 30 years of imprisonment.¹¹⁰¹³

4825. The Chamber recalls its findings at paragraphs 4648-4650 above, which it considers equally relevant to its determination of Mr Ngaïssona's joint sentence. For the reasons set out there,¹¹⁰¹⁴ it does not entertain the parties' submissions comparing Mr Ngaïssona's case with that of others.¹¹⁰¹⁵

4826. The Chamber is mindful that the crimes were committed within a short timeframe and of the factual overlap underlying a number of crimes of which Mr Ngaïssona is found guilty, which must be taken into consideration when determining his joint sentence.¹¹⁰¹⁶

4827. First, and perhaps most strikingly, the Chamber observes that Mr Ngaïssona's responsibility for the 28 crimes he is convicted of is largely based on the same contributions.¹¹⁰¹⁷ In this respect, it recalls that his conviction pursuant to Article 25(3)(c) of the Statute for the crimes committed during all four incidents is established through his funding and supporting of the Anti-Balaka prior to the attacks on Bangui and Bossangoa on 5 December 2013.¹¹⁰¹⁸ Solely for Counts 11 to 17, which concern the Yamwara Incident, and Counts 24 to 28, which relate to the Anti-Balaka's advance along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, the Chamber considered additional facts.¹¹⁰¹⁹ However, the Chamber is conscious that these additional facts also partly overlap. Notably, for both incidents, the Chamber considered that after the attacks on 5 December 2013, Mr Ngaïssona continued to provide financial assistance to the Anti-Balaka, remained informed of the Anti-Balaka's continued activities and continued liaising with various individuals in this regard.¹¹⁰²⁰

4828. Second, factual overlaps exist between crimes which concurrently constitute war crimes and crimes against humanity and are thus only distinguished by their different contextual elements.¹¹⁰²¹ Notably, this concerns the crimes of murder (Counts 2 and 3, 15 and 16, 26 and 27, as well as 31 and 32) and, to a certain extent, torture (Counts 12 and 13).¹¹⁰²²

4829. Third, there is a partial overlap in the conduct underlying, and the harm and consequences deriving from the crimes respectively committed within the context of (i) the Bangui Attack; (ii) the Bossangoa Attack and events in its aftermath; (iii) the Yamwara Incident; and (iv) the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis.

4830. Specifically, with respect to the crimes committed within the context of the Bangui Attack, the Chamber notes that the conduct underlying Counts 1 to 6 and 8 broadly overlaps. It also notes that the harm and consequences deriving from the crime of forcible transfer and deportation, and the crime of displacement (Counts 4 and 5) overlap.¹¹⁰²³ Additionally, it observes that the crime of directing an attack against the civilian population as such (Count

¹¹⁰²² In this regard, the Chamber recalls its legal findings above, which address the differences between torture as a war crime and as a crime against humanity, see paragraphs 3817-3822 above. The Chamber is not persuaded by the Ngaïssona Defence's submission that the crimes of displacement under Article 8(2)(e)(viii) and the crime of forcible transfer and deportation pursuant to Article 7(1)(d) of the Statute fall into this category, considering their distinct elements of the crimes, see Ngaïssona Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748, para. 23; Ngaïssona Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 69, line 25 – p. 70, line 1.

1) was committed by way of conduct, and resulted in harm, which in turn constituted facts underlying separate crimes committed in the context of this attack. With respect to the crime of persecution (Count 8), the Chamber observes an overlap insofar as the crime was committed through acts constituting also the crimes under Counts 1 to 6.¹¹⁰²⁴ Furthermore, the discriminatory dimension underlying the crime of persecution was considered as an aggravating factor in relation to Counts 1 to 6.

4831. With respect to the crimes committed in the context of the Bossangoa Attack and events in its aftermath, the Chamber similarly sees a partial overlap in the conduct underlying Counts 30 to 33, 37 to 39, and 42. It also notes that the harm and consequences deriving from the crime of forcible transfer and deportation, and the crime of displacement (Counts 37 and 38), as well as the crime of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty (Count 39), overlap. Additionally, it recalls that the crime of directing an attack against the civilian population as such (Count 30) was committed by way of conduct, and resulted in harm, which in turn constituted facts underlying separate crimes committed in the context of this attack. With respect to the crime of persecution (Count 42), the Chamber observes an overlap insofar as the crime was committed through acts constituting also the crimes under Counts 30 to 33, and 37 to 39. Lastly, the Chamber observes that the discriminatory dimension underlying the crime of persecution has also been considered an aggravating factor in relation to Counts 30 to 33, and 37 to 39.

4832. With respect to the crimes committed during the Yamwara Incident, the Chamber notes that the conduct underlying Counts 11 to 17 partly overlaps. It also notes the factual overlaps between the consequences, in particular the harm on the surviving captives, of the crimes of imprisonment and other forms of severe deprivation of physical liberty (Count 14), other inhumane acts (Count 11) and cruel treatment (Count 13).¹¹⁰²⁵ Similarly, the Chamber observes the overlaps between the consequences of the crimes of torture (Counts 12 and 13) and murder (Counts 15 and 16) with regard to the emotional and psychological harm on ¹¹⁰²⁴ See also Ngaïssona Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748, paras 24-25; Ngaïssona Defence Oral Sentencing Submissions: T-311, p. 69, lines 9-25.

¹¹⁰²⁵ See similar Ngaïssona Defence Sentencing Brief, ICC-01/14-01/18-2748, para. 24. The Chamber, however, does not agree with the Ngaïssona Defence's submission that 'count 14 [...] is completely absorbed in terms of its underlying criminal conduct by counts 11 and 13'.

Saint Cyr's family and friends. While agreeing with (the overlap of) these consequences as such, Judge Kovács recalls that he did not consider Mr Ngaïssona responsible for these crimes. In addition, the Chamber observes that the crime of persecution (Count 17) was committed through acts also constituting the crimes under Counts 11 to 16 and that the discriminatory dimension underlying the crime of persecution was further considered as an aggravating factor in relation to Counts 11 to 16, with the exception of the war crime of torture under Count 13.

4833. With respect to the crimes committed in the context of the Anti-Balaka's advance through and takeover of villages along the PK9-Mbaïki axis, the Chamber notes the partial overlap in the conduct underlying Counts 24 to 28. It also notes the overlap between the harm and consequences deriving from the crime of forcible transfer and deportation, and the crime of displacement (Counts 24 and 25). Additionally, it recalls that the crime of persecution (Count 28) was committed through acts also constituting the crimes under Counts 24 to 27 and that the discriminatory dimension has also been considered an aggravating factor in relation to Counts 24 to 27.

4834. Having duly considered the above, the Chamber considers that these overlaps, particularly with regard to Mr Ngaïssona's conduct, must have an impact on the determination of the joint sentence. Nonetheless, this consideration must be assessed alongside the fact that Mr Ngaïssona is convicted of 28 crimes, which were committed in the context of four separate incidents, spanning over different geographical areas. Furthermore, he committed these crimes in the context of an organised armed group and as part of a wider policy, in which he voluntarily participated.

4835. Importantly, the crimes resulted in the violation of numerous fundamental protected interests, including the right to life; the right to physical integrity; the right not to be subjected to torture, and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment; the right to liberty and security of person; the right to liberty of movement; the right to freedom of religion and to not be denied the right to practice their own religion in community with other members of their group; the right to property; the right against arbitrary arrest and detention and related procedural guarantees; the right against arbitrary or unlawful interference with their family and home;

and the right of all persons deprived of their liberty to be treated with humanity and respect for their inherent dignity.¹¹⁰²⁶

4836. Considering the above, the Chamber finds that a joint sentence corresponding to the highest individual sentence pronounced is incapable of reflecting Mr Ngaïssona's total culpability. Accordingly, the Chamber considers it appropriate to set the joint sentence for Mr Ngaïssona slightly higher than 11 years.

4837. In determining his joint sentence, the Chamber further takes note of the Ngaïssona Defence's submissions regarding the 'policy aims of sentencing'.¹¹⁰²⁷ In particular, it has considered the submissions that Mr Ngaïssona's prospects of rehabilitation and reintegration are exceptionally positive, emphasising his age, high level of education, professional background, and strong familial support.¹¹⁰²⁸ Moreover, it notes the submissions that Mr Ngaïssona is already well advanced in the rehabilitation process through his gradual distancing from the Anti-Balaka movement following the creation of the PCUD, that he wishes to 'continue contributing to peace and stability in [the] CAR' through his party and that up until his arrest, he was devoted to developing football in the CAR and the greater region as a 'vehicle for reconciliation'.¹¹⁰²⁹

4838. The Chamber recalls the Court's jurisprudence on rehabilitation and reintegration in the sentencing context, as set out above.¹¹⁰³⁰ Taking into account the specifics of Mr Ngaïssona's case and the Chamber's findings above, the Chamber does not consider that Mr Ngaïssona's prospects of reintegration and rehabilitation are exceptional. Therefore, it affords this factor only limited weight in determining the appropriate joint sentence.

¹¹⁰³⁰ See paragraph 4398 above.

4839. The Chamber is also not persuaded by the Ngaïssona Defence's argument that deterrence should only be given 'minimal weight'.¹¹⁰³¹ On the contrary, given Mr Ngaïssona's high profile in the CAR, inter alia, due to his past roles in the FIFA, the CAR politics and as general coordinator of the Anti-Balaka, as well as the resulting heightened public awareness of his trial, the Chamber considers it crucial to set a sentence which has a deterrent effect not only on Mr Ngaïssona, but which also effectively deters others. The Ngaïssona Defence's related arguments concerning the particular context in which Mr Ngaïssona committed these crimes, notably as a reaction to the alleged Seleka crimes, have however been taken into account above.¹¹⁰³²

4840. Lastly, the Chamber takes note of the Ngaïssona Defence's suggestion to consider 'non-carceral sentences'.¹¹⁰³³ It considers this proposal to be incompatible with the Court's legal framework and thus does not consider this submission further.

4841. In light of the above considerations, the Chamber sentences Mr Ngaïssona to a joint sentence of 12 years.

4842. This sentence is pronounced unanimously. While Judge Kovács would have acquitted Mr Ngaïssona of Counts 12, 13, 15 and 16 concerning Saint Cyr's torture and murder, he does not consider his dissent in this respect to have any impact on the joint sentence.

4843. The Chamber is of the view that this term is proportionate to Mr Ngaïssona's specific individual circumstances, conforms with the purposes of punishment under the Court's legal framework, and adequately acknowledges the victims' suffering and harm, whilst safeguarding Mr Ngaïssona's prospects of rehabilitation and reintegration into society. Consequently, the Chamber considers imprisonment to constitute a sufficient penalty for Mr Ngaïssona and therefore does not impose any fine in addition thereto.¹¹⁰³⁴
